THE STAR WARS TIMELINE GOLD
The Old Republic. The Galactic Empire. The New Republic. What might have been. Every legend has its historian.
By Nathan P. Butler - Gold Release Number 56 – 85th SWT Release - 08/11/18

LEGENDS TIMELINE, VOLUME 1

“In legends, we often find great truths, Skywalker.”
--Yoda

Dedicated to
All of the fans of the timeline now known as Star Wars: Legends.
It was a fun ride for the nearly four decades that it lasted.

-----|-----

-Fellow Star Wars fans-

From 1976 until 2014, the Star Wars saga was expanded upon with novels, comics, video games, and more. In 1991, an “Official Continuity” began to tie new materials into one major timeline of the saga, which soon retroactively included the vast majority of the materials produced from 1976 until the launch of that continuity. The saga grew in this form through late 2014, when the final issues of Dark Horse Comics’ Star Wars license were released (though it would continue in small doses after that, such as in the continued The Old Republic video game).

An announcement was made in April 2014 that revealed plans for a new continuity that unified Star Wars canon around the live action films, The Clone Wars, and the then-upcoming Rebels, plus new novels, games, and such that would all be considered canon on par with the films and cartoons for the very first time. However, in launching this new timeline, something had to be done with the one that had been growing since 1991 (or 1976, depending on your point of view). The result was that the so-called “Official Continuity” was given a proper title, Star Wars: Legends, which denoted its adventures as what amounts to an alternate timeline that exists independent of the new canon (which I call “Story Group Canon,” for lack of a better term), though it can be used as a source of inspiration from time to time. Thus, the primary Star Wars timeline is now simply the Canon (or Story Group Canon) Timeline, without a need for further delineation at this point. The “Official” (now Legends) Timeline would continue to exist, still based around the live action films and, for better or worse, The Clone Wars, but it would not continue to expand beyond small elements, and, additionally, it would not be meant to include the events of newly-produced canon, such as Rebels, further films, or the new canonical materials that would be produced to accompany them.

This document is the first half of a chronology of that mostly abandoned Star Wars: Legends continuity, what we knew for 23 years as a cohesive saga built on 38 years of G-Canon, T-Canon, C-Canon, and even some S-Canon materials. For decades, this was our saga, kept separate and distinct from its N-Canon Expanded Universe companions like the alternate universe Infinities comics or the parodies in the Tag and Bink series. Today, this continuity stands separate, distinct, and lower in prominence and status to the new canon that began to be built in Star Wars storytelling with 2014’s Blade Squadron. Whatever its status, however, its tales remain with us, and this document remains to be your guide through that fondly-remembered version of the Star Wars universe.

Welcome to Volume 1 of the Star Wars Timeline Gold’s timeline of the Legends Continuity, covering events from the beginning of this version of the saga until just before A New Hope.

-- Nathan Butler
The Star Wars Timeline Gold: Legends Timeline, Vol. 1

August 11, 2018

All titles and storylines below are trademark/copyright their respective publishers and/or creators. This is a non-profit publication for use as a supplement to Star Wars reading and is NOT in any way affiliated with Lucasfilm, Ltd. or any other licensed distributor of Star Wars merchandise. Any items that are property of these sources are not, of course, claimed by this author. All rights are reserved to their original creators.

That being said, the Star Wars Timeline is ©1997 – 2018 Nathan Patrick Butler. Do not reproduce this document, in part or whole, anywhere without the author's express permission. All rights reserved. Any unauthorized reproduction is prohibited by law without the express permission of the author/compiler/designer.
OUTLINE

THE STAR WARS TIMELINE GOLD, LEGENDS TIMELINE, VOLUME 1
INTRODUCTION (no number)
   Banner (no number)
   Website Address Box (no number)
   Opening Quote (no number)
   Dedication (no number)
   Opening Letter (no number)
   Disclaimer/Copyright (no number)
   Outline (no number)
SECTION I--HOW TO USE THE TIMELINE
   1.1 How to Read Entries
      1.1.a Example Key (no number)
      1.1.b On Spoilers (no number)
      1.1.c On Approximation, Cross-Referencing, Notes, and Births First (no number)
      1.1.d On Borrowed Items (no number)
      1.1.e. On Time Measurement in the Star Wars Galaxy (no number)
      1.1.f On Exact Date Dating (no number)
      1.1.g On the Clone Wars Film and Television Series (no number)
      1.1.h On P.E. Dating (no number)
      1.1.i On TC Dating (no number)
      1.1.j On Dating The Old Republic Materials (no number)
      1.1.k On the “Story Chapter/Comic Issue” Line (no number)
      1.1.l On Assumed Names (no number)
      1.1.m On Forthcoming Releases (no number)
      1.1.n On Format Notation (no number)
      1.1.o On Adaptations (no number)
      1.1.p On RPG Magazine Stories (no number)
      1.1.q On Star Wars Tales Stories (no number)
      1.1.r On the Four Ongoing Star Wars Titles (no number)
      1.1.s On Re-integrated Source Material (no number)
      1.1.t On Games in the Story Group Era (no number)
      1.1.u On “Our Time” vs. “Star Wars Time” in the Legends Continuity (no number)
   1.2 Acronym Key
   1.3 Format Notation Key
SECTION II--THE LEGENDS CONTINUITY TIMELINE
   Volume 1: Legends Continuity Before A New Hope (no number) CLOSING MESSAGE
SECTION I

HOW TO USE THIS TIMELINE

1.1

HOW TO READ ENTRIES

On the timelines herein, stories are separated by year and listed in approximate order of occurrence. If the story is one unit, not divided into chapters or sections, it is almost always listed by when the beginning of the story proper occurs. Those that are broken into chapters or sections have their individual sections in more exact locations.

All years are relative to the Battle of Yavin in Star Wars: Episode IV—“A New Hope.” Dates marked BBY occur before the Battle of Yavin, while those marked ABY occur after the Battle of Yavin. In most cases, we can consider “BBY” and “ABY” dates to be “before” or “after” A New Hope, the first Star Wars film released in theaters in 1977. It is only when dealing with events set during that film when any distinction would need to be drawn between the day of the battle and the overall span of the film. Stories occurring during the films, but not actual films or adaptations thereof are listed immediately after the film year in sections marked “Concurrent to SW[episode number].”

Entries are formatted as follows:

YEAR RELATIVE TO THE BATTLE OF YAVIN IN SW4
- Event or summary which may contain spoilers (Exact date if applicable)
  (source of event information or title of summarized story in bold and italics)
If there is a note attached to the event, it will be included here with the comment “NOTE:. It will also include asterisks after the “event or summary” and source lines.

Title of Overall Story [flashback?] [continued?] (format: Author)
Title of story part, such as a book in a trilogy [flashback?] [continued?] (format: Author)
Story chapter or individual comic issue [flashback?] [continued?] (format: Author)
If there is a note attached to the title, it will be included here with the comment “NOTE:. It will also include asterisks after the appropriate lines the note references.

On Spoilers
I take it as a given when someone reads the events on this timeline that they are not concerned with spoilers. The title listings are kept separate and placed after all of a year’s event entries, though, so that those wanting to avoid spoilers but still have a title-based chronology can use it as such with relative ease. I do not pull any punches, spoiler-wise, though, since it seems obvious that if you’re reading a summary of a story, you must want information about that story.

On Approximation, Cross-Referencing, Notes, and Births First
For events and summaries, I’ve tried to be thorough and accurate, but there may be some things incorrect or vague, depending on how specific the source material was. I’ve tried to cross-reference with other timelines to be sure. When there was an inconsistency with more than one other major timeline that I just couldn’t reconcile their way, I’ve made a note of it to show why I have it as I do. Also, since I tend to like to mark time by people’s ages when it is mentioned, I’ve tried to put all of the births at the beginning of each event section, and then moved on to the more “eventful” events. The few times this is not the case is when births occur during the course of an actual story, not just at a referenced date at about the same time as a story.

On Borrowed Items
In some cases, events have been borrowed from other sources, not taken from primary sources. Source notations for these read something like this:
To more thoroughly explain how to read this, it means that the event was referenced in the Tales of the Jedi Companion sourcebook for Star Wars: The Roleplaying Game, and that the event entry has been borrowed with permission from Christopher McElroy and Michael Potts' TimeTales Chronology. The final notation (verbatim, paraphrased, or abridged) refers to how it was borrowed. "Verbatim" means the entire entry has been borrowed as it was originally written (with the exception of tense, perhaps). "Paraphrased" means that the original form of the entry has been pared down into a smaller version, somewhat reworded. "Abridged" simply means that the event has been cut into a smaller size, but not substantially reworded.

Chris, Michael, and I have shared entries on other occasions (which is why you'll find the SWT-G referenced on their TimeTales for various entries, just as you find them referenced here), and has been very kind in allowing me to borrow/cite his more obscure (mostly RPG) entries in the Star Wars Timeline Gold. Given that it is very hard to find many of the old RPG materials locally, this has been a godsend. Thus, I decided that these items deserved this special notation all their own, to place more significance to their being borrowed and their graciousness.

On Time Measurement in the Star Wars Galaxy

While much of the current Star Wars publishing library (comic books, novels, video games, etc.) tends to use a 12-month calendar that resembles our own, it was not always that way. Until that 12-month calendar came into more frequent use in the era of heavy Clone Wars publishing from 2002 through 2008, the Star Wars universe was said to have used a 10-month calendar, as detailed in the Star Wars Roleplaying Game from West End Games.

On the original (abandoned) Legends Continuity calendar for the Star Wars universe (a 10-month calendar):

- 368 days = 1 year
- 60 minutes = 1 hour
- 24 hours = 1 day
- 5 days = 1 week
- 7 weeks = 1 month
- 35 days = 1 month
- 10 months + 3 festival weeks + 3 holiday days = 1 year

By the Tapani Sector's domestic calendar, which is the now-outdated 10-month Galactic Standard calendar, using local Tapani names, the year flows as follows:

- Month 1: Elona
- Month 2: Kelona
- Holiday 1: Tapani Day
- Month 3: Selona
- Festival Week 1: Expansion Week
- Month 4: Telona
- Month 5: Nelona
- Holiday 2: Productivity Day
- Month 6: Helona
- Festival Week 2: Shelova Week
- Month 7: Melona
- Month 8: Yelona
- Holiday 3: Harvest Day
- Month 9: Relona
  (The Freeworlds Region of the Tapani Sector also recognizes Relona 10 - 15 as Independence Week.)
- Month 10: Welona
- Festival Week 3: Winter Fete

Also, the week flows as follows:
Day 1: Atunda
Day 2: Katunda
Day 3: Satunda
Day 4: Datunda
Day 5: Natunda

By this we can extrapolate that the year, whether Tapani-named or not, in the Star Wars galaxy originally flowed as follows:

2 months, 1 holiday, 1 month, 1 festival week, 2 months, 1 holiday, 1 month, 1 festival week, 2 months, 1 holiday, 2 months, 1 festival week

Please note, however, that by the Galaxywide News Nets system of dating, the Winter Fete is listed as the first festival week of the next year since, technically, it takes place after the last month of the year. Thus the Winter Fete after 35:10:35 would be 36:F1:1, not 35:F3:1. (This is why, on Coruscant, Winter Fete is known as New Year Fete Week.)

Using the above information and articles from Galaxywide News Nets (in The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal and HoloNet News (on holonetnews.com, not its Star Wars Insider counterpart) as guides, we also know that the galactic standard for dating is YY:MM:DD. For example, the Imperial Senate is disbanded on 35:3:5, which would be the fifth day of the third month (Selona in the Tapani Sector), of the year “35.” The year number, generally a 2-digit number, refers to years after the Great ReSynchronization that took place, presumably, on the first day of the first month of the year 36 BBY (00:1:1), which is mentioned in HoloNet News #45.

Also, according to a Galaxywide News Nets story published in the Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #3 by West End Games, the Senate was dissolved on 35:3:5 and Alderaan was destroyed on approximately 35:3:7, thus making A New Hope take place in the middle of a year, by the Star Wars calendar. Since dates for almost every Star Wars story are dated in relation to the Battle of Yavin, however, I will continue to use the more widely-used dating of items in relation to that battle instead of Galactic Standard Years, as the Adventure Journal story would suggest.

As previously mentioned, one should also keep in mind that while the 10-month calendar was the standard Star Wars calendar for a long time, later materials, and now the entire Star Wars: Legends saga, now utilize a 12-month calendar, like that of Earth.

On Exact Date Dating
Events which are followed by an “Exact Date” notation indicate that the events have been given an exact in-universe date. In those cases, I have repeated the exact dating as stated (for instance, 39:3:3 for the beginning of Return of the Jedi), which read as YY:MM:DD. Thus, the date above (39:3:3) would translate into the 3rd day of the 3rd month of the year that begins about 4 years after the Battle of Yavin (since the Battle of Yavin is in the year numbered “35”).

I should also note that an event known as the Great Resynchronization took place in the year 36 BBY. It is that date that acts as the “zero point” for all of digital (YY:MM:DD), in-universe Star Wars dating in the Legends Continuity (and any apocryphal tales that happen to use that familiar calendar as well). Dates after that point, which are the vast majority of exact dates we are given, are easy to understand from that point, since they are positive numbers, similar to “AD” or “CE” dates in the real world. The notation for dates before the Great Resynchronization are given a sort of “BC” or “BCE” notation, albeit in an odd way. The year notation is followed by the letters “BrS” for “Before Resynchronization.” So, 100 years before then would be the year “100BrS.” (No, there shouldn’t be a space in there. They run the number and “BrS” together so that there are no spaces in the full date notation.)

Another consideration emerges in relation to when dates were created. Prior to 2002, the Star Wars franchise worked under an official 10-month calendar. Once 2002 arrived, bringing the Clone Wars era publishing venture, it became much easier (and practical) for the franchise to use a 12-month calendar. For many years, I simply converted these 12-month dates to 10-month equivalents (with lots of decimals) to place items and give “exact dates.” Fortunately, this is no longer necessary. In 2009, Leland Chee (at my suggestion) officially deemed all pre-2002 “10-month calendar dates” to actually be from a 12-month calendar system in which we just never happened to see dates in Months 11 or 12 by sheer coincidence. This has allowed me, as of June 2010, to convert all of those already-converted dates back into a much simpler format that simply follows a 12-month calendar throughout the entire document.

On the Clone Wars Film and Television Series
The feature film and television series entitled The Clone Wars (2008 – 2014) presents a particularly glaring continuity problem for Star Wars fans. The Clone Wars film takes place when Anakin Skywalker is “twenty” (according to the Karen Traviss novelization) and “months” rather than “years” after Anakin’s secret wedding (according to the Tracey West young reader novelization). Both of those references seem to coincide with changes made to the now-defunct StarWars.com Databank entries for characters like Anakin himself. However, in The Clone Wars, Anakin is already a Jedi Knight (rather than a Padawan), has his own Padawan (Ahsoka Tano) until the end of the series’ fifth season, and already has his facial scar.

Star Wars: Legends continuity publishing (the Expanded Universe’s C-Canon materials) spent several years, most notably 2002 through 2005, fleshing out the Clone Wars era with numerous comic books, novels, video games, and other materials. As such, we have a story in which Anakin is knighted (Jedi Trial), a story in which he gets his scar (Dreadnaughts of Rendili), and we have no mention whatsoever from that era of him ever having a Padawan, as that was a change dictated by The Clone Wars in 2008. This leaves us with a continuity problem. How do we (and Lucasfilm) deal with having three years’ worth of Clone Wars tales (in continuity time), yet somehow fit in this new series that seems to contradict some of it, unless very precisely placed and dealt with?

Over the six seasons of The Clone Wars, there were conflicting continuity issues that emerged now and then when Lucasfilm attempted to state the order of episodes in the cartoon series. Fortunately, these issues have been resolved now, thanks to the 2013 publication of The Clone Wars Episode Guide by Jason Fry, which provides the official, correct order of The Clone Wars episodes from the first five seasons, including tweaks from when the episode order was first hinted at (with errors) in The Ultimate Visual Guide: Updated and Expanded. We were later told that episodes from the final season aired in their correct chronological order.

Now that The Clone Wars has ended, one would hope that this would mean that we are in a position wherein Lucasfilm could begin working to reconcile the pre- and post-2008 Clone Wars tales. With the 2013 – 2014 announcements of Episode VII, Rebels, and then an entirely new continuity being formed, it is perhaps no surprise that we were informed in May 2013 (almost a year before the announcement that made the “Official Continuity” into the alternate universe of Star Wars: Legends) that there are currently no plans to work on reconciling the older and newer Clone Wars materials into a coherent single timeline for the Legends Continuity. They are all meant to be within the same overall continuity, but how they specifically fit together would appear to be something we will not be seeing for a while yet, if ever.

Thus, my only conclusion can be to assume, for now, that there is not a logical “fix” or “retcon” that can make all of this make sense. Until such time as the powers that be at Lucasfilm (be it Leland Chee or someone else) find a way to make it all “fit,” I have chosen not to destroy the previously-established, pre-cartoon continuity, nor to ignore the newer cartoon-based continuity. Instead, you will find both of the version of the Clone Wars era (“original” and “new” continuity) in a separate Legends Clone Wars Supplement file. You can simply read this document until you reach the end of Attack of the Clones, then use the Legends Clone Wars Supplement to explore both versions of the Clone Wars, then return to this document to continue with Revenge of the Sith and the many, many decades onward. Any dates outside of the 21.8 to 18.8 range that come from The Clone Wars are specifically noted as such (with the notation “TCW DATE”) for the sake of easy reference.
It is not an elegant solution, but the current state of “continuity chaos” within the Clone Wars era does not lend itself to elegant solutions, only continuity triage.

On P.E. Dating

Probably the single largest blunder in the early years of the Legends Continuity is the major difference between the dates that Timothy Zahn used in The Thrawn Trilogy for the Clone Wars, when compared to the dates that emerged nearly a decade later in the Prequel Trilogy. Zahn couldn’t have known that the dates approved by LFL for his novels would be so drastically changed later. However, the dates still leave us with some continuity problems in terms of reconciling dates involving Jorus C’Baath.

The dating system that appears in Dark Force Rising uses a month/day/year notation, with the years being given in terms of P.E. (Pre-Empire Date). Now, right there, you’ve got a problem because the materials say that Supreme Chancellor Palpatine (not that general title, but no longer merely a senator) had a hand in the destruction and launch of the Outbound Flight Project during the Old Republic Era . . . but the date is given as the year 64 P.E. This puts all the other dates in the same system somewhat off. In fact, since we really do see the Clone Wars in Attack of the Clones and Revenge of the Sith (over the span of three years), and the Bpfassh Dark Jedi insurrection he mentions really did happen during the Clone Wars (possibly concurrent with the Clone Wars, as it was a three-year event as well, though we now know that the whole “Dark Side Cave” issue has been revised by retcons), then if we can assume that we can put the meaning of “Empire” (to give us a “zero” moment to date back with “Pre-Empire” dates) at 19 BBY (Revenge of the Sith), then Zahn was off by a good 74 to 77 years for his Clone Wars dates. So, how do we reconcile these dates from Dark Force Rising with what we know now?

Well, first, we can give what the United States government might call “full faith and credit” to Zahn’s dates in relation to each other. If he says that the Dark Jedi insurrection happened between 77 P.E. and 74 P.E., then we may not be able to trust the year date, but we can certainly take it on good faith that he really did mean there to be three years from start to finish. We therefore assume all of his dates are correct in terms of time between events, so it becomes a matter of finding an adequate conversion from P.E. to more conventional dating.

That is where the Outbound Flight Project comes into play. Dark Force Rising gives it a date of “64 P.E.” According to the novel Outbound Flight, the OFP took place in 27 BBY. Now that we now have a reliable date for the Outbound Flight Project, we simply subtract 37 from every one of Zahn’s “P.E.” dates to discern the conventional date. The only sticking point in this is the timing of the Bpfassh conflict, but given the sketchy records left of the Clone Wars by the time of Dark Force Rising and Vision of the Future, we may conjecture that the Dark Jedi uprising C’Baath helped stop was not the same as the one that took place during the Clone Wars that sent a Dark Jedi to Dagobah, but that the two have been confused by scholars seeing similar situations as the same conflict (a suggestion that’s made even more likely by the fact that both the Clone Wars and the insurrection were three years in length). That is the only really convoluted trick to make it all work, but this entire discussion is the basis for how the P.E. dates, given in Chapter 4 of Dark Force Rising, are integrated into the Legends Continuity Timeline below.

On TC Dating

During the lead-up to the MMORPG video game The Old Republic, a new dating convention was created: “TC” dating. “TC” dates, which use “BTC” and “ATC” notations, refers to events before or after the Treaty of Coruscant, which is an event taking place shortly before the video game. Given that these dates are only usually referenced in TOR materials, I have chosen to stick to normal dating conventions, but each has a note that mentions the original TC dating information on which that date is derived. (The Treaty of Coruscant 3,653 years before A New Hope, which gives us an easy conversion method.)

On Dating The Old Republic Materials
While on the subject of The Old Republic (in “On TC Dating” above), it should be noted that there are some important considerations to be taken into account when dealing with dates based on the SWTOR MMORPG and tie-in works like the novels and comic series that also bear that name.

When the game was first in production, back as far as at least 2009, there was confusion as to when the game would take place in relation to the Treaty of Coruscant (3,653 BBY). At one point, it was said that the game would take place between 6 and 30 years after the Treaty of Coruscant (for a potential time frame of 3,647 – 3,623 BBY), which Rob Chestney later clarified to mean that the game begins “less than 10 years after the Treaty of Coruscant” and “doesn’t take place in a single moment of history but over a period of a few years.”

Later, the released The Old Republic game made references to the Treaty of Coruscant being about a decade or so earlier, suggesting that it began in 3,643 BBY. This was seemingly confirmed when the novel Fatal Alliance, said to be set just before the game begins, was given a date of circa 3,643 BBY in The Essential Reader’s Companion. With the later novel Annihilation, which takes place after the main storylines of the game, given a date in The Essential Reader’s Companion of 3,640 BBY, it seemed that the time span of the game was 3,643 BBY until either late 3,641 BBY or into at least a little of 3,640 BBY.

Then The Old Republic Encyclopedia was released, and all hell broke loose chronologically.

The Old Republic Encyclopedia unequivocally stated (on page 7) that “for reference, the events of Star Wars: The Old Republic begin 3,640 BBY.” This was quite a shock to chronologically-minded fans, since it meant that the entire game would have to be in 3,640 BBY in order for the date of Annihilation to still be correct. Moreover, it threw into question the situation for Fatal Alliance, since 3,643 BBY was no longer just before the beginning of the game but rather three years before the game. To make matters more difficult, the comic book series The Old Republic: The Lost Suns, which introduced Annihilation protagonist Theron Shan, had been billed as being concurrent to the class storylines in the game (with a couple of references in its final issue to those events), but they are referenced repeatedly in Annihilation has having been nearly two years earlier, which would either now be incorrect or necessitate that The Lost Suns is set a year or two prior to the game, rather than during the game.

To figure out what was true, I directly emailed Leland Chee, Keeper of the Holocron Continuity Database for Lucasfilm. His response was that the date of 3,640 BBY from The Old Republic Encyclopedia is correct, as are the 3,643 BBY and 3,640 BBY dates for Fatal Alliance and Annihilation, respectively. (So, no, * Fatal Alliance* is not set immediately before the game anymore.) As for The Lost Suns, it remains concurrent to the game, which makes all of the references of nearly two years between those events and Annihilation that can be found in Annihilation incorrect.

Therefore, despite what other websites might still try to claim (in the face of this direct, published date for the game), I am using the correct time frame of 3,640 BBY for the events of The Old Republic, and all dates in relation to that game (rather than in relation to the Treaty of Coruscant, the date of which has never moved) are in relation to that date from The Old Republic Encyclopedia.

For lack of a better place to explain, let me also briefly note why I organized the summaries for the eight class storylines of The Old Republic as I have them. (Yes, this is brief. It took me months to actually do it.)

First, given that the class storylines (up to level 50 in the original game) can be divided into a prologue and three acts (so four main parts), I took all eight summaries and split them up into their four components.
Second, I looked for key events or mentions in the summaries to come up with a sensible order for those 32 segments. For this, I used ten key bits of information:

1. Janarus is Supreme Chancellor in the first three segments of Republic Trooper, Jedi Consular, Bounty Hunter, and Smuggler. He is Supreme Chancellor in all four parts of Imperial Agent. He is caught up in a scandal that causes him to resign in the fourth Bounty Hunter segment. He is briefly noted but then replaced by Leontyne Saresh in the fourth segments of Jedi Consular, and Republic Trooper. Only Saresh is mentioned in the fourth segment of Smuggler. (A specific Supreme Chancellor is not named in the other three storylines.)

2. Scourge is the Emperor's Wrath until the end of the third Jedi Knight segment, and the player's Sith Warrior character becomes the Emperor's Wrath in the fourth part of that storyline.

3. Braden (the bounty hunter) is alive to be called for advice in the second Jedi Consular segment, and then he dies during the first Bounty Hunter segment.

4. The Children of the Emperor are first brought to the attention of the Jedi in the second Jedi Knight segment, and then they become the main threat in the third Jedi Consular segment.

5. The Sith Warrior frees the Emperor from Sel-Makor in the fourth Sith Warrior segment, then the Jedi Knight kills Sel-Makor and faces the freed Emperor during the fourth Jedi Knight segment.

6. The real head of Darth Bandon is delivered to the museum on Alderaan in the second Smuggler segment, and it is seen there in the second Bounty Hunter segment.

7. Fa’athra, Nem’ro’s rival, is a major threat in the first Bounty Hunter segment, and he is then taken down quite a bit in the first Imperial Agent segment.

8. Tol Braga is killed in the fourth Jedi Knight segment, then mentioned as dead in the fourth Imperial Agent segment.

9. The Esh-Kha are awakened in the fourth Jedi Consular segment, and they are mentioned as awake in the fourth Bounty Hunter segment.

10. Darth Baras is killed in the fourth Sith Warrior segment, and there is an open slot, possibly from Baras, on the Dark Council in the fourth Sith Inquisitor segment, into which Darth Thanaton moves.

With those ideas in mind, along with the knowledge that most of the stories have hostilities resuming in the Great Galactic War around the end of their third segments, I set about creating a list of the few items that must be in a particular order, keeping in mind that, since these stories are supposedly concurrent with each other, I needed to try to keep the first, second, third, and fourth segments of each storyline grouped together with others of that number, as much as possible with the information above. This is what I determined, in my rough notations:

- Jedi Consular 2 (Braden is alive)
- Bounty Hunter 1 (Braden dies, Fa’athra is a major threat to Nem’ro)
- Imperial Agent 1 (Fa’athra falls)
- Smuggler 2 (Bandon head brought)
- Bounty Hunter 2 (Bandon head seen)
- Jedi Knight 2 (First info on COTE, Scourge is Wrath)
- Jedi Consular 3 (COTE becomes main conflict)
- Sith Warrior 4 (Emperor freed from Sel-Makor, Baras dies, Sith Warrior is Wrath)
- Jedi Knight 4 (Sel-Makor and Emperor dead, Tol Braga Dies)
- Imperial Agent 4 (Tol Braga already dead, Janarus)
- Sith Inquisitor 4 (Baras may be dead)
- Bounty Hunter 4 (Janarus is in scandal and must resign, but Esh-Kha mentioned as awake)
- Jedi Consular 4 (Janarus then Saresh, but awakens Esh-Kha)
- Republic Trooper 4 (Janarus then Saresh)
- Smuggler 4 (Janarus then Saresh)

Aside from the obvious issue that I would have to split up the last six segments on that list into smaller pieces to fit together, I was then able to insert the other segments, based on which part of their storyline they were, and arrived at the order seen in this document. Flashpoints and Operations were then slotted in between and after them, befitting the approximate stage in the game when players could access those events.

And, yes, working on material from The Old Republic has been the single largest workload for The Star Wars Timeline Project since first adding events and story summaries in 1999.
On the “Story Chapter/Comic Issue” Line
Titles within the “story chapter/comic issue” line which have author names are comic issue titles. Those without author names are individual chapters from within the above listed item, and are, of course, by that author and found in that item.

On Assumed Names
Stories with * after the author name and the story title in quotation marks denotes an entry with an "assumed name." This is often the case when a title is not yet known for a story, but we know the story is on its way. (When no specific name is given, but the story is a part of a larger whole (e.g. “Open Seasons, Part I”), the “assumed name” is also the accepted title within the Star Wars community, so I do not use the quotation marks/asterisk notation for the assumption. There will be some instances where an asterisk (*) denotes that there is a “NOTE” about the item below the item. In those cases, a note section will follow shortly. If a note section does not appear, assume that the first case (the “assumed name” case) applies.

On Forthcoming Releases
Entries with [forthcoming] after the author name denotes stories which have been announced but not yet released, if their timeframe has been locked or approximated.

On Format Notation
In the “format notation” section of the entry, items are categorized as to their source material. Items are labeled as movies, comics, video games, and so on, using the Format Notation Key below. See the Acronym Key also.

On Adaptations
Some stories, such as the films, the Thrawn Trilogy, Dark Empire, and other sources have been adapted into other media. The films, for example, have been adapted into novels, comic books, video games, and just about every possible medium under the sun that Lucasfilm or its licensees have felt were profitable enough to warrant an adaptation. The Thrawn Trilogy, Splinter of the Mind’s Eye, and other novels have found themselves adapted into comic books. Still other tales like Dark Empire have been adapted from comic books into audio dramas. The list goes on and on, but these are relatively unusual cases, given the thousands upon thousands of pages of Star Wars stories that have been produced.

When you run into the title listings for these stories (not the summaries) on the timeline, you will find that the entries tend to start with the most prominent, most “respected” of the versions of the story, then other versions of the same story listed underneath, a bit indented, then stacked on top of one another. This is an indication that the materials “stacked” beneath are adaptations of that source material. Thus, if you were to look up Heir to the Empire, you would find the novel listed normally, then a secondary listing indented beneath for the comic book adaptation. The novel tends to take precedence over any other adaptations, and it is listed first. Usually, I try to keep the most “reputable” adaptations at the top of such listings, but in some cases, the lists are so unruly that it is easier to group them by medium (comics, children’s books, etc.). The key thing to note, though, is that the very top listing (the one that is less indented) is the one given most weight.

This is especially true in the case of video games. We often see video games that seek to adapt films for a new medium. Whether it is extremely true to the film, such as certain aspects of a particular Star Wars Trilogy arcade game (wherein you actually dueled Darth Vader with a joystick that acted briefly as a lightsaber), deviating to include more playable elements (such as Luke having to race his way to the Mos Eisley Cantina while evading Imperials hunting for the droids in Flight of the Falcon), or deviating into comedic territory for sheer fun and laughs (as in just about everything in the LEGO Star Wars games), these stories are reflections of the stories they are adapting. As such, they are listed with other adaptations, even though some story elements have been changed to make them enjoyable as gaming experiences.
In such video game adaptation cases, there are two cardinal rules to keep in mind. First, video games that serve only to adapt a film, such as Super Star Wars or LEGO Star Wars, are listed as simple adaptations in the adaptation lists without being integrated with other materials taking place within the film context. Stories wherein only part of the game is meant to adapt the film, such as certain missions in the Rogue Squadron video game series, are broken down and integrated into “Concurrent to SW#” sections, as they are part of the breakdown of a much larger game.

The second thing to remember is very simple. As I was often fond of saying on my ChronoRadio podcast, during its run (2002 – 2007): video game storylines must be pliable in order to be playable. We must take their interpretations of previously-established continuity with a grain of salt. After all, it is all meant in fun for our enjoyment.

On RPG Magazine Stories

There has been considerable confusion on the inclusion of several stories in the Legends Timeline which found print in various RPG gaming magazines. For the most part, the stories found in Challenge Magazine, GameTrade, and the like, are items which fit some relatively strange criteria. First, most were written by people involved with the Star Wars RPG. This would mean they are C-Canon, N-Canon (non-continuity), or Fan Fiction. Second, the items were allowed to be printed without copyright infringement, so they are, by definition, not Fan Fiction. That leaves C-Canon and N-Canon. That’s where things get tricky, though. My own contact assures me that the stories reside in a sort of lower rung of C-Canon (possibly S-Canon), much like the comic book adaptations of the Thrawn Trilogy and Han Solo at Stars’ End. The contact would have us believe that since they are not as “low” as being N-Canon, they just aren’t given any real C-Canon weight in relation to other items, making S-Canon the most likely status. This is further complicated by the fact that Michael Potts of TimeTales has mentioned that their contacts have said that the stories are more in the realm of Fan Fiction than anything else. So, we are left in a quandary. For the sake of completion, I am going ahead and including them. However, take their inclusion with a grain of salt. Someone, somewhere, sometime, allowed these to be printed with LFL’s silent support. If only for that reason, we should at least treat them a tiny bit better than N-Canon, if only in the most casual way.

On Star Wars Tales Stories

During Dave Land’s tenure as editor of Star Wars Tales, it became increasingly clear that the Star Wars Tales comic series was taking a very liberal approach to Star Wars stories. Peet Janes, the original editor, had said that stories in Tales would be both C-Canon and N-Canon, and even during Land’s reign, when Land himself said that all stories in Tales were then meant to be N-Canon, higher-ups through LucasBooks suggested that the validity of the stories should be judged individually, allowing stories to be inserted and referenced within continuity at the reader’s discretion. Without any specific notations for each story, it became difficult to determine which stories are C-Canon and which are merely N-Canon. For the sake of completion, I am including all of the stories that are likely C-Canon in the SWT-G, using my best judgment and information to determine which stories are C-Canon and which are N-Canon. Sometimes, this will be a difficult call. For example, in Star Wars Tales #7, Single Cell is quite obviously meant as an official backstory for Starfighter, while Jedi Chef and Force Fiction are obviously just quick humor stories. Nerf Herder, though, could either be a lighthearted C-Canon story or N-Canon, while Outbid But Never Outgunned could be a C-Canon addition to Boba Fett’s story, or perhaps just an N-Canon “what might have been” story in the vein of Infinites. I will do my best to ensure that only the purely N-Canon stories are kicked into Apocrypha Timelines, leaving as much in the Legends Timeline, where you can at least read summaries of them, as possible. Luckily, Star Wars Tales #21 ushered in a new editor for the series, Jeremy Barlow, who made a point of ensuring that we always knew for certain whether stories are C-Canon or N-Canon during his run (Star Wars Tales #21 – 24).

On the Four Ongoing Star Wars Titles

At four different times in Star Wars publishing, there was an ongoing Star Wars comic series that bore just that name—Star Wars. The first was the Marvel Comics series that was produced from 1977 until 1986. This series was reprinted by Dark Horse Comics under the title Classic Star Wars: A Long Time Ago, a title I use in this document as a means of differentiating it from other series with the simplistic Star Wars name.

The second Star Wars ongoing series was launched in 1998 by Dark Horse Comics. This series was broken into subtitled story arcs like Prelude to Rebellion and Twilight. In late 2002, that ongoing series was given a new title, Republic, which most fans have retroactively applied to that entire series in order to keep things straight. (Numerically, by the way, this Star Wars series that became Republic continued its numbering, though not its title, under the name Dark Times, which allowed it to officially pass the total number of issues from that earlier Marvel Comics series.)

A third Star Wars ongoing series, under that simplistic title, was launched by Dark Horse Comics in 2013. This series, written by Brian Wood, was released with great fanfare (and glaring continuity problems), but only ran for twenty issues, due to the license for Star Wars comics going back to Marvel from Dark Horse. This series is usually referred to as either Star Wars (leading to confusion) or Star Wars, Vol. 2 (leading to less confusion).

A four Star Wars ongoing series has been released by Marvel since their reacquisition of the Star Wars comic license, but it is relatively easy to differentiate that series from the other three because it is the only one appearing in the Story Group Canon document, rather than here in the Legends Continuity documents.

On Re-integrated Source Material
In 2004, LucasBooks changed their policy toward Star Wars continuity. Up until 2004, stories that were blatantly contradictory to the saga were kicked out as apocryphal, or "N-Canon" (a term that now also encompasses those stories that are deliberately non-continuity, which are known as Infinities). However, they would also kick out stories that had major contradictory elements. For example, the Rogue Squadron video game could have “alternate reality” versions of its events referenced in other materials, but the game itself was deemed apocryphal, thanks to a highly contradictory Battle of Calamari level that clashed with Dark Empire.

From 2004 through 2014, though, the policy tended toward the re-integration of all licensed materials into one continuity, except for contradictory elements, rather than stories. In other words, Rogue Squadron now “fits” because we can simply ignore its one contradictory level and focus on the areas that do mesh with the overall continuity that we now know (as of mid-2014) as the Legends Continuity.

What this means for the Star Wars Timeline Gold is that some previously apocryphal materials are now worked back into the Legends Continuity chronology presented in those volumes. However, contradictory elements are omitted (and often commented upon in post-summary notes). Contradictory chapters and video game levels (contradictory segments in a previously subdivided tale) are still listed by title (rather than by summary) in the continuity where they would have taken place, so that those using that re-integrated source can keep track of where all parts of that story take place, relative to each other, even if the story elements themselves are kicked out of the continuity. I consider this a decent middle-ground for both the liberal and strict Legends Continuity readers.

One should also note that while this re-integration was a necessary part of the development of the Legends Continuity, the Story Group Canon that began being developed in mid-2014 is designed to all be of equal canonical status and thus should (hopefully) never need such a re-integration, since there should not be any division in the first place.

On Games in the Story Group Era
In general, video games must be “pliable to be playable.” In other words, game mechanics must make sense from a gaming standpoint, and that often means that certain aspects of the Star Wars universe are tweaked or exaggerated in order to fit such a game. For example, due to limitations in technology, most lightsabers in video games act more like clubs than swords, since they do not dismember opponents constantly. Force abilities are often exaggerated in games to give the player a greater sense of power in their characters and menace in their opponents.

In the era of the Legends Continuity (up to mid-2014), video games first received designations in terms of whether they were or were not in-continuity, then as the Holocron Continuity Database developed, elements within games were given designations as C-Canon, N-Canon, and so on.

In this new era of the Story Group and its rebooted continuity ("Canon"), things have changed slightly. Video games are being vetted by the Story Group like anything else, but they are being checked for what Story Group members have called “authenticity,” rather than whether they fit into a particular continuity. Thus, a game like Battlefront (2015) may include quite a bit that reflects Canon, but the game itself is questionable in whether it, as a whole, can be considered Canon. Star Wars: Commander (a mobile game) has been vetted for “authenticity” to give a Star Wars experience to players, but the game’s many scenarios may or may not be in-continuity with the Story Group Canon timeline. Certainly elements of the games have been tied into Story Group Canon, since we see Battlefront reflected in the Twilight Company novel and characters from Commander in the pages of Ultimate Star Wars. In general, though, we can no longer take for granted that a video game that is released in the post-2014 Story Group era is necessarily in-continuity. Major ones probably will tend to have most of their elements considered part of Story Group Canon, but the more obscure the game, the less likely it seems that they will be considered valid if later contradicted by other sources.

(One exception to this is The Old Republic, which Story Group members have confirmed is continuing in the Legends Continuity.)

While it has not been publicly stated, I believe this “authenticity rather than continuity” approach to video games is also being applied to other forms of games, such as miniatures games, roleplaying games, and card games from Fantasy Flight Games. The miniatures games (X-wing, Armada, and Imperial Assault), roleplaying games (Edge of the Empire, Age of Rebellion, and Force and Destiny), and card game (Star Wars: The Card Game) are heavily rooted in Legends Continuity characters, locations, ship types, historical events, and so forth. However, they also eventually began to include Story Group Canon elements in them as well, such as references to Lothal in the RPG, the Ghost from Rebels being added to X-wing, etc. It appears that the games are aiming for an “authentic” Star Wars experience, without necessarily needing to adhere to a particular continuity.

The material itself tends to bear out a similar interpretation, as the Force and Destiny Core Rulebook includes multiple notes (most importantly on pp. 315 and 378) about the use of Legends Continuity material for inspiration and on the reliability (or lack thereof) of “legends.” It is as if the creators want to include Legends Continuity material without being beholden to that continuity or the limitations of current Canon.

So, what does this mean for how these games are to be handled for The Star Wars Timeline Gold? I believe the most prudent method is to continue to include these games in the document because they are indeed Star Wars stories, characters, and elements that are rooted in one continuity or another. I do, however, caution the reader to consider information from these sources as in question until or unless they are referenced elsewhere.

As for which continuity’s timeline a given story or element will fall into, I will continue to err on the side of caution. Since the FFG games are so heavily rooted in the Legends Continuity, I will continue to add them to that timeline until I am informed that it should not be the case. However, when instances emerge of materials rooted in Story Group Canon, I will defer to that timeline and include them there, such as if X-wing scenarios provide us with new mission for the crew of the Ghost.
In general, I prefer not to “rob” the SWT-G reader of summaries and event information from these tales because they are often what readers seek the most, since so many fans do not pick up the gaming materials yet do read the novels and comics. I do, however, want to make sure it is clear, as I believe it should be now, how I am viewing these sources in light of the Story Group’s somewhat vague handling of the material.

On “Our Time” vs. “Star Wars Time” in the Legends Continuity

For years, fans have been debating just how long ago “a long time ago” might be. Nevermind that it is all “in a galaxy far, far away,” fans still would like to think that there is some way to equate Star Wars dates to our own. Originally, George Lucas’ first story synopsis for the saga set the tale in the 33rd century, which is in our far future. Given that the story was later changed to take place “a long time ago,” the original date must be thrown out.

Ever since then, we have simply been left with the belief that “a long time ago in a galaxy far, far away” is just a different way of saying “once upon a time.” For those who are curious, though, there have been two stories printed (and two other roundabout attempts) that have managed to equate Star Wars dates to our own. They are, however, stories that are considered Infinities (N-Canon), rather than anything C-Canon (part of the Legends Continuity). For the sake of argument, though, here’s the lowdown on both.

The first attempt at this kind of conversion came in a Star Wars and Indiana Jones crossover story in the Star Wars Tales anthology comic book series.

In Star Wars Tales #19 (and later, reprinted, in the Star Wars Fan Club Special 2008), there is a story called Into the Great Unknown. In the story, Han Solo and Chewbacca are aboard the Millennium Falcon, when they are attacked by Imperials. They are forced to leap to hyperspace blind and end up in our solar system, where they crash on Earth. Once there, Han is killed by Native Americans and the mourning Chewbacca is believed to be a sasquatch (perhaps the Sasquatch, AKA “Bigfoot”). Over a century later, the wreckage of the Falcon and Han’s remains are found by the intrepid American archaeologist Indiana Jones.

We can infer a few dates from this, if we are so inclined (and since I was bored when updating the timeline at some point, apparently I was so inclined, or this wouldn’t be here, right?). We can infer all of the following:

First, Han makes mention of America’s forest (probably in Humboldt County, California, or somewhere close) as looking like Endor, which puts the story firmly after Han’s first encounter with the forest moon in Return of the Jedi. Since the Empire seems to still be going after them, we can also assume that the story is set before the events of Vision of the Future, when the treaty with the Imperial Remnant is signed. Since Han also mentions that he always figured Chewie would be killed saving Han or his kids, we have to conclude that the tale takes place sometime between 9 (more likely 11) ABY and 19 ABY.

Second, the Indiana Jones portion of the tale, when he finds the wreckage, can also be dated. I had once believed that it must take place somewhere around 1935, due to the fact that Short Round, the little kid from Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom, which takes place in 1935, is with him in this story but not in Raiders of the Lost Ark (1936). However, reader Avery Goodman pointed out two things to me: first, Indy refers to Atlantis technology, placing this story after Indiana Jones and the Fate of Atlantis; and, second, Indiana Jones and the Fate of Atlantis has been set as taking place in May 1939 by Indiana Jones: The Ultimate Guide. Thus, I am agreeing with Avery in placing Into the Unknown in 1939.

Third, the story tells us that the Indy segment is 126 years after the Han and Chewie segment.

So, if we assume a date of 1939 for the Indiana Jones segment, then the Star Wars segment takes place in 1813. If we then split the difference of the date for the Star Wars segment to be 15
ABY (halfway between Empire’s End and Vision of the Future), then A New Hope must take place (using how similar Earth and Star Wars years are in length) around 1798.

By that rather rough conversion, then . . .

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>STAR WARS STORYLINE</th>
<th>DATE RELATIVE TO A NEW HOPE</th>
<th>GALACTIC STANDARD DATE</th>
<th>EARTH DATE (APPROXIMATE)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Je’daii Founded on Tython</td>
<td>36,453 BBY</td>
<td>-36,418</td>
<td>34,655 B.C.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Founding of the Republic</td>
<td>25,053 BBY</td>
<td>-25,018</td>
<td>23,255 B.C.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Golden Age of the Sith</td>
<td>5,000 BBY</td>
<td>-4,965</td>
<td>3202 B.C.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Knights of the Old Republic*</td>
<td>4,000 BBY</td>
<td>-3,965</td>
<td>2202 B.C.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Path of Destruction</td>
<td>1,000 BBY</td>
<td>-965</td>
<td>A.D. 798</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Phantom Menace</td>
<td>32 BBY</td>
<td>3:4</td>
<td>A.D. 1764</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Attack of the Clones</td>
<td>22 BBY</td>
<td>13:5</td>
<td>A.D. 1774</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Revenge of the Sith</td>
<td>19 BBY</td>
<td>16:5</td>
<td>A.D. 1777</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A New Hope</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>35:3</td>
<td>A.D. 1798</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Empire Strikes Back</td>
<td>3 ABY</td>
<td>38:6</td>
<td>A.D. 1801</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Return of the Jedi</td>
<td>4 ABY</td>
<td>39:3</td>
<td>A.D. 1802</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Thrawn Trilogy</td>
<td>9 ABY</td>
<td>44</td>
<td>A.D. 1807</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hand of Thrawn Duology</td>
<td>19 ABY</td>
<td>54</td>
<td>A.D. 1817</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The New Jedi Order</td>
<td>25 – 29 ABY</td>
<td>60 - 64</td>
<td>A.D. 1823 – 1827</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Dark Nest Trilogy</td>
<td>35 – 36 ABY</td>
<td>70 - 71</td>
<td>A.D. 1833 – 1834</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Legacy of the Force</td>
<td>40 – 41 ABY</td>
<td>75 – 76</td>
<td>A.D. 1838 – 1839</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fate of the Jedi</td>
<td>43 – 44 ABY</td>
<td>78 - 79</td>
<td>A.D. 1841 – 1842</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Crucible</td>
<td>45 ABY</td>
<td>80</td>
<td>A.D. 1843</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

*NOTE: The Knights of the Old Republic referenced here is the Tales of the Jedi collection that begins with Ulic Qel-Droma and the Beast Wars of Onderon, the first Tales of the Jedi story of the 4,000 BBY era. It is not the later comic series Knights of the Old Republic, nor is it the video game Knights of the Old Republic, which takes place another four years after the KOTOR comic book series. (Don’t you wish they'd stop reusing the same names over and over again?)

These dates, of course, are only based on that story, which is admittedly apocryphal, N-Canon, but since it’s our first glimpse at any kind of date translation, I find it fascinating and have to wonder why 126 years was chosen, rather than a number in the thousands. At any rate, there it is, take it or leave it. Personally, I’d leave it. This is just in here for the fun ideas it generates.

Two rather interesting things happen when we look at these dates, by the way. 126 years before 1939 is 1813, and anagram of . . . 1138. Also, these dates would have Legacy taking place in the galaxy far, far away the very same time that Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom and Raiders of the Lost Ark are taking place in our galaxy. Pretty cool, huh?

The second set of dates that connect Star Wars dates to our universe comes from another crossover title.

The Playstation 3 and Xbox 360 both received the video game Soulcalibur IV with great fanfare, given that the title brought Darth Vader, Starkiller (AKA Galen Marek AKA the Secret Apprentice), and Yoda into the fray for this round of the fighting game saga. All of the previous games in the series had previously received real world dates, ranging from 1584 to 1591, and the new game was assumed by many fans to either be in late 1591 or in 1592 (since two games had already taken place a few months apart in 1591). This would mean very little if confined to the video game. Other games, such as Mercenaries and Indiana Jones and the Staff of Kings have used Star Wars characters in ways that are not necessarily attempting to tell a Star Wars story. However, Soulcalibur IV was promoted with an online Star Wars and Soulcalibur IV crossover
If we follow the Visions of the Blade logic, then the events of the online comic take place around 2 BBY, which leads directly into Soulcalibur IV in c1592. by our calendar. In other words, the “zero point” of the Star Wars saga, A New Hope, would be in 1594 or so. The table below follows this reckoning for comparison to the table above.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>STAR WARS STORYLINE</th>
<th>DATE RELATIVE TO A NEW HOPE</th>
<th>GALACTIC STANDARD DATE</th>
<th>EARTH DATE (APPROXIMATE)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Je’daii Founded on Tython</td>
<td>36,453 BBY</td>
<td>-36,418</td>
<td>34,859 B.C.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Founding of the Republic</td>
<td>25,053 BBY</td>
<td>-25,018</td>
<td>23,459 B.C.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Golden Age of the Sith</td>
<td>5,000 BBY</td>
<td>-4,965</td>
<td>3406 B.C.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Knights of the Old Republic*</td>
<td>4,000 BBY</td>
<td>-3,965</td>
<td>2406 B.C.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Path of Destruction</td>
<td>1,000 BBY</td>
<td>-965</td>
<td>A.D. 594</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Phantom Menace</td>
<td>32 BBY</td>
<td>3:4</td>
<td>A.D. 1562</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Attack of the Clones</td>
<td>22 BBY</td>
<td>13:5</td>
<td>A.D. 1572</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Revenge of the Sith</td>
<td>19 BBY</td>
<td>16:5</td>
<td>A.D. 1575</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A New Hope</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>35:3</td>
<td>A.D. 1594</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Empire Strikes Back</td>
<td>3 ABY</td>
<td>38:6</td>
<td>A.D. 1597</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Return of the Jedi</td>
<td>4 ABY</td>
<td>39:3</td>
<td>A.D. 1598</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Thrawn Trilogy</td>
<td>9 ABY</td>
<td>44</td>
<td>A.D. 1603</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hand of Thrawn Duology</td>
<td>19 ABY</td>
<td>54</td>
<td>A.D. 1613</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The New Jedi Order</td>
<td>25 – 29 ABY</td>
<td>60 - 64</td>
<td>A.D. 1619 – 1623</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Dark Nest Trilogy</td>
<td>35 – 36 ABY</td>
<td>70 - 71</td>
<td>A.D. 1629 – 1630</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Legacy of the Force</td>
<td>40 – 41 ABY</td>
<td>75 - 76</td>
<td>A.D. 1634 – 1635</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fate of the Jedi</td>
<td>43 – 44 ABY</td>
<td>78 - 79</td>
<td>A.D. 1637 – 1638</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Crucible</td>
<td>45 ABY</td>
<td>80</td>
<td>A.D. 1639</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

NOTE: See note with previous table.

This derivation of dates is not quite as intriguing in its historical ties as the one derived from Into the Unknown, but it is interesting to find that the latest Star Wars stories in the Legends Continuity, the Legacy comics, would be happening during the era in which the American colonies were still decades away from independence from Britain.

One should also note, in passing, that there was, at one point, going to be a trilogy of Star Wars novels by Robert J. Sawyer, which began with a story called Alien Exodus. It was going to detail the origins of much of the Star Wars galaxy’s major facets (Hutt, the Skywalker family name, the Force, etc.). It would have stated that the origins of the humans in the “Galaxy Far, Far Away” could be traced back to a lost human expedition from Earth in the 25th Century. This novel series never came to fruition as a Star Wars project, but it eventually became the basis for the separate Alien Chronicles novels by Deborah Chester. Thus, the idea of the Star Wars saga connecting with Earth history is not too far-fetched. It was, at one time, even planned.

So, is there any form in which we do have a connection between Star Wars and the real world calendar? Are the only attempts to do this a matter of Infinities tales or canceled stories, none of which actually “count” in either of the two major Star Wars continuities?

Well . . . no. We do have a very loose means of connecting “our time” and “Star Wars time,” but even that connection is a bit murky.

According to the original Essential Guide to Alien Species and the revised New Essential Guide to Alien Species, the “Big Bang” took place 5 billion years prior to A New Hope. Given that our own scientists have estimated the age of our universe (i.e. time since the “Big Bang”) as 13.7 billion years, that would mean that A New Hope would take place around 8.7 billion years ago. However, there is a problem with this measurement, as the original edition of the Star Wars Encyclopedia (and other sources that seem to have referenced it) claim that the Yavin System was formed 7.5 billion years before A New Hope. Since the Yavin System cannot have formed 2.5 billion years before the “Big Bang,” one of those dates (the “Big Bang” date in the Alien Species guides or the Yavin date in the Encyclopedia) must be wrong. Given the amount of other information in the “billions of years ago” range for Star Wars, I would bet on the Alien Species date for the “Big Bang” being the incorrect one.

This leaves us with the knowledge that the “Big Bang” of the Star Wars universe (and, in theory, our universe) has to be both 13.7 billion years ago for us, while also being more than 7.5 billion years before A New Hope. With such a large date scale, individual years would become essentially meaningless in this conversion. Thus, if A New Hope must be in our past (not even “a long time ago,” just “before today,” since millennia would be mostly meaningless – nice alliteration there, huh?), then the best that we can say is that A New Hope (the “zero moment”) must be no earlier than 6.2 billion years ago. Any earlier would put the formation of the Yavin system (7.5 billion years BBY) before the “Big Bang.”

Of course, that assumes that the Star Wars galaxy actually is in our own universe, just “far, far away.” If it were in another universe within the Multiverse, then we have absolutely no method of measuring relative time whatsoever. Either way, the Multiverse angle or “billions of years ago” perspective both might logically explain (for those looking to mix real life and fiction) why the societies of the Star Wars galaxy have never shown up on Earth. They would be in another universe entirely, or likely to have gone extinct long before modern day.

So, hey, we might have managed to narrow it down to a span of about as many years as there are people on the entire planet. (Now you see why I mentioned the more fun conversions from the N-Canon stories first!)

1.2
ACRONYM KEY

Within the document, you will find various abbreviations and acronyms for different publication titles, such as Dark Horse Extra, The Clone Wars Magazine, and so forth. The following list includes explanations for the most common. In cases where the acronym includes a “#,” the symbol stands for an issue number or 2-digit year notation that may appear with the acronym when used.

AD: Archaeology’s Dig Magazine (ed. Unknown)
ADODH: A Decade of Dark Horse (ed. Randy Stradley)
AJ#: The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal (ed. Peter Schweighofer)
BFAOD: Boba Fett: Agent of Doom (ed. Dave Land)
BTM: Behind the Magic (LucasArts)
CM#: Challenge Magazine (Games Design Workshop)
CWA#: Clone Wars Adventures (ed. Jeremy Barlow)
DHE#: Dark Horse Extra (ed. Dave Land)
DHP#: Dark Horse Presents (ed. Mike Richardson)
DHPA#: Dark Horse Presents Annual (ed. Randy Stradley)
DRS##: Del Rey Star Wars Sampler (ed. Unknown)
FCS#: Star Wars Fan Club Special (ed. Randy Stradley)
FMSWS##: Famous Monsters Star Wars Spectacular (ed. Forrest J. Ackerman)
G#: Star Wars Gamer (ed. Christopher Perkins)
GT#: GameTrade Magazine (ed. Unknown)
GWN: Galaxywide News Nets (ed. Peter Schweighofer)
LCM-##-##-#: LEGO Club Magazine (ed. Unknown)**
LOTJ/SOTJ: Legacy of the Jedi / Secrets of the Jedi Omnibus (by Jude Watson)*
MIBSW#: Marvel Illustrated Books: Star Wars (ed. Unknown)
MSDHP#: MySpace Dark Horse Presents (ed. Sierra Hahn)
P#: Polyhedron (ed. Unknown)
PCG-#: PC Gamer (ed. Unknown)
RB#: Rocket's Blast Comic Collector (ed. Unknown)
S-##-##-#: Shadis (ed. Unknown)
SCR#: Scrye (ed. Unknown)
SGFG#: Space Gamer / Fantasy Gamer (ed. Unknown)
SSC: Star Wars Short Story Collection (ed. David Levithan & Shelly Shapiro & Dave Gross)
SWAM#: Star Wars Adventures Magazine (ed. Unknown)
SWGM#: Star Wars Galaxy Magazine (ed. Bob Woods)
SWH: The Official Star Wars Website: Hyperspace
SWI#: Star Wars Insider (ed. Dave Gross & Brett Rector & Jonathan Wilkins)
SWIS#: Star Wars Insider Special (ed. Jonathan Wilkins)
SWM#: Star Wars Manga (ed. Tokyopop)
SWMUS#: Star Wars Magazine (U.S. Edition) (ed. Titan)
SWOPM#: Star Wars: Official Poster Monthly (ed. Galaxy Publications)
SWR#: Star Wars: Republic (ed. Randy Stradley)
SWT#: Star Wars Tales (ed. Peet Janes & Dave Land)
SWV: Star Wars: Visionaries (ed. Jeremy Barlow)
TCWM#: The Clone Wars Magazine (ed. Andrew James)
TFJP: Tales from Jabba’s Palace (ed. Kevin J. Anderson)
TFT: Tales from the Empire (ed. Peter Schweighofer)
TFTMEC: Tales from the Mos Eisley Cantina (ed. Kevin J. Anderson)
TM#: Troll Magazine (ed. Unknown)
TOS: The Official Star Wars Website*
TFTNR: Tales from the New Republic (ed. Peter Schweighofer & Craig Carey)
TOTBH: Tales of the Bounty Hunters (ed. Kevin J. Anderson)
TPMDVD: The Phantom Menace DVD Special Features (Fox Home Video Entertainment)
TSW#: Totally Star Wars (ed. Unknown)
WWM#: White Wolf Magazine (ed. Unknown)
VOR-##-#: Vortex (ed. Unknown)
VOY#: Voyages (ed. Unknown)
*NOTE: The omnibus paperback that includes Legacy of the Jedi and Secrets of the Jedi is all by Jude Watson, of course, hence her being listed as “by Jude Watson” rather than “ed. Jude Watson.” You will not find this notation with the actual book listings for LOTJ or SOTJ because they were originally released as separate books. However, there is a short story entitled The Last One Standing that is exclusive to the omnibus edition as a sort of bonus story, which is why this special notation was necessary.
NOTE: PC Gamer magazine entries have two numbers. The PC Gamer issue from November 2001, for example, is PC Gamer, Volume 8, Issue 11, or “PCG-8-11.” The same holds true for Vortex.
NOTE: Shadis gaming magazine entries have three numbers. The Shadis issue from July/August 1994, for example, is Shadis 3, Number 2, Issue 14, or “S-3-2-14.”
*NOTE: Materials noted as “TOS” are from the main, free content of StarWars.com, not the now-defunct members-only Hyperspace area, which has its own designation, “SWH.”
NOTE: In the case of LEGO Club Magazine, the three pairs of numbers following “LCM” represent the first and second months listed in the date of the magazine, followed by the two-digit year of the publication.

1.3

FORMAT NOTATION KEY
Audio Drama: a rescripted audio version (not just an audiobook) of a previously published story
Book: any book that does not fall under a more specific category, generally a guide
Cartoon: animated television episode
Cartoon Film: animated film, originally presented in theaters, rather than on television
CCG: Customizable card game (e.g. Star Wars Customizable Card Game, Young Jedi, etc.)
CED: Capacitance Electronic Discs (found only in Star Wars Video Release History Section)
Children's Book: Book intended for very young readers, such as Fuzzy as an Ewok
Clip: short video segment, not to be confused with a bit of video in an actual film
Comic: single comic book or comic strip cycle (i.e. not a single strip, but the story across strips)
Comic Strip: a single comic strip (i.e. not a storyline across multiple strips)
Commercial: television commercial, not a printed advertisement
DVD: a production that was originally released (widely, at least) to DVD for general audiences
Duology: series of two items
E-book: electronic book, download-only (albeit possibly reprinted in physical form later)
Essential Guide: a sourcebook from the Star Wars: Essential Guides series
Internet Video: a video or video clip, originally released online (can be re-released elsewhere)
Live Performance: an actual live stage performance (e.g. The Ewoks and the Magic Sunberries)
Movie: feature film, originally released in theaters
Novel: a general novel, usually referred to as an adult-level book
Radio Drama: episodic audio version of a film story, not to be confused with a simple audiobook
Read-Along Book: a children's book designed to be read alongside a specific recording Reference Book: a guidebook (though not an Essential Guide or RPG sourcebook)
RPG: Role Playing Game materials
RPGA: Role Playing Game Association (or RPGA Network) Role Playing Campaign
Series: series of stories, usually more than three items
Short Story: small story, usually within the body of an anthology
Television Special: 1+ hour program originally shown on television, never in theaters
Trilogy: series of three items
VCD: video compact disc (found only in Star Wars Video Release History Section)
VHS: video home system videotape (found only in Star Wars Video Release History Section)
Video Game: electronic media game, does not include VHS-based games
Young Adult Novel: teen to adult-level book (e.g. Young Jedi Knights)
Youth Novel: teen or "young readers" level book (e.g. Jedi Apprentice)
SECTION II

THE LEGENDS STAR WARS CONTINUITY
(VOL. 1: From 7,500,000,000+ to 0 BBY)
(The Expanded Universe “Legends” Timeline Minus Apocryphal Material)
(In Legends terms: G-, T-, C-, and accepted S-, but no N-Canon)

“A Long Time Ago in a Galaxy Far, Far Away…”

7,500,000,000+ BBY

- The Universe is created via the Big Bang.*
  (conjecture assuming that the Star Wars galaxy is meant to be in our Universe and Multiverse)*

  *NOTE: Current estimates suggest a date of around 13,500,000,000 – 14,000,000,000 years ago for this event, but how long ago is the Star Wars saga set, compared to our present? Thus, I have just placed this with the earliest date we have for a Star Wars event, then tacked on a “+” to denote that it is further back than that event.

- TCW DATE: As the universe develops, life energy emerges from a pure connection to the Force on an unnamed planet to spread life in the galaxy. On this planet, the midichlorians are born, which will spread into the galaxy and provide the link between life forms that feed the Living Force and the Cosmic Force that brings all living things together.
  (conjecture based on Destiny)

- According to Yuuzhan Vong legend, on a plane of physical reality that beings in this reality cannot accurately conceive, the Creator, Yun-Yuuzhan, sacrifices pieces of himself to create all that exists, including a pantheon of lesser gods. Those gods include the Twin Gods—Yun-Yammka (the Slayer) and Yun-Harla (the Cloaked Goddess), Yun-Ne'Shel (the Modeler), Yun-Shuno (the Pardoner), and the Lovers, Yun-Txiin and Yun-Qaah. Yun-Yuuzhan promises the Lesser Gods that they will one day ascend to his level, but only after they prepare a chosen people to ascend to their place as new Lesser Gods.
  (conjecture based on The New Jedi Order Sourcebook)

- The Star Wars galaxy is formed. The galaxy spans 100,000 light-years across and includes 400,000,000,000 stars. Of these, approximately 180,000,000,000 of these have planets. Approximately 7,100,000,000 of the stars can support life, while only about 3,200,000,000 star systems (stars with planets) can actually support life. About 1,000,000,000 star systems will eventually have someone living in them (in the span of the saga, that is), and only about 69,000,000 will meet population requirements for Imperial representation during the reign of Emperor Palpatine, and only 1,750,000 of those will actually be full member worlds of the Galactic Empire. By the time of the Empire, there will be over 5,000,000 intelligent species known in the galaxy, and that is with only about 25% of the galaxy properly surveyed.*
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)*

  *NOTE: Various sources, including the Essential Guide to Alien Species (and New Essential Guide to Alien Species) tell us that this event takes place at 5,000,000,000 BBY, but since the formation of the Yavin system is listed in the Star Wars Encyclopedia an entire 2.5 billion years before that date, I am forced to simply use the Yavin date with a “+” for the creation moment, seeing as how it isn’t logical for the Yavin system to form and then have the galaxy itself form, as LFL would seem to be suggesting in their editorial slip-up. And, yes, this had said 1,000,000 light years across until the Atlas confirmed it as 100,000 instead.

7,500,000,000 BBY

- The Yavin System is formed.
  (conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia)

3,000,000,000 BBY

- The Sharu begin to evolve. (They will eventually choose to purposely devolve themselves to avoid the attention of the Celestials.)
  (conjecture based on Lando Calrissian and the Mindharp of Sharu and The Essential Atlas)
2,000,000,000 BBY
- A rogue asteroid’s gravitational pull causes the formation of the Oseon asteroid belt.
  (conjecture based on Lando Calrissian and the Flamewind of Oseon)

10,000,000 BBY
- Volcanic activity on Esseles finally begins to end.
  (conjecture based on Into the Core Worlds)

3,000,000 BBY
- An asteroid collides with Vinsoth, killing all but the smaller species, one of which begins its slow evolution into the Chevin.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 12: Aliens--“Enemies and Allies”)
- Millions of years before the glove of Darth Vader is found there, the Valley of the Calamarian Knowledge Banks, is formed on the planet Mon Calamari.
  (conjecture based on The Glove of Darth Vader)
- A black hole collapses, agitating a nearby nebula. In the nebula, a star (Morasil) forms. Over the next million years, a second star (Termadus) forms. Over the next millennia, a gas giant forms, attracting its own small system. A rogue planet from another failed system is pulled into the new system. One planet explodes, creating an asteroid belt and causing one of its moons, hit by debris, to become highly volcanic. On another of the planets, reptilian life evolves into sentience. Thus begins the life of the Cularin system.*
  (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)*

*NOTE: This assumes that the system’s formation took just under 2,000,000 years. It is could begin any time millennia or aeons earlier than Living Force and only needs to have ended within “centuries” of the campaign.

2,006,200 BBY
- The Columi evolve into sentients on Columus.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 4: Alien Races)

2,004,200 BBY
- The Columi, based on safer egg-laying practices, take to the trees and begin to evolve accordingly (a prehensile tail, claws, etc.).
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 4: Alien Races)

2,002,200 BBY
- The Columi learn to use primitive tools.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 4: Alien Races)

2,002,000 BBY
- The Columi learn to mine for minerals and begin building tree-spanning cities.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 4: Alien Races)

2,000,000 BBY
- The Columi of the planet Columus become one of the first (if not the first) races in the galaxy to develop space travel. They are disappointed by the lower lifeforms they find on other worlds and give up space travel in lieu of advancing their own civilization at home. (Some will argue that they instead pull back from expansion for fear of raising the ire of the Celestials.)
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 4: Alien Races and The Essential Atlas)
- An asteroid hits the planet that would be later discovered by Krin Koda, wiping out most of the indigenous Tempestro race, and forcing the survivors to exist by living in the trees.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 8: Scouts via TimeTales, verbatim)
- Ssiskor, a shaman, is a member of the starfaring species which discovers the planet Kriekaal. Legends maintained by the Krieks say that Ssiskor angered Br’lai, the goddess of the molten oceans, and she made the oceans rise up and swallow the visitors.
(conjecture based on The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #14 via TimeTales, verbatim)

- The planet Kashyyyk reaches an evolutionary crux, when all species in the planet must learn to develop deadly skills or attributes or die out. Wookiees begin to evolve during this period. (Another theory posits that perhaps the Wookiees didn’t originate on Kashyyyk at all, but were pioneers or refugees from another world at this time.)
(conjecture based on the Essential Guide to Planets and Moons and Secrets of Kashyyyk)

- On Zonama Sekot, semi-sentient seedlings that will come to be used in the creation of organic vessels begin to be carried into the valley that will come to be used as a great factory for ship construction. For the most part, it seems this transport into the valley is by waterway, though one would expect other natural phenomena might help them along.
(conjecture based on the Rogue Planet)

- The Sullustans begin to evolve.
(conjecture based on the Essential Guide to Planets and Moons)

- Three rivers converging in a valley finally produce Beggar’s Canyon on the planet Tatooine.
(conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia)

- The duck begins to evolve on countless worlds across the galaxy.*
(conjecture based on information found at starwars.com via TimeTales, verbatim)*

*NOTE: Frequent SWT Contributor Andrew Gordon provided this conjecture for TimeTales, based on a Howard the Duck joke on the website.

1,000,000+ BBY
- Sometime before having some of their species transplanted to the Corellian system by the Architects (Celestials, Ones), humans evolve on Coruscant (known at this time as Notron).
(conjecture based on The New Essential Chronology)

1,000,000 BBY
- The Corellian System is created by the ancient race known as the Celestials (or simply “the Ancients”). The Ancients populate the system with Dralls and Selonians, as well as humans, who have evolved on Coruscant (Notron).
(conjecture based on Assault at Selonia, The New Essential Chronology, and Cracken’s Threat Dossier)

- According to Drall mythology, the Drall species lived on Drall as primitive beasts, but then they were found and had their world moved by the Ancients to form the Corellian System. One Drall is said to have been brave enough to remain on the surface during those times, and that bravery was rewarded by the Ancients. She is given true intelligence and wisdom, making her sentient, and she becomes the “First Duchess,” founder of true Drall society. It is said that a written chronicle from this time, the Celestial Record, exists, but most will believe it to be only myth.
(conjecture based on Suns of Fortune)

- The Hutts evolve on Var!.
(conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 4: Alien Races)

- The Bith civilization begins a terrible civil war.
(conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 4: Alien Races)

- The Killiks evolve on Alderaan.
(conjecture based on The Illustrated Star Wars Universe: Alderaan Entry)

- An aquatic species thrives on Jerrilek, though the species will become extinct within the next million years.
(conjecture based on Loyalties)

1,000,000 – 19,965 BBY
- Sometime during this era (some say close to 1,000,000 years before the Battle of Yavin, while others put the figure closer to a bit over 100,000 before Yavin), a family of Force-users lives on a powerful Force-heavy planet near Kessel. The planet hosts the Font of Power, Pool of Knowledge, Lake of Apparitions, and other features powerful in the Force. The family, known as the Ones (who may be Celestials returned from the Force and who are later also as the Architects), exists on the planet as the embodiment of the Force. The Daughter (worshipped by the Dathomiri Nightsisters in ages to come as the Winged Goddess) exists as an embodiment of the Light Side, while the Son (later known in Dathomiri religion as the Fanged God) represents the Dark Side, and their Father maintains the Balance of both, not just on the planet but in the galaxy at large, since their interactions have the ability to affect the broader Force and thus the fate of the galaxy. While on this planet, they are joined by a mortal woman who is a servant of the family. After a while, the Father falls in love with the servant and she becomes the Mother, but she is not virtually immortal like the Ones are. Seeking to save herself from growing old and losing this family, the servant woman drinks from the Font of Power and swims in the Pool of Knowledge. She is transformed into the powerful Force being later known as Abeloth, the Bringer of Chaos, and embodies the destructive (yet often renewing) force of Chaos to counter the Father’s role of Balance. When Abeloth unleashes chaos and strife in the galaxy, the Ones ally themselves with the insectoid Killiks to create a prison to contain her. They create the Maw and Centerpoint Station, then use them to keep Abeloth trapped on their Force-powerful planet. With that done, the Ones relocate to another Force-powerful world, Mortis, which is encased within a monolith that wanders the galaxy, settling for short times in places like the Chrelythium System (during the Clone Wars). From Mortis, the Ones will continue to guard the Force, even as Abeloth waits millennia to escape from her world and wreak havoc once again.

(conjecture based on Apocalypse and Book of Sith)

999,989 BBY
- According to Dr. Corellia Antilles, this is the approximate point at which xenoarchaeologists and xenoanthropologists estimate the majority of the known galaxy begins keeping detailed historical records, though items from this time period tend to prove indecipherable to New Republic era historians.
  (conjecture based on From the Files of Corellia Antilles)

999,975 BBY
- Sernpidal takes Dobido as its moon.*
  (conjecture based on Vector Prime)*
*NOTE: Han says that the moon has been with the planet for a million years. This could just be an expression.

750,000 BBY
- A sentient species begins to evolve on the planet Goroth.
  (conjecture based on Goroth: Slave of the Empire via TimeTales, paraphrased)

500,000 BBY
- On Gree, the Gree species fully evolves.*
  (conjecture based on The Gree Enclave)*
*NOTE: This interprets “hundreds of thousands of years” as a round 500,000.
- Naboo experiences an ice age, from which tales of Gungans fighting Woolly Veermoks will emerge.*
  (conjecture based on Alien Anthology)*
*NOTE: This rounds “hundreds of thousands of years ago” to 500,025 years before the book’s dating, to get a nice round date of 500,000 BBY.

499,989 BBY
- According to Dr. Corellia Antilles, this is the approximate point at which xenoarchaeologists and xenoanthropologists estimate the majority of historical records for the galaxy begin being written in forms that will be decipherable in the era of the New Republic.
  (conjecture based on From the Files of Corellia Antilles)
200,000 BBY
- On Notron (Coruscant), the death of the Doom of Ulmarah, a Taung leader, has left the Taung in mourning, expecting to be wiped out by the Battalions of Zhell the next morning. The remaining Taung leader, Rexutu the Unconquerable, prepares for the inevitable defeat to come. The Great Zhell prepare to wipe out those who remain, but as the battle is about to begin, a huge volcanic eruption takes place, wiping out Great Zhell, the major Zhell (human) city. Ash now covers the sky of Notron. In this chaos, the Taungs defeat the remaining Zhell in an unexpected victory. (To be continued below . . .)

(The Essential Guide to Warfare)

- The Taung warriors who won the climactic battle on Notron (Coruscant) dub themselves the Shadow Warriors (Dha Werda Verda) and chronicle their victory in an epic poem of the same name.

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

- The Taung warriors of this era, known as Shadow Warriors, will come to be known to the Mandalorians of future eras as the “Progenitors.” They worship three gods: Kad Ha’rangir (all-seeing creator of tests and trials); Hod Ha’ran (the trickster); and Arasuum (god of sloth, whisperer of peace).

(conjecture based on The Bounty Hunter Code)

The Essential Guide to Warfare (essential guide: Jason Fry & Paul R. Urquhart)
The Essential Guide to Warfare (essential guide: Jason Fry & Paul R. Urquhart)
Before the Republic
A Soldier’s Story: Notron in Flames

199,998 BBY
- The sky over Notron (Coruscant) is finally free of ash.

(conjecture based on Shadows of the Empire soundtrack via TimeTales, paraphrased)

100,000 BBY
- The Sith species, which will eventually be ruled by the Dark Jedi known as the Dark Lords of the Sith, begins to develop.

(conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia)

- Around this time, the lore that will eventually be in the Dark Holocron begins to be collected. It will, of course, not be put into an actual holocron until the Sith species develops its version of holocron technology many millennia later.*

(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Weapons and Technology)*

*NOTE: I say that the lore is collected, rather than the holocron itself being fed information, because the Sith don’t develop holocron technology until about 14,000 BBY, over 80,000 years before this time. Still, the NEGtW&T says it has information that covers “some hundred thousand years,” so this hopefully reconciles that apparent contradiction.

- On Notron (now renamed Coruscant), Galactic City (later Republic City and then Imperial City) is built. The land it is built on is said to be an ancient battlefield where the Taungs and Battalions of Zhell (thirteen human “Zhell” nations) once fought.

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Planets and Moons and The Essential Atlas)

- The civilization on Goroth develops to a feudal level.

(conjecture based on Goroth: Slave of the Empire via TimeTales, paraphrased)

95,000 BBY
- This is the last time the lower fifty levels of Coruscant see the sun.

(conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia)

57,000 BBY
- The first early humanoid settlements on Utapau are founded.

(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Alien Species)
50,000 BBY
- The Yevethan species achieves sentience.
  (conjecture based on Cracken’s Threat Dossier)
- On Gree, the Gree species hits its peak, with technology beyond what will come during the Imperial era, including their regular use of hyperspace through hypergates.*
  (conjecture based on The Gree Enclave)*

*NOTE: This interprets “millennia” as a round 50,000 years. I would normally round this to 5,000 instead, but this period is also referred to as taking place “well before the formation of the Old Republic.”

- In opposition to the Gree, the Kwa species creates a series of Infinity Gates to teleport between worlds. The Kwa will eventually decline and devolve into the primitive Kwi lizards of Dathomir. Scientifically, it is believed that this was done by the Rakatans, but the Nightsisters of Dathomir will believe it was because the Kwa angered the Twin Deities (the Winged Goddess and Fanged God, also known as the Daughter and Son amid the beings known as the “Ones”) by using the Infinity Gates on Dathomir.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Chronology and Book of Sith)

40,000+ BBY
- According to some historians, humans from Earth in the 25th century find themselves tossed through time to some point before the emergence of humanoid societies in the galaxy far, far away. They and their ancestors will form the basis for the human race in this new galaxy.*
  (Monsters and Aliens: Alien Exodus)*

*NOTE: A gentleman who goes by the handle “Technotaoist” recently pointed me to Robert J. Sawyer’s blog for more information and clarification about this series. First off, no, it did not end up being produced for Star Wars. It had been reported to me at one point that this Monsters and Aliens series was to be a story produced under Bantam that would’ve tied the humans in Star Wars back to Earth, linking the two galaxies. It was said that George Lucas himself killed the idea, after talks were already underway with Lucasfilm. (This was info originally provided through various sources, including Kevin Furman’s Lostworlds project.) However, it seems that the truth is a bit different than what I’d heard. Apparently, the series was for Berkeley Putnam, not Bantam. Lucas himself never had the chance to nix the project, as Sawyer himself chose to pull out of the project before signing any contracts because he’d been told that the project would be backstories of aliens from Star Wars, but licensing restrictions made that impossible. He had already created an outline and sample chapters, but they were shelved. In the meantime, Lucasfilm went ahead with the concept with a new writer, Deborah Chester, who had created her own outlines. That series became the non-Star Wars series that readers now know as the Alien Chronicles. You can still find outlines of the original Star Wars project at www.sfwriter.com/aliens.htm. My thanks to “Technotaoist” for pointing me to the blog and to Sawyer himself for clarifying this piece of “lost” Star Wars lore. (I should also note that some fans have recently used this SWT-G entry in this exact form, minus this parenthetical addition to the note, to claim that I was including it in the saga, apparently not recognizing the blaring message of this note, which, if I have to put it in baby words, goes like this: “It wasn’t made! It’s not real! It’s here for fun! Get a clue!” Is that clear enough now?)

Monsters and Aliens (canceled novel trilogy: Robert J. Sawyer)*
Alien Exodus (canceled novel: Robert J. Sawyer)*
“Monsters and Aliens, Book II” (canceled novel: Robert J. Sawyer)*
“Monsters and Aliens, Book III” (canceled novel: Robert J. Sawyer)*

*NOTE: See note with summary above for Monsters and Aliens: Alien Exodus.

40,000 BBY
- At about this time, a humanoid species thrives on the continent of Reyfej on Garos IV. Sometime relatively soon, they will be wiped out by cataclysmic earthquakes.
  (conjecture based on Charlene Newcomb’s website)

40,000 – 35,000 BBY
- Sometime more than 35,000 years before the Clone Wars come to Drongar, Drall scientist Tiran proves that time and space are inseparable and that the speed of light is an absolute boundary that cannot be crossed. This was known as Tiran’s Theory of Universal Reference, but it did not account for travel faster than the speed of light once you got there (as he assumed that you couldn’t cross the speed of light boundary), so the theory seems to have been invalidated, in part, with the future advent of hyperspace-entering technology, known as the hyperdrive.
Sometime more than 35,000 years before the Battle of Yavin, written history on Drall begins what amounts to a continuous history of the society, stored in copious archives, that will be unbroken until at least shortly after the Battle of Yavin, if not later.

(conjecture based on Suns of Fortune)

37,453 BBY

Around this time, the Dai Bendu on Ando Prime begin visiting a massive Tho Yor ship (which appears to be a pyramid, since part is buried). They will meditate over the structure for the next thousand years, until it finally speaks to them through the Force.

(conjecture based on Force Storm)

36,453 BBY

On Ando Prime, a strange pyramid (actually a Tho Yor ship partially buried) finally reaches out to the minds of the Dai Bendu monks in the Andobi Mountains for the first time since they began meditating there a millennium ago. They see this as the fulfillment of a prophecy and enter the ship, which then leaves Ando Prime. Similar events are happening elsewhere with other Tho Yor vessels, such as on Kashyyyk, Dathomir, Ryloth, and Manaan. Eight Tho Yor ships travel into the Deep Core after gathering other Force-sensitive sentients and converge on the planet Tython, where they join a ninth, larger Tho Yor. The ships then scatter across the planet, spreading the new arrivals to different locations to begin studying the energy field that called them all there: the Force. Together, these varied peoples of varied species become one new culture: Tythans. They begin to consider the two aspects of the Force, later known as the Light Side and Dark Side, and link them symbolically to Tython’s two moons, Ashla (the Light Side) and Bogan (the Dark Side). Rather than focusing on the Light Side or Dark Side as future cultures like the Jedi Order of millennia in the future, the Tythans strive for balance between Light and Dark, Ashla and Bogan. In fact, when Tython is out of balance between these aspects of the Force, fierce storms and quakes rock the planet. These travelers and students of the Force become known as Je’daii, a Dai Bendu term that means “Mystic Center.” They will come to build great cities and temples, centering their society around the Tho Yor vessels. In time, however, generations will be born to these Je’daii, and not all of their descendants will be able to touch the Force . . . (To be continued below . . . )

(Force Storm)*

*NOTE: This series of events is labeled as beginning in 36,453 BBY in Force Storm and was first revealed as its Treaty of Coruscant calendar equivalent (32,800 BTC) in The Old Republic’s website’s timeline. Leland Chee has confirmed this date (via email).

- With the spread of the Tho Yor across Tython, the Je’daii temples are established: Kaleth (Temple of Knowledge); Bodhi (Temple of the Arts); Anil Kesh (Temple of Science); Mahara Kesh (Temple of Healing); Vur Tepe (the Forge); Qigong Kesh (Temple of Force Skills); Stav Kesh (Temple of Martial Arts); Padawan Kesh (Je’daii Academy); and Akar Kesh (Temple of Balance).

(conjecture based on Dawn of the Jedi #0)

- The “new” Tythans discover the Old City on Tython abandoned. Little information about it is available, but legends claim that a working hypergate can be found inside.

(conjecture based on Dawn of the Jedi #0)

Dawn of the Jedi (comic series: John Ostrander)

Force Storm (comic series: John Ostrander)

Force Storm, Part I (comic: John Ostrander)

36,019 BBY

In the year 434 TYA, Nordia Gral, the first Temple Master of Padawan Kesh, outlines the process that will become known as the Great Journey for training Je’daii Journeymers.

(conjecture based on Into the Void)

35,453 BBY
• Around this time, the destruction of the “lost city” of Aurum on Tython finally leads the Tythans to realize that the world is too dangerous for those who cannot use the Force. Thus, the Tythans who are not Je’daii leave Tython. They first settle on Tython’s moons, Ashla and Bogan, but soon move forward to other planets in the system. (Those born with Force sensitivity, however, will continue to be brought back to Tython.) By this time, a system of ranks for Je’daii has been developed: youngling (not really a Je’daii yet), apprentice (or “Padawan”), Journeyer, Ranger, and Master. Those who are Je’daii move between the different temples of Tho Yor to learn about different aspects of the Force. The non-Je’daii Tythans spread toward their sun and settle the worlds of Sunspot, Malterra, Nox, and Krev Coeur. They also travel toward the edge of their system, settling on Kalimahr, Shikaakwa, Ska Gora, the moons of Obri and Mawr, and Furies Gate. The Je’daii will eventually become almost legendary and mysterious to the generations of non-Je’daii Tythans who have spread away from Tython. (To be continued below . . .)

(Force Storm)

• It will later be said in myths that colony ships from Tython will discover the Empress Teta, Coruscant, and Corellian systems, helping to connect three of the most important systems in the early Republic.

(conjecture based on Nexus of Power)

Dawn of the Jedi [continued] (comic series: John Ostrander)
Force Storm [continued] (comic series: John Ostrander)
Force Storm, Part I [continued] (comic: John Ostrander)

35,000 BBY
• According to some sources, it is around this time that the Rakata species creates the so-called “Infinite Empire.”

(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Alien Species)*

*Note: Rakatan terraforming has already taken place millions of years earlier. This is perhaps the period in which that exploration and terraforming becomes an actual “empire,” though such has not yet been confirmed.

34,783 BBY
• Around this time, Osamael Or journeys into the Old City on Tython. He goes missing, but his last words to his sister before leaving, “There are depths,” will become a touchstone for the mysteries of Tython.

(conjecture based on Into the Void)*

*NOTE: The date for this could be here or around 35,453 BBY. The book’s narrative claims that this is 9,000 years ago, which would put it here. However, a quote that opens the 11th chapter of Into the Void claims that it is “circa 1,000 TYA,” which would be in 35,453. That’s a difference of 670 years, so take this date with a grain of salt.

33,908 BBY
• In the year 2,545 TYA (years after the Tho Yor Arrival), an unknown Je’daii provides the following teaching: “At the heart of any poor soul not at one with the Force, there is only void.”

(conjecture based on Into the Void)

32,925 BBY
• In the year 3,528 TYA, Je’daii Master Deela jan Morolla teaches that Tython is a great mystery, existing long before the Tho Yor Arrival. A Je’daii’s true home is not Tython, but the Force itself.

(conjecture based on Into the Void)

32,920 BBY
• In the year 3,533 TYA, Je’daii Master Deela jan Morolla teaches that Je’daii must accept that some Journeyers will inevitably fail in their Great Journey and not continue as Je’daii.

(conjecture based on Into the Void)

30,000+ BBY
• Plaristes, a pre-Republic philosopher, writes a book Of Minds, Men, and Machines in which he argues that there can never be such a thing as “artificial sentience.”
  (conjecture based on Droids and the Force)

30,000 BBY
• On Alderaan, the impact of a large meteor creates a giant lake on the planet, where the future capital will sit.
  (conjecture based on The Illustrated Star Wars Universe: Alderaan Entry)
• It is speculated that droids are first invented around this time. This is actually more accurately described as when droids are invented in the region that will eventually become the heart of the Republic. Cultures like the Gree and the Rakatans already have droids at this point.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)
• The Killiks briefly invade the pre-industrial Sith on the planet Korriban (also called Moraband).
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
• The Devoranian species develops star-faring technology.*
  (conjecture based on Nexus of Power)*

*NOTE: This date has been changed drastically multiple times. Galaxy Guide 4: Alien Races would put this event around 500,000 BBY or so, but The New Essential Guide to Alien Species later revised the date to circa 7,000 BBY. However, even more recently, Nexus of Power claims that Devoranians were galactic explorers as early as 30,000 BBY.
• The Killiks begin to abandon the known galaxy. The Celestials also suddenly begin to withdraw from the galaxy. The remaining Killik nest on Alderaan (later referred to by the Alderaanian humans as the “Castle Lands” but known to Killiks as their Oroboro nest) is “emptied” by the Celestials. When this happens, the galaxy at large believes that the Killiks have become extinct. Instead, the remaining Killiks are living in the Unknown Regions, near Chiss space. The fate of the Celestials is unknown.*
  (conjecture based on The Joiner King, The Essential Atlas, and The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: The Joiner King suggests that this is 20,000 years before the Killiks are rediscovered in the Unknown Regions by Galactic Alliance era Jedi Knights (suggesting a date then of 19,965 BBY), but The Essential Atlas places this at 30,000 BBY instead, as does The Unknown Regions. Given that humans wouldn’t have been on Alderaan with the Killiks if at 30,000 BBY, we must assume that the nickname for this region came after the Killiks were already gone. This also must assume that the Killiks either briefly battle the Sith just before this removal to the Unknown Regions, or they do so on the way to or through the Unknown Regions.
• The entity known as Mnggal-Mnggal witnesses the exodus of the Celestials from the galaxy. It is theorized in later eras that the hyperspace anomaly that separates the populated regions of the galaxy from those that are less populated is possibly a Celestial-developed barrier to keep the oozing, infectious Mnggal-Mnggal entity from reaching major civilizations. Over the eons, the entity will eventually enter the Unknown Regions and begin infecting worlds there, in the Outer Rim, and in Wild Space. It will later be theorized that Project Blackwing (and potentially its source, the Murikami orchid) is somehow related to Mnggal-Mnggal.*
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn.
• Several millennia before the birth of the Galactic Republic, a powerful multi-system (if not galaxy spanning) empire exists under the control of the race known as the Rakata. This culture, known as the Infinite Empire, has reached its height and is now in decline. The Empire is unique in history in that its technology is based on both conventional power sources and a type of energy that draws from the Force itself. The species, known as the Builders to many cultures that it touched, have one space station that they have used for much of their history to exert their power and keep their Infinite Empire strong. That station is the so-called Star Forge, which draws power from the Force and creates or refits droids, weapons, and even starships out of pure energy. (In truth, the Star Forge is of Rakatan design but is built by one of the species they have enslaved, the Duros, who gain a great deal of technological knowledge from working on the project.)
  (conjecture based on Knights of the Old Republic and Suns of Fortune)
• Around this time, the Rakatan Infinite Empire comes to Drall, where it finds that the native Drall species is already intelligent, hard working, and has an understanding of technology and science. As such, the Drall are made into Rakatan slaves, designing and building Rakatan war machines among other technologically-inclined species.
  (conjecture based on Suns of Fortune)

- Around this time or shortly thereafter, the planet Benetage is mysteriously abandoned. The Crown of Verity, a symbol of office from the Magistrates of Benetage, will eventually be an artifact held by the Jedi Order.
  (conjecture based on Nexus of Power)

- Around this time, the Rakatan Infinite Empire comes to Selonia, but the native Selonians simply hide in their caves and seal them, so the Rakatans do not realize the world is populated. They simply leave the planet alone.
  (conjecture based on Suns of Fortune)

- Around this time, the Rakatan Infinite Empire comes to Tralus and Tralus, the Double Worlds of the Corellian System. The planets are uninhabited at this point, so the Rakatans simply make use of them for their rich resources, building massive agricultural and industrial complexes to strip the planets of whatever they can. These are maintained by populations of humans and Drall, mostly criminals or other "undesirables," who are transplanted there by the Rakatans.
  (conjecture based on Suns of Fortune)

- During the time of the Rakatan Infinite Empire, the planet Oaka Prime is designated as a wildlife sanctuary, far from the wars between the Rakatans, the Gree, and the Kwa.
  (conjecture based on A Shattered Hope)

29,000 BBY
- The Kashi Mer Dynasty reaches its height.
  (conjecture based on Relic via TimeTales, abridged)

28,930 BBY
- In the year 7,523 TYA, Je’daii Master Shall Mar writes in A Life in Balance about the need for Je’daii to hone skills that are not Force talents to complement their Force abilities.
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)

28,916 BBY
- In the year 7,537 TYA, Je’daii Master Shall Mar writes in A Life in Balance about the need of Je’daii to know balance, neither too much Light or Dark Side (the pull of Ashla or Bogan).
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)

28,915 BBY
- In the year 7,538 TYA, Je’daii Master Shall Mar writes in A Life in Balance about the need of Je’daii only for confidence and comfort in the Force. Everything else, even what many see as life essentials, are luxuries, according to Shall Mar.
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)

28,912 BBY
- In the year 7,541 TYA, Je’daii Master Shall Mar writes in A Life in Balance about the need for Je’daii to know their limits. In the same year, Shall Mar also teaches that one who loses balance and delves into the Dark Side loses not only balance but their souls.
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)

28,783 BBY
- Around this time, the theory that the planet Sunspot might have been a rogue planet that later joined the Tythan System and once held its own life forms leads to several exploratory missions to the planet, but no trace of previous civilization is found.
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)

28,300 BBY
• Around this time, the future Sith ruler Adas is born. He is born with charcoal-colored skin, which marks him in Sith society as a "chosen" being.
  (conjecture based on Evil Never Dies: The Sith Dynasties)

28,000 BBY
• The Sith warlord Adas becomes the first (and only) monarch (Sith’ari) of the entire Sith species (until the arrival of the Dark Jedi from the Second Great Schism) when he uses his military prowess to unite the various Sith nations on Korriban (Moraband) into one society. He will sustain his life energy for three centuries with the Dark Side and come to be worshipped as this era’s Sith’ari (god of the Sith). His 300 year rule will come to be known in Sith culture as the Reign of the Ax.
• Sith heretics begin being exiled to the planet Tund.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
• During the rule of Sith King Adas, Raspir serves as his court magician.*
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*
  *NOTE: Information provided by Luke Van Horn.

27,987 BBY
• In the year 8,466 TYA, Je’daii Master Rupe of Stav Kesh teaches that no one can fight without balance.
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)

27,700 BBY
• In the reign of King Adas (whom many believed to be immortal because he used the Dark Side to sustain his life energy) the Rakatan Infinite Empire comes to Korriban. The Rakatans try to gain King Adas’ favor by teaching him how to record information in a pyramid-shaped device called a “holocron,” but they soon reveal their true colors and try to conquer the Sith society. King Adas leads the Sith against the invaders, defeating them, but he dies in the process. His Sith Holocron passes into the hands of his second-in-command, his “Shadow Hand,” but without King Adas’ personal influence, Sith society again breaks down into internal conflicts, eventually forcing the Sith capital to be moved from Korriban to Ziost, while Korriban remains designated as the species’ tombworld.
  *NOTE: This event has been moved here from 16,000 BBY (which was conjectural based on the Tales of the Jedi Companion RPG sourcebook) based on newer information.
• Contact with the Anzati and Rakatans during the reign of King Adas shows the Sith that they are not the only beings in the universe that the Force has created. They react by attacking other worlds in the Stygian Caldera, conquering worlds like Arorua, Malachor, and Thule and wiping out any sentient species they discover.*
  (conjecture based on Book of Sith)*
  *NOTE: Given that there are Sith on Tython in Dawn of the Jedi, who were taken there by the Tho Yor around 8,752 years before this event, you have to wonder if the Sith somehow forgot or otherwise covered up that encounter. (Andrew Nagy pointed out this inconsistency between the two sources.)

27,500 BBY
• Coruscanti humans colonize Kuat.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
• Around this time, the first human colonists arrive on Alderaan.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Alien Species)

27,453 BBY
• Around the year 9,000 TYA, an unknown Tythan muses that staying on Tython when not Force sensitive is the same as trying to live underwater without gills. It is unnatural, and one must escape or perhaps go insane.

(conjecture based on Into the Void)

27,000 BBY
- The first beam tubes, early energy weapons, are created.*
  (conjecture based on the Essential Guide to Weapons and Technology)*
*NOTE: These must be in areas outside of regions we see in Dawn of the Jedi and other such sources, so I have reworded this to not be the first energy weapons, just early ones, relatively speaking. Certainly they lead to further developments.
- Gossam Courivers, using a technology known as the tumbledrive, explore the planet Felucia, claiming it as Gossam land.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
- Human sites dating back at least this far will be found millennia from now in the Empress Teta system, suggesting that it is currently home to one of the galaxy’s most ancient human civilizations.
  (conjecture based on Nexus of Power)
- Around this time, sleeper ships sent out from Coruscant are “lost” while trying to tame the Tion Cluster. They have, in fact, settled there and develop a new society that, over time, will tend to forget where it actually originated. They will come to eventually develop their own hyperdrive technology from castoff Rakatan ships, which they will be able to use to navigate between fixed hyperspace beacons, referred to as the “lighthouse” network. This will keep them isolated to worlds in that network, yet allow them to expand.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
- A human colonization expedition (a lost sleeper ship) finds itself on the planet Csilla, where it is lost to the outside galaxy. Those who remain will eventually grow and adapt to become the near-human Chiss species. (This is, at least, the theory that later researchers will use to explain the similarity between humans and Chiss.)
  (conjecture based on The University of Sanbra Guide to Intelligent Life: The Chiss and The Unknown Regions)

26,283 BBY
- Around this time, the atmosphere of the planet Nox becomes too polluted that its cities are enclosed in giant domes.*
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)*
*NOTE: This is five centuries prior to Into the Void, approximately.

26,053 BBY
- Morodins come to Varonat and use it as a colony world.*
  (conjecture based on First Contact)*
*NOTE: The event takes place 1,000 years before the birth of the Old Republic.

26,012 BBY
- In the year 10,441 TYA, Je’daii Temple Master Vor’Dana of Stav Kesh teaches that one must open himself to the balance of the Force. Struggling against it, he believes, causes the body to rebel, just as the body can do amazing things when in tune with the Force.
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)

26,000 BBY
- The Kuat Explorer brings the first settlers to Alsakan.
  (conjecture based on Han Solo and the Corporate Sector Sourcebook)
- The Nikto Cult of M’dweshuu (based on the M’dweshuu Nova) is formed. They will come to take over the world and rule it for 30 years.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 12: Aliens--“Enemies and Allies” and The Essential Guide to Alien Species)
- The Hutts take control of the planet Kintan.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Alien Species)
- Verpine settlers colonize the Roche asteroid belt.
  (conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia)
- Around this time, over 200 years before Lanoree Brock’s Great Journey, Je’daii Temple Master Vor’Dana of Stav Kesh fights and kills thirteen Sand Assassins in the Grand Hall of Stav Kesh.
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)

25,997 BBY
- In the year 10,456 TYA, Je’daii Temple Master Vor’Dana condemns the teaching of alchemy in Je’daii instruction.
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)

25,970 BBY
- After 30 years of rule by the cult of M’dweshuu, Kintan is taken over by a group of Hutts led by Churabba the Hutt, who enter the scene and wipe out the cult, becoming saviors to the Nikto populace.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Alien Species)

25,878 BBY
- Ran Dan’s Folly, a mine on Sunspot, is founded.*
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)*
*NOTE: This is about 100 years before Into the Void, which I have founded to 95 years.

25,853 BBY
- Around this time, Kara is born. She will train to be a Je’daii but eventually become one of the Shunned, living in luxury and wealth in a tower on Khalimar, from which she funds and supports the Stargazers.
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)

25,813 BBY
- A tragedy occurs at Ran Dan’s Folly on Sunspot, during which a hundred miners lose their lives.*
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)*
*NOTE: This is 30 years before Into the Void.

25,808 BBY
- Lanoree Brock is born on Tython.*
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)*
*NOTE: She is 13 at the time of the Despot War.
- Je’daii Master Dam-Powl begins teaching at Anil Kesh, eventually becoming the Temple Master.
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)

25,806 BBY
- Dalien Brock is born on Tython.*
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)*
*NOTE: He is 2 years younger than his sister, Lanoree Brock, who is 13 as of the Despot War.

25,805 BBY
- In the year 10,648 TYA, Je’daii recluse Ni’lander teaches that Je’daii should fear Tython, as it is very powerful and has existed for untold millennia before the Tho Yor Arrival.
25,801 BBY

- A miner strike at Ran Dan’s Folly leads to violent riots and an eventual buyout of the workforce and their families off-planet.*
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)

*NOTE: This is 18 years before Into the Void.

25,797 BBY

- Dalien Brock (age 9) and Lanoree Brock (age 11) are students at Bodhi Kesh, the Temple of the Arts, on Tython. While on a visit to the Edge Forest, Lanoree glimpses the darkness inside Dalien when he destroys a piece of art he has created after she admires it. He is always a moody child.*
  (Into the Void)*

*NOTE: Lanoree is 2 years older than Dalien. Since he is said to be 9 now, she must be 11. As such, this must be 2 years prior to the Despot War, when Lanoree was 13.

Dawn of the Jedi [continued] (novel/comic series: John Ostrander & Tim Lebbon)
Into the Void (novel: Tim Lebbon)
Dark Matters [flashback]

25,795 BBY

- In the year 10,658 TYA, the Despot Queen of Shikaakwa, Queen Hadiya, unites the crime barons of her planet, then dominates the other worlds of the Tython system (except for Tython itself). She argues that the Force is not real and demonizes anyone who believes in it, turning her followers against the Je’daii. After a period of “phony war,” Hadiya’s forces attack the Je’daii on Tython, instigating the Despot War. The war ends when the Despot Army is defeated by the Je’daii (who have sided with other Shikaakwa nobles) at Kaleth (the Temple of Knowledge). The tide of the battle is turned for the Je’daii when Je’daii Daegen Lok, insinuated into Hadiya’s forces and to her side as a lover with the help of Volnos “Ox” Ryo, betrays and kills Hadiya. (To be continued below . . . )*
  (Force Storm)*

*NOTE: This summary includes further information from Into the Void and Prisoner of Bogan.

- During the Despot War, Lanoree and Dalien Brock’s parents go off to fight against Queen Hadiya’s forces, leaving the children behind.*
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)*

*NOTE: Lanoree is 13 at the time, making Dalien 11.

- During the Battle of Kaleth in the Despot War, a Je’daii kills the father of Domm, a future business associate of Tre Sana.
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)

- During the Despot War, Je’daii Master Quan-Jang creates the terenta creatures to sense Shikaakwan explosives. Many are left on Bogan after the war.
  (conjecture based on Prisoner of Bogan)

- Shae Koda is orphaned when her parents are killed at the Battle of Kaleth.
  (conjecture based on Dawn of the Jedi #0)

- Volnos “Ox” Ryo’s father and older brother die in the Despot War. As a result, Volnos becomes a baron. His position is made somewhat difficult, given that he is married to a Je’daii, Kora Ryo, and they have a Je’daii daughter, Tasha Ryo.
  (conjecture based on Dawn of the Jedi #0)

- In the wake of the Despot War, a weak Kral (overlord) is elected on Shikaakwa. This leaves the Kral unlikely to be able to rein in the Nine Houses and the various barons, dukes, and earls on the world.
  (conjecture based on Dawn of the Jedi #0)

- In the wake of the Despot War, Rajivari gives up battle and dedicates his life to meditation on Tython.
  (conjecture based on Prisoner of Bogan)
In the wake of the Despot War, Ranger Daegen Lok, given credit for ending the Despot War by taking down Queen Hadiya, is promoted to the rank of Je’daii Master. (conjecture based on Prisoner of Bogan)

In the wake of the Despot War, some Shikaakwan Pho fighters crash on Bogan. One remains nearly intact for the next twelve years. (conjecture based on Prisoner of Bogan)

In the wake of the Despot War, the inhabitants of Greenwood Station on Nox seal the “Scar” in their dome that was left by Je’daii bombings, but they do not rebuild the area outside of it. After losing nearly 2,000 people in the bombings, the citizens of Greenwood Station spend the next few years killing Je’daii through traps and deception, intending to kill one Je’daii for every 100 deaths during the bombings. (conjecture based on Into the Void)

In the wake of the Despot War, with so many Deathstalker and Deathblaster ships destroyed, the Je’daii dismantles many more Deathblasters, so that only a few survive in the hands of mercenaries, Shikaakwa warlords, and in some remote criminal settlements on some of Mawr’s moons. (conjecture based on Into the Void)

Dawn of the Jedi [continued] (comic series: John Ostrander)
Force Storm [continued] (comic series: John Ostrander)

25,792 BBY

Prior to beginning his Great Journey in the year 10,661 TYA, Dalien Brock records a journal in which he compares himself to a rock in the river of the Force, rather than a fish carried along by it like other children. He also notes that Ashla and Bogan are just moons, and the gravity of his destiny is pulling him elsewhere. (conjecture based on Into the Void)

Lanoree and Dalien Brock, now both teenagers, are ready to begin their Great Journey across Tython to learn the ways of the Force from other Temples, having already studied at Bodhi Kesh and Padawan Kesh. Dalien remains resentful and disconnected from the Force, but Lanoree believes that this Journey will be what it takes to awaken the Force within him, and she promises as much to their parents. They travel first across the Masara continent to its opposite coast, where they take a Cloud Chaser over the Thyrian Ocean to the continent of Thyr. Forty days into their trip, they reach the Stark Forests. After battling hook hawks, the Silent Desert, where Dalien saves Lanoree from a silik lizard. Finally, they reach Qigong Kesh (Temple of Force Skills). Soon after arrival, Je’daii Master Ter’cay communicates with Lanoree through telepathy, but it becomes obvious that Dalien cannot hear through the Force in that fashion. They camp in the Silent Desert with Ter’cay, where Lanoree begins her training, and Dalien becomes even more distant. After training at Qigong, they make their way across Thyr to another Cloud Chaser airport, from which they fly to another continent, Kato Zakar, on the trip to reach Stav Kesh (the Temple of Martial Arts). While crossing the Strafe Plains, they battle a flame tygah, and when Dalien’s blaster misfires, Lanoree must save him. This only makes him more resentful of her Je’daii talents. At Stav Kesh, they are trained by Master Tave, who has them try to land a hit on him, which all of the students fail. After a lesson in breathing and focus, though, Dalien lands the only hit of the day. Rather than recognizing that Tave let him get the hit to help teach him, Dalien sees it as proof that he can learn skills – like martial arts – and be his own man without needing the Force at all. Later, they train with Master Kin’ade and his Darrow sphere. When Dalien attempts to succeed in hitting it during a blindfolded test, he draws his blaster and fires randomly, which nearly hits the other students and does hit Lanoree, forcing Kin’ade to knock him out to subdue him. Stav Kesh Temple Master Lha-Mi deposes them on what took place, after which Lha-Mi tells Lanoree that Dalien is perhaps too far gone in his shunning of the Force and lack of balance to ever become a Je’daii. She must be careful with her brother in the days to come. After further training, they set out for Anil Kesh (Temple of Science) by crossing the Moon Islands to reach the continent of Talss. While on their way through the fungi forests of Kata Zakar on the way to Talss, Dalien reveals that his intentions are not to become a Je’daii, which seems impossible. He intends to learn all he can and then take to the stars, hoping to one day escape the Tythan System. They reach Anil Kesh, situated over the Chasm. It is at Anil Kesh that Lanoree meets Master Dam-Powl, her future mentor. From Dam-Powl, she learns alchemy, which she finds is her great Force strength, particularly the alchemy of the flesh. While at Anil Kesh, Dalien runs away from Master Quan-Jang’s group and goes into the Abyss of Ruh, which is forbidden. He is brought back at great emotional cost to the Je’daii who find him. He is to be banished from the Temple and the Je’daii. When Je’daii Journeyer Skott Yun tries to arrest Dalien so that he can be removed from the Temple, Dalien kills him with a blaster, then escapes, pursued by Lanoree, who witnessed the murder. She chases him into the Red Desert and into the Old City, ancient ruins from before the Je’daii came to Tython. Inside the ruins, beneath the Red Desert, she hears him scream and finds his bloody clothes, but there is no trace of her brother. Dalien Brock is presumed dead.

(Into the Void)*

*NOTE: This is 9 years before Into the Void’s “present.”

- Having lost her brother, Dalien Brock, halfway through her Great Journey, Lanoree Brock returns to Anil Kesh, where all of the events leading to Skott Yun’s death are found to be Dalien’s responsibility, not hers. She experiences a period where finding balance is difficult. She is given a brief leave and returns home to her family for a while to regain her trust in people and the Force before continuing on her Great Journey. A rift forms between her and her parents, due to everyone blaming themselves for Dalien’s actions and apparent death, so when she is finally able to return to her Great Journey, she jumps at the chance.

(conjecture based on Into the Void)

- Having investigated the Old City, Dalien Brock, very much alive, writes in his journals that he cannot share what he saw in the depths of the Old City, as there are no words for it. However, he hopes one day to show others.

(conjecture based on Into the Void)

Dawn of the Jedi [continued] (novel/comic series: John Ostrander & Tim Lebbon)

Into the Void (novel: Tim Lebbon)
- The Great Journey [flashback]
- The Good and the Great [flashback]
- His Own Man [flashback]
- Old Myths [flashback]
- Safe and Sound [flashback]
- The Memory of Pain [flashback]
- Empty Spaces [flashback]
- Slaves [flashback]
- Chasm [flashback]
- Other Ways [flashback]
- Sad History [flashback]
- Ran Dan’s Folly [flashback]
- The Alchemy of Flesh [flashback]

25,791 BBY

- Je’daii Ranger Vulk kills fourteen Xang terrorists, but is mortally wounded. While in his Cloud Chaser, he steers it away from populated areas, crashing into the sea. Vulk dies in the process.

(conjecture based on Into the Void)

25,790 BBY

- Je’daii Journeyer Lanoree Brock finishes her Great Journey and becomes a Je’daii Ranger. She is given a sword by Master Tem Madog.*

(conjecture based on Into the Void)*

*NOTE: This is two years after the start of her Great Journey.

- Five years after the Despot War, Je’daii Master Daegen Lok and his best friend, Ranger Hawk Ryo, dare to use jetpacks to go down into the forbidden Chasm beneath Anil Kesh.
While in the Chasm, they both experience a vision of a being with a single red eye and a flaming sword leading an army of destruction. Upon returning to the surface, both are sent to Bogan to contemplate the Light Side, and the Je'daii Masters refuse to believe Daegen’s statements about the vision. Hawk keeps the vision to himself, denying that it ever happened and trying to believe that Daegen is simply mad. Hawk will return to Tython after a while, but Daegen remains on Bogan, fixated on this vision of the future.*

*NOTE: These events are here, five years after the Despot War, but they are referenced by Lanoree Brock during the narration portion of one of the flashbacks to two years earlier in Into the Void. One can simply assume, perhaps, that Lanoree’s “present” self is narrating that section, so she would know about these events of two years after when the segment takes place.

Dawn of the Jedi [continued] (novel/comic series: John Ostrander & Tim Lebbon)
Prisoner of Bogan (comic series: John Ostrander)
Prisoner of Bogan, Part I [flashback] (comic: John Ostrander) Prisoner of Bogan, Part II [flashback] (comic: John Ostrander)

25,787 BBY
- Je’daii Ranger Lanoree Brock returns to Tython for the last time before being gone for a little over four years. She will not return until being called back to stop her brother Dalien Brock’s schemes in the days leading up to Xesh’s arrival on Tython. In this time, she will upgrade her Peacemaker to suit her own needs, including bringing aboard a Holgorian IM-220 droid that she nicknames “Ironholgs.” She will, during her travels, spend time on Kalimahr brokering the Hang Layden deal, save lives on Nox, and take part in the Wookiee land wars on Ska Gora, in which she will prevent a civil war through violence of her own, bringing down the Wookiee warlord Gharcanna. While on Kalimahr for the Hang Layden deal, she covertly uses Force illusions to hide a cave network that may lead to subsurface Gree artifacts that the Je’daii wish to study.
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)
- A family from Volke House on Shikaakwa purchase information from Maxhagan and his Network to help them set up a production base in Crystal City on Nox, but when they refuse to pay Maxhagan, kill three of his men, and then retreat to Shikaakwa with their profits, Maxhagan instigates a feud in Crystal City that results in 3,000 dead and the destruction of the family’s own network on Nox. No clear evidence is ever found of Maxhagan’s involvement.
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)
- Maxhagan sets up a legitimate business on Nox, selling purified water. He continues his more illicit activities as well.
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)

25,784 BBY
- The gangsters for whom Tre Sana works call on him for the last time prior to his mission with Je’daii Ranger Lanoree Brock.
  (conjecture based on Into the Void)

25,783 BBY
- On the moon Zerist above the planet Obri, Je’daii Ranger Hawk Ryo seeks a missing child (Oma Dessain), while his fellow Ranger, Lanoree Brock, oversees negotiations between Dessain Mining (led by Dessain patriarch Emin Dessain) and its manual laborers (led by Arko Santis). The plan to settle disputes between the family and the miners had been to have Arko’s oldest son, Brom Santis, marry Emin’s youngest daughter, Oma Dessain, but now Oma has gone missing. Hawk discovers a ship owned by his crimelord brother Baron Volnos Ryo of Shikaakwa. Believing that his brother might be trying to increase the value of his mining operations on Obri’s other moons by decreasing the value of Dessain Mining, he tracks down the kidnappers. As a nearby volcano erupts, Hawk uses the distraction to attack her guards, killing them and rescuing Oma. Back at the negotiations, Lanoree is able to reveal the traitor in the Dessain household that set Oma up to be kidnapped: their resentful servant, Betolo. When it becomes clear that Oma has no intention of marrying Brom, to whom she was offered without her consent, Lanoree pushes through an alternate solution. Brom will foster with the Dessains, and Oma will foster with the Santis family, so that both sides will have a voice within the household of the other side of the mining business. As business on Zerist concludes, Hawk heads for Furies Gate, while Lanoree is called back to Tython for a mission that will change her life...

NOTE: While originally presented in Star Wars Insider #141, I actually read this one first in an uncorrected proof copy of Into the Void. It is unusual for a Star Wars short story to be reprinted in a novel almost immediately after its appearance in Insider.

- Je’daii Ranger Lanoree Brock returns to Tython after four years, heeding a summons from the Je’daii Council. She meets near Akar Kesh with Master Dam-Powl (her own former teacher), Stav Kesh Temple Master Lha-Mi, Master Tem Madog, Xiang (from Bodhi Temple, where he teaches under Lanoree’s father), and two other Je’daii Masters. Lanoree’s own brother, Dalien Brock, who was once a Je’daii student but failed in his studies and in trying to touch the Force, has embarked on a potentially cataclysmic mission. He intends to find a way to escape the Tythan System by activating an ancient Gree Hypergate (until now usually thought to just be a rumor) in the Old City on Tython’s continent of Talss. He is going to do this using dark matter, which, if used incorrectly (or possibly even at all), could open a black hole on Tython, completely destroying the planet and, soon, the rest of the system. Lanoree is sent to stop him, though she is shocked to find that he is alive, given that she believed that he died nine years earlier on Tython while in the Old City. Dam-Powl provides her with all that they know about the plot and Dalien, along with secret instructions to recruit one of Dam-Powl’s own assets on Kalimahr, a Twi’lek named Tre Sana, who has three lekku and is red-skinned. He is a criminal in his own right, but he has served Dam-Powl and will be of help to Lanoree. (To be continued below...)

Eruption

*Je’daii Ranger Lanoree Brock meets Tre Sana in the designated tavern on Kalimahr and sees that he has been experimented upon and tweaked genetically, though this makes him very hard to read with the Force. (She cannot really take a moral stand on the issue, given that one of her own specialties is Force alchemy, including a rather controversial project back on her ship...) Tre works for Dam-Powl to be healed, given a new identity, and to be relocated to Ska Gora one day. While Tre works on his own to set up a meeting for them with someone who likely knows about the Stargazers (Dalien’s group), Lanoree is spotted by Noghri from the Stargazers, who recognize her, send a message that she has been seen, and then battles her briefly before he blows himself up to avoid capture. She is taken into custody briefly by local militia captain Lorus, but he proves to be able to provide at least some basic information on the local Stargazers before she is able to leave. Lorus provides the name of Kára, a corpulent woman (and former Je’daii) who is amazingly wealthy and seems to be using her wealth to help fund the Stargazers, or at least lets them use facilities that she owns around the planet. This was who Tre was seeking a meeting with, so they meet with her at midnight at the top of her tower. She is evasive as soon as Lanoree mentions Gree technology, but she a least points them to an old abandoned Dai Bendu temple that she owns on the Khar Peninsula, where the Stargazers are currently based. When she tells them to leave, Tre stuns her, allowing them a few moments to search for clues. In a hidden alcove, Lanoree finds the handwritten The Gree, and Everything I Have Found of Them in the Old City by Osanmeol Or, which she takes with them when they must crash down from the tower to escape aboard her Peacemaker. They head for the temple Kara mentioned. While en route, Dam-Powl explains that Kara was one of the Shunned, an informal term given to someone who never found balance between Light and Dark as a Je’daii and instead grew to have disgust for the Force and left the Je’daii Order. They land the Peacemaker in the temple entrance, hoping to catch the Stargazers by surprise and acquire the blueprints Tre believes (from his sources) that they have for recreating (or re-energizing) the kind of Gree dark matter device needed to initialize a Hypergate. Unfortunately, the Stargazers (including Dalien) have recently left, setting explosives behind them. Lanoree and Tre barely escape, but they have a communications unit that Tre has recovered, which points them to an unknown recipient of multiple calls from Dalien’s group. They head to Nox to check out that recipient. They travel to Greenwood Station, one of the domes damaged heavily by Jedi bombing during the Despot War because they were supplying Hadiya. Given that it is a weapon manufacturing center on the planet, it would seem that this is where Dalien’s Stargazers are having the Gree device built. They leave the ship outside the dome and use breathers to reach a damaged airlock in the “Scar” (a damaged area of the dome from the bombings) through which they enter the dome. They find Greenwood Station preparing for war through a surge in weapon and vehicle manufacturing, though the buyers of these weapons is unknown. They make contact with Tre’s associate Domm, who points them to Maxhagan, a Nox crimelord with a Network of spies and such, and then Lanoree removes the memories from Domm by searing his memories through alchemy of the flesh, which is a rather invasive Je’daii skill but one in which Lanoree excels. For a hefty fee, the extremely dangerous Maxhagan is able to locate Dalien in the base of the central Greenwood Station tower in an area known as Pan Deep, which still, from time to time, carries out weapon commissions for the Je’daii. She and Tre are able to infiltrate Pan Deep and find Dalien with several Selkath, but Lanoree is then knocked out . . . When she awakens, she is bound, and she learns from Dalien that the Selkath scientists have finished the dark matter device he needs to activate the Hypergate. She also learns that he is literally without the Force, which is very rare but explains his failure as a Je’daii student. Dalien’s Stargazers kill the scientists to keep them quiet, then prepare to leave. They have used a Je’daii sword that was acquired from Kara to kill citizens and lay blame on Je’daii, then let word slip out to Knool Tandor dome that Pan Deep is still doing business with the Je’daii. The Stargazers escape in the chaos of a Knool Tandor attack on Greenwood Station. A Cathar stays behind, however, to kill Lanoree and Tre, but Lanoree gets the better of him, and his suicide vests blasts them an escape hole. They head back to the Peacemaker and get away from attacking local security forces, so that they can then follow a tracking device that Lanoree had slipped onto Dalien’s clothing. Tre, though, is ill from breathing in too much of Nox’s atmosphere during their escape. They track Dalien to Ran Dan’s Folly, a mine on Sunspot, where he has gone to acquire dark matter to power the device acquired on Nox. She is ambushed while tracking him and again winds up prisoner to see his acts. He obtains marionium, which is placed in the device, which actually creates its own dark matter and is now ready to be used. Rather than leaving her alive and in the hands of a subordinate when leaving, Dalien corrects his earlier mistake and shoots Lanoree in the chest. Thankfully, Tre and Ironholgs find her after the Stargazers leave. They take her back to the Peacemaker, where a rapidly dying Lanoree uses her skills in alchemy to take her little pet project — a biomass essentially grown of her own flesh — to repair the damage of the supposedly fatal blaster wound. They race for Tython to stop Dalien from endangering all of the Tythan system . . . (To be continued below . . . )

(Into the Void)

• At Akar Kesh, the Temple of Balance on Tython, Temple Master Ketu instructs younglings Harun and Resi on the need for balance in the Force, through the example of Despot Queen Hadiya and the Despot War twelve years earlier. Meanwhile, the planet Tatooine has been conquered by the Rakata of the Infinite Empire, and the native Kumumgah have been made subjects of the Rakata, who are led on Tatooine at the moment by Predor Tul’kar, who is on the planet with his Force Hound, Xesh, and his attendant, Ore’mun. Ore’mun, a spy for Predor Skal’nas, Tul’kar’s superior and rival, is ordered by Skal’nas to remain behind in charge of the “culling” of Tatooine, while Tul’kar is ordered back to Byss. When Ore’mun expresses this fact and seems to take pleasure in it, Tul’kar kills him with Force lightning and has his body prepared for burial as he leaves for Byss. Upon arrival at Byss, Tul’kar and Xesh enter the Rakatan command center and come face to face with Skal’nas and his own Force Hound, Trill. When Tul’kar demands answers for having been ordered away from his rightful culling of slaves on Tatooine, Skal’nas reveals that he does not need Tul’kar. He needs Xesh to help find a Force-rich world that Trill has sensed in the Deep Core (Tython).
By suggesting that it would be impossible for Trill but possible for him, Xesh goads Trill into attacking him. They Predors cut the fight short, and Xesh agrees to hunt for the planet, which would then be Tul'kar's by right of discovery and subsequent conquest. (To be continued below . . . )

*NOTE: See note with the larger portion of the summary below.

- Tul'kar's Force Hound, Xesh, is able to use the Force to glean the existence of Tython and the nature of its guardians, the Je'daii, whose name (and the name of the planet itself) he also learns within the Force. He tells only Skal'nas of this, and Skal'nas decides to send Xesh to Tython as a spy to discover their weaknesses. He is sent as Skal'nas agent with an unknowing Tul'kar on what is to be a survey mission of Tython. Secretly, his memory is being blocked by Skal'nas, but his final orders will be to sabotage the ship and kill Tul'kar as a Dark Side act that will solidify his memory block from possible Je'daii discovery. (To be continued below . . . )

*NOTE: This portion of Force War is a flashback “between scenes,” so to speak, within Force Storm.

- Fury Station (above Furies Gate, the outermost planet in the Tython system) detects an incoming ship, which immediately disappears. With this being the first to ever be spotted entering the system since the Tho Yor ships, it is huge news. Je'daii Ranger Hawk Ryo is there when it is detected, and he uses the Force to continue following the Dark Side emanations from the vessel, despite its stealth technology. At Anil Kesh on Tython, Shae Koda trains with Master Quan-Jang in mastering control of a huge rancor-dragon that she has named “Butch.” When she is distracted by a Force vision (a “Summons”) of Xesh, she nearly falls into the Chasm only to be saved by Quan-Jang. He encourages her to take Butch and follow the Summons. On Shikaakwa, Baron Volnos “Ox” Ryo is trying to convince his daughter, Tasha Ryo, to rejoin the family business. She refuses, given her calling to be a Je'daii like her mother, but they are attacked by Jaris Kan, an old ally of Volnos, who has been hired to kill him by rival crimelord Baron Garto. Volnos kills Jaris, but during the confrontation, Tasha also receives the Summons. At Qigong Kesh Temple, Sith (that is, Sith species) Je'daii Sek'nos Rath toys with creating a ball of Force lightning when he receives the Summons as well. On Bogan, the quasi-exiled Je'daii Daegen Lok also receives the Summons. (To be continued below . . . )

*NOTE: This portion of Force War is a flashback of Xesh's point of view of the “Summons” seen in Force Storm.

- Shae Koda, Tasha Tyo, and Sek'nos Rath all arrive at a lava-filled area on Tython to answer the Summons and witness Tul'kar's Rakatan ship crash down with only an escape pod surviving. From the pod, Xesh emerges unmasked, claiming that he brings death. At Akar Kesh, the Temple of Balance, Master Ketu and Ranger Rori Fenn sense the darkness of the new arrival and know it needs to be investigated. Rori will investigate with Science Master Quan-Jang, and both will meet Hawk Ryo at the crash site. At the crash site, Xesh attacks Sek'nos, cutting through his blade of Master Madog’s durasteel as if it is nothing, thanks to his unusual weapon: a Forcesaber (which uses Dark Side energy to create an energy blade). Xesh knocks out Tasha, while Sek'nos and Shae continue fighting him. Sek'nos’ ball of Force lightning is redirected by Xesh, and Shae is Force pushed away. When it seems Xesh has Sek'nos at his mercy, Sek'nos takes the Forcesaber, only to be unable to activate it. Sek'nos tosses it to Shae for safekeeping, as Xesh pounces, ready to push Sek'nos’ face into scorching lava. Shae, though, is angry enough that she is able to activate the Forcesaber to attack Xesh, saving Sek'nos. In light of this turn of events, Xesh causes a distraction (rocks about to crush Tasha) and escapes. The others save Tasha. Together, they claim Xesh’s helmet and proceed to give chase, tracking him to the Abyss of Ruh, where, unbeknownst to them, Xesh collapses from his wounds and the effects of the Abyss. While they pursue Xesh, Quan-Jang, Rori, and Hawk arrive at the crash site, while in contact with Master Kora Ryo (Tasha’s mother) back at Kaleth (Temple of Knowledge). Kora believes that Tython itself is reacting to the massive number of deaths of Force sensitives (on Tatooine, possibly, but more likely all of those aboard the crashed Rakatan vessel), hence strange, violent weather across the planet. Hawk spots his niece Tasha’s wrecked speeder, Rori finds Sek’nos’ and Shae’s destroyed blades, Quan-Jang translates aurebesh on Xesh’s pod to say “Predor Tul’kar,” and they are set upon by Sek’nos’ riding mount and Butch, whom they easily tame. They take the mount and Butch toward the Abyss as well. Meanwhile, above on the dark moon of Bogan, Daegen Lok watches as storms grow on Tython and senses the growing power on Tython.  (To be continued below . . . )

*NOTE: The dating for this story has some oddities. First, the comic refers to the story as beginning in 36,453 BBY in every issue, even though that is only when the first scenes in the first issue take place, and the main story is millennia later. Second, these are events that lead into the Force War, which the website for The Old Republic puts in 22,140 BTC (or 25,793 BBY). I had originally placed the story in that year, which seemed to be backed up by the timeline in the Into the Void novel (which is concurrent with part of Force Storm), which put that novel around 25,793 BBY. However, this made the dates for various quotes in the Into the Void novel (based on the “TYA” calendar that dates back to 36,453 BBY) off by a decade every time. I finally contacted Leland Chee and confirmed to me that the Rakatans’ arrival on Tython (these events) are in 25,783 BBY, a decade later than I had originally thought, the timeline had suggested, and the TOR website had stated. While I am not sure why this is the case, I can at least say that this is the official date for this story, and the dates for other events relative to this story and its companions are all based on this date for Force Storm. (For what it’s worth, fellow chronologically-minded fan Jim Lehane had gotten the date for this correct by assuming that 25,793 BBY was the date for many of the flashbacks in Into the Void, rather than for the novel itself.)

- Je’daii Ranger Lanoree Brock and ally Tre Sana arrive at Tython as the Force Storm caused by Xesh’s arrival rages. They race for the Old City, where they hope to stop Dalien Brock and the Stargazers from using their recreated Gree dark matter device to reactivate an ancient Hypergate that could destroy the entire system if it causes a black hole to form. They enter the Old City, counting dead Stargazers along the way and noting that only Dalien and two others remain. As they reach a trap, Tre shoves Lanoree out of the way, saving her life, but after she kills their attacker, she finds that Tre has been gravely wounded by the trap he saved her from. She must leave him behind to stop Dalien. She faces off with Dalien with a blaster and Je’daii practice sword, since he stole her own sword back on Nox and jettisoned it into space. She uses the Force to bombard his mind with images of the deaths he left in his wake, but this only staggers him. They fight, pitting her Je’daii skills against all of the martial arts he learned during his early training. Finally, she delivers a killing blow, cutting deep into his head. She takes the device and the injured Tre to Anil Kesh, the Temple of Science. She leaves Dalien’s body behind, but when other Je’daii go to retrieve it later, it cannot be found. While the Je’daii work on Tre, she is congratulated by Dam-Powl, but they are all worried about the ship that crashed from outside of the Tython system. Seeking answers as to how Dam-Powl was first alerted to the Stargazer plot, Lanoree is pointed to Khalimar . . .

Into the Void

- As the Je’daii Masters attempt to meditate to control the growing Force storm that feeds on Xesh’s presence and Dark Side affinity, the three Journeyers face their own fears and darker impulses within the Abyss of Ruh. Xesh, for his part, sees visions that provide him with glimpses into why the ship crashed. The vessel was Predor Tul’kar’s Devourer, and while Tul’kar thought that it was the slaves that sabotaged his ship, Xesh remembers killing Tul’kar himself, though he does not know why he has killed his master. As he battles creatures to escape, he also recalls the Arena on Byss, where the only rule is to conquer or die. The Rangers keep trying to find the Journeyers, as Quan-Jang must deal with his worries that he might lose Shae to the Abyss, just as his former student Daegen went “mad” from its effects. Hawk and Rori must fight their old affection for each other. Shae, Tasha, and Sek’nos find Xesh battling a rift worm that breathes Force lightning. They battle it as well, and, when Shae cannot make the Forcesaber work, she tosses it to Xesh, intending for him to help them as they were helping him, only for him to seemingly walk away, leaving them to the rift worm.
Instead, he watches them. When they do not leave the weakest (Tasha) to the worm to escape, Shae will not run when Sek'nos is injured, Xesh senses the power of the Light Side in Shae and her honorable determination. Never having felt this before in his life as a Force Hound, he leaps into the fray, refusing to allow Shae's "light" to be extinguished. They are soon joined by Quan-Jang, Rori, and Hawk. The latter two aid the others against the worm, while Quan-Jang enters a sort of Force meditation that links his mind to the efforts of the other Masters around Tython to try to quell the storm. Finally, Quan-Jang succeeds, though he is injured and the lightning that strikes down at him also strikes at Xesh. Shae nearly kills Xesh for the injury to Quan-Jang, but she relents when his reaction (that she should get to eat his heart, since she is the victor) is so outlandish that she realizes there may be more to do for him than simply kill him. Later, Xesh awakens at Mahara Kesh, where Healer Calleh is tending to him. (To be continued below . . . )

(Force Storm)*

*NOTE: See note with the first part of this summary above.

- On Khalimar, Lanoree Broz finds no trace of Kara or the Stargazers. They seem to have vanished. She finally heads back to Tython, where she will reunited with her parents, and they will mourn the true loss of her brother, Dalien, together.

(Into the Void)

- Ten days after the end of the chase for Xesh, Quan-Jang is well enough to receive visitors. What, though, will they do with Xesh? The Journeyers argue that they should be allowed to help him find his way into balance with the Force. Tasha even goes into his mind to see his origins briefly. The Masters, though, decide that he must be sent to Bogan to meditate on Ashla and find his balance. Unfortunately, this seems near to impossible because Xesh knows nothing of the Light Side. How can one meditate on something one does not even comprehend? Despite these concerns, he is being sent away, as he is too dangerous to the environment on Tython to be allowed to remain. Above, on Bogan, Daegen Lok, the only person to have received the Summons who has not yet met Xesh, smiles. The time he has awaited has finally begun . . . whatever that might mean.*

(Force Storm)*

*NOTE: See note with the first part of this summary above.

- It is the end of former Force Hound Xesh’s second month on Tython’s moon Bogan. Unbeknownst to him, Predor Skal’nas has sent Trill, who has a brood link with Xesh from their childhood, to track the ruins of the Devourer and Xesh to find Tython for the Rakatan Infinite Empire. Xesh contemplates his future on Bogan but is interrupted when he is attacked (via “mind twist”) by Daegen Lok, a fellow exile from Tython, sent, like Xesh, to meditate on the Light Side. Daegen reveals that Xesh appeared to him in a vision (a “Summons”) just like he did to Shae Koda, Sek’nos Rath, and Tasha Ryo. Daegen helps Xesh remove his wristband and trick the sensors into not knowing where he really is, so that the two can visit a downed Shikaakwan Pho starfighter that was left behind after the Despot War that Daegen Lok was instrumental in winning for the Je’daii. Daegen also reveals the vision he had in the Chasm after the Despot War, in which he saw Xesh and his Forcesaber. He now wants Xesh to make him a Forcesaber, which is possible with crystals from the planet Krev Coeur, then using the Forge factories on Nox. Using a power similar to Force lightning, Xesh sends power into the starfighter, much like how the Rakatans power their own vehicles, and the two exiles escape from Bogan. Meanwhile, on Tython, Shae, Tasha, and Sek’nos train with Master Tave at Stav Kesh but are concerned that their visions are not being taken seriously by the Je’daii Masters, who seem to be dismissing their vision like they dismissed Daegen’s. (And if theirs is indeed true, then why not Daegen’s?) Tasha is sent to Kaleth, while Shae and Sek’nos are sent to the Forge. Master Ketu also has his concerns, so he visits his former Master, Rajivari, former hero of the Despot War, who warns that both visions should be seen as warnings and heeded cautiously. At the Forge, Master Tem Madog attempts to test the Forcesaber, but he is unable to do so. Even Shae is unable to get it to work again (which causes her distress), but Hawk Ryo has better control of the balance of Light and Dark and is able to tilt enough toward darkness to activate it for them. Hawk is allowed to keep it for now, as long as he reports any new findings to Madog. (His former lover Rori Fenn is not particularly keen on Hawk tilting toward the Dark Side, but he assures her that he will be fine.) At Kaleth, Master Kora Ryo argues with her husband, the crime lord Volnos “Ox” Ryo, over Tasha staying with the Je’daii, rather than both of them disavowing the Je’daii to return to Shikaakwa. Meanwhile, Tasha speaks with Master Ters Sendon about the unknown species whose bodies were found on the Devourer. He shows her a lower chamber with a Holocron that she is able to activate, revealing A’nag of the Kwa, the last Kwa to have lived on Tython. The Je’daii soon learn that Xesh has escaped from Bogan. A Jedi team (with Jake Fenn, Sek’nos, and Ranger Bel Zana in one Peacekeeper vessel, along with Hawk, Rori, and Shae in another) sets out to investigate. On Bogan, they fight their way through terenta and find Daegen’s carving of himself with a Forcesaber, as seen in the vision that Daegen had in the Chasm. Hawk reveals that he too shared the vision while with Daegen that day, but he ignored its implications of an army with Forcesabers. The two three-Je’daii teams head for Krev Coeur and Nox. Xesh and Daegen, meanwhile, have already crashed on Krev Coeur. Back on Tython, Tasha shows A’nag the skull of one of the beings from the Devourer, which the ancient Kwa recognizes as a Rakatan. On Krev Coeur, Daegen and Xesh convince an old contact of Daegen’s, Slug, to give them the crystals they need, but when he mentions possibly turning them in to the Je’daii, Daegen tries to kill him. Zana saves him, but it reveals her presence before Jake and Sek’nos can join her, leading to her being thrust into a delusion of burning by Daegen. When the two male Je’daii arrive, they battle Daegen and Xesh, ending when Sek’nos saves Zana from falling to her doom but appears to fall to his own death as Xesh and Daegen escape. Jakes takes Zana to Kalimahr for medical treatment. In the city of Boneyard on Nox, Shae, Rori, and Hawk continue the hunt. Shae is distraught to learn of Sek’nos’ “death,” but she did not sense it. This is because Sek’nos has been saved by Trill from his fall. She has nursed him back to health and secured his aid. Xesh and Daegen reach the Gratz Foundry on Nox, just outside of Boneyard, where Xesh creates a Forcesaber for Daegen, as planned. They soon contact members of the dead Queen Hadiya’s old inner circle, Daegen’s former enemies: Bakko, Shri-Lan, Gav Vannar, and Ka’un Damm. After calming them, Daegen wants them to go to Shikaakwa with him to gather an army from those who will follow them based on their loyalty to Hadiya. He tells them that they need to use force to sway the Je’daii to join him against the army he saw in his vision. (He is either lying or does not realize that he could very well be the one in his vision that is destroying the Je’daii.) The Je’daii catch up to them, though, and Daegen and Xesh flee in separate directions, pursued by Hawk and Shae, respectively. Daegen escapes after confronting Hawk, even as Shae battles Xesh. She is nearly killed by a creature, leading Xesh to, for reasons he cannot understand himself, save her life and take her prisoner. Sek’nos contacts Hawk, and the Je’daii head for Shikaakwa. Meanwhile, Rajivari is asked to contact A’nag in the Holocron to seek information about the Rakatans. The Kwa reveals their origins and plans for domination. Recognizing the danger they pose and that Xesh’s ship was Rakatan, they begin preparations for war. It seems that Daegen’s vision, which they have denied, is coming true after all. Daegen, Xesh, and a mind-tweaked “sleepwalking” Shae go to Baron Volnos “Ox” Ryo’s fortress on Shikaakwa, seeking Ox’s aid in raising an army of those who want revenge for Hadiya’s downfall. (It is not public knowledge that Daegen killed Hadiya, nor that Ox himself helped him get to her, which Daegen uses as leverage against Ox.) Unfortunately for them, Sek’nos and Trill have arrived, as have Rori and Hawk (Ox’s brother). Ox refuses to help Daegen, and Xesh refuses to acknowledge that he serves anyone, including Daegen. Battle ensues as the Je’daii and Trill enter the fortress. During the battle, Xesh sees Trill and does not recognize her. As Hawk and Daegen do battle, Daegen reminds Hawk that he too saw the Je’daii army facing off with Dark Side aliens (the Rakatans), and that the aliens held Forcesabers. Daegen cuts off Hawk’s lower right leg, even as Shae awakens, takes a Forcesaber, and engages Daegen. Xesh intervenes, but when Shae tells him that he must choose whether to be his own man or a servant of Daegen, Xesh turns on Daegen. Daegen tries to reach into Xesh’s mind to use his fears against him, but it is a place far darker than Daegen expected. He is taken down in the attempt and arrested by the Je’daii. Xesh will return with them as well. One week later, Hawk has a replacement cybernetic lower leg. Daegen is sentenced to time on Bogan again, in chains this time. Ketu questions Hawk about the vision Daegen claims they shared, and Hawk admits to having seen the vision, but he differs on one crucial point. In his vision, it was not Daegen leading the army against the aliens; it was Xesh. As for Xesh, he will study balance in the Force and be trained as a Je’daii, and they will try to help him remember his former masters, so that they can prepare for war. Part of those preparations is Master Tem Madog construction Forcesabers, despite their reliance on the Dark Side. Meanwhile, Trill contacts Predor Skal’nas, reporting on having found Tython. She reports that Xesh is now among the Je’daii and will learn their secrets for Skal’nas. Xesh’s memories were erased by Skal’nas, so that Xesh could be his spy, bringing down Tul’kar’s ship. Now, even he does not remember that he is Skal’nas’ spy. Now, the Rakatan fleet sets course for Tython. War is coming . . . *

(Prisoner of Bogan)

*NOTE: Yes, I know that the comic itself claims that the events take place over 36,000 years before A New Hope, but this is an error, based on the dating of Force Storm in its inside cover, which was referring to the very early parts of that story, rather than the main storyline in that tale. This story is set only two months after Force Storm. (I brought up this issue with both Leland Chee and Jan Duursema, and they got in touch with Dark Horse to get the date fixed by the time of the fourth issue of Force War.)*

• Predor Skal’nas’ Rakatan fleet attacks the Tython (Tythan) System. They first strike Furies Gate, then take control of Obri and Mawr (with their respective moons). They next strike at Tython, only to be pushed back by the Je’daii. The Rakatans fall back to Ska Gora and begin using it as their base of operations. The populations of conquered areas are made into Rakatan slaves. With the realization that Daegen Lok’s vision (shared with some alterations with Hawk Ryo) is seemingly coming to pass, the Je’daii begin to produce Forcesabers. Daegen becomes a Je’daii General and leader of the Je’daii in the conflict, which will come to be known as the Force War, while Rajivari leads the combined Je’daii and non-Je’daii forces of the Settled Worlds against the Rakatans. They Je’daii also use Seers to gain insight into the Rakatans’ targets. Obri and Mawr fall to the Rakatans. (conjecture based on Force War)

• In the wake of the Force Cataclysm that ends the Force War on Tython, the followers of the Light Side (“Ashla”) realize that Tython itself might be fueling these conflicts with its extreme Force connection, so they choose to leave the planet. They will form the monastic warrior society known as the Jedi Order (a restructuring of the Je’daii). Its warriors, as they spread throughout the galaxy to aid other cultures, will become known as Jedi Knights. * (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)* **

*NOTE: According to the timeline on The Old Republic’s website, this event takes place circa 22,140 BTC, which translates to 25,793 BBY. However, Leland Chee has since confirmed (via email to me) that Into the Void, Force Storm, etc. (and thus the Rakatans’ arrival at Tython, starting with Xesh) is set in 25,783 BBY, a decade later. This was later confirmed by the correct date in the last two issues of Force War.

• The first Jedi Knight learns the moral uses and consequences of his power from a member of the Caamasi species, the lawgiver known as Hespecia Tik’kla. (conjecture based on Vision of the Future and The Jedi Path)

Eruption (SWI141 short story: John Ostrander)

Eruption (SWI141 short story: John Ostrander)

Dawn of the Jedi [continued] (novel/comic series: John Ostrander & Tim Lebbon)

Into the Void [continued] (novel: Tim Lebbon)

Dark Matters [continued]

The Great Journey [continued]

The Adventures of Lanoree Brock, Je’daii Ranger (kindlepost.com short story: Tim Lebbon)

The Adventures of Lanoree Brock, Je’daii Ranger (kindlepost.com short story: Tim Lebbon)

Dawn of the Jedi [continued] (novel/comic series: John Ostrander & Tim Lebbon)

Into the Void [continued] (novel: Tim Lebbon)

The Good and the Great [continued]

His Own Man [continued]

Sharp Edges

Old Myths [continued]

Safe and Sound [continued]

The Memory of Pain [continued]

Scars

Empty Spaces [continued]
Slaves [continued]
Chasm [continued]
Other Ways [continued]
Sad History [continued]
Ran Dan’s Folly [continued]
The Alchemy of Flesh [continued]
Repulsion

Force Storm [continued] (comic series: John Ostrander)
Force Storm, Part I [continued] (comic: John Ostrander)
Force War (comic series: John Ostrander)
Force War, Part III [flashback] (comic: John Ostrander)
Force Storm [continued] (comic series: John Ostrander)
Force Storm, Part II (comic: John Ostrander)
Force War [continued] (comic series: John Ostrander)
Force War, Part III [flashback] [continued] (comic: John Ostrander)
Force Storm [continued] (comic series: John Ostrander)
Force Storm, Part II [continued] (comic: John Ostrander)
Force Storm, Part III (comic: John Ostrander)
Into the Void [continued] (novel: Tim Lebbon)
Repulsion [continued]
The Descent Might

Force Storm [continued] (comic series: John Ostrander)
Force Storm, Part IV (comic: John Ostrander)
Force Storm, Part V (comic: John Ostrander)
Into the Void [continued] (novel: Tim Lebbon)
Might [continued]

Force Storm [continued] (comic series: John Ostrander)
Force Storm, Part V [continued] (comic: John Ostrander)
Prisoner of Bogan [continued] (comic series: John Ostrander)
Prisoner of Bogan, Part I [continued] (comic: John Ostrander)
Prisoner of Bogan, Part II [continued] (comic: John Ostrander)
Prisoner of Bogan, Part III (comic: John Ostrander)
Prisoner of Bogan, Part IV (comic: John Ostrander) Prisoner of Bogan, Part V (comic: John Ostrander)

25,782 BBY

- One year into the Force War between the Je’daii (and non-Je’daii forces of the Settled Worlds) and the Rakatans continues. Je’daii forces on Shikaakwa include Xesh, Je’daii Ranger Shae Koda (now in a relationship with Xesh), General Daegen Lok, Sek’nos Rath, and Trill (in a relationship with Sek’nos and still keeping her true identity a secret – one Xesh is still unable to remember aside from a strange connection to her). Amid a battle with another Force Hound and Flesh Raiders (mutated lower-caste Rakatan warriors), they must call down an airstrike on their own position via Red Squadron (under Hawk Ryo) to destroy Rakatan Annihilators and Flesh Raiders. The battle continues as the Je’daii try to keep the fortress of Baron Volnos Ryo (Hawk’s brother) from falling, for with it Shikaakwa would fall, opening the way for the Rakatans to strike at Tython again. With the Rakatans at Xesh’s position damaged by the airstrike, Masters Tave, Quan-Jang (with his beasts), and Madog (engineer of the Forcesabers from Xesh’s own) join the fray. With the understanding that the Je’daii knew the Rakatans were coming to Shikaakwa (due to Je’daii Seers), Sub-Predor Ceh’let is forced into retreat, leaving Flesh Raiders to be mopped up by the Je’daii. The battle ends, but Sek’nos fears that this war makes it too difficult for Je’daii to remain in balance in the Force. As Trill tries to soothe him, Xesh notes his connection to her, which seems to upset Shae, who claims that he couldn’t know her or owe her his life, since Trill is (supposedly) from Shikaakwa. Meanwhile, Ceh’let reports back to Skal’nas, who kills her for challenging him, but not before revealing to her that the Rakatans are losing their ability to touch the Force. He is attacking Tython because legend tells of a Force-rich world that will renew the Rakatans, which also is said to hold an ancient Kwa Infinity Gate (the same one hunted by Dalien Brock and the Stargazers a year earlier) that was once kept from the Rakatans by the Kwa. He intends to capture Tython, renew the Rakatans, then use the Infinity Gate, all the while becoming the Over-Predor of the Rakatan Infinite Empire. Later, Xesh has nightmares of returning to the Rakatans and betraying the Je'daii. He tells this to Shae, who will not believe it. She professes her love for him, and he tells her his true name, one of the few things he can remember from before the crash on Tython. His true name is “Tau.” The next day, when the Je’daii learn that Volnos Ryo may withdraw his support in favor of a separate peace with the Rakatans (which wouldn’t be honored by Skal’nas), Xesh concocts a plan for the Je’daii to strike at Skal’nas himself, which, given the Rakatan ruling structure, would win the day for the Je’daii. He sends his spirit out through the Force (similar to Flow Walking) to locate Skal’nas and finds his fortress on Ska Gora in the Valley of Kraau. Unfortunately, Trill passes along those plans to Skal’nas. When the attack happens, the Rakatans spring a trap, but Xesh is able to reach the fortress. Outside, he finds Trill, who claims to have been separated from Sek’nos and in need of protection. Xesh allows her to join him as he enters the fortress. Inside, Xesh finds that the Je’daii that have fallen in battle have been taken to use as Force batteries (for lack of a better term) to power Rakatan technology, and other members of this assault (such as Sek’nos) are already captives in these pods. Before he can do anything about it, Trill zaps him with Force Lightning, capturing him for Skal’nas. Skal’nas puts Xesh in a Rakatan mind rack and reveals Xesh’s hidden past to him, explaining how he led the Rakatans to Tython and betrayed Tul’kar in the process. He is shocked by this, but the more his original darkness is shown to him, the more he seems to realize that the Je’daii could never accept him if they knew his past. He rejoins Skal’nas and joins him in visiting Daegen, who is being held captive and interrogated by Trill. Xesh informs Skal’nas that the Je’daii seers are directing the Force War, and he then uses Daegen’s fears against him to force him to reveal something else he saw in the Chasm — a huge number of worlds that suggests that a lost Kwa Infinity Gate is located within the Chasm on Tython. Skal’nas then links his energy in the Force to Xesh and Trill, and Xesh is sent as a Force “shadow” to Tasha Ryo. On that mental plane, they are attacked, leaving them blind to seeing the future in the Force. Their last vision, however, points to a Rakatan attack at Anil Kesh on Tython, so the Je’daii recall their forces to defend Tython. Meanwhile, both Sek’nos and Daegen, in their captivity, recognize Xesh’s betrayal and intend to kill him if ever able to do so. As the Je’daii retreat to Anil Kesh, Shae knows that she will kill Xesh if she must and is actually able. For her part, Tasha Ryo may not be a Seer anymore, but she has brought A’nang’s holocron and will meditate on it with Ters Sendon, seeking an answer to what the Rakatans want with Anil Kesh. Soon, the Rakatans swarm upon Ashla, where the remaining armies of the Settled Worlds were waiting to strike and thereby blunt the Rakatan attack on Tython. They are decimated. Soon, the attack on Tython begins, as Rori and Hawk lead starfighters in combat, while Madog and Rajivari lead on the ground. Aboard the Ravager, Skal’nas orders Trill to lead his flesh raider forces, naming Xesh his new official Hound in her place. Angered, Trill lashes out with Force lightning that draws the attention (and hatred) of Sek’nos aboard. He is indeed aboard, along with Skal’nas and their prisoner, Daegen, whom they are taking into the Chasm to seek the Infinity Gate. Once Daegen gets them to the Chaos Wall (beyond which the Anil Kesh exploratory beam will not penetrate and beyond which Je’daii go mad and droids get fried), Skal’nas reveals that beyond the wall is the Prime Infinity Gate, one that can send the Rakatans anywhere they wish without the need of another gate on the other end. Rakatan legends speak of this, along with the knowledge that getting past the Chaos Wall requires holding an image of the symbol on the Tho Yor in their mind while trying to pass it. With jetpacks, Xesh and Skal’nas descend, leaving Daegen with the intent of having flesh raiders eventually find and kill him. Elsewhere, Sek’nos is able to harness his anger to burst from his container. He then frees the other enslaved Je’daii in a hate-filled revolt against the Rakatans. He soon leads the fight to where Daegen is fighting flesh raiders, has freed himself and taken some of their blades, only to be nearly killed.
Sek'nos saves him, and they intend to hunt Xesh together, one of them killing him. As they fight the flesh raiders, Shae arrives, and when Daegen says where Xesh went, she takes the flying rancor Butch into the Chasm, leaving Sek'nos behind. Daegen leaps aboard as well, putting the symbol in her mind and Butch’s that will allow them all through the Chaos Wall. Even as they are doing so, Tasha and Sendon tell the holographic A’nang that the Rakatans have come to Tython, and the holocron reaches out to the planet. It is time for Tython to “awaken.” Xesh and Skal’nas reach the gate, while Qan-Jiang arrives to join Sek’nos in fighting flesh raiders above the Chasm. Trill arrives to fight them, and Sek’nos nearly kills her. Instead, he defeats her and takes her prisoner. In the Chasm, Shae, Daegen, and Butch reach the bottom. Butch flees, while Shae battles Xesh and Daegen battles Skal’nas. Daegen tries to reach into Skal’nas’ mind to defeat him as he has done so often before, but Skal’nas’ mind is full of horrors that lets him turn the move against Daegen. He delivers what is meant to be a killing blow to Daegen. Shae, meanwhile, has brought Xesh to a crossroads. He must choose to be what he has been, Xesh the Force Hound, or to be the man he can be, the independent man Tau. Before he can choose, Skal’nas activates the Prime Infinity Gate, taking control of it. In the lowest level of Anil Kesh, Tasha takes the holocron there as instructed, then takes part in a failsafe the holographic A’nang explains. The Seer gives up her mortal shell to reconnect with the Force, and then, as a Seer, to reach out to the Tho Yor. Down at the Gate, Shae forgives Xesh for all he has done and hopes he can forgive himself, telling him that such is what is meant when dealing with love. Skal’nas simply blasts her with Force lightning, bringing down Xesh’s rage upon himself. Above, the Tho Yor awaken, rising into the sky and pummeling the Rakatans with energy, including a blast that strikes and destroys the Infinity Gate’s functions. Defeated in his greater purpose, Skal’nas is finally struck down by Xesh (or, more to the point, by Tau). As the Chasm collapses around them, Shae and Xesh take Daegen, found to be barely alive, aboard Butch and escape just in time.

In the wake of Skal’nas death, the Rakatan fleet senses it in the Force, causing the sub-predors to turn on each other to gain command. Their battle with each other and the combined might of the Je’daii and the remnants of the Settled Worlds’ fleet drive the Rakatans away from the Tython System. The Je’daii send the former Rakatan slaves to Bogan to hopefully find balance. One faction of the Je’daii intend to put down their Forcesabers to seek balance again. A faction led by Daegen refuses to do so, intending to hunt down remaining flesh raiders and be wary of the return of the Rakatans one day (despite Tython having the Tho Yor to defend it). As for Shae and Tau, they are together now, and the Je’daii, recognizing Tau’s role in defeating the Rakatans, allows him to explore Tython as a Je’daii would. Together, they set out into the silent desert, free of conflict at last.*

*NOTE: The date for the Force War seems to have been tweaked over time. After repeated references, the date of the conflict was set as 25,793 BBY by the website for The Old Republic, which dated it 22,140 – 22,130 BTC. That date (25,793 BBY) was then assumed to be the date for the main storyline of the first arc of Dawn of the Jedi, Force Storm and Prisoner of Bogan. This date also appeared in the timeline found in the first few pages of Into the Void (the first DOTJ novel), which is concurrent with parts of Force Storm. However, that date turned out to be inconsistent with internal dating used within Into the Void, and Leland Chee later confirmed to me (via email) that the official date for those stories was actually a decade later than expected, 25,783 BBY, which would have placed those stories at the end of the original span given for the Force Wars, rather than the beginning. This story, actually focusing on Force War and entitled as such, is set one year after Prisoner of Bogan and thus one year past the original time frame we’d been given for the Force Wars. This is made all the more frustrating by the fact that the credits pages for issues of Force Storm were incorrectly labeled as all taking place in the year when the prologue (of sorts) in Force Storm took place, rather than in the year of most of those events. The second story, Prisoner of Bogan was also incorrectly listed on its credits pages as beginning “over 36,000 years” BBY. The error continued into the first two issues of Force War, though it was somewhat corrected by the third issue to state that it was set “over 25,000 years” BBY. (While that is correct, it was not specific enough to dispel the incorrect dating issues found on numerous websites.) I brought up this issue with both Leland Chee and Jan Duursema, who each said they would bring it up with Dark Horse. The correct date for this story (which retroactively finally provides the means to officially note the correct dates for those other Dawn of the Jedi stories) finally appeared in the last two issues of Force War, which is rightly noted as 25,782 BBY. (It’s good to feel like I can make a difference from time to time. My thanks to Mr. Chee and Ms. Duursema for taking the time to hear out an old chronology hound.)

- In the wake of the Force War, the Je’daii followers of the Light Side (“Ashla”) on Tython will form the monastic warrior society known as the Jedi Order. Its warriors, as they spread throughout the galaxy to aid other cultures, will become known as Jedi Knights.*
Those who choose not to follow the Light Side flee from Tython and are chased as far as Ossus by the Jedi. The Jedi settle on Ossus as a new site for Jedi teaching.

The first Jedi Knight learns the moral uses and consequences of his power from a member of the Caamasí species.

25,200 BBY

Future pirate chieftain and empire-builder Xer VIII is born on Argai.

Future Lisst'n dramatist (and writer of The Pirate Prince, one of the most important works on Xim the Despot) Lyechusas of Argai is born.

The Kitel Phard Dynasty arises on the primary planet of the Atrisi System, unifying the entire planet, eliminating opposition, and bringing a period of peace and prosperity.

A plague strikes the Rakatan Infinite Empire, wiping out billions. In its wake, the slave class rises up, causing a civil war. As the war claims many lives, the plague mutates, causing the remaining Rakatans to be cut off from the Force forever. Within a short time, the Infinite Empire will retreat all the way back to the Rakatan homeworld, Lehon (also known as Rakata Prime), where only a small segment of their society will survive. Those who do return to a primitive lifestyle, guided by a group of Elders, who hide away all information about their former technology. While it is unknown precisely when the Infinite Empire began (though it had to be sometime before jungle life existed on Kashyyyk, since they created the jungle, and before the barren landscape of Tatooine took its barren shape, since they were the ones who made it so), its legacy can be felt throughout various galactic cultures. They leave behind the barren landscape of Tatooine, the lush jungles of Kashyyyk, a series of scrambled Star Maps on five separate worlds (Dantooine, Tatooine, Manaan, Kashyyyk, and Korriban), and the device that the Star Maps (were they not scrambled) would lead to, the evil Star Forge. Unfortunately for the Rakata, who were trying to do good for the galaxy (and themselves) in scrambling the Star Maps, they neglected to account for the Star Maps’ natural self-correcting technology, which slowly corrects their information, so that by the time of the era of Darths Revan and Malak, the information gleaned from all five, when united, could in fact lead a power-hungry force to the Star Forge and ultimate power.

As the Rakatan Infinite Empire breaks down and their slave species rise up against them, the Drall rise up against the Rakatans as well, then begin their own plans to venture out into space. Over the next 5,000 years or so, Drall will experience groundquakes, volcanic eruptions, plagues, famines, enlightenments, purges, schisms, conflict among scholars, and the rise and fall of societies in different regions of the planet. This period will end when traders arrive along the Corellian Trade Spine and bring Drall into galactic society again.

As the Rakatan Infinite Empire breaks down, they abandon Talus and Tralus, leaving the humans and Drall they had moved there on their own. Cut off from their homeworlds and with only limited knowledge of how to work the machines left there by the Rakatans, these former slaves find themselves in a desperate situation for the next two hundred years. The city of Nashal is founded on the banks of the Mephyt River on Talus as a neutral meeting place for human and Drall tribes.

(conjecture based on Suns of Fortune)

- With the fall of the Rakatan Infinite Empire, the oppressed K’kybak people of Seymarti V are now free. They use the technology left by their oppressors to create a new defensive weapon of their own design, which can stop hyperspace travel entirely. The device leaves the core of the planet open to a weapon control chamber and uses force fields to keep the planet from collapsing on itself. In this way, the xenophobic K’kybak keep themselves safe until they eventually die out. Lesser species on the planet (or arriving on the planet) see the K’kybak as fallen, now absent, gods, and they build temples to them, including one over the entrance to the hyperspace weapon’s control chamber.*

(conjecture based on A Shattered Hope)

*NOTE: This assumes that the powerful empire that ruled the K’kybak were the Rakatans, which is not specified but strongly hinted. Otherwise, all we know is that this was all in pre-Republic times.

- With the fall of the Rakatan Infinite Empire, Oaka Prime becomes a forgotten world (briefly).

(conjecture based on A Shattered Hope)

25,180 BBY

- Queen Rana Mas Trehalt of Duro is born.*

(conjecture based on the Essential Guide to Planets and Moons)

*NOTE: The extension of her name from “Queen Rana” to her full name is based on information contained in TimeTales.

25,150 BBY

- Xer VIII, a successful pirate lord who has been named the Pirate-King of Argai (or simply the lord of Argai) begins to expand his power and influence. He seizes Dravione to begin creating his own realm within what is currently the Kingdom of Cron, ruled from Chandaar. The leadership of the kingdom mostly ignores his power grab, so he takes the initiative in charging down the Ihala Route and conquering the satrapies ruled by weaker Cronese families.*

(conjecture based on The History of Xim and the Tion Cluster)

*NOTE: The map in the article covers a twenty year stretch, but this is at the beginning of those conquests.

25,145 BBY

- If the tale The Pirate Prince by Lyechusas of Argai is to be believed, it is around this time when Xer VIII’s son, Xim, leaves to carry out conquests in his father’s name.

(conjecture based on The Despotica)

*NOTE: He is gone for 15 years before returning to Xer, according to the in-universe work of fiction (or dramatization of history, take your pick).

25,140 BBY

- Pirate-King Xer VIII, after a decade of conquests along the Ihala Route, can no longer be ignored by the Kingdom of Cron’s leadership. He is summoned to Chandaar to meet with the Cronese King Ferece, who attempts to buy Xer’s loyalty with noble titles. Xer leaves, promising to return in a month with a tribute suitable to what he observed there. Rather than being impressed and brining actual tribute, he has been disgusted by the weakness he saw and returns with a fleet that he has gathered at Pananna. He crushes a Cronese battlegroup at Duinarbulon and storms Chandaar, sending Ferece into a hasty retreat. Xer is declared the new King of Cron.*

(conjecture based on The History of Xim and the Tion Cluster)

*NOTE: The map in the article covers a twenty year stretch, but this segment of his backstory begins a decade into his conquests.

25,140 – 25,130 BBY

- Cronese King Xer VIII engages in the so-called Cronese Sweeps, striking against rebellious Cronese worlds and independent worlds on the Kingdom of Cron’s borders. He takes leaders’ heirs as hostages to maintain loyalty. Xer’s son, Xim, leads many of the most brutal battles in the Sweeps, including killing everyone in the Timber Palace of Pasmin, razing the High Fane of Xo on Nuswatta, and setting the royal barges of Eibon adrift in the heart of the Ihala Spiral. Through the Cronese Sweeps, Xer creates a united kingdom within his borders, then begins to expand. The Kingdom of Cron storms three kingdoms that have allied against him (Cadinth, Jaminere, and Barseg), then strikes at the Black Spiral, emerging victorious at Caluula, Brigia, Tion, and Raxus. He is unsuccessful, however, in battle at Amarin and Lorrad against the forces of the Livien League (Livien, Deservo, and Kanaver). Seeing folly in expanding into Livien League territory just yet, Xer withdraws and solidifies his prior holdings. The Kingdom of Cron is reorganized into three provinces with capitals at Chandaar, Raxus Prime, and Cadinth. Along with the independent world of Deservo, these worlds become part of the so-called Four Thrones of Cron when referred to historically.*

(conjecture based on The History of Xim and the Tion Cluster)

NOTE: The map in the article covers a twenty year stretch, but this segment covers the decade between Xer becoming King of Cron and the ascension of Xim, his son.

25,130 BBY

- Around this time, the Tion Cluster has been united into a Tionese empire under Tionese nobleman (and pirate) Xer VIII, who has conquered the region in the Cronese Sweeps. At this point, he retires to Raxus, and his heir, Xim (AKA Xim the Despot) becomes its new ruler, operating from the “First Throne of Cron” on Chandaar. He makes his first move against Jhantoria, where he wins a stunning victory against the Livien League (Deservo, Livien, and Kanaver). He intends to raze Deservo, but upon conquering the world, Xim meets Maslovar Tiatov, the defeated ruler of Deservo, who shows him the Deservrar academies and the Livien League’s process for turning captured individuals into janissaries and ministers of their own. Xim spares Tiatov’s life and begins using the Deservrar philosophy during his period of expansion to come. With Deservo, the “Fourth Throne of Cron” now under his control, the Kingdom of Cron become known as the Empire of Xim (later the Empire of “Xim the Despot”). *

NOTE: We have a date for Xim’s empire from the EGtP&M, then that number clarified as Xim’s rule beginning, thanks to the Atlas, but there is a date for Xer VIII’s conquests in the Atlas as well, only it appears to be a typo, since it puts Xer’s conquests a decade after his heir picks up where he left off. Thus, the best I can do is to reference those conquests here, as a sort of prelude to Xim taking power.

- If the tale The Pirate Prince by Lyechusas of Argai is to be believed, Xer VIII has not retired to Raxus, and it is not during his later conquests that Xim meets the Queen of Ranroon, Indrexu. In The Pirate Prince, Lyechusas has Xim return home after fifteen years of conquest in Xer’s name, only to find that Xer has met and married Indrexu. The king and queen have four other sons (Xil, Xom, Xic, and Xuc), who will be rivals for the power that Xim believes is rightfully his. Xim kills his half-brothers, then kills Xer. Finally, he takes Indrexu as his own lover and assumes power.

(conjecture based on The Despotica)

NOTE: This is an in-universe work of fiction or historical dramatization, making the earlier entry here the more likely events and this merely legend.

- Unconnected to the Empire beginning under Xim the Despot, the Nikto civilization goes through four sequential civil wars.

(conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 12: Aliens--“Enemies and Allies”)

25,130 – 25,120 BBY

- Xim the Despot’s Empire flourishes in the Tion territory in the Outer Rim. During this decade, Xim’s “Expansionist Period,” He subjugates or wipes out civilizations that are of no use to him or oppose him, while colonizing empty (or emptied) worlds and those that have something to offer his realm. The Vurk and Stenax are among those enslaved. His spinward conquests come to be known as the Thanium Worlds, richest of his new provinces, and this province’s new capital becomes the “Fifth Throne of Cron.” It is here that Xim encounters the Queen of Ranroon, Indrexu, for whom the Ihala Spiral is then renamed the “Indrexu Spiral.” This part of the Thanium region, the Far Indrexu, becomes Xim’s sixth province, with its capital, Yutusk, becoming the “Sixth Throne of Cron.” Xim continues to push further, eventually finding the Kiirium Reaches, worlds that had been colonized by other humans of similar ancestry before the rise of Cron and rival Tion states. He conquers them as well, making the planets Huronon (later “Wyndigal II”) and Astigone (later “OHS3842-03”) his “Seventh” and “Eighth Thrones of Cron.” It is in the Kiirium Reaches that Xim’s forces encounter Sakiyan and Nimbanel traders who serve a civilization that is new to Xim – the Hutts.

(conjecture based on The History of Xim and the Tion Cluster)

25,120 – 25,105 BBY

- As Xim’s forces encounter the Sakiyans and Nimbanels in the Kiirium Reaches and he learns more about the Hutts, he sends scouts into these uncharted areas, getting a sense of the layout and power structure of Hutt Space. Before resorting to all-out warfare to expand into Hutt territory, negotiations between his courtiers and vassals to the Hutts take place, eventually leading to an embassy on Ko Vari, manned by two dozen Hutt nobles and Xim’s most trusted advisor, Oziaf (to the Hutts, “Oziaf the Insignificant”). Oziaf’s presence is seen as an insult by the Hutts, and they eventually offer Xim the chance for the Tionese (Xim’s people) to become particularly favored slaves to the Hutts. Seeing in this the same kind of disrespect that Xim’s father, Xer VIII, faced when meeting with the Kingdom of Cron’s King Ferece, Xim decides that he will destroy the Hutt worlds for their insolence. He returns to Chandaar, the “First Throne of Cron” and holds a ceremony, in which he is declared the “Ruler of Worlds.” In Tionese, the title translates as “Daritha,” a possible precursor to the “Darth” title used by future Dark Lords of the Sith. He begins expanding his hyperspace beacon network closer and closer to Hutt Space along the Warriors’ Trace spacelane, until finally within striking distance of the Hutt worlds of Ko Vari and Sleheyron.

(conjecture based on The History of Xim and the Tion Cluster)

25,105 BBY

- Xim the Despot’s forces, in his twenty-fifth year of rule, sack Ko Vari, but their attempt to take Sleheyron fails, pushing Xim’s forces back to Xo’s Eye (Kessel). While Boonta the Hutt (Boonta Hestilic Shad’ruu) is unable to save Ko Vari, he makes sure that Xim’s forces pay dearly for their victory. Impressed by Boonta’s strategy, Kossak the Hutt (Kossak Inijic Ar’durv) sets him against other Tionese worlds with privateer ships crewed by slaves. Kossak begins to taunt Xim, urging him toward ritual combat in a battle at Vontor, but this is, for now, a manipulation of Xim. Both sides continue to build up their forces, until Xim finally agrees to the battle. Xim has determined the location of Vontor (secretly provide by Kossak’s own spies) and finds the world unprotected except for a single Weequay garrison. He takes out the garrison and begins mining the rich kiirium there, using it to build up the plating of his ships. He has not realized that this was a trap, laid by Kossak, who purposely left the world mostly undefended. In what becomes known as the First Battle of Vontor, Xim’s forces at Vontor receive a beating from Hutt warships, due to having a hard time seeing well due to the shine of the kiirium armor on their own ships. Few ships are able to escape, due to Kossak commandeering some of the beacon network around the world to cut off escape routes. With Xim’s Elbon Scimitar destroyed at the First Battle of Vontor, he replaces it with the Deathknell. He is now to withdraw his forces from Hutt-claimed worlds, but since many of those worlds are “claimed” without actual Hutt occupation, he does not abide by the terms of the battle agreement. He rebuilds his forces, claiming that Sleheyron (not yet in his possession) is the “Ninth Throne of Cron,” and attacks worlds like Kintan, Klatooin, and Vodran in the Si’klaata Cluster. He also abandons the use of most of his living forces, preferring instead to construct war droids to fight for him.*

*NOTE: Geonosis and the Outer Rim Worlds puts this battle five years before the Third Battle of Vontor, Xim’s final defeat.
25,104 BBY
- One year after his defeat at the First Battle of Vontor, Daritha Xim (the Despot) challenges Kossak the Hutt to another ritual battle at Vontor. Kossak, unable to refuse this unprecedented use of Hutt ritual by a non-Hutt without losing face, agrees. At this Second Battle of Vontor, Xim loses the last of his biological troops, the Duinarbulon Star Lancers, in a surface battle, but this buys him time to have his war droids mine more kiirium and armor his ships with it. Unlike in the First Battle of Vontor, these droids are not affected by the frailties of biological eyes and are not blinded by reflections from their own ships. They give up Vontor, making this battle a loss for Xim, but their escape path blasts through many of Kossak’s ships, and they escape with a great deal of kiirium to use in further armoring of warships.*

(conjecture based on The History of Xim and the Tion Cluster and The Despotica)*

*NOTE: Geonosis and the Outer Rim Worlds puts the First Battle of Vontor five years before the Third Battle of Vontor. This Second Battle of Vontor is said to be one year after the first (thus four years before the second) in The History of Xim and the Tion Cluster.

25,103 BBY
- In the period between the Second and Third Battles of Vontor, Xim is informed that Hutt raiders are in the Kiirium Reaches, working against him. His own warlords warn him that he should give up further conquest and solidify his own holdings, just as his father, Xer VIII, did after defeat by the Livien League. He considers this treason and punishes them, but he buys time by officially withdrawing the Tionese from Moralan, though there will remain enough people on Moralan to attempt a rebellion against the Hutts (which has already happened once on Moralan) in the future.

(conjecture based on The History of Xim and the Tion Cluster)

25,100 BBY
- When Xim the Despot tries to create rebellion against the Hutts in the Moralan system, Boonta the Hutt is called in to respond. On the night before invading Moralan, he calls together his kin, retainers, and slaves, to whom he proclaims the Hutts as rightful rulers of the galaxy over humanoids. This event becomes the basis for the Boonta’s Eve holiday, a night known for the Hutt slaves renewing their vows to the Hutts. The next day, Boonta’s forces invade Moralan, crushing the Moralan Parliament and sterilizing the world as a warning to any other slave species that may try to join Xim against the Hutts. Boonta then takes back Ko Vari, where podraces are held in celebration (which will later come to be associated with Boonta’s Eve celebrations). He then goes on to lead Hutt forces in the Third Battle of Vontor. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Essential Guide to Warfare)

- Xim the Despot’s reign ends after 30 standard timeparts when, at the Third Battle of Vontor, Kossak and his fellow Hutts kill him and seize control of his vast criminal organization.

(conjecture based on Han Solo and the Lost Legacy)

- In the wake of the Third Battle of Vontor, Xim lives out his last days as a slave to the Hutts. His legendary starship Deathknell has been destroyed in the battle. Some say he was blinded as well.

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare and The History of Xim and the Tion Cluster)

- In the wake of the Third Battle of Vontor, hundreds of Xim the Despot’s war droids are taken by the Hutts as trophies. The only war droids known to have survived the battle and not been taken by the Hutts were among a group of 1,000 war droids aboard the Queen of Ranroon that will guard the Queen of Ranroon’s treasure on Dellalt until shortly before the Battle of Yavin.

(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)

- The Nikto and Vodrans enter into permanent servitude to the Hutts via the Treaty of Vontor. The Klatooinians quickly sign on as well, spurred on by Klatooinian leader Barada M’Beg. As part of their side of the treaty, the Hutts are to protect the Fountain of the Ancients (soon known as the Fountain of the Hutt Ancients) on Klatooine.

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Alien Species and Allies)

- In the wake of the Third Battle of Vontor, Xim’s empire splinters into multiple successor states, which then further fragment into squabbling kingdoms. Slave cultures for the Hutts start picking off Tionese resources, one by one.

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

- According to some accounts, a heretofore unknown alien race, the original inventors of hyperdrive technology, enters the Corellian system and sells the hyperdrive technology to the Corellians. (In truth, the hyperdrive is created by a think tank of humans and Duros, using backwards engineered Rakatan technology over the next 100 years.)*

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Alien Species and The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*

*NOTE: Some sources say that hyperdrive is developed by the Corellians 25,000 BBY, while others, like the New Essential Guide to Alien Species dates it here, 100 years earlier. Given that we now know that this is backwards engineering of Rakatan technology, I’m assuming that both are somewhat correct (since both are “circa” dating) and am considering this an ongoing process that spans the period between the two dates.

- Around the same time that the Corellians are introduced to the concepts behind hyperdrive technology (presumably when they are being introduced to the Rakatan technology they will backwards engineer), the Duros are also introduced to the same kind of hyperdrive technology.*

(conjecture based on Star Wars Annual 2008)*

*NOTE: All information from Pedigree Books’ Star Wars Annual 2008 was submitted by Luke Van Horn.

- Kaikielius is colonized by settlers from the Core.

(conjecture based on Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Praji: A Cartel of Genes)*

*NOTE: This happens between the fall of the Rakatan “Infinite Empire” and the founding of the Galactic Republic. No more concrete date is specified.

- Around this time, Borte Belgoth commissions construction of hyperspace beacons, which include one that will become known as “Belgoth’s Beacon,” one of the Twenty Wonders of the Galaxy, located on the Perlemian Trade Route. It is sculpted to include the faces of a Columi, a cacodemom, and an Alderaanian molator. It will be destroyed later during the Second Alsakan Conflict.

(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

The Essential Guide to Warfare [continued] (essential guide: Jason Fry & Paul R. Urquhart)

The Essential Guide to Warfare [continued] (essential guide: Jason Fry & Paul R. Urquhart)

Before the Republic [continued]

War Portrait: Boonta the Hutt

25,053+ BBY

- At some point, presumably before the birth of the Republic, the Silentium (a starfruit-shaped sentient race in another galaxy that we are led to believe may actually be the Yuuzhan Vong’s home galaxy, hence much of their later distaste for technology and droids in particular) develops droids in their own image. When a radiation storm exterminates the entire Silentium species, the droids remain, carrying on the Silentium civilization as a new droid culture. Soon, the orderly Silentium is challenged by another droid society, the chaotic Abominor. The two societies engage in a massive war in which their galaxy’s dominant organic species is crushed in the crossfire. Eventually, the galaxy’s organic species finally rise up against the Silentium and Abominor and drive them from the galaxy. The Silentium eventually make their way to the “galaxy far, far away” (er, the Star Wars galaxy) and settle in the Unknown Regions. Eventually, they will create new droid “children” to act as scouts to study the galaxy around them. One of these will be the droid Vuffi Raa.
25,053 BBY

- The so-called Expansionist Period begins. (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi)
- The Duros civilization enters its Golden Age under the rule of Queen Rana Mas Trehalt. This golden age will include being a founding member of the Republic. (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Planets and Moons and Suns of Fortune)
- The Corellians succeed in backwards engineering the propulsion systems of Rakatan starships from the defunct Infinite Empire into a new “hyperdrive” that does not depend upon the Force. This “invention” of the hyperdrive is often referred to as being given to the Corellians by an ancient race, but was not so much given as “left behind to be rediscovered.” (conjecture based on The Saga of Nomi Sunrider, Tyrant’s Test, and The New Essential Chronology)
- As the Corellians begin exploring their neighboring systems, so do the Herglics. (conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)
- Beginning with the earliest days of hyperspace travel, rumors begin to circulate about the mysterious planet Iego, believed to exist within the luminous nebulae pocket known as the Extrictarium. The planet seems to exist outside of normal spacetime, allowing those drawn there to live on long after their time, bringing together people of all eras. Among the natives of Iego are the so-called “Angels” (the Diathim) and “Demons” (Maelibus). * (conjecture based on Geonosis and the Outer Rim Worlds)*

*NOTE: Since “space angels” are referred to in Into the Void, there may be a connection between an earlier myth or creature and the nickname given to the Diathim.

- The Mining Guild, a quasi-political body is formed in the early days of space exploration, and may even pre-date the formation of the Old Republic. Most historians agree that the guild originated in the Core, but are unsure of its exact origin. (conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse, Crimson Empire II, and Star Wars: Episode V—“The Empire Strikes Back” via TimeTales, verbatim)
- The Old Republic is formed, and with it come the Galactic Senate, Galactic (or Republic) Constitution (drafted by an Organa from Alderaan and including the Rights of Sentience that outlaw slavery), Senate Library, galactic standard time measuring, Republic Spacelane Bureau, and so on.* (conjecture based on several sources, including A Guide to the Star Wars Universe, Second Edition, The Old Republic Encyclopedia, and the Episode I Visual Dictionary)*

*NOTE: Bill Slavicsek (of A Guide to the Star Wars Universe) was apparently the first to conjecture a date for the birth of the Old Republic in print. The date was given (and accepted for decades) as 25,000 BBY. (For the record, I believe the 25,000 figure simply derived from Kenobi’s “for over a thousand generations” line, and the assumption that a generation is between 20 and 25 years in the SW galaxy.) With the publication of Dawn of the Jedi, a new date derived from The Old Republic’s website timeline (21,400 BTC) was finally confirmed to be, presumably, more accurate. Now, the Republic is formed 53 years earlier, here in 25,053 BBY. I have tried to resequence dates as necessary, since so many were relative to the Republic’s founding.
- The planet Corfai, settled by a sleeper ship from Coruscant a long time ago and thus one of the first human-colonized worlds, does not have representatives at the Galactic Constitution Conference. Coruscanti will claim that the world is basically a colony of Coruscant and thus did not need a delegation. The Corfai government claims that representatives were sent but never arrived, and the Galactic Constitution was developed in the time it took for a replacement delegation to be sent. (conjecture based on Suns of Fortune)
- Smaller powers, such as those ruled by warlords, who choose to join the Republic, rather than fighting it become known as Allied Regions. Leaders of these regions become known as Moffs or Grand Moffs, titles that Emperor Palpatine will revive near the end of the Clone Wars. (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
- Governor Tyler Sapius Praji, ruler of Kaikielius, is a signer of the Galactic Constitution, which creates the Republic. (conjecture based on Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Praji: A Cartel of Genes) Devaron becomes one of the earliest members of the Republic.
(conjecture based on Nexus of Power)

The Old Republic is, for the most part, delineated as a region in this era that lies between the Perlemian Trade Route and the Corellian Run, both of which are only recently established.*
(conjecture based on Star Wars Annual 2008)*

*NOTE: All information from Pedigree Books’ Star Wars Annual 2008 was submitted by Luke Van Horn.

Basic becomes the galactic standard language.
(conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi and use of Basic in earliest Star Wars stories)

With the establishment of the Republic credit (or datari), the Republic turns to the InterGalactic Banking Clan as its guarantor.
(conjecture based on Geonosis and the Outer Rim Worlds)

As the Old Republic comes to power and makes galactic civilization possible (thanks to the hyperdrive), blasters, which are believed to have first been developed on Coruscant, begin to proliferate across the galaxy.
(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Weapons and Technology)

As the Old Republic comes to power, one of its earliest members is the planet Thisspias and its native Thisspiasians, who, as an ancient warrior race, help to protect the fledgling Republic from threats both external and internal.
(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Alien Species)

Alderaan becomes an early member of the Old Republic. Its High Council becomes the legislative body for the entire planet, while the High Court becomes the royal house that presides over the High Council.
(conjecture based on Coruscant and the Core Worlds)

By this time, the Force, a mystical energy field created by all life, is being studied on various worlds, including Had Abbadon and Ondos, among people as diverse as the paladins of the Chatos Academy, the Followers of Palawa, and the order of Dal Bendu. (However, it was on the planet Tython, over a millennia ago, that the study of the Force truly began to shape galactic history, as in the case of the Force War and the creation of the Jedi Order.) As the Jedi of Tython began to branch out to help in conflicts on various worlds, their warriors became known as Jedi Knights. By this time, Jedi philosophy has taken root on Ossus, where further study determines that the Force has both a Light Side and Dark Side, and that it has two aspects, the Living Force and the Unifying Force.
(conjecture based on The New Essential Chronology)

The Jedi Archives are first created.*
(conjecture based on Shatterpoint)*

*NOTE: This assumes that the Jedi Archives were created on Ossus. If they were created on Tython, then this event would occur much sooner.

Ancient Taung Shadow Warriors of Dha Werda Verda legend relocate from Coruscant to the planet Roon.

In the early days of the Republic, the government takes steps to ensure the safety and status of Oaka Prime as a wildlife preserve, as it was during the days of the Rakatan Infinite Empire.
(conjecture based on A Shattered Hope)

In the early days of the Republic, a Corellian Jedi pilot named Taradon becomes known as an ace pilot, particularly through the use of what becomes known as Taradon’s Helm, a Force-imbued helmet that can link with virtually any ship to make it easier to control instinctively. The Helm also enhances the pilot’s courage. While chasing down criminals, he repeatedly tries to capture his former Padawan (now a criminal), Deelguh. When he finally attempts to do so when Deelguh is trying to get to the surface of Ilum to steal kyber crystals, Taradon decides to sacrifice himself by colliding his starfighter with Deelguh’s to end his former Padawan’s exploits. The ships do indeed crash, but the wreckage of Taradon’s ship is never found. Transmitted flight logs reveal a power surge in the navicomputer right before Taradon’s apparent death, suggesting that Taradon or the Helm itself may have jumped to hyperspace at the last second while within Ilum’s atmosphere. Thus, Taradon’s helm is thought by some to be lost on Ilum, while others believe it lost somewhere else in the galaxy.
The Star Wars Timeline Gold: Legends Timeline, Vol. 1

25,053 – 24,000 BBY

- During the early days of the Republic, the Czerka Corporation (known then as Czerka Mining and Industrial) is formed.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Weapons and Technology)
- During the early days of the Old Republic, Jedi Sar Agorn has his memories and knowledge implanted into a holocron.
  (conjecture based on Power of the Jedi Sourcebook)
- During the early days of the Old Republic, the native Aleena and Kindalo of Aleen engage in all-out war. As a result of this war, a truce separates the above-ground Aleena from the underground Kindalo, using the Great Seal to close the main pathway between these realms, and the Aleena choose a low technology lifestyle to prevent further cataclysmic conflict.
  (conjecture based on Nexus of Power)
- Sometime after the Jedi Order is founded, they begin receiving funds from the Republic Senate in return for their rather autonomous services.
  (conjecture based on Power of the Jedi Sourcebook)
- Reda Jalooz, a young student of the Force, steals an heirloom of the Kashi Mer monarchy. Realizing that the relic seems to be a focusing agent for the Dark Side, Jalooz breaks its spell over her and returns to the Kashi monarchy, telling them she has learned a dark secret from the heirloom she stole. She seeks forgiveness. Very soon after the relic is returned to Kashi, the system’s star goes supernova. The planet, its ancient culture, and Jalooz herself are destroyed.
  (conjecture based on Relic)
- In the early days of the Old Republic, the colony ship Sevari Cabal is lost in space. It is later assumed that this ship made it to Sevarcos and that its passengers became the ancestors of the Sevari clans that would exist during the time of the Galactic Empire.
  (conjecture based on The Free-Trader’s Guide to Sevarcos)
- During this era, planetary security forces become the predominant military arrangement among the Republic worlds.
  (conjecture based on Rebellion Era Sourcebook)
- The Prajii, Vahalii, and Juonii become enemies (later legend attributes this to a doctrinal dispute), but as the most prominent and influential families of Kaikielius are collectively referred to as the Triad.*
  (conjecture based on Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Praji: A Cartel of Genes)*

*NOTE: This happens sometime in the first millennium of the Republic, but nothing more specific is ever said.

- With the development of the hyperdrive and the formation of the Republic, the Republic ends the use of andris spice in space travel. It had previously been used to alleviate the symptoms of hibernation sickness from the use of carbonite freezing for long journeys.
  (conjecture based on Fly Casual)

25,043 BBY

- Ten years after the founding of the Republic, a standard calendar is put in place that marks this year as its starting point. It will remain in use until at least the era of the Treaty of Coruscant (when, presumably, the Treaty of Coruscant calendar is put into more common use).*
  (conjecture based on The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural)

*NOTE: Even though the Republic is now founded 21,400 BTC, which converts to 25,053 BBY (since the Treaty of Coruscant is in 3,653 BBY), the dates in The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural put the Treaty of Coruscant in 21,390 on its digital calendar, which converts to 25,043 (not 25,053) BBY. This is the best explanation I can assume for this incongruity.

25,032 BBY

- The Cthons begin to evolve on Coruscant.
  (conjecture based on Shadow Hunter via TimeTales, paraphrased)
25,022 BBY
- The son of the Shykrill family on Sarcophagus dies. Three years later, the family will have another son, Cope Shykrill, who will possibly communicate with the spirit of the dead older brother that he will never meet in person.*
  (conjecture based on Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)
*NOTE: This assumes that the story that Sar Agorn relates in this year about the nature of “shadows” is based on fairly recent events with Cope Shykrill, so that Cope’s death is also in 25,000 BBY. It also assumes that him being a “boy” can be rounded to being 10 years old at the time he heads off for Jedi training, 9 years prior to his death. That being the case, this is three years before his birth.

25,020 BBY
- TCW DATE: Around this time or shortly before, the Jedi droid Huyang begins training Jedi.*
  (conjecture based on A Necessary Bond)
*NOTE: In A Necessary Bond, he refers to having trained Jedi for over 1,000 generations, which is usually interpreted in Star Wars as being 25 years per generation.

25,019 BBY
- Cope Shykrill is born on Sarcophagus.*
  (conjecture based on Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)
*NOTE: This assumes that the story that Sar Agorn relates in this year about the nature of “shadows” is based on fairly recent events with Cope Shykrill, so that Cope’s death is also in 25,000 BBY. It also assumes that him being a “boy” can be rounded to being 10 years old at the time he heads off for Jedi training, 9 years prior to his death.

25,009 BBY
- The Jedi Order discovers Cope Shykrill on Sarcophagus when reports come in of a young boy helping to move coffins into graves with the Force. Cope is taken to train as a Jedi.*
  (conjecture based on Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)
*NOTE: This assumes that the story that Sar Agorn relates in this year about the nature of “shadows” is based on fairly recent events with Cope Shykrill, so that Cope’s death is also in 25,000 BBY.

25,001 BBY
- Jedi student Cope Shykrill tries out Jedi Nuck Lyu’s new bladed weapon, showing amazing accuracy with the device. This unnerves Nuck, who notes that it should not be possible without something unnatural going on, given how long it took Nuck, its designer, to master it. This is the first sign that something may be “off” with Cope.*
  (conjecture based on Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)
*NOTE: This assumes that the story that Sar Agorn relates in this year about the nature of “shadows” is based on fairly recent events with Cope Shykrill, so that Cope’s death is also in 25,000 BBY.

25,000 BBY
- The remnants of Xim the Despot’s empire finally break into feuding states, including: the Kingdom of Cron; the Jaminere Marches; the Indrexu Confederation; the Keldrath Alignment; the Thanium Worlds; and the Honorable Union of Deservo and Tion.
  (conjecture based on Geonosis and the Outer Rim Worlds)
- A Ssi-ruuk vessel crashes on Garos IV, during what appears to be an early foray beyond the Ssi-Ruuk star cluster.
  (conjecture based on Charlene Newcomb’s website)
- Jedi student Cope Shykrill performs a shadowplay for younger Jedi trainees. He relates a story of a Good Brother and Bad Brother. He does this with shadow puppets, which causes older Jedi Sar Agorn to have a brief flare of jealousy because his species has no appendages. When Agorn returns to his quarters to consider this briefly, cries are heard from where the play was taking place. One of the trainees has taken one of Nuck Lyu’s bladed weapons and attacked the other trainees and Cope, saying that he is being driven by voices he calls “shadows” (the lure of the Dark Side). Weeks later, Cope is finally recovered somewhat, and he discusses the “shadows” with Agorn. He then tries to use the “shadows” to kill Agorn, but Agorn has had the foresight to call Nuck Lyu back from Esseles, and Nuck kills Cope before he can kill Agorn. In the wake of these events, Agorn goes to Sarcophagus to report on Cope’s death to his parents. He also tests the theory that the Good Brother in Cope’s story was Cope himself, and the Bad Brother he interacted with was his own sibling. Cope’s parents reveal that, yes, Cope had an older brother, but that brother died three years before Cope was born. Agorn wonders whether Cope’s brother’s spirit has lingered in the Force, conversing somehow with Cope.*

*NOTE: This assumes that the story that Sar Agorn relates in this year about the nature of “shadows” is based on fairly recent events with Cope Shykrill. We have no indication of exactly when the situation takes place regarding Shykrill.

- The Duros civilization begins exploring beyond their own solar system. After a while, several groups of Duros will find themselves outside of mainstream Duros society and continue evolving and developing societies on their own. One of these near-Duros offshoots will come to begin their own society on Neimoidia and become known as Neimoidians.*

*NOTE: The EGAS seems confused about this issue. In its timeline, it places the event at 15,000 BBY, but speaks of 25,000 years of separate Neimoidian history in the Neimoidian entry. I chose to simply use the earlier date. Fortunately, The Essential Atlas later came along and pinned it down to that earlier date. It is by 15,000 BBY that the Neimoidians and Duros were considered different species.

- Around this time, explorers from Corellia and Drall arrive on Talus and Tralus, where they discover the remnants of the society of slave humans and Drall that were brought there by the Rakatans. This saves the people of Talus and Tralus from the decline they have experienced over the last two centuries.

*NOTE: This event occurs 21,300 BTC.

- The Dark Side

24,953 BBY

- The Jedi Order formally joins the Republic.*

*NOTE: This event occurs 21,300 BTC.

24,900 BBY

- After about a century, control of Vagran is turned back over to politicians and administrators. The scientists who have been in charge for the last century have managed to lead colonists in becoming hardier and more able to handle the environmental challenges of the beautiful world.

24,500 BBY

- Nar Shaddaa finally becomes totally covered by a multi-story city, like a miniature, scummy, version of Coruscant.

(Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force (essential guide: Ryder Windham) The Dark Side)
• At some point prior to meeting Arden Lyn and forming the Legions of Lettow, Jedi Knight Xendor encounters the Ones, speaking with the Father, Son, and Daughter. He will one day share the story of his encounter with Arden Lyn, telling her that what they said did not matter, so much as that they showed him that any philosophy that touches on the heart of the Force is true, no matter what specifics it might believe.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

• Follower of Palawa (a Force tradition) Arden Lyn is invested as a Steel Hand of Palawa, an expert in teras kasi. She travels to Pelgrin to learn her fortune from the Oracle, who tells her to travel to Ossus and of a man she will meet there and make her master. She does so, knowing that Ossus is the home to the Jedi Order. There, she meets the man she was destined to meet, a Kashi Mer exile and master of the Breath (the Force) named Xendor. Xendor is increasingly concerned about how the Jedi are starting to push away divergent Force traditions to focus on their own dogma, which is seen as the influence of the Caamasi in Jedi affairs. He first spends time with Arden to learn about teras kasi, but they soon become lovers. He seeks the Order’s permission to create a new academy based on the study of other Force traditions, such as that of the Dai Bendu, Kel Dor sages, Kashi Mer, Palawa, and so on. They refuse, and he leaves the Jedi Order to found his academy on his own terms. Arden goes with him, and they set up their new academy with other like-minded individuals on Lettow. These followers and students come to refer to themselves as the Legions of Lettow, taking the name “Legions” because they were ready to defend their academy if necessary against the Jedi. They Jedi, seeing this divergence of views and the studying of “forbidden” ideas as Xendor and the Legions of Lettow falling to the Dark Side, the Jedi form an army to take on the Legions of Lettow. The Legions, led by Xendor as a reluctant general, strike at Ossus in an attempt to solve the conflict before it can spread, but it does not work. The conflict grows and moves into the Core Worlds. The Jedi present themselves to the Republic as peacekeepers trying to take down a rebellious threat, while the Legions attempt to convince the Republic that the Jedi seek their own political power. With the help of other armies, the Jedi close in on Xendor at Columus, where the traveling (i.e. not tied to Ossus) yet ideological idealistic Awdrysta Pina, the “Green Blade” and leader of the Jedi forces, leads a Battle Meditation that allows the Jedi and their army to destroy the Legions of Lettow’s forces on the world, including Xendor, whom Pina killing himself. (For his part, Xendor allows his spirit to fleet into the Dark, rather than be consumed by Pina’s Morichro Force use that would have absorbed it.)
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

• On Columus, the last surviving Jedi left on the battlefield as the Jedi forces move on to Lettow is Jedi Apprentice Danzigorro Potts, who records a final message to the Jedi leadership, suggesting that those who they have been fighting perhaps had reasons for doing so. Perhaps without a single enemy to focus the Jedi against, the Jedi will always come to fight amongst themselves. (To be continued below . . . )
  (Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)

• The Jedi then turn to Xendor’s school on Lettow itself and attack, but the remaining members of the Legions of Lettow are able to hold off the Jedi long enough to scatter into the galaxy and head away from Republic borders. Arden Lyn, now heartbroken but determined, escapes along secret paths discovered by Xendor himself, beyond Kitel Phard, but Awdrysta Pina follows and corners her on Irkalla. Drawing upon the power of a Kashi Mer talisman that Xendor gave her, she focuses all of her rage and sorrows to blast Pina, causing his Force-imbued sword blade to shatter and slash into his own body. As he lay dying, Awdrysta Pina uses Morichro to grab onto Arden’s life force and send her into a state of suspended animation, from which she would not emerge for over 24 millennia. The First Great Schism, as it will be known, is over.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

• In the wake of the First Great Schism, those Jedi who delve into the Dark Side or otherwise defy the Jedi Council are persecuted for their beliefs. Instead, these “Fallen” Jedi begin studying their darker arts in secret. This will last for approximately seventeen millennia until the outbreak of the Second Great Schism.
  (conjecture based on Heritage of the Sith)
• In the wake of the First Great Schism, a monument to fallen Jedi is created on Ossus, known as the Eye of Ashlanae. It becomes an important site for Jedi pilgrimages.
  (conjecture based on Nexus of Power)

The First Dark Legion

24,100 BBY

• Occasional scouting parties of Selonian warriors who are sent out to patrol the surface of Selonia finally make contact with their neighbors, in the form of Corellian and Drall teams that are surveying and otherwise making use of the world’s surface.*
  (conjecture based on Suns of Fortune)*

*NOTE: This is “nearly a thousand years after the collapse of the Infinite Empire and the rise of the Galactic Republic,” so the latter event means that this must be a little earlier than 24,053 BBY, which I have rounded to 24,100 BBY.

24,000 BBY

• The Old Republic colonists begin moving outward from the Core Worlds and into the area that will come to be called the Colonies.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Planets and Moons)

• An early precursor to the HoloNet, a network of hypertranceivers, is created, allowing for Internet-like contact between worlds.
  (conjecture based on Star Wars: The Roleplaying Game)

• Hosk Station is built as a military way-station between the Core Worlds and Colonies.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Vehicles and Vessels)

• When the Republic finally makes contact with the Tionese, the fractured Tion states see an opportunity to take advantage of the Republic’s peaceful intentions and better technology. They begin capturing Republic ships to use Republic technology (such as improved hyperdrives) to augment and update their own stagnant technology. Desevro, formerly the planet leading the Livien League, spread out across Tion space, merging with various pirate gangs to form the Honorable Union of Desevro and Tion, who then form alliances with the Kingdom of Cron, potentates of the Jaminere Marches, and the Thanium Dominion. As they prepare for war with the Republic, the Republic seems oblivious. Even the warnings of the Jedi, virtually forgotten aside from the warfare of the First Great Schism, seem not to move the Republic to action. Soon, the Tionese attack the Republic, catching it off-guard and forcing it to move swiftly to build its own military might, even as casualties mount. The Tionese War has begun, turning the Perlemian Trade Route into a battle corridor.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

• With humans at war again (the Republic and the Tionese), the Hutts believe they are seeing a clan war that will result in one winner absorbing the other into an even more powerful human force. To keep themselves safe from this possible menace, the Hutts invoke the terms of the Third Battle of Vontor and exterminate every Tionese within the borders of the old Kiirium Reach, vaporizing settlements, bombarding and poisoning worlds, and otherwise wiping out those remnants of the old empire of Xim the Despot. This event becomes known as “the Devouring.”
  (conjecture based on The History of Xim and the Tion Cluster)*

*NOTE: This event is a little odd. It happens as a result of the conflict between the Tionese and the Republic, yet the text The History of Xim and the Tion Cluster would seem to place it in 24,500 BBY, five hundred years before The Essential Atlas puts the Tionese and Republic at war in this year. I have placed it here because we also see a date of circa 24,000 BBY for “the Devouring and the Tionese War” as a label to one of the maps in the Xim article. (In other words, the article contradicts itself, so I’m sticking with the date that doesn’t also contradict the Atlas.)

23,900 BBY
With the Republic’s full might and the Jedi Order standing against the Tionese, the tide of the Tionese War has turned against the Honorable Union of Desevro and Tion. The Tionese continue to fight on, embracing even suicide tactics, because they believe their culture faces extinction. Finally, all of the major Tionese worlds fall to Republic pressure bombs, until only Desevro remains. Desevro offers unconditional surrender, but the Republic refuses to accept and sterilizes Desevro as a lesson to the rest of the Tionese. With this, the Tionese War ends, but the Jedi Order is so shocked at this barbarism that they break with the war effort at the end. However, they agree to serve as watchmen on the boarders with Tionese space to protect from future incursions, though such is not necessary – the Tionese are broken. Within a few centuries, the Tionese worlds will join the Republic. With the Tionese War over, the Republic will finally disband its standing military, leaving only a small military to patrol the frontier. As for the Jedi Order, the Republic’s expansion has reached Ossus, so they take a more active role in the affairs of the galaxy at large.*

(Conjecture based on The Essential Atlas and The Essential Guide to Warfare)

*NOTE: This event is suggested to be around 24,000 BBY, but then the start of the conflict is noted more specifically in the same book a while later as being in 24,000 BBY, with the conflict lasting a century, which must put this event here. This coincides with the idea of the Tionese joining the Republic in this year, as noted on the “Origins of the Jedi” map in the Atlas.

As the Republic-Tionese conflicts end, Raxus Prime’s importance greatly diminished.

(Conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

22,800 BBY

- A Jedi scout, following the Force, reaches Ilum, which becomes a secret, hard to find source of Jedi lightsaber crystals made of kathracite, mephite, and pontite.

(Conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

22,000 BBY

- Nubia is found to have massive subterranean aquifers, which allows it to be terraformed into what becomes a major agricultural world in the Corellian Sector. The world enters into a period of 22,000 years of relative peace.

(Conjecture based on Suns of Fortune The Essential Atlas)

20,100 BBY

- Roni von Wasaki, Jedi Knight, spends much of his time in the frontier sectors, establishing and maintaining order. Eventually, a crime boss places a 100,000 credit bounty on him. Bounty hunter Leshy Drobo and his assassin droid, XT-8, succeed where others fail and freeze Wasaki in carbonite. However, Wasaki is able to use the Force to remain conscious and keep his mind focused. He mind tricks Drobo into trying to release him, but XT-8 intervenes before Drobo is finished. A firefight ensues and Drobo is killed. During the fight, the hyperdrive is damaged and the ship reverts to realspace. The droid isn’t programmed for repair, so it simply continues on toward its destination at sublight speed.*

(Conjecture based on Disturbance in the Force)

*NOTE: This event is set “more than 20,000 years” prior to Disturbance in the Force. I have rounded to 20,100 BBY.

- By this time, most of the Slice in the Colonies and Inner Rim have been settled.

(Conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

20,019 BBY

- A temple in the Rakatan style is built on Rhen Var, possibly by the Tionese or a faction from one of the Empress Teta sleeper ships. It will be found 20,000 years later by Levat, Keth, and Janese while on an expedition.*

(Conjecture based on Enter the Unknown)

*NOTE: This is 20,000 years prior to the story bits found in this sourcebook, which seem to be dated, based on a timestamp, in 19 BBY.

20,000 BBY
• The Republic enters the Great Manifest period (20,000 – 17,000 BBY).
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
• Alderaan Royal Engineers, Core Galaxy Systems, Corellian Engineering Corporation, and Rendili StarDrive, the galaxy’s first major starship manufacturing companies, are formed.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Vehicles and Vessels)
• The Etti race rises in rejection to the policies of the Old Republic and leaves the Core Worlds behind in an attempt to remove themselves from the Republic. They settle Etti IV and Etti V.
  (conjecture based on Shadows of the Empire Sourcebook and The Essential Atlas)
• The Drall become part of the galactic community when traders arrive from along the Corellian Trade Spine. It is during this time that the Drall build their first domed cities with photo-sensitive transparisteel to keep off-world traders comfortable while protecting the light-sensitive Drall at the same time. Once Drall is visited by these off-worlders, the Boiling Sea becoming a major tourist resort.
  (conjecture based on Alien Anthology and Suns of Fortune)
• Around this time, Selonia is mapped and surveyed by Corellians and Drallish scholars. For the most part, though, the Selonians keep to themselves underground.
  (conjecture based on Suns of Fortune)

19,997 BBY
• The planet Neona experiences a period of immense global warming, during which its polar ice caps melt, flooding the entire planet except for two ice-covered continents at the poles.
  (conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)

19,989 BBY
• The earliest Kooroo shrines are built.
  (conjecture based on From the Files of Corellia Antilles)

19,000 BBY
• The Kaminoans of Kamino live on a world trapped in an ice age. At this point, climate change begins, causing ice formations to melt over the next two centuries.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
• Around this time, some twenty millennia before the Battle of Yavin, the Kaminoans, masters of genetic engineering, create the Xexto species (possibly with some Kaminoan DNA) to be laborers on Troiken in the spice mines in service to the Hutts.
  (conjecture based on Stay on Target)

18,800 BBY
• By this time, climate change on Kamino has caused every landmass on Kamino to now be underwater.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

18,780 BBY
• The Shawken Spire, one of the Twenty Wonders of the Galaxy, is destroyed. It will later be replaced by a re-creation.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

18,000 BBY
• The Bureau of Ships and Services is created.
  (conjecture based on Platt’s Starport Guide)
• The Quilan Hive of the Qieg species is formed on Lan Barell.
  (conjecture based on Lan Barell)

17,522 BBY
• Around this time, the Korunnai of Haruun Kal begin breeding grassers to be docile.*
17,018 BBY
- The First Alsakan Conflict (the first of seventeen!) begins for dominance in the Republic between Coruscant and Alsakan, which developed due to Republic trade along the Corellian Run and the Perlemian Trade Route, respectively. At this time, Alsakan leads the Axis worlds in blocking the Grand Companies (the Spin’s greatest trading conglomerates) in their expansion (since the Alsakani themselves were expanding in that general direction). Duros traders begin clashing with Alsakani warships, and the Republic jumps in on the side of the Grand Companies, turning a trade war into a shooting war.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas and The Essential Guide to Warfare)
- During the First Alsakan Conflict, House Juoni of Kaikielius is destroyed due to their siding with Alsakan against Coruscant, leaving Kaikielius to Houses Praji and Vahali.
  (conjecture based on Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Praji: A Cartel of Genes)
- The Republic assaults and conquers Virujansi as part of the First Alsakan Conflict.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

17,012 BBY
- The Alsakani liberate Virujansi as part of the First Alsakan Conflict.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

17,000 – 15,000 BBY
- During the Indecta era, the earliest assassin droids operate on behalf of the Republic Judicial Department.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)

17,000 BBY
- The galaxy enters the so-called Indecta era as the Great Manifest era ends.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids and The Essential Atlas)

16,950 BBY
- Rogue Arkanian scientists terraform the Quermia system. They transplant Xexto from Troiken to be experimented upon. This creates the Quermian society that will develop independent of the Xexto society over the next 10,000 years.*
  (conjecture based on Alien Anthology)*
  *NOTE: This takes place almost 17,000 years before the Alien Anthology’s “present,” 25 ABY. The New Essential Guide to Alien Species uses a date of “circa 17,000” BBY, so this more specific date still fits, given that putting it at 17,000 BBY would actually make it more than 17,000 years before Alien Anthology’s present.

16,921 BBY
- The Battle of Kes occurs as part of the First Alsakan Conflict. It is a tactical draw due to the hyperspace minefields set up by both sides.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

16,900 BBY
- Around this time, the Sanctum of Sakkra-Kla, a Sith tomb on Korriban that holds the Holocron of King Nakgru, is sealed, not to be disturbed until Sorzus Syn opens the tomb 10,000 years from now.
  (conjecture based on Book of Sith)

16,820 BBY
- The First Siege of Porus Vida occurs as part of the First Alsakan Conflict.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)
16,800 BBY
- The Siege of Belasco occurs as part of the First Alsakan Conflict.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

16,782 BBY
- The Celebratus Archive of Obroa-skai is founded.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

16,700 BBY
- The First Alsakan Conflict ends when the Bureau of Ships and Services threatens to deny access to the hyperlanes to both sides if the war continued, since they controlled the beacon system that both sides depended upon for hyperspace travel.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas and The Essential Guide to Warfare)
- After the first Alsakan Conflicts, the Republic abandons its previous Senate representation by sectors under the “rule of 50” (no more than 50 inhabited systems per sector, since larger sectors could have formed into breakaway empires), which had grown enormous. Instead, it adopts the notion of a seated and unseated Senate, with members of the former having full rights of address and members of the latter having to petition for those rights. This will also become unruly, since unseated members will begin trading their votes and influence for chances to speak, backed by seated members. Exceptions are also made for some Core systems to keep their power, and a compromise rule is created to allow any society to petition to address the Senate. Furthermore, groups that were not within Republic jurisdiction (such as small colonies outside of Republic borders) could receive nonvoting representation, so long as those groups acknowledged Republic ideals. This comes to be known as the Challat Compromise.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas and The Essential Guide to Warfare)
- Corellia, sympathetic to Alsakan but with strong commercial ties to Coruscant, inserts a clause into the Republic’s Galactic Constitution known as Contemplanys Hermi, which would give Corellia the right to recuse itself from the Republic if the Republic (well, Coruscant) and Alsakan resumed hostilities.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas and The Essential Guide to Warfare)

16,200 BBY
- The Second Alsakan Conflict begins.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

16,100 BBY
- The Second Siege of Porus Vida occurs as part of the Second Alsakan Conflict.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

16,000 BBY
- The Gizer Campaign occurs as part of the Second Alsakan Conflict.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)
- The Core Campaigns occur as part of the Second Alsakan Conflict.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

15,762 BBY
- Future holowright (famous for writing Xim at Vontor) Peshosloc is born.
  (conjecture based on The Despotica)

15,609 BBY
- Holowright (famous for writing Xim at Vontor) Peshosloc dies.
  (conjecture based on The Despotica)
15,550 BBY
- Scouts from the Republic stumble across a nest of Star Dragons near Murkhana. A misunderstanding results in the conflict known as the Dui nuo gwuin Contention, during which Star Dragons lay waste to Coruscant until Supreme Chancellor Fillorean brokers peace.*
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)*
*NOTE: The Essential Atlas puts this 50 years later, in 15,500 BBY.

15,480 BBY
- The Strontium Raid on Abhean occurs as part of the Second Alsakan Conflict.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

15,400 BBY
- The Second Alsakan Conflict ends.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

15,100 BBY
- The Anomid race develops hyperspace travel.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 12: Aliens--"Enemies and Allies")
- Republic Sienar Systems begins providing starships and equipment for the Old Republic.*
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Weapons and Technology)*
*NOTE: The NEGW&T says that they provided starships and equipment for the Old Republic for more than 15,000 years, which I’m assuming dates backwards from when Palpatine brought it back from near-death as Sienar Fleet Systems just before he became Emperor.
- Trade relations begin between the Republic and the Gran of Kinyen.*
  (conjecture based on Strongholds of Resistance)*
*NOTE: This is rounded from "over 15,000 years ago."
- Around this time, Lannik is discovered by Duros explorers from the Republic.*
  (conjecture based on Lead by Example)*
*NOTE: This is "over 15,000 years ago."

15,000 BBY
- The so-called Indecta era ends. The Kymoodon era begins.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids and The Essential Atlas)
- The so-called Expansionist Period ends.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi)
- The Golden Age of the Old Republic begins.
  (conjecture based on canonical sources and references throughout the Official Continuity)
- Around this time, the Republic heeds the desires of the outlying worlds and restores its armed forces, placing them under the direct control of the Senate and the Supreme Chancellor.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)
- During the Golden Age of the Old Republic, Caamasi Jedi Allynic E’kles has his memories and knowledge implanted into a holocron.
  (conjecture based on Power of the Jedi Sourcebook)
- Republic Fleet Systems is formed.*
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Vehicles and Vessels)*
*NOTE: This is supposedly created to counter a growing threat of Sith-backed uprisings . . . but with the new dating for the Dark Jedi finding the Sith species after a Second Great Schism, rather than the First Great Schism, that reasoning no longer makes sense. There would’ve been no threat of Sith-backed uprisings at this time.
- Republic Sienar Systems begins providing starships and equipment for the Old Republic.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Weapons and Technology)
- The Anomid race begins supporting the Old Republic.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 12: Aliens--"Enemies and Allies")
- By this time, the near-Duros Neimoidians and actual Duros have diverged enough over the
The Hutts take over Evocar and rename it Nal Hutta. This move takes place because their original homeland, Varl, was in a terrible state. No one knows precisely why Varl was devastated, but most blame a Hutt civil war that they call the Hutt Cataclysms. The Hutts insist that the Varl system originally had two suns, Evona and Ardos, who were also revered as the Hutts’ gods. When Evona was pulled into a black hole, Ardos collapsed into a white dwarf out of grief. It is during this period of grieving that asteroids bombarded Varl, making it the desolate place the Hutts fled from. This belief tends to give the Hutts great price and arrogance, as they have essentially outlived and out-survived their own gods. The Hutts create a new Hutt Ruling Council to rule their territory. The Council was suggested by Budhila Hestlic Amura, based on the kajidic philosophy of fierce inter-clan rivalries but rejection of outright inter-clan warfare. The Hutt Council would, over the millennia, also called the Council of Elders, the Hutt Council, the Great Hutt Council, and the Grand Council of Nal Hutta. This Hutt Ruling Council consists of members of the Clans of the Ancients, who represent five major kajidics, the “Five Hutt Families,” though family membership shifts with eras. A Hutt Grand Council also exists to include representatives from all kajidics, but it is only held when called upon by the Hutt Ruling Council.

(Conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Alien Species, Tempest Feud, Scourge, The Essential Atlas, and Lords of Nal Hutta)

14,975 BBY

- The Yuuzhan Vong of Zonama Sekot are cut off from the Force and expelled from the planet, forcing them to seek out a new homeworld and sparking a need for conquest in the species.

(Conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Alien Species)

14,743 BBY

- During the Herglic Crush, the Caliginous Automaton of Tomo-Reth, one of the Twenty Wonders of the Galaxy, is destroyed.

(Conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

14,500 BBY

- The Third Alsakan Conflict begins, including the Commenor Run Campaign in its first year.

(Conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)
14,450 BBY
- The Cleansing of Rucapar on Alsakan occurs as part of the Third Alsakan Conflict.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

14,300 BBY
- Following the defeat of the Duros Red Credit Brigade in the Third Alsakan Conflict, a pocket realm known as Nikato’s Bootheel springs up around Raxus Prime, and the Machinists of Nikato begin to make Raxus Prime even more beautiful.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
- The Third Alsakan Conflict ends.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

14,000 BBY
- The Vultans elevate their society from one of feudal basis to one of interplanetary commerce.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- The Herglic trading empire settles Lamuir IV. Shortly thereafter, they desert the planet.
  (conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)
- A Jedi visits Krayiss II, where he attempts to battle the Sith spirit kept there, only to be destroyed. He is not the first to succumb to this being, nor will he be the last. The spirit will slumber for ten millennia before the arrival of its next conquest, Vara Nreem.
  (conjecture based on A Tale from the Dark Side)

13,975 BBY
- Duros scouts discover the Sneevels of Sneeve.
  (conjecture based on Alien Anthology)

13,800 BBY
- The Fourth Alsakan Conflict begins.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

13,720 BBY
- The Herglic trading empire crumbles.
  (conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)

NOTE: This assumes that the contact between Tapani humans and the Herglics at 12,720 BBY was the first Herglic/Human contact.

13,649 BBY
- The defense of Drogheda occurs as part of the Fourth Alsakan Conflict.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

13,220 BBY
- The conquest of Manaan occurs as part of the Fourth Alsakan Conflict.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

13,220 BBY
- The Fourth Alsakan Conflict ends.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

13,050 BBY
- The Fifth Alsakan Conflict begins.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

13,000 BBY
Hosk Station is sold into the private sector.
(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Vehicles and Vessels)

Lan Barell is discovered by Old Republic scouts and is soon settled by Gaminne Group Inc. as a mining operation. The GGI humans slowly form peaceful relations with the local Qieg populace and develop a Human-Qieg government.
(conjecture based on Lan Barell)

What remains of the Herglic Trade Empire joins the Republic, bringing a boom in development around the Hidakai Pool (later known as the mouth of the Rimma Trade Route).
(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

12,989 BBY

The Ailon Nova Guard is created.
(conjecture based on Special Military Unit Intelligence Update)

12,980 BBY

Admiral Hirken’s campaign in the Northern Dependencies occurs as part of the Fifth Alsakan Conflict.
(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

12,770 BBY

The Herglics resettle Lamuir IV.*
(conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)*

NOTE: This assumes that the beginning of the Tapani Colonial Era was when the first Tapani and Republic ships entered the vicinity of Lamuir IV and that “a few decades” can be rounded to 50 years.

12,720 BBY

The Tapani Sector enters into what is later known as the Colonial Era (0 - 1012 by their domestic calendar), during which the first colonists settle the region and begin trading with the Herglics.
(conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)

12,700 BBY

Resistance on Cyrillia takes place as part of the Fifth Alsakan Conflict.
(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

12,500 BBY

Twi'lek society embraces (or comes to accept as commonplace) the slave trade.
(conjecture based on Platt’s Starport Guide)

12,500 BBY

Initial surveys are conducted of Tandun III. The surveys are conducted by Dr. Beramsh from Ord Mantell. They discover ruins that may have been from the Rakata. The planet is never settled.*
(conjecture based on Millennium Falcon)*

NOTE: This is “approximately 12,250 years” before Millennium Falcon, which is set in 43 ABY. I have rounded, given that it is an approximation.

12,031 BBY

Around this time (or in the years preceding it), a colony of space-faring worms stumbles across Erkaron, a moon of Genarius in the Cularin system and begins to feed on the metal within the moon. When the metal is exhausted, the creatures move on, leaving tunnels and little evidence of their existence.
(conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)
12,000 BBY
- By this time, Ithorian herdships finally reach Republic space.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
- A new hyperspace route is formed to connect Hutt Space and the Republic. It is named the Ootmian Pankapolla, which is later corrupted by other species into the name “Ootmian Pabol.”
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
- Sometime around this time, the Galactic Museum is founded on Coruscant.
  (conjecture based on Coruscant and the Core Worlds)

11,987 BBY
- Supreme Chancellor Pers’lya is impeached and then assassinated (through a conspiracy against him). He is succeeded by Supreme Chancellor Contispex I, a devoted follower of the Pius Dea faith who is extremely intolerant of corruption and of anyone who does not hold to his own high standards. He is considered a natural to clean up the Senate. This marks the beginning of the Pius Dea era (though it is often rounded to 13 years before this to 12,000 BBY). The Pius Dea faith believes in restoring “fallen” communities to “purity” by purging “unredeemable elements.” The galaxy now has a religious fanatic as Supreme Chancellor of the Republic.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
- During the Pius Dea era, the Jedi Trial of the Flesh is accomplished through what amounts to methods of torture like “the Burning.”
  (conjecture based on The Jedi Path)

11,975 BBY
- The Morseerian race of unknown origins begins to congregate on the fringes of galactic civilization.*
  (conjecture based on Alien Anthology)*
*NOTE: The entry doesn’t call this a first contact, and mentions no sightings or the like, simply noting that they had been there since around this time.

11,965 BBY
- Supreme Chancellor Contispex I launches the First Crusade of the Pius Dea era, targeting the unredeemable Huttfs. During Contispex’s Crusades, Pius Dea faithful are given positions of power within the Republic, with those positions eventually becoming hereditary, not just reserved for Pius Dea followers. “Proscribed” groups, heretics, and other “undesirables” are exiled or imprisoned, their property confiscated, and the like. The faith initially allows only humans as part of Pius Dea, but it will eventually allow “Rimkin” near-humans to convert in the face of extinction.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)
- Around this time, the Republic begins establishing advance military and scout bases on remote planets and moons. These “Ordinance/Regional Depots” become known as “Ords,” such as the future planets of Ord Mantell, Ord Sedra, and Ord Sigatt.
  (conjecture based on The Life and Legend of Obi-Wan Kenobi)
- Ord Mantell is settled as a military outpost for the Old Republic and by Corellian colonists.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Planets and Moons and The Old Republic Explorer’s Guide)
- With the initial settlement of Ord Mantell, Mantellian Savrips, actually sentient, are forced into the wild.
  (conjecture based on Alien Anthology)
- The escape of Mantellian Savrips on Ord Mantell into the wild results in immediate violent conflicts there.*
  (conjecture based on Threats of the Galaxy)*
*NOTE: Information provided by Luke Van Horn.
11,947 BBY
- Supreme Chancellor Contispex I steps aside for the rise of his son, who ascends (rather than being elected) to the position of Supreme Chancellor as Contispex II. (Later Supreme Chancellors from the Pius Dea faith, even those not directly related to Contispex I or II will take the name Contispex upon ascending to the office.)
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

11,939 BBY
- Supreme Chancellor Contispex II launches the Third Pius Dea Crusade, again focusing on the Hutts.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

11,933 BBY
- Horrified by the actions of the Republic in the Pius Dea Crusades, the Jedi Order declares itself independent of Republic rule and withdraws to Ossus. This is known as the Recusal. Some Jedi do not agree with this, and splinter groups begin to form, with some even joining in the Crusades as champion Crusaders.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

11,920 BBY
- The Fourth Pius Dea Crusade begins, against focused on the Hutts.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

11,884 BBY
- The Seventh Pius Dea Crusade, also known as the Great Northern Crusade, begins, focusing on the Zabraks and other non-human species.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

11,820 BBY
- The Sixth Alsakan Conflict occurs amid the Pius Dea Crusades when the Alsakani clash with the Pius Dea Republic, then forge alliances with Pius Dea victim cultures like the Duros, Hutts, and Herglics.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

11,791 BBY
- The Tenth Pius Dea Crusade, also known as the Crusade of the Winds, begins.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

11,708 BBY
- The Tapani Sector enters into what is later known as the Twelve Kingdoms Era (1012 - 5372 by their domestic calendar), during which power shifts from Pelagon to individual planets, which become organized into regional kingdoms. It is during this time that the first settlements of the periphery worlds are created as a buffer zone with Herglic space, and first contact is established with Mrlssti.
  (conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)

11,707 BBY
- The Eleventh Pius Dea Crusade begins, targeting the Herglics.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

11,700 - 10,000 BBY
- The Sith Holocron that Odan-Urr will later own is created.
• The Kathol species (also known as the Precursors) develop a device called the Codex, which can detect, quantify, and even manipulate the Force. The activation of this device draws the attention of a highly powerful Dark Jedi, who sees it as a means to increase his personal power. He travels to the Kathol home planet (later named Kathol, after the race) and uses his Force abilities to enslave the Kathol. This action does not go unnoticed by the Light Jedi Knight Halbert, who calls for a contingent of Jedi Knights to bring down the Dark Jedi’s reign. The ensuing conflict between the Jedi Knights and the Dark Jedi and his Kathol followers leads to the activation and overload of one of the Kathol’s two launch gates—gigantic, orbiting, biomechanical constructs which act as jumpgates or hypergates to propel Kathol vessels through hyperspace. The overload causes the gate to explode. The explosion actually warps the fabric of hyperspace and the Force (since the Force is inherent in the form of the galaxy), which simultaneously tainting the region with the Dark Side, thanks to the death of the powerful Dark Jedi. The warped space comes to be known as the Kathol Rift. (During the explosion, much of the Charr Ontee species is “flipped” into the realm between normal space and hyperspace, known as “Otherspace.” They will come to grow there, later being discovered as the “Charon.”) The Kathol species, fearing what will happen to their world now that the Rift has been created, takes their life essences and places them inside a Lifewell to survive the coming millennia. In the meantime, a clone/supercomputer creature they have created, which will later be called DarkStryder, will remain on the world creating new organisms to repopulate and terraform the ravaged landscape. Halbert, for her part, will go into a trance until the Kathol are released to reclaim their world. The DarkStryder will be stranded on the world, though, as the second launch gate is damaged beyond DarkStryder’s capacity to repair. With the Lifewell effectively channeling the life energy of the Kathol into one area, the Force becomes even more warped in the region, creating a highly localized bubble of sorts around the planet Kathol, which allows sentient species on the world to easily learn and use a type of Force power known as Ta-Ree. DarkStryder, of course, is self-aware, and realizes that it can rule the world without the Kathol. It puts the hibernating Halbert into stasis and then, seeing how the Lifewell can interact with the Force, DarkStryder eventually begins taking small portions of life essence and placing them in biological weapon devices, which will come to be called DarkStryder technology. These devices have amazing offensive and defensive powers, but once used, they go “dead,” as does the life essence that was originally some poor Kathol being. Thus, DarkStryder begins its long period of creating various servant species on the planet Kathol, longing for a time when it can somehow find a way off of the planet for itself.*

*NOTE: Yes, I know that DarkStryder is referred to as being engineered to live for “centuries,” yet the Kathol were said to have flourished “millennia ago.” This would put the timing of this major series of events in question were it not for the specific statement that Halbert has been in stasis for millennia. We must then assume that DarkStryder has simply outlived its original specs, which makes perfect sense, given that the Kathol were to awaken far earlier than they actually do.

11,699 – 11,600 BBY
• During this century, Republic citizens fleeing the tyranny of the Pius Dea cultists find a planet that they colonize. The planet’s star is part of a constellation that can be seen from Fedje that is called “Prefid’s Belt.” The planet they have colonized eventually takes on the corrupted name “Prefsbelt.”

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

11,660 BBY
• The Twelfth Pius Dea Crusade begins when a stable hyperspace jump point to the Zarracina system is discovered. The Republic desires the third planet, but its inhabitants are opposed to joining. A jihad is launched to conquer the planet, but the planet’s ruling council commits suicide to avoid capture and “conversion.” In retaliation, Commodore Daymont “Veracity” Praji nukes Zarracina III into a nuclear winter. In the aftermath, the Zarracina system is annexed by the Republic and the few surviving Zarracines become nomads.
Republic military scouts discover Ord Gimmel. The planet is immediately classified by the Supreme Chancellor and covertly colonized to support the Twelfth (and later the Fifteenth)
Pius Dea Crusade. It comes to house a Republic supply base.

(conjecture based on Strongholds of Resistance)

11,591 BBY
- The Fifteenth Pius Dea Crusade begins, focusing on the Baragwin.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)
- During the Fifteenth Pius Dea Crusade (during the rule of Supreme Chancellor Contispex XI), a group of Gran on their native Kinyen forms to resist the Crusade. When the conflict finally ends, these military veterans (heroes of their people and followers of the Doellin religion) are pressured into running the Kinyen government. They form the Tayan League, a socialist political party dedicated to the Doellinist religious faith. The Tayan League and its worship of the three-eyed goddess Doellin will bring most Gran into its faith and rule Kinyen for millennia to come.
  (conjecture based on Strongholds of Resistance)
- The secret Republic military colony on Ord Gimmel supports the Fifteenth Pius Dea Crusade, but when the conflict ends, so will knowledge of the colony, whose colonists are abandoned by the Republic to fend for themselves. The local Deons support a royal bloodline of rulers that goes back to Grand Vicar Sidharra (leader of their original cathedral ship). They eventually will abandon religious practices for the most part and remain unknown to the Republic for thousands of years. Due to this isolation, they will adapt to their environment to have pale yellow skin and long, spindly limbs. As “near-humans” they will call themselves Deaons, though they will one day be known to the Empire by the derogatory term “Gimmers.”
  (conjecture based on Strongholds of Resistance)

11,198 BBY
- The Twenty-Third Pius Dea Crusade begins, focusing on Bothans and Lanniks.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

11,100 BBY
- With their forward momentum collapsing, the Pius Dea Crusades turn inward, leading to the Inquisitions in the Core and the Colonies. At the same time, the Caamas come to Ossus with a desperate plan and a plea for help from the Jedi who left the Republic’s politics behind with the Recusal. The Jedi agree to end their Recusal and engaged in a long-term plan to remove the Pius Dea Supreme Chancellor, suspend the Senate, and take over the Republic. They begin with the spread of a new, “secret” variant of the Pius Dea faith among the faithful. It is a heresy that is masterminded by the Caamas and spread by Alsakani and Jedi agents, meant to undermine the Pius Dea faithful.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

11,057 BBY
- Even as the Jedi, Caamas, and Alsakani work against the Pius Dea faith, the Republic launches the Thirty-Fourth Pius Dea Crusade, targeting the Hutts again.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

11,000 BBY
- The Pius Dea era ends, beginning the Ductavis era, mostly known for rebuilding from the Pius Dea Crusades.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

10,980 BBY
Around this time, human civilization comes to Doan. Prior to this time, there were settlements of Sith worshipping beings (presumably not humans), who were wiped out by natural disasters but left behind Dark Side artifacts.

*(conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)

*NOTE: It had human civilization for at least 10,000 years prior to *Dynasty of Evil.

10,979 – 10,970 BBY

- During this decade, Renunciate Admiral Pers Pradeux discovers Prefsbelt’s location and makes it a retreat for Renunciate naval officers plotting the overthrow of the Faithful.

  *(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

10,967 BBY

- The plan put into motion by the Jedi, Caamasi, and Alsakani finally bears fruit when heretics among the Pius Dea ranks begin to declare themselves en masse. Conflict erupts between the Pius Dea followers who remain with the cause (the Faithful) and those who have stepped away from the faith and embraced heresy (the Renunciates). Conflict rages for a year in what is known as both the Renunciation and the Seventh Alsakan Conflict.

  *(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

10,966 BBY

- With the Renunciation conflict (AKA the Seventh Alsakan Conflict) going on for year, the end finally comes when the Bureau of Ships and Services, one of the few institutions to remain free of Pius Dea influences, abandons its neutrality and seeds Pius Dea Faithful ships with rogue navicomputer code. With the push of a button, Pius Dea Faithful ships leap to hyperspace, never to be seen again. The Pius Dea Vanguard, though, flies straight into a trap at Uquine, where they are defeated by overwhelming opposition forces. Supreme Chancellor Contispex XIX is captured aboard the Flame of Sinthara and taken to Caamas, where he is imprisoned with no outside contact whatsoever. The Jedi Order takes control of the Republic, suspending the Senate (then rebuilding it) and placing Biel Ductavis in the role of both Supreme Chancellor and Jedi Grand Master. With the victory of the Renunciates at Uquine, Renunciate Admiral Pers Pradeux and his fellow officers reorganize and rebuild the Republic Navy during a series of meetings on Prefsbelt. Those Pius Dea Faithful who survive the jumps to far off locations with navicomputers wiped can carry on their faith far from anyone they could harm. As for the Jedi who joined the Crusades, some would continue on as the Order of the Terrible Glare, their influence minimal.

  *(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

- In this era, Jedi Grand Master Biel Ductavis, who is also Supreme Chancellor of the Republic, creates a special Holocron that is stored on Ossus.

  *(conjecture based on Force and Destiny Core Rulebook)

10,520 BBY

- Around this time, the Ark of Baron Auletphant, traveling the spacelanes to collect exotic aquatic species, becomes lost in space. It will not be found for 10,000 years.

  *(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

10,050 BBY

- Around this time, the planet New Plympto, long known by travelers on the Corellian Trade Spine but kept an open secret due to its valuable rikknit eggs, is finally approached by Corellia to become an official part of the Corellian Sector. The local Nosaurians welcome this opportunity but soon become disenchanted by the sector’s policies that are usually pro-human.

  *(conjecture based on Suns of Fortune)

*NOTE: This event is “just over ten millennia ago,” relative to Suns of Fortune, which I have rounded to 10,050 BBY.*
10,000 BBY

- Vall Kumauri attempts to create his own Empire at the periphery of the Old Republic. While it briefly exists, the Kumauri Empire deploys planet-buster battleships with mass drivers to turn asteroids into missiles to attack planets’ surfaces. This finally cements the need in the Republic for planetary shields. Moreover, the use of mass drivers becomes part of the Republic’s warfare tactics as well. The conflict also convinces the Republic to return to the use of capital ships that it had abandoned in large measure after the Duinuogwuin Contention. The Kumauri’s use of an alloy called madilon to make smaller, more efficient hyperdrives is also used by the Republic after this point. Kumauri’s upstart empire is defeated.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

- Historian Vicendi, working on his Arturum Galactinum (commissioned for the Republic’s somewhat recent anniversary), compiles the Twenty Wonders of the Galaxy, limiting that list to wonders created by intelligent beings. The Twenty Wonders of the Galaxy include Coruscant’s Imperial Palace, the Dawn Pyramid of Aargau, the Brass Soldiers of Axum, the Shawken Spire, Belgoth’s Beacon, the Valley of Royalty on Duro, the Celebratrus Archive of Obroa-skai, the Statue of Xim on Desevro (already gone by the end of Xim’s reign but recognized here anyway), Crevasse City on Alderaan, the Ark of Baron Auletphant, the Coruscant Ice Crypts, the Calinginous Automaton of Tomo-Reth, the Tract of Makem Te, the Esraza Temple of Oligtaz, the Forbidden Gardens of Nuswatta, the Crystal City of Calius saj Leeloo on Berchest, the Halls of Knowledge on Phateem, the Cathedral of Winds on Vortex, the Alsakan Mosaics, and the space city of Nespis VIII.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

- On Lazerian IV, sea creatures finally evolve into the Akwin race.
  (conjecture based on Twin Stars of Kira)

- The Gran race begins to record its history for posterity (unless, of course, older documents have been lost).
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 12: Aliens--“Enemies and Allies”)

- The planet Vulta is one of the first major colonizing efforts made by humans since the development of hyperspace travel. True Vultan culture begins around this time.
  (conjecture based on Power of the Jedi Sourcebook)

- Around this time, the planet Ryloth is discovered by Republic explorers. The planet will tend to use slavery as its primary trade product.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

- The star Ku’Bakai flares up, causing ecological disaster on Kubindi and driving most of the world’s dominant species into extinction.*
  (conjecture based on A Free-Trader’s Guide to the Planets and The New Essential Guide to Alien Species)*

*NOTE: I had originally rounded “millennia ago” from AFTG to 5,000 years, but the NEGtAS places this event closer to 10,000 BBY, so this entry has been moved.

- The Anx of Gravlex Med create a mighty complex of cannons to fire their ships into orbit, known as the Gravlex Launchworks. This allows the Anx to travel to nearby worlds, but this brings them into contact with the Shusugaunt, who conquer the worlds of Anx Space and enslave the Anx. When the Shusugaunt are disoriented by the high-gravity of Gravlex Med, they abandon the world and their Anx slaves there, turning on each other in yet another in a series of religious wars.*
  (conjecture based on The University of Sanbra Guide to Intelligent Life: The Anx)*

*NOTE: This rounds “thousands of years ago” to 5,000 years BBY for first Republic contact, and then adds 5,000 years for “thousands of years before the Republic encountered them.”

- The Great Library of Ropagi II is built.
  (conjecture based on Twin Stars of Kira)

- The HoloNet is built, taking the place of old hypertranceivers.
  (conjecture based on Star Wars: The Roleplaying Game)

- The Great Library, a vast intellectual establishment, is founded by the Ropagu near the city of Ebyl, on the planet Ropagi II. It contains many years’ worth of Ropagu history. However, there is little information on galactic history in the Great Library, since the Ropagu have kept out of the political battles of the larger community.
(contecture based on Twin Stars of Kira via TimeTales, abridged)

- Sometime around this time, the Jedi Order builds a great library of knowledge on Yavin IV. The archives are kept underground, where a vast city (later known as the Lost City of the Jedi) grows, causing the Jedi to essentially terraform the inhospitable moon into a lush jungle world. Eventually, though, the Jedi will abandon the city and it will come to be considered a myth.
(contecture based on The Lost City of the Jedi)

- The primary Yuuzhan Vong god, Yun-Yuuzhan, is said to have created the Vua’sa, the first Warmaster. This species would continue as Warmaster until a Yuuzhan Vong defeats a Vua’sa to bring the duties to his race. This marks the Vong as the chosen species of the gods, and the gods begin to bestow upon the Yuuzhan Vong various biotechnological wonders. Shortly thereafter, the Vong begin warring amongst their clans over which clan was most favored of this favored race. The wars will rage off and on for millennia (The tale of the Vong gaining biotech from the gods is actually a lie. In reality, they were given the biotech methods by another race in a one-time gift. That race is conspicuously missing from all Vong historical records. Instead of gaining new information from the gods, the Vong leaders simply pull new information from the Quang quasha, biological information storage units from these early days.)*
(contecture based on The New Jedi Order Sourcebook)*

*NOTE: This information is supplemented with information based on Rebirth paraphrased from TimeTales.

- Graaa’shad, a fire-spirit lived deep down in the lowest levels of the Kashyyyk forest. Legends claim that one day the Graaa’shad captures the Wookiee warrior Urothko, and prepares to kill him. Lucky for Urothko, the elder Stalpaac intervenes. Stalpaac shoots the spirit with a bowcaster quarrel, then the two Wookiees launch an attack on the spirit. Graa’shad quickly retreats and flees, screaming that one day it will get revenge. In the aftermath of the battle, Urothko pledges his life to Stalpaac, since the older Wookiee had risked his own life to save him. The story of Urothko’s rescue quickly spreads to other villages, and the tradition of the Wookiee life-debt is created.
(contecture based on Thrawn Trilogy Sourcebook via TimeTales, verbatim)

- The Advozsec of Rillor make contact with the Republic upon developing primitive hyperdrives.*
(contecture based on The University of Sanbra Guide to Intelligent Life: The Advozsec)*

*NOTE: The article says “over 10,000 years ago,” but also gives information for TNJO events, so 10,000 BBY seemed to work nicely.

- The planet Ammund is settled as a religious retreat by colonists from the Core world Thokos. They will later lose contact with the colony and forget it ever existed.
(contecture based on The Essential Guide to Alien Species and Star Wars Encyclopedia)

9,997 BBY

- On Pachi, the Fortress Barlos is built.
(contecture based on Wanted by Cracken)

9,990 BBY

- The first lightsabers are created, one of which will later come into Leia Organa Solo’s possession via Vima-Da-Boda, a descendant of Vima and Andur Sunrider.
(contecture based on the absence of lightsabers in the Great Schism flashback of The Golden Age of the Sith, the Star Wars Encyclopedia, and Dark Empire)

- The Jedi practice of exchanging lightsabers known as the Concordance of Fealty becomes part of their rituals.*
(contrete based on Emissaries to Malastare)*

*NOTE: This presumes that the practice begins in the early days of lightsabers, when it could simply take place quite a while after this date, as long as it is before Emissaries to Malastare.

9,988 BBY

- A coalition of forces rebel against the Old Republic, but are defeated. They are spared by the Old Republic justice system and leave the Old Republic, finally ending up colonizing Adumar, on the near edge of Wild Space.
(conjecture based on Starfighters of Adumar)

9,500 BBY
- Hutt society embraces a new law (which will later be known simply as the “Old Law”), which allows for disputes to be settled via single combat, in a Hutt twist in dueling traditions.
(conjecture based on Rebel Dawn)

9,400 BBY
- Within the century leading up to this date, planets have begun deploying the first planetary shields. These are “encasing shields” that do not allow small openings for ships or weapons to emerge.
(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

9,200 BBY
- Within the century leading up to this date, planetary turbolasers come into use, replacing giant particle cannons that were previously in use.
(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

9,000 BBY
- The Ductavis era ends, and the Riantus Period begins.
(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
- Based on an invitation from a Duros delegation, the Tunroth civilization enters the Old Republic.
(conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 12: Aliens--“Enemies and Allies”)
- The Fraii Wys species is thought to have become extinct around this time, due to a lack of any records after this point in history.
(conjecture based on Tyrant’s Test)
- Industrialist Veltzz Arakyd founds Arakyd Industries on the planet Vulpter.
(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Weapons and Technology)
- Sometime in the millennium that begins now, the Praji family produces a Jedi Knight for the last time until after the Great Hyperspace War.
(conjecture based on Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Praji: A Cartel of Genes)
- Sometime over the next millennium, Blotus the Hutt, an atypical Hutt to say the least, will serve for 275 years as the Supreme Chancellor of the Republic.
(conjecture based on Lords of Nal Hutta)

8,000 BBY
- The Old Republic’s Riantus Period ends, as the Subterra Period begins.
(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
- By this time, further Alsakan Conflicts are considered minor, almost antiquarian diversions that have little broad importance.
(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)
- The Old Republic settles a new planet which they name Elrood after a Republic Senator who fought for the funding of the colonization.
(conjecture based on Planets of the Galaxy: Volume Three)
- On Merisee, climate and geological changes create a land bridge between two previously separate continents, ending in a period of bloodshed when the first contact between the inhabitants of the two continents— the Teltiors and the Meris—goes terribly wrong.
(conjecture based on Planets of the Galaxy: Volume Three)
- A Sullustan shaman creates a cave painting based on a vision of the eventual rise of Palpatine.
(conjecture based on Galaxywide News Nets supplement in The Official Star Wars
Corellian pirates accidentally discover the Goroth system while on the run from a Republic frigate. The pirates begin smuggling technology to the curious natives of Goroth in return for various metals. (They are unaware of the hyperbarides on the planet.) An Ithorian herdship soon discovers the planet as well, however, and alerts the Republic.

(conjecture based on Goroth: Slave of the Empire via TimeTales, verbatim)

A Republic outpost is established on Malastare, which soon draws a few Gran colonists. Full-scale colonization will not occur for several millennia.

(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Characters and Far Horizons)

Gran colonists begin settling Hok.

(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Alien Species)

As Gran colonists leave Kinyen, whole segments of the organized social structure of the society start to be vacant. To keep order, the world’s leadership forbids offworlders from visiting. They soon create special Outworlder areas to allow some visitors to come to the planet, but for a Gran, moving offworld (at least without government permission) is forbidden.

(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Alien Species)

The Advozsec of Riflor build Dozu Lam as an evacuation center in case of a world catastrophe.*

(conjecture based on The University of Sanbra Guide to Intelligent Life: The Advozsec)*

*NOTE: The article says “millennia ago.” I chose to say 2,000 years after Riflor made contact with the Republic.

Around this time, humans from the Republic who are fleeing the excesses of the Tapani Dynastic Era find themselves fleeing into Sith space.

(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

7,997 BBY

Three stormtroopers who were chasing Leia Organa eight thousand years from now are thrown back in time to this point by the godlike creature Splendid Ap. They will eventually die, leaving their bones and armor for Leia to find when she first arrives on the planetoid. (To be continued below . . . )*

(Tilotny Throws a Shape)*

*NOTE: This story is just bizarre. See the summary for the remainder of the story far below to make some semblance of sense of it all.

Devilworlds (comic series: Alan Moore & Steve Moore)

Tilotny Throws a Shape (comic: Alan Moore)

7,995 BBY

The Baylin Cluster star system is established by Corellian explorers who discover the Goroth system.

(conjecture based on Goroth: Slave of the Empire via TimeTales, abridged)

7,811 BBY

First contact between the Republic and warships from the Waymancy Hollow results in the Republic ships torn apart by the Waymancy’s extremely powerful energy weapons, which were powered by the Sisters of the Machinesmith’s generators. The Waymancy is defeated during the Waymancy Storm conflict, and their Sif-Alulan process for power generation will eventually be reverse engineered by the Verpine master crafter Lyns Skutroo within the next century.

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

7,700 BBY

Within the century leading up to this date, defensive shielding for warships finally comes into use, causing some planets to give up turbolasers to go back to particle cannon weapons that could defeat shields designed for turbolasers.

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

Within the century leading up to this date, Lyns Skutroo reveals the “squintpipe process” for power generation that was reverse engineered from the Waymancy Hollow’s technology. This sparks a new golden age of warship construction.
(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

- The situation on Merisee worsens as each side attempts to colonize the other side’s land, resulting in the escalation of the conflict to a state of full-scale war.
(conjecture based on Planets of the Galaxy: Volume Three)

7,600 BBY
- Helped along by the Republic’s Acculturation program, Goroth becomes capable of space travel (conjecture based on Goroth: Slave of the Empire via TimeTales, verbatim)

7,500 BBY
- Within the century leading up to this date, the “squintpipe process” is refined to produce shields that are stronger and quicker to regenerate, while also enabling shields to work from smaller generators. Now, starships of many sizes, not just large warships, can have reliable deflector shields.
(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)
- Goroth is inducted into the Galactic Republic.
(conjecture based on Goroth: Slave of the Empire via TimeTales, verbatim)

7,328 BBY
- The Tapani Sector enters into what is later known as the Dynastic Era (5392 - 11,138 by their domestic calendar), during which warrior prince Shey Tapani rises from the Melanthan Kingdom to unite the sector in a series of bloody civil wars. He makes Procopia his new capital, while the twelve kingdoms reorganize as noble houses subordinate to his Tapani Empire. During this era, the Giju Route is stabilized, Tallaan and Neona emerge as trading worlds, Shey Tapani gives Mrisst a grant to create a university to cater to the whole sector and all species, and Tapani joins the Republic.
(conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)

7,308 BBY
- Shey Tapani establishes the Tapani calendar, which is later augmented to conform to Galactic Standard, but with local names. By the augmented calendar, as it is changed later, the Tapani year is 5412.
(conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)

7,299 BBY
- A Corellian named Rabaan brings the first human colony to the Ishanna system, settling the planet that he will name Rabaan, after himself. They prepare to also colonize the fourth planet of the system, but find it already inhabited by the S’krrr (who, ironically, share their species name with the name they gave their planet, much like Rabaan does personally with his new world).
(conjecture based on Combat Moon)

7,032 – 32 BBY
Gungan Frontier (video game: Lucas Learning)*

*NOTE: Elements of this video game have been considered C-Canon, even though the game itself has no real specific storyline. It is more like Sim City on Naboo. Given that it shows the rise of the Gungans before TPM, I have listed it here, simply as a reference point.

7,032 BBY
- The Gungans on Naboo, after a fierce struggle for land with another race (the so-called “Elders”), are driven underwater, where they begin to create their legendary underwater
7,000 BBY

- A group of “Fallen” Jedi (Dark Jedi) declare themselves free of the control of the Jedi Council, breaking away from the Jedi Order. They will spend the next three years in hiding, studying the Dark Side. This event comes to be known as the Second Great Schism.
- During the Second Great Schism, the Jedi Order creates a secret space station to act as a prison for the worst of the worst that only the Jedi Order can contain. The station, known as Prism, is located in the mass shadow of the sixth moon of Diab, and its location will remain a Jedi secret until just after the Clone Wars. It will be maintained by one Jedi, who will be under a communications blackout (nothing in, nothing out, for fear of revealing its location), who will command approximately 100 war droids as guardians of the prison.
  (conjecture based on Darth Vader and the Ghost Prison)

7,000 BBY

- The Subterra Period ends, as the Manderon Period begins.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
- Early in the Manderon Period, Homonix Rectonia transcribes the Jedi Code in its classical form.
  (conjecture based on The Jedi Path)
- The ancient Taung Shadow Warriors of Dha Werda Verda, who relocated from Coruscant to the planet Roon now relocate again to the planet Mandalore, which they name as such in honor of their first great leader, Mandalore the First. (They have come mainly to acquire the metal known as Mandalorian Iron or beskar.) This culture will come to be known as Mandalorian culture, and all future leaders will bear the title of “Mandalore” or “Lord Mandalore.” (Mandalore the First will wear a mask made from the ridged sternum bones of a mythosaur, and the skull of a mythosaur will form the basis of future clan symbols, such as that of Clan Keldau.) The Mandalorians of this era and the next two millennia are often known as the Mandalorian Crusaders (or Taung Crusaders), based on their religious beliefs. Mandalorians in this era believe that they serve the god Kad Ha’rangir, who puts the Taung (Mandalorian) clans through trials and tests to change them and force them to grow and be better. They are in opposition to the sloth-god Arasuum, who seeks to tempt the clans to drag them into stagnation and corruption. The Mandalorians battle in the name of Kad Ha’rangir to prove themselves worthy of the god’s favor and to defy the will of Arasuum. As founders of the Mandalorian culture, the Taung Shadow Warriors become known as the “Progenitors.” Their “Six Actions” that make them Mandalorians (raising the young to seek honor and glory, wearing armor, defending one’s self and family, supporting one’s clan, speaking a common language, and owing fealty to the leader of the clans) is known as the Resol’nare. At Mandalore, these Crusaders battle the Mandallian Giants, and they find themselves so impressed by the Giants’ prowess in battle that they agree to coexist, eventually allowing the Mandallian Giants to become part of the Taung (Mandalorian) clans.*

*NOTE: The NEGtAS puts this incorrectly around 25,000 BBY, but its information is accurate otherwise. The other sources have pinned down the actual date.

- The group of “Fallen” Jedi (Dark Jedi), who have been hiding their delving into the Dark Side and studying in secret since the Second Great Schism three years earlier, discover that the Force can be used to bend and manipulate life itself in twisted ways. This pioneers the science of Dark Side mutations. They finally dare to emerge en masse. This erupts into a conflict between Light Side Jedi and Dark Side Jedi that comes to be known as the Hundred-Year Darkness.*
80

*NOTE: This event falls in 3,347 BTC on the Treaty of Coruscant calendar.

- A civil war on Korriban, initiated by the Dathka Graush, leaves much of the planet devastated.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
- The war on Merisee leads to the creation of advanced medical methods on behalf of both sides of the conflict until, on the brink of mutual annihilation, the groups of Merisee natives make peace.
  (conjecture based on Planets of the Galaxy: Volume Three)
- Around this time, the Minyavish of Qaras enslave the Jessar.*
  (conjecture based on Ascension)*

*NOTE: This was over 7,000 years before Ascension, which I have rounded to 7,000 BBY.

- On the world of Arkania, the Sith library of Veehas Tuwan is opened.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- A few thousand years before the Battle of Yavin, Trandoshans come to Kashyyyk hoping to establish colonies. They are driven off by the Wookiees, but the Wookiees use the opportunity to commandeer a necessary boost in technology from the Trandoshans’ vessels. The Wookiees of Kashyyyk are soon capable of space travel. Shortly thereafter, the Wookiees make contact with the Corellians, who begin to exploit them. Thanks to the Alderaanian Diplomatic Corps, though, the exploitation is stopped and Kashyyyk officially joins the Republic and sends its first delegate to the Galactic Senate. Once in the Senate, the Wookiees negotiated new treaties, including a more fair one with Corellia. They purchase hyperdrive technology from the Duros, establish cultural studies programs in universities of Alderaan, trade with the Verpines for manufacturing processes, and generally advance their culture by leaps and bounds.
  (conjecture based on Secrets of Kashyyyk)

6,997 BBY
- The first Republic and Tapani scouts survey Mrlsst, which is lacking in space travel technology.
  (conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)

6,950 BBY
- The Old Republic first contacts the Quermian society, which is now on the verge of advanced space exploration, having colonized nearby worlds.*
  (conjecture based on Alien Anthology)*

*NOTE: This takes place 10,000 years after events listed as almost 17,000 years before the Alien Anthology (25 ABY).

6,900 BBY
- By this time, the Quermians are active in the galactic community.*
  (conjecture based on Alien Anthology)*

*NOTE: This event takes place several decades (rounded to 5) after 10,000 years after events dated at “almost” 17,000 years (rounded to 16,975 years) before the Alien Anthology. Got all that?

- The Hundred-Year Darkness ends with a climactic battle on Cobros (known to the losers as the Rout of Corbos), where the Dark Jedi unleash the Leviathans that were created by Sorzus Syn as a culmination of her work with Shamblers, Howlers, and Pit Horrors. The Dark Jedi are defeated and nearly all wiped out, along with most of the life on the planet. Those who survive are exiled from the Republic and stripped of their lightsabers, which they are later unwilling (or unable) to reconstruct, instead opting for swords. Twelve of the Dark Jedi who were exiled after the Second Great Schism (who were known, appropriately, as the Exiles) discover the Sith species on Korriban and are seen as having the power of the gods. This group of twelve Exiles is led by High General Ajunta Pall, who is able to convince Sith King Hakagram Graush’s second-in-command (Shadow Hand) to betray him, allowing Ajunta to acquire Graush’s Sith war sword and decapitate him with it. With their leader thus assassinated, Ajunta claims to be the blood heir of Sith King Adas and takes the throne as the Dark Lord of the Sith (Jen’ari), making all of the other Exiles his own Shadow Hands (though they will, at times, be collectively referred to as the Dark Lords of the Sith (Jen’jidai). Among the other eleven Dark Side Exiles that survived Cobros are Tulak Horde (whose tomb will later be found on Korriban), Marchioness XoXaan (Commander of the Black Legions, whose teachings would help develop Darth Krayt’s “One Sith” Order millennia later), Admiral Baron Remulus Dreyopa (the last admiral from the Dark Jedi’s side in the Hundred-Year Darkness), Karness Muur (Dark Jedi hero of Fluwhaka), Sorzus Syn (alchemist, whose interrogation of refugees and such over the years has led her to find the path to find the kingdom of the Sith Purebloods, and who is allowed to keep the blood-stained war sword of Graush to use in her alchemy), and other Dark Jedi who are only among the Exiles because they happened to have survived the war. Some records seem to indicate that it may have been XoXaan and Muur who first made contact with the Sith species. Muur has Sorzus Syn create the Muur Talisman (the first Great Amulet), which uses Dark Side Sith magic to turn those around him into his slaves. Unfortunately, not everyone is affected, since Force-users are immune to its affects. He develops the rakghoul plague as a means of crafting those around him into beastly servants, while allowing them to then spread the condition to others via contact, rather than having to rely on the powers of the Talisman. Muur invests his mind and will into the Talisman, granting his spirit a form of immortality, confined within the Talisman. Sorzus Syn also creates a second Great Amulet for Dreyopa, though she creates a third that is stronger than both Muur’s and Dreyopa’s, which she keeps for herself. Sorzus Syn is also among those who work to map a local hyperspace route named the Nache Dhelfia route in the Stygian Caldera to explore Zost, Khar Delba, Rhelg, Krayiss, and, of course, Korriban, to learn more about these worlds that are most sacred to the Sith Purebloods. They erect their own Sith Lord palaces on Zost, the Sith throneworld. Sorzus also begins to study the possibilities of crossbreeding with the Sith species. A new social order emerges with the Jen’ari (Dark Lord) Ajunta Pall at the top of society. Beneath the Jen’ari are the other Jen’jirai (Dark Lords) as a Sith Council. They are served by Sith priests (the Kissai class), who propagate the worship of the Dark Lords, particularly Ajunta Pall, who is believed to be the manifestation of Typhojem, the “Left-Handed God.” Beneath the Kissai are the loyal engineers, the Zuguruk (who build more burial grounds than battleships at present, though Sorzus intends to correct this), then the warriors (Massassi), and slaves of various non-Sith species that are collectively known as Grothu.*

NOTE: This event falls in 3,247 BTC on the Treaty of Coruscant calendar.

- Dark Jedi Exile Sorzus Syn keeps a journal of the discoveries of the Dark Jedi in Sith Space and how they became the Dark Lords of the Sith. During the third and fourth months of the first year of exile, she notes how they came to be defeated by the Jedi, how they discovered the Sith Purebloods, and how they became the Dark Lords of the Sith. By this point, Sorzus notes, they have come upon several Sith amulets, including the Sith abbatar that has allowed them to understand and master the Sith Pureblood language, the Yoke of Seeming that can create illusions (and which was quickly snatched away by XoXaan), the Heart of Graush (a fist-sized ruby that was said to have been the stone that king Dathka Graush replaced his own heart with, and which, when paired with the Helm of Graush, will allow the user to control the forces of nature), and the Sith meditation sphere (later known as “Ship”). (To be continued below . . . )

(Book of Sith)

- Immediately after the Exiles become the Dark Lords of the Sith, a few upstart Exiles return to the Republic to seek revenge on the Jedi Order. They are defeated rather easily, but they provide the first hints to the Republic that the Exiles have found a culture far from the Republic to rule without fear of Republic reprisals.

(conjecture based on Evil Never Dies: The Sith Dynasties)

- By the end of the Hundred-Year Darkness, Jutrand’s megacity has been leveled by stone mites.
(conjecture based on Knight Errant Gazetteer)
• Shortly after relocating Dark Lord rule to Zioist from Korriban, Sith Council member Sorzus Syn leads a small group of Kissai (Sith priests) and Grotthu (non-Sith slaves) back to Korriban to unseal and study the ancient Sith tombs in the Valley of Golg. Within the Cloister of Bilius Torment, they discover booby traps and a sarcophagus over a power loci. On the seventh day, they enter the Sanctum of Sakkra-Kla, undisturbed for 10,000 years. Inside, they find scrolls on Sith alchemy, the preserved body of a terentatek, a pack of tuk’ata, and the Holocron of Sith King Nakgru, suggesting to Sorzus that the Sith and Jedi Holocrons might have a common ancestor even earlier in Rakatan technology, though both Sith and Republic cultures have developed the technology in different directions since that time. (Sorzus will create a Sith Holocron herself near the end of her life, which will pass into the Sith Archives of the New Sith under Darth Bane.) Sorzus nearly dies in the Tomb of Din Grrut, but saves herself by feeding a Sith slave to attacking tuk’ata.
(conjecture based on Book of Sith)
• With the Dark Jedi from the Hundred-Year Darkness now in charge of the Sith on Korriban, the Jedi continue hunting for their adversaries who escaped the Battle of Corbos. Sith Lord Baron Remulus Dreypa, rejects the Stygian Caldera and leaves, intending to find a suitable world to recreate his Sith leviathans, similar to the ones used at Corbos. He leaves, taking a talisman Sorzus Syn made for him when he does. Upon finding a suitable world to create such beasts (Kesh), his ship is attacked by a Jedi vessel that spotted them leaving the Stygian Caldera. The ships crash down onto Kesh, whose natural features keep them from leaving or calling for assistance. In the battle that ensues, parts of Kesh are decimated. This comes to be known as the Great Calamity and the First Curse of Kesh, while the Jedi and Sith become known as the Protectors and Destroyers of later Keshiri myth. Seeing this devastation, the two Force-using factions call a truce and work together to atone for their harm to Kesh. Sith Lord Baron Remulus Dreypa, considered the key to the Sith’s greatest weapons (the leviathans), is betrayed by his own. The talisman given to him by Sorzus Syn back on Korriban is actually meant to trap his spirit. When the fighting forces decide to lock him in his own oubliette (stasis pod, in a sense), the talisman actually keeps his spirit alive and dormant for millennia. The survivors set up a settlement at Eshkrene, where they will work with both Light and Dark Side abilities to seek true neutrality and balance. Over the millennia to come, they will keep from venturing further into the world (or into space aboard the Last Hope, a ship they bury beneath the Keshiri’s holiest site), so as to protect it from their “curse” of the Force, until they eventually find themselves with a generation who cannot use the Force at all. Until then, they are “the Doomed.”
(conjecture based on Spiral)

Book of Sith (novel: Dan Wallace)
Book of Sith (novel: Dan Wallace)
“Sorzus Syn Section”*
Exile Year One, Months 3 – 4
Exile and Arrival
The First Great Schism
The Hundred-Year Darkness
Proud People of the Sith
Sith Weapons
Sith Amulets

6,899 BBY
• During the second year of the Dark Jedi Exiles’ exile from the Republic (and subsequent rule over the Sith species), Sorzus Syn continues to keep her journal, in which, during months seven through nine of this year, she notes her new discoveries from the Valley of Golg on Korriban. She notes that she has discovered that the Sith species has encountered Republic worlds before. A Draethos from Draethos is found in the battle pits. Proof is found of contacts with Quermia, Felucia, Gand, and Florn. A Herglic slave is found on Zioist, a Mrissi is found on Nfolgai, and humans (who are theorized to have been refugees from the Tapani sector) are found on Dromund Kaas. All of this leads her to believe that the Republic is willfully blind to the threat the Sith species (and now the new Sith Empire) could pose. Having studied Sith alchemy information from the Holocron of Sith King Nakgru, Sorzus casts her net a bit wider, recovering scrolls on the subject that were submerged in the blood slurry of the Mongrel Altar, concealed behind a mural of King Adas at the Eternal Pyre, interred with the headless body of Wyrmuk the Undying. Reading one of these scrolls, however, unleashes a Sith curse upon Sorzus. She also notes that in the interim since her first journals about discovering the Sith species and her current journals, the Dark Lords have been putting together a new Sith Code on Zioost that is loosely based on the Jedi Code concept as a primary focal point upon which Sith teachings will be built. (To be continued below . . . )

(Book of Sith)

Book of Sith [continued] (novel: Dan Wallace)
Book of Sith [continued] (novel: Dan Wallace)
"Sorzus Syn Section" [continued]*
Exile Year Two, Months 7 – 9
Houses of Power
Sith Holocrons
Reign of the Ax
Conquests of the Sith
Warbeasts
Sith Alchemy
Sith Incantations
The Sith Code
The Prophecy of the Sith’ari

6,800 BBY
- By this time (as the galaxy moves into the 6,700s BBY), Mandalorian assaults on Fenel, a powerful and isolationist world with great weapon and ship technology, have resulted in the extinction of the native Fenelar. The Mandalorians adopt Fenelar weapon technology, then turn their sights on the arachnoid species known as the Tlonians.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

6,749 BBY
- The planet Mygeeto is discovered.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

6,299 BBY
- A caste system develops on Rabaan, placing warrior attributes in high status, based on their interactions with the S’krrr.
  (conjecture based on Combat Moon)

6,200 BBY
- By this time (as the galaxy moves into the 6,100s BBY), Mandalorians have depopulated and incinerated the homeworld of the Tlonians. Other worlds, such as Hrthging, Breshig, Shogun, and Ordo, have become part of Mandalorian Space by welcoming the Mandalorians peacefully.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

6,100 BBY
- Around this time, colonists first come to Saleucami. These original colonists are Pantorans, though many will follow, especially Gran, Twi’leks, and Weequay. The original settlement of Taleucema will become the planet’s capital city.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas and Mask of the Pirate Queen)
6,000 BBY
- The Queen of Offens is born.
  (conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia)
- After their own planet begins showing signs that it is in the process of self-destructing, the Miralukan people find a new home on the planet Alpheridies.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- A pair of slug throwing pistols are made by Andel Tanner on Brentaal, which will eventually find their way to the Roi family in the next few millennia.
  (conjecture based on Galaxywide News Nets supplement in The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #4)
- TCW DATE: The original Bardottan civilization is founded, under the rule of a mystical cult known as the Frangawl.
  (conjecture based on Nexus of Power)
- The Sith Empire utilizes mutated bantha-sized beetles, called Silooths, in the Battle of Kalsunor. The beasts are difficult to control, and fall out of use after the battle.*
  (conjecture based on The Dark Side Sourcebook)
- NOTE: This rounds “long before the Golden Age of the Sith” to 1,000 years before that series.
- Around this time, the Sith Empire finally begins the cycle of infighting that has become the hallmark of Sith Orders. Having expanded as far as it can without venturing close enough to Old Republic space to be noticed and repelled, the Sith Empire stops expanding, and power struggles begin amongst the Sith Lords and their followers. This cycle will continue for 1,000 years, as the Sith Lords drive the Sith Empire toward internal collapse.
  (conjecture based on The Dark Side Sourcebook)
- A Rodian warlord founds Rheshalva Interstellar Armaments.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Weapons and Technology)
- The planet Eission is settled by people of Tionese ancestry sometime prior to this point, as a settle society exists now.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
- Civilization begins to develop on Altiria/Anarris.*
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)
- NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn.

5,996 BBY
- The first Unification Gala is held in the Tapani Sector.
  (conjecture based on Tapani Sector Instant Adventures via TimeTales, paraphrased)

5,975 BBY
- The Kel Dor of Dorin join the Republic. With the appearance of Jedi, early superstitions based on Force-based powers, such as the Baran Do Sages, give way to more Jedi-like teachings.
  (conjecture based on Alien Anthology and Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)

5,689 BBY
- A new galactic calendar (which may or may not have been in widespread use) is created, marking this as the beginning of the so-called Sidereal Period. Dates using this calendar are referred to as BS-# or AS-# for “Before Sidereal” and “After Sidereal.” What event gave rise to this new calendar is, at present, unknown.
  (conjecture based on Dan Wallace’s VIP blog on starwars.com, referencing the Russ Manning Star Wars newspaper strips)

5,528 BBY
- A new trade route in the Tapani Sector is opened by Sullustan scouts.
  (conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)
5,500 BBY
- Around this time, as a result of their discovery of the Tapani Sector, Sullust becomes a member of the Republic.
  (conjecture based on Strongholds of Resistance)
- The Sikadian Gardens are founded on the planet S’krrr.
  (conjecture based on The Swarm via TimeTales, abridged)
- Around this time, the Herglics and Given link existing hyperspace routes into the Rimma Trade Route. Around the same time, Corellian scouts establish the Corellian Trade Spine.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

5,451 BBY
- Mandalorian Crusaders briefly skirmish with Republic forces during the Pathandr Fury.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

5,300 BBY
- The Jedi Order establishes a training center on Mustafar (currently a lush, green world) in what is then Wild Space, overseen by Jedi Master Chu-Don Gar.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

5,200 BBY
- Marka Ragnos and Simus battle for control of the Sith Empire, resulting in the beheading of Simus by Ragnos. Simus saves himself, in a sense, by using Sith magic to keep his head alive in a jar.
  (conjecture based on The Golden Age of the Sith)

5,139 – 5,130 BBY
- During this decade, the Mandalorians engage Republic forces during the Nakat Incursions.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

5,114 BBY
- A poor farmer woman on the planet Medriaas cheats on her husband and has intimate relations with the Sith Lord who rules them, Lord Dramath. She finds herself pregnant and convinces her husband that the child is his.*
  (conjecture based on Revan)*

*NOTE: This assumes Tenebrae is born in 5,113 BBY.

5,113 BBY
- Tenebrae is born into a farming family on Medriaas. The poor farming couple raise the child as theirs, but he is actually the son of Sith Lord Dramath, born of an affair between his mother and Dramath of which her husband is unaware. It is immediately obvious that the child is unusual. His eyes are black, he never cries, no animal will come near him, and when he finally learns to talk, his voice carries great weight and command for someone so young.*
  (conjecture based on Revan)*

*NOTE: He was born 113 years before he brings the Sith back together after the Great Hyperspace War in 5,000 BBY, which makes this a likely birthdate for him. (The Old Republic Encyclopedia has since confirmed this.)

5,107 BBY
- Tenebrae (age 6) is discovered to have Force abilities, even though his mother and his “father” do not. His “father” confronts his mother, who finally confesses to an affair with Sith Lord Dramath. Enraged, the husband begins beating her, but Tenebrae stops him using the Dark Side to kill him. Young Tenebrae then tortures his mother for months before allowing her to die as fitting punishment for betraying Tenebrae’s “father.” Now an orphan, the powerful Tenebrae uses the Force to dominate the minds of his village so that they bow before him.*
(conjecture based on Revan)*
*NOTE: This assumes Tenebrae is born in 5,113 BBY.

5,103 BBY
• Tenebrae (age 10) has now used the Force to dominate numerous villages on his homeworld, Medriaas. His true father, Sith Lord Dramath, travels to see young Tenebrae for himself, so that he can kill him as a threat or recruit him as a Sith Lord. Tenebrae has other ideas. He uses the Force to kill Lord Dramath. As he continues to gain power, Lord Dramath's territory falls to his firstborn (not Tenebrae), who becomes Lord Dramath II.*
(conjecture based on Revan)*
*NOTE: This assumes Tenebrae is born in 5,113 BBY.

5,100 BBY
• Marka Ragnos is declared Dark Lord of the Sith. He will come to force the other Sith to focus their anger and machinations on him instead of upon expansion, which he fears will only lead to the downfall of the Sith Empire.
(conjecture based on The Golden Age of the Sith and The Dark Side Sourcebook)
• The Poss’Nomin civilization on Illarreen moves from the shores of the world into the better areas inland.*
(conjecture based on Alien Encounters supplement in The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #14)*
*NOTE: This interprets "within a few millennia" as 5,000 years.
• Tenebrae (age 13) manages to take control of his entire planet, Medriaas. He drives off Lord Dramath II, who goes into exile (eventually finding his way to the planet Rekkiad, where he will be buried by his few Sith followers in a tomb with a datacron detailing Tenebrae’s actions and the locations of Sith words). Tenebrae presents himself to Dark Lord of the Sith Marka Ragnos, who dubs him “Lord Vitiate.” Vitiate returns to Medriaas, which he renames “Nathema” and begins extensive studies into the Dark Side that will last the next century.*
(conjecture based on Revan)*
*NOTE: This assumes Tenebrae is born in 5,113 BBY.

5,050 BBY
• Boyle Marcom becomes a starship navigator for the Sith Empire.*
(conjecture based on Precipice)*
*NOTE As of Precipice, he has been a navigator “since the middle of Marka Ragnos’ rule.”
• Yaru Korsin is born to Takara Korsin and her husband.*
(conjecture based on Precipice)*
*NOTE: Yaru was a captain for 20 years as of Precipice, and he became captain 5 years after his brother was born. He is said to be twice as old as his brother, so that places his birthdate here.

5,033 BBY
• Zippa will come into possession of a Sith holocron from this era.
(conjecture based on Shadow Hunter)
• A lone Jedi has a hyperspace mishap and crashes on Yashuvhu in the Unknown Regions. The Jedi is surprised to find the world inhabited by humans, part of a colony with whom contact was lost an unknown number of years ago. The Jedi is unable to leave the world and thus settles there, soon becoming a parent and creating a Jedi bloodline on the world.
(conjecture based on Star Wars: The Roleplaying Game profile for Valara Saar, found on the Wizards of the Coast website)

5,032 BBY
• On Naboo, the Ankura and Otolla Gungans unite.
(conjecture based on Episode I: Visual Dictionary)
• As a symbol of their new unity, the Gungans build the city of Spearhead (later renamed Otoh Gunga) in Lake Paonga.
   (conjecture based on Secrets of Naboo and Galactic Battlegrounds)
• The central bubble wort processing plant of Otah Gunga is constructed.
   (conjecture based on Secrets of Naboo)
• At about the same time that the Gungans unite, the civilization that forced them underwater (the “Elders”) dies out or otherwise leaves the planet, leaving numerous ruins on the surface of Naboo.
   (conjecture based on Episode I Incredible Locations and Nexus of Power)
• A star becomes unstable, forcing the sentients native to one of the planets in the system to migrate to the Kooriva system. They adopt the planet’s name as their own, creating the Koorivar society.*
   (conjecture based on Galactic Power Brokers)*
*NOTE: This interprets “thousands of years ago” as 5,000 years before TPM.

5,025 BBY
• Devore Korsin is born to the father of Yaru Korsin and a woman he had an affair with behind Yaru’s mother Takara’s back on another planet. Devore is quickly accepted by his father, and Yaru becomes the lesser of the two sons in their father’s eyes.
   (conjecture based on Precipice)*
*NOTE: This happens 10 years after he first becomes captain of a starship.
• Seelah is born.*
   (conjecture based on Paragon)*
*NOTE: This assumes that Seelah is the same approximate age as Devore Korsin, her future husband.

5,020 BBY
• Odan-Urr is born.
   (conjecture based on The Golden Age of the Sith)
• Gav and Jori Daragon are born on Cinnagar.
   (conjecture based on The Golden Age of the Sith)
• Yaru Korsin becomes a starship captain for the Sith Empire.
   (conjecture based on Precipice)

5,015 BBY
• Nink the uvak is born on Kesh.
   (conjecture based on Savior)

5,014 BBY
• The daughter of Nazzar’s Emperor-King Prrit Qabaq, Ikree, goes into self-imposed exile, known as “boqeri."
   (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)

5,012 BBY
• The Nazzri civilization experiences economic and political hardship.
   (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
• Around this time, Seelah (the future Seelah Korsin) is already a talented Force healer. She becomes an attendant and foot-groomer for Ludo Kressh.*
   (conjecture based on Paragon)*
*NOTE: This assumes that Seelah is the same approximate age as Devore Korsin, her future husband, since she is 13 at the time of this event.

5,010 BBY
• Yaru Korsin becomes captain of the newly-christened Sith starship Omen. He beats out his father for this command.*
   (conjecture based on Precipice)*
*NOTE: This happens 10 years after he first becomes captain of a starship.
• Sometime in this era, a group of brigands finds their way into the Stygian Caldera, home of the Sith Empire, seeking to discover something of value. Upon encountering the Sith, most of the brigands are wiped out, but one of them, Gloyd, has faced Jedi before and is spared by Naga Sadow for that information.*
  (conjecture based on Paragon)*
*NOTE: This is sometime prior to the Great Hyperspace War, with enough time for Gloyd to become a longtime comrade of Yaru Korsin. This event’s placement is very conjectural.
• On Kesh, around this time, the Keshiri known as Adari marries the famed Neshtovari (uvak-rider) Zhari Vaal, mostly thanks to pressure from Adari’s mother, Eulyn. Adari Vaal is none too thrilled with the marriage, but it affords her the lifestyle of a member of the Neshtovar class, which includes a real house instead of a hut. Over the next nine years, they will have two children: Tona and Finn.*
  (conjecture based on Skyborn)*
*NOTE: Given that Adari complains about her mother needing to get the kids to sleep through the night, I am assuming that the youngest child, Tona, is still very young as of Skyborn. That would mean that Zhari Vaal dies within a year or so of Skyborn, which would place their marriage (which lasted nine years) at this point.

5,007 BBY
• The Caridian Academy is emblazoned with the symbol of the Old Republic Navy.
  (conjecture based on Dark Empire Sourcebook)

5,003 BBY
• Tapani mining companies begin shipping trillions of tons of valuable ore to the Core worlds annually.*
  (conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)*
*NOTE: The LOTE Sector Guide says “several thousand years,” so I arbitrarily chose to place the event here, 5,000 years before LOTE takes place.

5,002 BBY
• Gav and Jori Daragon decline to go to Coruscant for Jedi training, preferring instead to continue working with their parents as hyperspace navigators.
  (conjecture based on The Golden Age of the Sith)
• The civilization on Nazzar changes from a monarchy run by an Emperor-King to a theocratic form of oligarchy, run by the heads of the fourteen sects of the civilization’s religion, the Ulizra.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)

5,001 BBY
• On Kesh, around this time, the Keshiri Neshtovari (uvak-rider) Zhari Vaal dies by falling from his uvak (Nink) into the ocean. His widow, Adari Vaal, is left to raise their two sons, Finn and Tona, whom she really didn’t want in the first place. She inherits their home, thereby giving her a Neshtovar lifestyle, despite being a geologist of only mediocre social standing in the city of Tahv.*
  (conjecture based on Skyborn)*
*NOTE: Given that Adari complains about her mother needing to get the kids to sleep through the night, I am assuming that the youngest child, Tona, is still very young as of Skyborn. That would mean that Zhari Vaal dies within a year or so of Skyborn, though that is conjecture on my part.
• Seelah, a healer and foot-groomer for Ludo Kressh, displeases her master, leading to the execution of her entire family. Sometime later, she chooses to leave Rhelg, sneaking away with Naga Sadow’s forces during their next brief stop on Rhelg. She finds an ally and mate in Devore Korsin, whom she marries. They soon have a child, all as part of Seelah’s intentions to rise to a place of greater prominence within the Sith Empire, away from Ludo Kressh.*
  (conjecture based on Paragon)*
*NOTE: This is sometime prior to the birth of Jariad Korsin to Seelah and Devore. I have assumed that they have the child fairly soon after they got together.

5,000 BBY
• Ood Bnar is born on Myrkr.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
• Jariad Korsin is born to Devore Korsin and Seelah.
  (conjecture based on Precipice)
• A former executive of Corellian Engineering Corporation forms Corellia StarDrive.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Vehicles and Vessels)
• At about this time, the Tarong species makes first contact with any other sentient species on Iri and Disim.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 12: Aliens--“Enemies and Allies”)
• In this era, Raith Sienar’s ancestors construct warships for Empress Teta during the Unification Wars, earning enough credits to make the family wealthy for generations.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Characters)
• Republic archaeologists discover centuries-old skeletons of the Anx species on the planet Shusugaunt in the Raioballo sector. Shortly thereafter, the living Anx are discovered on their native planet Gravlex Med. *
  (conjecture based on The University of Sanbra Guide to Intelligent Life: The Anx) *
NOTE: This rounds “thousands of years ago” to 5,000 years BBY.
• Duros discover the planet Adner and its native Adnerems.
  (conjecture based on Alien Encounters supplement in The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #11)
• Around this time, the star known as Din goes supernova in the Moddell Sector. It is said that radiation from this event is the genetic catalyst for the mutated look of the Sanyassan Marauders. It becomes the Din Pulsar.
  (conjecture based on Endor and the Moddell Sector)
• Cataclysms on several water worlds leave their inhabitants helpless, until a spacefaring race relocates the species from each world to the planet Iskalon. Among these are the Chuh-kyvi, the Frid of Mackar, the Graygl of Danalbeth, and the Stribers from Julsujod III. Together, they become known as different races of Iskalonians.
  (conjecture based on The University of Sanbra Guide to Intelligent Life: The Marvel Series)
• The Chiss homeworld of Csilla becomes locked in an ice age. As a result, the Chiss slowly develop into a very no-nonsense species and adapt technologically to their surroundings. They are quick to form a global government, soon adopting the planet-wide language known as Cheunh. They will also soon develop starfaring technology, perhaps building upon knowledge thought lost after the colonization attempt that created the society. As the government develops, a Cabinet becomes the major governing body, but still answers to the four major ruling houses that predate this modern society—the Csapla (colonial affairs, resources, and agriculture), the Nuruodo (military and foreign affairs), the Inrokini (industry, science, and communication), and the Sabosen (justice, health, and education). *
  (conjecture based on The University of Sanbra Guide to Intelligent Life: The Chiss and The Unknown Regions)
NOTE: The first source says this happened “millennia” and “several thousand years” ago. The second pins it down to circa 5,000 BBY.
• The Old Republic discovers the Epidimi system.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 12: Aliens--“Enemies and Allies”)
• The Jedi face the Stennes Shifters. Realizing that the Shifters are a threat, the Jedi virtually wipe out their entire race of the Stennes species. (Not exactly the Jedi’s most honorable moment.)
  (conjecture based on Shape-Shifters)
• The extremely predatory Kuat Drive Yards forces Core Galaxy Systems out of business, buying the company and getting rid of its name entirely.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Vehicles and Vessels)
• Space battles occur over Tatooine, littering the surface with wreckage which will eventually be buried by the sands.
  (conjecture based on Secrets of Tatooine)
• Odan-Urr, a Jedi historian goes to the Koros system to help Empress Teta unify the last of her worlds, by conquering Kirrek. She succeeds (with the help of Odan-Urr’s battle meditation), but during the final battle, Hok and Timar Daragon die. Their children, Gav and Jori Daragon continue their journeys of hyperspace navigation. After a drone ship is destroyed on one of their routes, Ssk Kahorr places a bounty on their heads and they must escape. The family ship, the Starbreaker 12, impounded by Aarba the Hutt as recompense for a large amount of money the Daragons owe him, is stolen by the two Daragons from Aarba the Hutt’s repair shop. They take off into space and jump into hyperspace randomly. Empress Teta, still on Cinnagar, declares that she will arrest Gav and Jori if they return. Also on Cinnagar, Odan-Urr has visions of future darkness. The Daragons emerge from hyperspace over Korriban, where the funeral for the Dark Lord of the Sith Marka Ragnos is commencing. Ragnos’ death has begun a power struggle between two of his students, Ludo Kressh and Naga Sadow. Both desire to be the next Dark Lord of the Sith. They duel, but their duel is halted with the appearance of Marka Ragnos’ spirit, who tells them to choose their future actions wisely. The Starbreaker 12 is spotted by those attending the funeral, and upon landing, Gav and Jori are immediately taken prisoner. Naga Sadow, realizing that the Daragons come from the Republic and may be useful in his dreams to conquer the Republic, saves them from imprisonment and imminent execution at a fortress on Ziost, killing his old rival Simus (who survived a duel with Marka Ragnos as a disembodied head) in the process. Sadow relocates the Daragons to his fortress on Khar Shian and declares himself Dark Lord of the Sith. He recounts the Daragons escape to make it look as though it was a Republic affront against the Sith Empire. On these false grounds, Sadow calls for war with the Republic. Across the galaxy on Coruscant, Odan-Urr and Empress Teta inform the Senate of Odan-Urr’s premonitions to no avail. Back in the Sith Empire, Ludo Kressh vows to destroy Naga Sadow before he can ruin the Empire. Sadow, in the meantime, has been training Gav in Sith magic. Finally, as his plans to attack the Republic become closer to fruition, Sadow and Kressh’s forces clash in a climactic battle ending in the escape of Kressh, but the destruction of Kressh’s forces. With the majority of his opposition destroyed, Kressh allows Jori to return to the Republic. Unbeknownst to her, Starbreaker 12 now bears a Sith tracking device that will lead Sadow and the Sith forces directly to the Republic. *

(The Golden Age of the Sith)*

NOTE: This event falls in 1,347 BTC on the Treaty of Coruscant calendar.

- Sith experimentalists discover an elixir that prevents aging for a time. If consumed periodically, in theory one could achieve immortality. Unfortunately (for the Sith; fortunately for everyone else), this discovery is achieved too late to use, as the knowledge is quickly lost due to Sith infighting.*

(conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke Van Horn. There is no real indication of when this happens, but the Sith infighting is theorized by Luke to refer to the conflict between Ludo Kressh and Naga Sadow, which seems likely.

- During this era, the doran’enoks, reptilian creatures with limited intellect that have populated Arda I, vanish from Arda I under unknown circumstances.*

(conjecture based on Onslaught at Arda I)*

*NOTE: This is “at the height of the Sith Wars” and seemingly refers to the Sith civilization, not the era of fallen Jedi becoming “Dark Lords of the Sith” without ties to the actual civilization.

- With war between the Old Republic and the Sith Empire on the horizon, Naga Sadow sends the starships Omen (under Commander Yaru Korsin) and Harbinger (under Captain Saes) to gather precious crystals to use in the upcoming struggle at Kirrek. Given his expertise in the mineral field, Yaru’s half-brother, Davore, is aboard as well (having actually tried to take command of the mission but having been rejected by Naga Sadow for the command), as is the miner (and former field medic) that he took as a lover, Seelah, and their son, Jariad.

(conjecture based on Precipice)

- Jori Daragon returns to Cinnagar only to find herself arrested and Starbreaker 12 taken by Ssk Kahorr in recompense for the destruction of his drone ship (destroyed using one of the Daragons’ hyperspace routes). In the course of one day, Jori is arrested, tried, convicted, sentenced, and relocated to a slave labor penal colony on Ronika. Odan-Urr’s Jedi Master Ooroo visits and tells him that while the Senate did not heed his warnings of a coming invasion, the Jedi did, and that Empress Teta has been secretly marshaling her forces, in conjunction with the Jedi, to combat the coming menace. In the Sith Empire, Ludo Kressh tries one last time to warn his fellow Sith of the folly of Sadow’s plans of invasion, but Sadow orders the destruction of Kressh and his ship—an order which is carried out by the unwitting Gav Daragon. Once a large enough of a fleet has been gathered at Khar Shian, Sadow promotes Gav to command of the Sith fleet, and orders the fleet into hyperspace. The Great Hyperspace War has begun. On Ronika, Jori manages to escape by commandeering an ore ship and makes her way back to Cinnagar. Upon arrival, she warns Empress Teta of the coming Sith invasion, confirming Odan-Urr’s premonition of a coming darkness. The Sith invasion fleet finally emerges into Republic space and in its first act of war, destroys the Starbreaker 12, now commanded by Ssk Kahorr. The fleet begins attacking major Republic worlds, including Coruscant. The size of the fleet is augmented by Sith illusions created by Sadow. The Sith fleet employs dropships of Massassi warriors and great beasts of war for land campaigns. Empress Teta strikes a deal with the newly conquered Kirrek populace and the Kirrek forces join Teta’s forces in launching against the invasion. Once in Cinnagar space, Gav Daragon proceeds to the planet to find his sister, Jori. Once he gets near Aarba's repair shop, however, his Sith guards murder Aarba the Hutt. Arriving on the scene just in time to see Gav standing over Aarba's body, Jori attacks Gav with a lightsaber given to her by Odan-Urr. Realizing that he has been used and turned against those he loved, Gav escapes from Jori and journeys to Sadow’s base at Primus Goluud to stop the Sith Lord’s plans. With Gav attacking him, Sadow is distracted, and the Sith illusions across the Republic begin to fade, allowing forces across the Republic to repel the invasion. On Kirrek, the invasion is stopped as well, but Master Ooroo dies in the assault. Sadow challenges Gav to a direct confrontation at his base, but once Gav arrives, Sadow has escaped. Gav, at the base, informs the fleet led by Empress Teta that has arrived in Sith space that with the majority of Sith forces in the Republic, the Empire itself is virtually defenseless. Sadow attempts to destroy the fleet by using Sith magic to cause Primus Goluud to go supernova, destroying his base and Gav along with it. The fleet barely manages to survive. What little is left of the Sith fleet, including Naga Sadow, return to the core of the Sith Empire only to find that Ludo Kressh did not die with his ship and has declared himself Dark Lord of the Sith. Kressh now rules the Sith Empire. Kressh banishes Sadow from the Empire. In retaliation, Sadow crashes a ship into Kressh’s flagship. The Republic fleet arrives to finish its job destroying the Sith Empire, and Sadow escapes. Once out of range, he detonates Denarii nova, destroying much of the Republic fleet. The Republic wins by default and continues to "mop up" remaining Sith forces. During the ensuing victory celebration, Odan-Urr searches through damaged Sith ships and discovers a Sith holocron (the so-called “Dark Holocron”). With it in hand, he decides to establish a Jedi learning center. Jori takes over Aarba’s repair shop and becomes a legitimate businesswoman. Naga Sadow and his remaining Massassi forces arrive at Yavin IV to regroup and establish a new base. He orders the building of great temples, in the hopes that one day, the Sith Empire will rise again.*

*NOTE: The Comics Companion incorrectly lists the date for this story as 4,990 BBY, which would somehow have it taking place ten years after Golden Age of the Sith. That is, of course, an error. The authors apparently used the incorrect dates that were originally shown on the inside cover timelines for the Fall of the Sith Empire mini-series, rather than using the corrected dates that came later. (This event falls in 1,347 BTC on the Treaty of Coruscant calendar.)

- During the Great Hyperspace War, the Republic cruiser Galaaron discovers the planet Durace.
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn.

- During the Great Hyperspace War, the Bounty Hunters Guild works alongside the Jedi by partnering on various hunts. This leads to a brief false belief that the Guild actually serves the Jedi, rather than being paid partners at this time.
  (conjecture based on The Bounty Hunter Code)

- *In the wake of the Great Hyperspace War, the Sith pull back into their territory beyond the Stygian Caldera, but the Republic’s Supreme Chancellor Pultimo orders an immediate invasion of Sith space to eliminate their threat. When surrender seems the Sith Empire’s only option, Dark Lord Dakhan orders suicide attacks that force the Republic into a temporary.
The Star Wars Timeline Gold: Legends Timeline, Vol. 1

Just before the Omen leaves Phaegon III, Captain Yaru Korsin receives a secret message from his mother, Takara Korsin, who claims to have had a vision of Yaru leading a grand Sith society, no longer under the control of the Red Sith. Knowing that such information could be considered treasonous to the Red Sith, and particularly to Naga Sadow, he hides the scroll with the message, which was hand-delivered, inside his captain’s chair aboard the Omen.

(Conjecture based on Secrets)

Above Phaegon III, the Sith vessel Harbinger and Omen are mining Lignan crystals that can enhance one’s Force powers (especially toward the Dark Side). The Harbinger is commanded by Sith Lord Saes Rrogon, former Jedi Padawan to Jedi Knight Relin Druur. Relin is also present in a small Jedi craft, as is his new Padawan, Drev Hassin. Their mission is to stop whatever the Sith are doing at Phaegon III. Relin boards the Harbinger and discovers the Lignan, then tries to sabotage the ship’s hyperdrive. The Sith become aware of his activities, forcing a duel between Relin and Saes, even as Drev is killed in space by Sith starfighters. Relin loses an arm and nearly loses himself to the Dark Side for a moment, but the Harbinger is rocked by the sabotage and a suicide crash of Drev into the bridge. Attempting to escape into hyperspace, the Harbinger strikes the Omen, sending it off-course, even as the Harbinger itself, along with a small escape pod launched by Relin to escape are yanked nearly into hyperspace. They travel at nearly the speed of light until Saes can use the Lignan’s power to stop the ship’s uncontrolled journey, but they will find, upon coming to a stop, that their trip at near-lightspeed, rather than through hyperspace, has caused them (thanks to relativity) to experience a short time passing for themselves, but for the galaxy at large, over five millennia will have passed . . . (To be continued below . . .)

(Crosscurrent)

In the latter days of the Great Hyperspace War, the Sith vessels Harbinger and the Omen come under fire from a Jedi craft while carrying a cargo of precious Lignan crystals from Phaegon III for the engagement on Kirrek. The Harbinger and its Blades (starfighters) engage the Jedi craft as Commander Yaru Korsin intends to make a run for it to deliver his cargo sooner than the Harbinger. However, when the Harbinger is badly damaged, it crashes into the Omen, just as the latter jumps to hyperspace. The resultant damage and a mass shadow in hyperspace cause the ship to emerge heavily damaged over an unknown world (later revealed to be Kesh), where the Omen crash lands (in what the natives call the Cetajan Mountains, which the Sith will later rename the Takara Mountains). Only 355 individuals (crew, passengers, and Massassi warriors intended for the Kirrek battlefield) survive the crash landing on a rocky precipice, but many die shortly thereafter, including many of the Massassi (led by the surviving Ravilan Wroth), who cannot easily survive in this particular environment. When blamed for their circumstances, their navigator, the old Ho’Din Boyle Marcom, is killed by Yaru’s half-brother, Davore, who decapitates him with his lightsaber. In the aftermath, Yaru continues to try to hold the survivors together, with the help of his engineer, Gloyd. (To be continued below . . .)

(Precipice)

On the planet Kesh, Adari Vaal, lives with her mother (Eulyn) and two children by the deceased Neshtovari (uvak-rider) Zhari Vaal, Tona and Finn. Adari is being harassed by her own people for being a heretic. Keshiri religious beliefs say that, long ago, the Skyborn battled beings from the Otherside. Before defeating the beings from the Otherside, the Skyborn were injured, and the sand that they had as blood dropped into the oceans of Kesh to create the continents there. Adari, a Keshiri geologist, believes that the mountains (such as the Cetajan Mountains) were formed by volcanic activity over the eons, which pits her science against their religion. She is called to the Circle Eternal to answer for her heresy to the Skyborn and the presumed leader of their culture, Izri Dazh. When the Omen crashes into the Cetajan Mountains, is it believed to be a sign from the Skyborn that they are angry with Adari’s heresy. (To be continued below . . .)

(Skyborn)

Two days after the crash, Yaru returns to the ship to activate its transmitter, hoping to rejoin the Sith and avoid punishment if Naga Sadow believes they have tried to run off with the crystals themselves. Davore, resentful man that he is, is already aboard, hopped up on spice. He believes that Sadow will believe they have gone AWOL already, so he intends to make sure their hands appear clean when they return to the Sith Empire (which is unlikely, given that the ship is dead and its transmitter is as well). Devore attacks Yaru with his lightsaber, and the two do battle aboard the Omen, even as it tips back and forth on the precipice. Yaru gets the better of his half-brother, and Devore ends up hanging from the ship over the ocean far below, asking for help. Yaru offers his hand, but once he has it, he makes the decision to release Devore to his doom for the greater good. He hides the circumstances of Devore’s death from his lover, Seelah, and their infant son, Jariad, even as he informs the others that they need to settle in to survive on this planet. (He also claims to have sent a transmission for aid, but no aid will be forthcoming.) Yaru also knows something else the others do not: the winged creatures he had seen a few times since arrival have riders on them, which means the world has sentients somewhere. As for Seelah, she bides her time, knowing that Yaru must have had a hand in Devore’s death. She will get her vengeance one day . . .

(Precipice)

• Adari Vaal escapes being accosted by the populace of Tahv by leaping aboard her dead husband’s uvak, Nink, and taking to the sky. She finds herself flying to the mountains and is above the Omen when Yaru Korsin allows his brother, Devore, to fall to his death. Adari heeds Yaru’s psychic call for help through the Force and soon lands. She is taken in by the Sith survivors, who need her help to get off of the mountain, given the treacherous terrain. She agrees and ferries them back to her community, Tahv, where she is hailed as an envoy of the Skyborn, which is precisely whom the Sith survivors pretend to be. Over time, Adari (who learned to communicate with the Sith via Force communication and, more practically, a special cybernetic translator used by Sith survivor Hestus) becomes close to Yaru, but she finds Seelah Korsin to be unnerving, knowing that it was Seelah’s husband, Devore, whom Yaru killed on the mountain, just as the ocean had once killed Adari’s (rather dull) husband, Zhari. The Sith are determined to fix the Omen, which includes protecting it until that time. They enlist local aid, supplanting the Neshtovar as the leaders of the Keshiri, and being building a temple around the Omen for the time being. Adari, however, knows that the metals that the Sith need to repair their ship are not to be found on Kesh, or, if they are, they cannot be found near the surface. The Sith are stuck on Kesh for a very long time to come.

(Skyborn)

• On Kesh, the Lost Tribe brings the “Sandpipes” used for timekeeping from the Omen down to Tahv, since they will continue using the galactic standard calendar, even though it does not fit the rotations of Kesh. It is eventually discovered that the Sandpipes keep time one second slower while in Tahv than they did on the mountain with the Omen. This is not calculated until the Sith have been on Kesh for two millennia.

(conjecture based on Pantheon)

• On Kesh, Seelah Korsin, still seeking revenge for the death of her husband, Devore Korsin, marries Devore’s brother (and murderer), the Lost Tribe of the Sith’s leader, Commander (later “Grand Lord”) Yaru Korsin. This allows her to gain power, while becoming close enough to Yaru to enact fitting revenge one day. Together, they have a child, Nida, who is the half-sister of Jariad, Seelah’s child with Devore.

(conjecture based on Paragon)

• As a means of solidifying their power, the Lost Tribe of the Sith on Kesh study the legends of the Skyborn battling beings from the Otherside and discover that those myths were based on even earlier ones, wherein the Protectors (the basis for the Skyborn) were in a state of conflict with the so-called Destroyers (the basis for the Otherside beings). Most importantly, the Destroyers were to come back one day as they swept through the galaxy, destroying life, and the Protectors were meant to return to defeat the Destroyers. The Sith begin portraying themselves as the Protectors, rather than the Skyborn, in order to undercut any sense that the “Sons of the Skyborn” (the Neshtovar or uvak-riders) might somehow claim power from their “relationship” to the Skyborn (Sith).

(conjecture based on Paragon)

• During the era of the Great Hyperspace War, Jedi Anavus Svag has his memories and knowledge implanted into a holocron.
During the era of the Great Hyperspace War, the Sith Holocron that once belonged to King Adas is in the hands of Lord Garu. He dies around this time, leaving the holocron abandoned on the planet Ashas Ree.

Discovering a larval space slug on the hull if the ship he took to Yavin IV, Naga Sadow begins using Sith alchemy to transform the creature into a Sith wyrm.

Several hundred Jedi Masters converge on Arkania and destroy the Sith library of Veeshas Tuwan.

In the wake of the Great Hyperspace War, the Sith species begins to slowly die out.

In the wake of the Great Hyperspace War, the Jedi Order is given land on Coruscant. They are expected to create a fortress there in case invaders ever reach Coruscant again, but the Jedi simply use the land for a simple training center, which slowly grew. This would later be site of the Jedi Temple. What many will not learn, however, is that the site of the Jedi Temple is not random. It is placed over a very powerful sort of "Force well" that the Jedi discovered on the planet.

In the wake of the Great Hyperspace War, the general rule of not attacking medical vessels in war becomes standard throughout most of the galaxy, right up until the era of the Clone Wars, when the Confederacy of Independent Systems will break this unwritten law of war.

In the wake of the Great Hyperspace War, a small number of Sith devotees and Dark Side adherents retreat to the planet Thule, which is already home to a secret Sith regiment, which hides itself from prying eyes via the Dark Side. These Sith remnants await the day when the Sith will return and strike against the Republic again.

In the wake of the Great Hyperspace War and the century that follows, in economic competition with Koros, Kaikieluus allows unchecked industrial sprawl to ruin much of its countryside. At the same time, urban centers are ignored and allowed to become ghettos and crime hubs. As Hutt and other criminal enterprises begin moving into the area, mayors of the major cities begin walling off their city centers and cutting off utilities. Anarchy breaks out and, hoping to prevent major financial losses, House Praji moves most of its operations to Coruscant.

In the wake of the Great Hyperspace War, Elcho Kressh, son of Ludo Kressh, who has been sent away during the conflict by his father, survives the conflict. He will eventually build an army of various bands outside of normal Sith ranks to stage a new assault on the Republic, but it will never happen because he will drink too much the night before the invasion and die from a ruptured stomach, his group falling apart without its leader.

In the wake of the Great Hyperspace War: In the wake of the Great Hyperspace War, a new, secret organization, the Star Cabal, is formed to redirect and otherwise "save" civilization in the galaxy by manipulating it behind the scenes.

In the wake of the Great Hyperspace War, the Republic begins construction of new military outposts/colonies beyond known space to prevent another surprise invasion. *

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke Van Horn.

Soon after the Republic begins to establish new outposts and colonies in response to the Great Hyperspace War, an ex-starship captain named Magnus leads a coup to take over the new outpost on O’reen, intending to transform it into a disciplined military colony. *

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke Van Horn.
• In the early days of the Lost Tribe of the Sith’s settlement on Kesh, they begin to teach the Keshiri, who lack basic mathematics, mathematical skills. They take to the skills as quickly as they have with other arts.
  (conjecture based on Pantheon)
• Odan-Urr records his experiences in the Great Hyperspace War into the Tedryn Holocron. Oddly, he notes that the Holocron somehow “knows” that Naga Sadow escaped the final confrontation of the war and has disappeared with his followers. This suggests that the Tedryn Holocron can be updated by either supernatural or long-distance means. (To be continued below . . . )
  (Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)

Tales of the Jedi (comic series: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)
Tales of the Jedi Omnibus: Volume I (comic series: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)
The Golden Age of the Sith (comic series: Kevin J. Anderson)
  Conquest and Unification (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)
  Into the Unknown (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)
  Funeral for a Dark Lord (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)
  The Fabric of an Empire (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)
  Pawns of a Sith Lord (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)
  The Flight of Starbreaker 12 (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)
The Fall of the Sith Empire (comic series: Kevin J. Anderson)
  Desperate Measures (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)
  Forces in Collision (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)
  First Encounter (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)
  The Dogs of War (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)
  End of an Empire (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)

Crosscurrent (novel series: Paul S. Kemp)
Crosscurrent (novel: Paul S. Kemp)
  Chapter 1
    The Past
  Chapter 2
    The Past
  Chapter 3
    The Past
  Chapter 4
    The Past
  Chapter 5
    The Past
  Chapter 6
    The Past
  Chapter 7
    The Past
  Chapter 8
    The Past

Lost Tribe of the Sith (ebook series: John Jackson Miller)
Precipice (ebook: John Jackson Miller)
  Chapters 1 – 2
Skyborn (ebook: John Jackson Miller)
  Chapter 1
Precipice (ebook: John Jackson Miller)
  Chapters 3 – 4
Skyborn (ebook: John Jackson Miller)
  Chapters 2 – 4

  History and Holocrons
Significant Battles
The Great Hyperspace War

4,999 BBY
- Magnus succeeds in turning the outpost on O’reen into a disciplined military colony.*
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*
*NOTE: Information provided by Luke Van Horn. This is within a year of Magnus’ coup.
- In the wake of the Great Hyperspace War, Sith Lord Vitiate (Tenebrae), who had stayed entirely out of the conflict between Ludo Kresh and Naga Sadow, sends out researchers to discover the location of the long-lost homeworld of the Sith, Dromund Kaas. As soon as they discover that location, he kills the researchers and sends out a call to other Sith that are fleeing in the aftermath of Naga Sadow’s defeat. He calls for a great council to be held on his planet, Nathema, where he will carry out a Sith ritual that will reveal power through the Dark Side that no one could imagine. Not all Sith travel to Nathema for the ritual, but at least 100 do so. Vitiate uses the Dark Side to dominate the minds of those Sith Lords to force them to take part in the ritual without second thoughts. He then completes the ritual, which sucks all life energy (and the Force itself!) from Nathema, leaving it a husk of a world. (It even fries the memory cores of the droids present, wiping out records of his actions.) The energy he has unleashed is taken into his own body, turning him effectively immortal and the most powerful Sith ever. To other Sith who were not present, he claims that the devastation of Nathema was caused by the Republic and their Jedi allies. He then leads the Sith on a journey of nearly 100 years to “find” Dromund Kaas, even though he knows where it is all along. By leading them in this journey and revealing his newfound powers, he makes himself into a virtual god to the remnants of the Sith Empire. (As for Nathema, visiting the world becomes a death penalty offense, as the Emperor removes all information on his past from Sith records.)*
  (conjecture based on Revan and The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
*NOTE: This Vitiate does this soon after the Great Hyperspace War, which The Old Republic Encyclopedia has pinned down to this year, not the end of the previous year. (Revan claims that the journey to “find” Dromund Kaas takes about 100 years, which fits with what is noted on the website for The Old Republic and its videos of galactic history. However, The Old Republic Encyclopedia shrinks this to “20 years,” and the same book gives a date of 4,980 BBY for this event. For the moment, I am assuming that the novel and specific date on the website are correct.

4,998 BBY
- Naga Sadow goes into suspended animation.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Chronology)
- On Antar 4, the indigenous Gotal race begins using several species of animals for transportation.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- Around this time, the Numol’erul Niktos that live underwater cut themselves off from the rest of Nikto society, becoming the sixth “lost tribe” of Nikto on Kintan.*
  (conjecture based on Lords of Nal Hutta)*
*NOTE: This assumes that the “present” for Lords of Nal Hutta is about 2 ABY, given that it references events in that year at one point. It is about 5,000 years before that “present.”

4,996 BBY
- Willm Lywin begins escorting a Jedi Praxeum based on a starship.
  (conjecture based on The Most Dangerous Foe)
- The Jedi Shadows, a secretive band of Jedi Knights who devoted much of their time to gathering information on the users of the Dark Side of the Force, including the Sith, are formed. They are often charged with infiltrating Sith territory in order to gather information.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion via TimeTales, verbatim)

4,995 BBY
- Around this time, Nida Korsin is born to Yaru and Seelah Korsin.
  (conjecture based on Savior)
• The Klatooinian Trade Guild is formed.*
  (conjecture based on Smuggler’s Log supplement in The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #11)“

*NOTE: This assumes that the Smuggler’s Log entries are set about a year after ROTJ, which is derived from Platt’s mention of the Pentastar Alignment in The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #5’s Smuggler’s Log.

4,992 BBY
• Ebya T’dell is born on Kesh to Lost Tribe of the Sith miner Nafjan and Bridge Cadet Kanika. (conjecture based on Paragon)

4,985 BBY
• Shortly before the purge of the Red Sith from the Lost Tribe of the Sith, Grand Lord Yaru Korsin claims the title of “Grand Lord” (which the Keshiri call him) as his actual Sith title as the Lost Tribe’s leader. He also renames the Cetajan Mountains the “Takara Mountains” after his mother. (conjecture based on Paragon)
• Shortly before the purge of the Red Sith from the Lost Tribe of the Sith, Gorem, wardroom bearer and servant for Seelah Korsin, dies by coming into contact with water that has been contaminated with cyanogen silicate aboard the wreck of the Omen. Gorem is replaced in his duties by Tilden Kaah. (conjecture based on Paragon)
• On Kesh, Seelah Korsin has become the lead healer and crèche mother (midwife) for the Lost Tribe of the Sith and the Keshiri with whom they have settled. The Sith have become the “Skyborn” and “Protectors” of the Keshiri, drawing upon old Keshiri religious beliefs for their own benefit. Seelah, still raising her son Jariad, her child from her first husband, Devore Korsin has now coupled with Devore’s brother (and killer), Commander Yaru Korsin, with whom she has a second child. Nida. She goes about her daily routine with her personal aide and servant, Tilden Kaah, while assisting Yaru in guiding the Lost Tribe. Things have become difficult, as something in the environment led to the deaths of all of their Massassi warriors upon arrival on Kesh fifteen years earlier, and the few members of the Sith species (the “Fifty-Seven”), or “Red Sith,” have been unable to bear children (more specifically: they can conceive children, but those children always die within a day of being born), whether with each other or with the Keshiri. Eventually, if the Sith are not able to get off of Kesh, the only remaining Sith will be those who are either human or human-Keshiri offspring. After yet another clash of ideas between the Lost Tribe’s “Grand Lord” Yaru Korsin and the Fifty-Seven’s de facto factional leader, the Red Sith Ravilan Wroth, Ravilan and some of his Red Sith head out for various locations further out into the Lost Tribe’s territory, where they are studying local algae in hopes that the bioluminescent lifeform might be used to light Sith structures. Soon, though, word comes from Ravilan: the entire local Keshiri population of the city of Tetsubal is dead. Warning that whatever disease killed them could leap from Keshiri to humans and Red Sith, Ravilan pushes for cutting off the Keshiri. They burn Tetsubal to clear any remaining disease, then return to the Takara Mountains and Tahv, intending to pull the Sith all back to their redoubt, but they first send out scouts to check other settlements. Word eventually comes back that other settlements are infected, particularly at the Ragnos Lakes region, where all of Ravilan’s Red Sith had been sent to check on the algae project. Seelah then calls Yaru and reveals that she knows what happened. Recently, a member of the tribe (Gorem) had come upon water in the Omen’s remains that had been contaminated with cyanogen silicate, which, under normal circumstances, is a Massassi cauterizing agent. With water, it is deadly. Ravilan had seen this incident and used the cyanogen silicate to poison the water supply at Tetsubal, killing everyone there, in order to force the Sith to isolate themselves and start focusing on leaving Kesh instead of living among the Keshiri. Now, every place where the Red Sith had gone under Ravilan’s orders is facing the same contamination. Grand Lord Korsin orders the execution of all of the conspirators, the Fifty-Seven, which means the genocide of all of the remaining Red Sith on Kesh. The last to die is Ravilan, who confesses to having contaminated the water supply of Tetsubal but nowhere else. Before he is executed by Seelah’s son, Jariad, Seelah reveals to him that she was the one who contaminated the Ragnos Lakes settlements in order to implicate the Red Sith once she knew what the Red Sith had done to Tetsubal. This allowed her to instigate the destruction of the Red Sith as part of her vision that the future of the Sith lay in human Sith Lords, the direction in which Naga Sadow was heading, not in Red Sith like her former master, Ludo Kressh. She has also, through her position as healer and midwife, been the one who has killed the newborn Red Sith upon birth, as there was never a real natural reason for the deaths. She had waited a long time to purge the Red Sith from their society, and now that part in her plan is done. Now, she and Jariad will continue waiting for their moment to take revenge on Yaru for killing Devore. Unbeknownst to Seelah, her own servant, Tilden Kaah, has been keeping tabs on her. He secretly reports her manipulations to destroy the Red Sith to the leader of the Keshiri’s own local resistance group, plotting to rid Kesh of the Sith. Their leader is the very woman who brought the Sith to Tahv in the first place: Adari Vaal . . .

(Paragon)

- In the wake of the deaths of the Red Sith on Kesh, the Sith ascribe the event to doubts against their authority as the Skyborn and/or the Protectors. To prove the Sith’s “divine” powers, they bring a dissenter into the Circle Eternal and let him rant, only for Gloyd, off to the side, to secretly Force choke him to death for defying the will of Yaru Korsin. (conjecture based on Savior)

- On Kesh, the Red Sith will fall into legend. Within two millennia, Ravilan Wroth will be considered the leader of the “Different Ones,” future generations’ name for the Red Sith. (conjecture based on Pantheon)

- On Kesh, in the years following the purge of the Red Sith from the Lost Tribe of the Sith’s ranks, the Lost Tribe’s society, based out of the capital city of Tahv and a new Sith Temple (built around the remains of the Omen, which they call the “Ship of Destiny”), continues to grow around a Sith hierarchy, building upon Yaru Korsin claiming the title of “Grand Lord” as an official Sith title, rather than just the term the native Keshiri use for him. In Jedi terms, “Younglings” are known as “Tyros.” “Padawans” are simply “Apprentices.” “Knights” are “Sabers.” “Masters” are known, as with the Jedi, as “Masters.” Just as the Jedi Order has its own Jedi High Council (or Jedi Council), the Lost Tribe of Sith, as they come to call themselves, has the Circle of Lords as its ruling council, which includes thirteen “Lords,” seven “High Lords” above them, and the “Grand Lord” above all.* (conjecture based on Omen and Paragon)*

*NOTE: The terminology of the Lost Tribe might very well be the terminology used in the old Sith Empire, but I have yet to ever see anything to that effect, given that most of these titles did not exist until Christie Golden wrote Omen.

Lost Tribe of the Sith [continued] (ebook series: John Jackson Miller)
Paragon (ebook: John Jackson Miller)
Chapters 1 – 4

4,975 BBY

- Nida Korsin is made leader of the new Skyborn Rangers, a group of Sith hobby uvak-riders. She is given the title by her father, Yaru Korsin, and it is a move that is spurred on by her mother, Seelah, who intends to use it to get Nida out of the way of her revenge on Yaru for her husband’s death. Around the same time, Yaru allows Seelah’s son with her late husband Devore, Jariad Korsin, to lead and train a new team of (future) experts in lightsaber combat, the Sabers. (conjecture based on Savior)

- Twenty-five years after the crash of the Omen on Kesh, Seelah Korsin’s plan of revenge against her current husband, Yaru Korsin, for the death of her original husband (and Yaru’s brother), Devore Korsin, is nearing fruition. After a quarter of a century on Kesh, it is obvious to all of the stranded Sith that repairing the Omen to return to the galaxy at large is no longer a possibility. Thus, Grand Lord Yaru Korsin presides over a celebration of the Sith’s arrival on the world as a turning point in their time on Kesh. They now number nearly 600 and intend (as if they had a choice) to remain on Kesh and live among the Keshiri, who now view them as the legendary Protectors. Of the non-human Sith, only Gloyd remains. Also at the ceremony, as expected, is Seelah and his confidant, Adari Vaal, who is secretly the leader of the Keshiri underground resistance moment. The daughter of Seelah and Yaru, Nida Korsin, is also present, now a Skyborn Ranger, leader of a group of Sith uvak-riders, and Tona Vaal, Adari’s surviving son, is the Rangers traveling stable master. Seelah’s other child, her son by Devore, High Lord Jariad Korsin, is there as well, plotting secretly with his mother against his stepfather. Jariad is leader of the Sabers, a sort of upper rank of Sith beneath the High Lords, whom he is training to be the elite of the Sith swordsmen. After the ceremony, Yaru visits Adari as Tona helps Nida with her mount. Little does Yaru know that Tona is there to keep track of the Rangers, even as Tilden Kaah, aide to Seelah, is working with them as well. As Seelah and Yaru prepare to move her medcenter down to the new temple built around relocated remains of the Omen, and Jariad supposedly heads north, the resistance believes that the time to strike has arrived. When Yaru and his men arrive at the medcenter, he and his bodyguards are attacked by Jariad and his Sabers, who really went up there to meet his mother instead of going north. Even as the confrontation so long in coming begins to take shape, they are startled when the Keshiri stable hands, loyal to Tona and the resistance, steal the Sith’s uvaks and take to the skies. The Neshtovar, the old uvak-riding group of Keshiri, had been allowed to be the stable hands because of their knowledge of the uvaks, but now they have turned the tables on their “betters” with Adari, joining them aboard her own uvak, the only one a Keshiri was allowed to keep, Nink. As Seelah relishes seeing the Sabers, led by Jariad, hunting down Gloyd and Yaru, she is shocked by the arrival of Nida and the Skyborn Rangers. The Keshiri had managed to steal uvaks from all of the Sith except for the Rangers, thanks to Nida’s informants, gathered over the years, and Tona, who had grown to like Nida and had been convinced to reveal the plot. Seelah believed that by pushing for Nida to lead the Rangers, she would prevent the girl from receiving true Sith training, but Yaru’s local confidants saw to that anyway: The resistance, without the other uvaks, which would have cut off the Sith on their mountain, instead head for a desolate island to hide out and rebuild society for themselves, still at least being free of the Sith. In order to make sure the Sith can never use the uvaks again, Adari uses Nink’s powerful call (as the oldest uvak) to draw the other uvaks with Nink into a volcano, destroying them all. By the next morning, things have changed. Gloyd is dead, but his suicide by a bomb took out many of Seelah and Jariad’s loyal followers. Yaru attempted to throw Jariad from the cliff’s edge, just as he had with Devore over two decades earlier, but Yaru died in the attempt . . . prompting Nida to then kill Jariad the same way. Seelah awakens to find herself paralyzed with Nida at her side. Now broken physically by the force of Gloyd’s destructive blast, Seelah will barely be able to care for herself. She must, however, as Nida reveals Yaru’s last testament. Nida is now the Grand Lord, and the High Lords have agreed. Yaru deemed the mountain as a place that is now forbidden, meaning that no one will go there, barring uvak riders (from the few uvak saved by the Rangers) dropping supplies from above. Why would they need supplies? Simple: Nida is leaving her mother and nemesis there to either die or live on in absolute solitude as a broken, pitiful version of her former self. The Lost Tribe now has a new leader and a new mission: rule of Kesh, under Grand Lord Nida Korsin.

(Savior)

- Based on the testament of Yaru Korsin, the Lost Tribe of the Sith begins the practice of killing the wives and consorts of Grand Lords upon the death of a Grand Lord. This is meant to keep spouses and lovers from conspiring against the Grand Lords.
  (conjecture based on Pantheon)
- On Kesh, disfigured and other “undesirable” Sith that had been banished by Seelah Korsin will eventually form a group known as Force 57. Future groups who instead follow Seelah’s example will become known as the Sisters of Seelah.
  (conjecture based on Pantheon)
- During the reign of Nida Korsin, she will establish a timekeeping and historical archive in Tahv for the Lost Tribe of the Sith.
  (conjecture based on Pantheon)
- The death of Yaru Korsin becomes the basis for a new Lost Tribe of the Sith tradition: Testament Day. Every twenty-five years, the Sith will gather in Tahv to hear the last testament of Grand Lord Yaru Korsin played back from a Sith holocron. From here on, Yaru Korsin will be said to have “transcended” physical existence, rather than dying.
The Star Wars Timeline Gold: Legends Timeline, Vol. 1

Unbeknownst to the Lost Tribe of the Sith on Kesh, Adari Vaal has not died while destroying the uvaks. Instead, she finds herself adrift in the ocean. She washes up on the shore of Kesh’s larger continent, Alanciar, a land unknown to the Lost Tribe (except, secretly, Yaru Korsin). There, she meets the native Keshiri and tells them of the danger of the Sith back on the continent she came from (Keshtah). The information she provides becomes the Keshtah Chronicle, and she becomes known as the “Herald” and the “Rock of Kesh,” upon whose warnings Alanciar builds and readies itself for an inevitable Sith invasion one day. The anniversary of the day she arrived becomes known as Observance Day to remind everyone to be vigilant against future invasion.

(Sources: Pantheon, Pandemonium, Purgatory)

Lost Tribe of the Sith [continued] (ebook series: John Jackson Miller)
Savior (ebook: John Jackson Miller)
Chapters 1 – 4

4,960 BBY
- On Kesh, Nida Korsin’s first child, Donellan, is born. He would be the next Grand Lord by heredity, but he will wait too long to make his move. When Nida finally passes away years later, Donellan’s father, the Lord Consort, is also killed, as per wishes in Yaru Korsin’s will. This leaves a system of succession by merit, as Nida wanted, and Donellan is simply not capable. He will eventually die an old man, and his inactions will have ended the Korsin hereditary dynasty on Kesh. His birth will be marked as Donellan’s Day or the “Day of the Dispossessed,” a reminder to all Sith to make their move when the time is right.

(Sources: Pantheon, Pandemonium)

4,904 BBY
- Around this time, the Sith Empire, left to crumble in defeat after the Great Hyperspace War, is revitalized and resurrected when the Sith finally reach Dromund Kaas, led there by their Dark Emperor, formerly known as Lord Vitiate. Once settled, the Emperor goes into seclusion, leaving the day-to-day rule of the Sith Empire to his Dark Council. As Kaas City is created as the Empire’s new capital city, the remnants of the ancient Dark Temple on the planet is sealed due to dangerous apparitions inside, and the Emperor has a new Citadel built, from which to rule. He also carries out dark rituals that damage the ionosphere to turn the world into one of storms. The Imperial Military is built under the guidance of Odile Vaiken, who structures the military and requires compulsory military service for all able-bodied results. Vaiken becomes the Empire’s first “Grand Moff.” The government will come to include the Ministries of War, Intelligence, and Logistics. The Dark Council divides its authority among Spheres of Influence that include Defense of the Empire, Military Offense, Military Strategy, Imperial Intelligence, Ancient Knowledge, Production and Logistics, Expansion and Diplomacy, Laws and Justice, Biotic Science, Technology, Sith Philosophy, and the Keeper of Mysteries. Darth Zavakon, head of the Sphere of Ancient Knowledge realizes that the Sith who are seeking and exploring ancient ruins are not revealing their full findings in order to keep information for themselves, so he brings together and cross-trains Imperial officers and civilian experts into a new group to gather such information, which impresses the Dark Council with its findings so much that the Imperial Reclamation Service is born. During the Sith Empire’s infancy on Dromund Kaas, while the Emperor is in one of his periods of seclusion, Darth Lokess, annoyed with having to wait in “exile” before the Empire can attack the Republic again, gathers a Sith army around a secret meeting of the Dark Council, urging them to join him in a plot to overthrow the Emperor (with the army there to kill any who refuse). They stand against the Emperor, who has learned of this plot, and he instantly kills all of the Dark Council members except Lokess, who vanishes into the Citadel to be tortured for decades (perhaps centuries) to come. This first purge of the Dark Council will be the last until Darth Nyriss attempts a similar coup centuries later. In its wake, the entire Dark Council is replaced with new Darths.

(Sources: The Old Republic, Revan, The Old Republic Encyclopedia, the timeline presented on StarWarsTheOldRepublic.com and information provided directly by Leland Chee via email)*

*NOTE: This event takes place 1,251 BTC on the Treaty of Coruscant calendar. Bear in mind that The Old Republic Encyclopedia instead puts this at 4,980 BBY, based on the apparently erroneous assumption that this takes about 20 years, not nearly 100, as in other sources.

4,896 BBY
- The reign of Nida Korsin amongst the Lost Tribe of the Sith ends after an unprecedented 79 years. As a commemoration of her elevation to Grand Lord, a month-long festival is held every 79 years. The commemoration is often referred to as the “Festival of Nida’s Rise.”* (conjecture based on Pantheon)*

*NOTE: It has been suggested that the first commemoration of her elevation should be noted as beginning in 4,975 BBY, the year when she was actually elevated to Grand Lord. To those who believe that is the case, let me ask this: How would they know to celebrate every 79 years, if they had no idea in 4,975 BBY that she would reign for 79 years? Isn’t that like finding a coin dated “B.C.” when there’s no way those in that time period would have known to call their year “B.C.”?

4,800 BBY
- The Republic rocket-jumper corps develops a series of resupply and rearmament droids that can jet-jump with them behind enemy lines. This provides the basis for the Republic’s new juggernaut war droids, which are hastily commissioned by Supreme Chancellor Vocatara to fight for the Republic when the Gank Massacres begin. (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)
- When ryll spice is discovered by the Twi'leks of Ryloth, Neimoidians (Duros of Neimoidia) lock up rights to distribute it, only to find that it drives a newly-discovered species, the Porporites into violent frenzies when used. They decide to protect themselves by hiring Gank mercenaries, who subsequently exterminate the entire Porporite species. The mercenaries then proceed onward toward full-scale war with the Republic, until the Jedi, armed with relatively new lightsaber technology, put them down. This event becomes known as the Gank Massacres. (conjecture based on The New Essential Chronology)
- House Praji abandons Kaikielius for Coruscant after being hard hit by the Quake Years. (conjecture based on Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Praji: A Cartel of Genes)

4,799 BBY – 4,225 BBY
- House Praji ceases to exist formally, but the family continues to maintain great influence. Several sons marry daughters of the Draay family, producing Praji Jedi for the first time since the Rianitus Period. The family wealth is consolidated into acquiring a majority share in the Bank of the Core. (conjecture based on Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Praji: A Cartel of Genes)
- Kaikielius continues its disintegration. With the exodus of the Praji family, House Vahali is left to run the planet, much to Prajii satisfaction. As the Vahali are placed into government office and try to stem the violence and descent into poverty, the system becomes a home for pirates, with the main approach to the system nicknamed “Butcher’s Alley.” (conjecture based on Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Praji: A Cartel of Genes)

4,700 BBY
- Another Sith Holocron is found by the Jedi (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)

4,675 BBY
- Around this time, Darth Drear sets up a Sith Temple on Odacer-Faustin, where he does research into the use of the Murakami orchid as part of a serum to create everlasting life. He records his findings into a Sith holocron but is unsuccessful himself before his death. In the meantime, he founds a Sith academy, with its library situated directly above the temple. He brings the Neti known as Dail’Liss to be its Sith librarian. Dail’Liss will still be the librarian when Sith Lord Darth Scabrous attempts to recreate the Murakami orchid concoction with disastrous results.*
(conjecture based on Red Harvest)*

*NOTE: This is frequently referred to as an era “1,000 years or more” (and similar phrasing) throughout Red Harvest. I have extended the date back 1,000 years, then, seeing that 1,005 years would make it a round 4,650 BBY but seem too small for an “or more” comment to make sense, have taken it to the next quarter century at this date.

4,640 BBY
• Vodal Kressh, the greatest Sith alchemist, works from his sanctum on the planet Athiss. He conducts particularly dangerous research, including having created a race of slaves to serve him. When Vodal dies, the Sith Emperor orders that his sanctum be sealed. The planet is declared a forbidden zone.*
(conjecture based on The Old Republic)*

*NOTE: This is 1,000 years prior to the Athiss flashpoint in TOR.
• The data that the Star Cabal will keep on the Star Chamber space station begins being collected.*
(conjecture based on The Old Republic)*

*NOTE: This is 1,000 years prior to TOR.

4,600 BBY
• Odan-Urr begins his 600-year terms as presiding Jedi over Jedi assemblies.
(conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia)

4,596 BBY
• Willm Lywin arrives on Teya IV and begins training and overseeing at the Jedi Praxeum there.
(conjecture based on The Most Dangerous Foe)

4,500 BBY
• By this time, parties from within the Republic begin seeking out the services of the genetic engineering masters of Kamino.
(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
• Republic scouts reach the area that will later be known as the Corporate Sector. There, they find the Etti and Ammund, who were ancient explorers from the Core, along with the Eissionites and Ocsin, who appear to be of Tionese origin.
(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
• The Altiri and Anarrians (the intelligent species on Altiria/Anarris) first encounter each other.*
(conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn. This is 1,500 years after civilization develops there.
• A scoutship crashes on lol. While repairing his ship, he discovers a vein of ore that is used to make durasteel. He sends a transmission asking for rescue as well as submitting his claim to the planet. A cargo vessel owned by Tangan Industries receives the call and rescues the scout, but alters the transmission, making it appear that the TI vessel discovered the plant. When the scout realizes he has been robbed, it’s too late, as TI has already begun investigating the plant.*
(conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn.
• On Mon Calamari (AKA Dac AKA Mon Cala), the Mon Calamari and Quarren unite under Mon Calamari King Morn, first of his line. The monarchy will last for 83 generations of rulers, that last of which will be King Lee-Char. The king will be advised by the Calamari Council, made of experts and city leaders from around the globe.
(conjecture based on Strongholds of Resistance)

4,498 BBY
• Tangan Industries builds a mining colony on lol.*
4,470 BBY

- Freedon Nadd, a Jedi apprentice of unequalled enthusiasm and dedication, approaches what he believes to be the end of his apprenticeship and promotion to Jedi Knight. But when the time comes, the Jedi Masters refuse to grant him the title. Stunned at this contradictory action, he seeks the advice of Master Matta Tremayne, who tells him “some things you must find in yourself.” She won’t tell him what’s keeping him from Knighthood. Enraged, he murders Tremayne, steals a ship, and flies toward the worlds of the former Sith Empire.

(conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn. This is within two years of the scoutship crashing on Iol. (And that first letter is an “i,” so the planet is not an acronym for “Laugh Out Loud.”)

4,445 BBY

- The panopticon willow that will be growing in Beta Level Seven at the Jedi Agricultural Corps facility on Marfa when Hestizo “Zo” Trace works there is “born” this year.

(conjecture based on Red Harvest)

4,440 BBY

- The data that the Star Cabal will keep on the Star Chamber space station begins being collected.*

(conjecture based on The Old Republic)*

*NOTE: This is 800 years prior to TOR.

4,400 BBY

- Chamma begins his tenure as a Jedi Knight, but his first mission goes terribly wrong and he enters seclusion.

(conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)

- Sometime around this era, fallen Jedi Freedon Nadd goes to Ashas Ree and discovers the Sith Holocron that once belonged to King Adas and Lord Garu.

(conjecture based on Evil Never Dies: The Sith Dynasties)

- Freedon Nadd, a Dark Jedi bearing Sith magic, goes to Yavin IV, where he battles the Massassi and forces them to remember their heritage of service under Naga Sadow. The Massassi then lead Nadd to Sadow’s resting place, where Sadow’s spirit awakens and teaches Nadd the ways of the Dark Lords of the Sith. After learning an amazing amount of Sith magic, Nadd goes to Onderon, where he comes to rule through his Sith powers. Jedi historians will later note that he uses a lightsaber, which may be the first time that anyone following teachings that came directly from the Sith Empire has done so since the end of the Hundred-Year Darkness and the Exiles’ exile.

- On Mon Calamari (AKA Dac AKA Mon Cala), the Mon Calamari convince the Quarren to help build mathematician Q-Viza’s cavitatio drive system. The first version of the shipyards around the planet are built. The Mon Calamari use the new propulsion to eventually reach Mon Eron (fifth planet in their system). They begin terraforming Mon Eron’s oceans, while also colonizing Ruisto, Mantan, and Hinakuu. The Quarren will slowly become jealous of these new Mon Calamari colonies and seek ones of their own.

(conjecture based on Strongholds of Resistance)

4,398 BBY

- Freedon Nadd dies on Onderon.

(conjecture based on Ulic Qel-Droma and the Beast Wars of Onderon and The Freedom Nadd Uprising)
4,350 BBY
- The Beast Wars of Onderon begin, as exiled criminals confront the capital of Iziz, a place teeming with the Dark Side of the Force.
  (conjecture based on Ulic Qel-Droma and the Beast Wars of Onderon and The Freedon Nadd Uprising)

4,300 BBY
- Chamma is brought out of seclusion by Noab Hulis, a Miralukan Jedi Knight.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)

4,285 BBY
- Emppu Praji-Barck becomes the Republic's Minister of State and holds the position for the next 60 years.
  (conjecture based on Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Praji: A Cartel of Genes)

4,250 BBY
- After a brief civil war between Jedi on Coruscant (the so-called Third Great Schism), a group of Dark Jedi finds refuge in the Vultar system, where they discover strange technology that suggests that the planets are artificial, perhaps created by the same Ancients that built the Corellian system. When they try to use this technology, they find that they cannot control it and end up destroying themselves in what comes to be known as the Vultar Cataclysm.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Chronology)

4,240 BBY
- Suudaa Nem’ro the Hutt (AKA Nem’ro the Tenacious) is born.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*

*NOTE: This is 600 years prior to TOR.

4,225 BBY
- Emppu Praji-Barck has been the Republic's Minister of State for 60 years. She continually filibusters Republic involvement in Kaikielius's problems as she watches the Vahali suffer, until Republic intervention is forced by the mass provision of black market weapons by the Hutt Odominic kajidic. Jedi Master Vandar Tokare volunteers himself and his two padawans for the Kaikielius cleanup campaign, known as the Kaikieli Reconquista. One of the padawans is Derrica Praji. The mission is a difficult one for Derrica, as success would mean negating centuries of scheming by the Prajii and handing a cleansed Kaikielius to his family's enemy, House Vahali. Meditating on his way to the planet, he resolves that he is not obligated to continue a feud he inherited merely by his parentage. However, during the fighting, he discovers that the Odominic kajidic was manipulated by House Praji into supplying weapons to both sides in the conflict. This is an act of treason, but out of the minimal loyalty he still feels to his family, he destroys the evidence implicating his kinsmen, and then severs all familial ties. The fighting lasts for months, but the Jedi and Republic troops are eventually victorious. Returning to Ossus, Derrica is granted the rank of Jedi Knight.
  (conjecture based on Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Praji: A Cartel of Genes)

4,200 BBY
- Miners come to Tatooine, establishing Anchorhead. The mining operations only last a few years, with very few people remaining on the world. Within a few hundred years, humans are once again absent from the world. During the short time that humans are here this time, though, Jedi Sidrona and Dace Diath will emerge on the scene.
  (conjecture based on Secrets of Tatooine)
- Recognizing any outside culture as possibly cruel like their other previous offworld visitors, the Rakata, the Tusks of Tatooine immediately take a dislike and open hostility to the new Republic miners.
(conjecture based on Knights of the Old Republic)

- In the Tapani Sector, High Lord Tritum XI of House Macetti realizes that his house faces the threat of inbreeding. To combat this, he seeks out new noble blood and finds it in the form of the noble Viscountess Mireya of the planet Vjun. Shortly after Mireya is brought into House Macetti, she founds the Mecrosa Order, a group of nobles sworn to protect House Macetti. Mireya, though, is a student of Sith teachings from Vjun, and she slowly starts to let those Sith ways work their way into the rites of the Mecrosa Order, even as the Order develops an extensive spy network. Eventually the Mecrosa Order also begins assassinating rival house leaders and even poisons the a Jedi of House Pelagia that seems to sense what is happening with the Sith influences.*
(conjecture based on Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)*

*NOTE: I had originally placed this at 5,250 BBY due to Evil Never Dies: The Sith Dynasties, but Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force places it here instead.

- The planet Argazda seeks admission to the Republic, in order to gain protection from Ereesi slavers. However, the Senate is reluctant to admit the planet, as it lies on the galactic frontier. With Argazda's apparent lineage going back to a lost Core worlds colony, the Republic admits the planet. However, upon admission, the Argazda are protected, but they find Core culture to be immoral and otherwise offensive.
(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

- Lorell Raiders settle the Hapes Cluster.*
(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)*

*NOTE: The Star Wars Encyclopedia suggested 4,150 BBY for this event, but The Essential Atlas has set it here.

- Around this time, the planet Arkanis is colonized by pilgrims from the Core world Ator. The colonists lose contact with Coruscant, and the rest of the Atorese colonies die off. Arkanis, however, survives as the capital of its own small empire (at least until admission into the Republic later), known as the Arkanis Regency.
(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

- At about the same time Arkanis is settled, the planet Vasch is settled. It becomes part of the Arkanis Regency.
(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

4,166 BBY

- The Republic makes first contact with the Mon Calamari and Quarren of the planet Mon Calamari (AKA Dac, AKA Mon Cala) on the Mon Calamari colony world of Ruisto. This new contact unintentionally results in another round of civil conflict on Mon Calamari and segregation between the two species on the planet.
(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

4,156 BBY

- A droid-tended, self-sufficient "utopian" settlement is created in the Undercity on the planet Taris. Shortly thereafter, years of civil strife between the rich and poor classes on the planet erupt into civil war, during which all poor or "undesirable" citizens are forced to live in the Undercity, never to return to the surface. In a great irony, these poor citizens, who could have benefit greatly from the new "utopian" settlement, are unable to take refuge there, as knowledge of its location is lost during the conflict. In the years to come, the downtrodden masses in the Undercity will come to refer to their search for this city as their quest for the "Promised Land."
(conjecture based on Knights of the Old Republic)

4,096 BBY

- A century before the Great Sith War, as the healing properties of bacta become widely known, Thyferra (the source of bacta) rises to galactic prominence.*
(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)*

*NOTE: The Essential Guide to Warfare rounds this to 4,100 BBY, so take your pick.
4,068 BBY
• Queen Amanoa of Onderon is born.
  (conjecture based on Ulic Qel-Droma and the Beast Wars of Onderon)

4,059 BBY
• Jev Sunrider serves as the Jedi Knight for the Darada system.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
• Scouts from Shor rediscover the planet Giaca.  (The planet had originally been found by the Rakata.)*
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn. This takes place 100 years before the outbreak of the Jedi Civil War.

4,050 BBY
• In what comes to be known as the Hyabb-Twith Campaigns, a group of Jedi face off against Nelori Marauders at the Hyabb-Twith Corridor. Arca Jeth plays a pivotal role.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
• In this era, Aratech (later Aratech Repulsor Company) is founded. It is considered a leader in the field of artificial intelligence.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)

4,048 BBY
• Drokko Kira (father of Modon Kira and grandfather of Oron Kira) is cast out of Iziz on Onderon and joins the Beast Lords.
  (conjecture based on Ulic Qel-Droma and the Beast Wars of Onderon)

4,046 BBY
• A group of colonists settle a planet they name Veroleem in the hopes of living outside of the Republic’s influence. Shortly thereafter, a Force-sensitive colonist named Kryo Tinwole discovers an ancient Sith laboratory in the Coreesh Mountains. Translating the Sith texts, he finds a formula for an elixir that if consumed regularly can grant immortality. The potion requires the brain chemicals of someone from a similar species as the person drinking it, so Kryo murders another colonist. He uses his Force abilities to corrupt the rest of the colony, forming a cult and placing in charge the Council of Enlightened Elders. The cult begins “recruiting” in order to bring people whose brain chemicals can be harvested for the immortals. As research continues, the cultists discover how to create an extremely addictive narcotic (named Kryotin powder after Kryo Tinwole) as a byproduct of the elixir which they use to entice more “recruits” to the planet as secret sacrificial victims.*
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke Van Horn. This is several decades before the Sith Wars, which Luke believe (and I concur) likely refers to the Exar Kun War. I have rounded “several decades” to 50 years.

4,040 BBY
• Novar is born on Onderon.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)

4,030 BBY
• Jedi Master Arca Jeth and others defeat the Lorell Raiders, based out of Hapes. As a result, the liberated women of the society create a new matriarchal society on Hapes.*
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Alien Species)*

*NOTE: The Courtship of Princess Leia gave a little bit of information on this, and that was expanded upon in Cracken’s Threat Dossier. Based on that information, I had estimated 4,050 BBY for this event. However, the later release of the NEtAS pinned this event down to 4,030 BBY, hence the date change.

4,028 BBY
Novar gains favor in Ommin's court, then begins studying at Ov Taraba.
(conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)

Jedi Master Odan-Urr writes a commentary on the Jedi Code.*
(conjecture based on Understanding the Jedi Code)*

*NOTE: Mace Windu says this account is from "almost four thousand years ago." I chose to place it 3,995 years before Understanding the Jedi Code.

4,025 BBY

- More than 4,000 years before Count Dooku uses Pollux assassin droids in the Clone Wars, the insane yet brilliant Anx designer Pollux Poi creates droids that will come to be known as Pollux Poi Customized A-Series Assassin Droids. The droids are used by the Shell Hutts to attack the Gejalli Hutt clan for the next several years.*
(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)*

*NOTE: This entry is a little tricky. The deaths of Gejalli Hutts causes the surviving members of the clan to put a bounty on Pollux Poi that causes him to flee to Kashyyk, where he remains in hiding for twenty years, hiding from Dashade shadow killers. We are told that he is only saved from this when the Dashade homeworld is destroyed in the Cron Cluster. Well, the Cron Cluster destruction takes place during the Great Sith War (3,996 BBY), which means he fled around 4,016 BBY. That's all well and good, but the entry for the Pollux assassin droids in the NEGtD says that Dooku started using them “midway through the Clone Wars” (20.5 BBY or so), and that they were around for “more than 4,000 years” before that. Since 4,016 BBY is less than 4,000 years before the Clone Wars, I can only assume that the assassinations took a while to be carried out, so that Pollux can have created them “more than 4,000 years” before the Clone Wars, yet still not flee until 4,016 BBY. I have thus rounded the actual invention of the droids to here at 4,025 BBY.

4,024 BBY

- Margrave Octan of the Darpa Sector purchases a moon of Fondor. He terraforms the world, naming it Nallastia. He uses a new vessel known as the Sun Runner to transport colonists to the moon. Also aboard are three power gems, which will later be known as the “Lost Stars of Nallastia,” which can disrupt magnetic defense shields, allowing the Octans to gain wealth through piracy. One week after the first touchdown on Nallastia, the Sun Runner, with the power gems aboard, makes a supply run to Mrllst, but never arrives. The Sun Runner has vanished into legend.
(conjecture based on Hunt the Sun Runner)

- Around this time, the Mandalorian religion that dates back to their birth as Taung clans, undergoes a reformation. Rather than continuing to worship Kad Ha’rangir, the Taungs (Mandalorians) begin to worship war itself. This change is said to be based on a revelation that Mandalorian leader Mandalore the Indomitable says he had in a vision while on Shogun. They soon begin raiding the central systems, including an attack that begins this year on the planet Nevoota in a campaign that lasts three years.
(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

4,022 BBY

- Netus becomes a member of the Old Republic's rocket-jumper corps.
(conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)

4,021 BBY

- Andur Sunrider is born.
(conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)

- Mroon Jassa, a Jedi Master, begins training students in the Truuine system.
(conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)

- The Mandalorian warfare on Nevoota ends with the extermination of its species.
(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

4,020 BBY

- The Brentaal League begins expanding its hyperspace routes into the Expansion Region.
(conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)

- Sometime in this era, the Serv-O-Droid TT-8L Gatekeeper Droid is created.*
4,018 BBY

- Oron Kira is born on Onderon.
  (conjecture based on Ulic Qel-Droma and the Beast Wars of Onderon)
- Ulic Qel-Droma is born on Alderaan.
  (conjecture based on Ulic Qel-Droma and the Beast Wars of Onderon and Dark Lords of the Sith)
- Upon the death of his father, Ommin takes the throne of Onderon and marries Lady Amanoa, daughter of a wealthy noble. Like the kings of Onderon before him, he begins to study the ways of the Sith under the tutelage of Freedon Nadd, learning far more than his father ever taught him.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion via TimeTales, verbatim, and The Dark Side Sourcebook)
- Upon discovering Ommin’s Dark Side studies, Amanoa agrees to help him, hoping to someday lead him back to the light, but she ends up being corrupted as well.
  (conjecture based on The Dark Side Sourcebook)

4,017 BBY

- Keval Raffaan is born on Chandrila.*
  (conjecture based on Ruins of Kabus-Dabeh)*
  *NOTE: This assumes that the Tales of the Jedi era story Ruins of Kabus-Dabeh actually takes place at exactly 4,000 BBY, rather than just sometime during that era.
- Netus leaves the rocket-jumper corps and begins building the political career that will lead him into the Galactic Senate.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- Cay Qel-Droma is born on Alderaan.
  (conjecture based on Ulic Qel-Droma and the Beast Wars of Onderon and Dark Lords of the Sith)
- Mandalorian Crusaders wage war against the world of Basilisk. The Basilisk natives destroy their own landscape to keep them from falling into Mandalorian hands, then leave the world behind. The Mandalorians also leave the planet, but they do so with powerful spoils of war: Lagartoz War Dragons, Basilisk warships, and Basilisk war droids.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

4,016 BBY

- Galia is born on Onderon to Ommin and Amanoa.
  (conjecture based on Ulic Qel-Droma and the Beast Wars of Onderon)
- Novar returns from Ov Taraba and becomes assistant to King Ommin’s aide.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- Pollux Poi’s assassin droids are successful in wiping out Hutts three through fourteen in the Gejalli clan’s hierarchy. Unfortunately, those who survive take revenge against Poi, putting a bounty on him. Poi flees to the underlevels of Kashyyyk to escape from the Hutts’ hired Dashade shadow killers. Over the next two decades, he will hide there, playing with new modifications to the droids, who will protect him from the killers.*
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)*
  *NOTE: The attacks by the Dashade stop after the destruction of the Dashade homeworld in the Cron Cluster, which happens during the Great Sith War (3,996 BBY). This supposedly takes place two decades after Pollux Poi flees to Kashyyyk, which gives us the date of 4,016 BBY for this event.

4,015 BBY

- During this period, the construction of droids is relatively unregulated. In this era, Czerka Corporation tries to circumvent the few local laws that prevent the construction of assassin droids by creating the HK series protocol droid, which is basically an assassin droid under a different designation. The first HK prototype unit, HK-01 goes awry and begins “liberating” its fellow droids and reprogramming them into an army. HK-01’s droid forces strike against the Republic, forcing the Republic into the Great Droid Revolution (or Great Droid Revolt), wherein Jedi Master Arca Jeth makes a name for himself and the first ion weapons and other droid countermeasures are invented. The revolution ends after HK-01 is destroyed. As for Czerka Corporation, they do a good job of hiding their involvement in the whole fiasco.
(conjecture based on The New Essential Chronology and The New Essential Guide to Droids)
- Around this time, when Canderous Ordo is still only a glint in his mother’s eye, the Oyu’baat cantina is founded in Keldabe on Mandalore.
(conjecture based on Order 66)

4,014 BBY
- Canderous Ordo is born.
  (conjecture based on information posted by Chris Avellone on the forums for Obsidian Entertainment, which he cited as coming from the casting document sent to LucasArts for Knights of the Old Republic II: The Sith Lords)*

*NOTE: The document states that he is 63 in the game as Mandalore the Preserver, but that is in “Mandalorian year,” so without a conversion, I can only, for now, consider his birth here.

4,013 BBY
- Novar becomes Minister of State for Onderon.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)

4,012 BBY
- Vici Ramunee born on Alderaan.
  (conjecture based on The Most Dangerous Foe)

4,010 BBY
- Candra Kitai is born on Kesh.
  (conjecture based on Purgatory)

4,009 BBY
- Veni Ramunee born on Alderaan.
  (conjecture based on The Most Dangerous Foe)
- The priest of the Yavin IV Massassi, Zythmar, enters a period of seclusion.
  (conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia)
- Jedi Knight Jev Sunrider (Andur’s grandfather) leaves to fight evil on Krayiss II where he dies.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- The Systino crime syndicate discovers the planet that will eventually be labeled 244Core.
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn. This takes place 50 years before the outbreak of the Jedi Civil War.
- The government of Peroenia learns the location of Giaca and begins sending expeditions to compete with those from Shor to scout and control the planet.
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn. This takes place 50 years after the rediscovery of the planet.

4,008 BBY
- Jev Sunrider’s spirit appears to Andur Sunrider and tells Andur to become a Jedi.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- Finhead Stonebone arrives in charted territory and begins his criminal activities, working aboard a Vorc system pirate’s vessel.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- On Arkania, Jedi apprentices Barrison Draay, Krynda Hulis, and Haazen study under Jedi
Master Arca Jeth at his praxeum. It is an interesting mix, given that Krynda is the daughter of Jedi Master Hulis, Barrison is a wealthy member of the elite, and Haazen is Barrison’s manservant in many ways (a retainer, basically). Haazen is extremely jealous of Barrison’s relationship with Krynda, and his jealousy and inadequacies become anger when Arca confers the rank of Jedi Knight on behalf of the Jedi Council to both Krynda and Barrison, but not to Haazen, who is not at all ready. Shortly before the reception and the knighting ceremony at the praxeum, Haazen had been bested on the snowy surface of Arkania by a Nautolan pirate named Dossa. Now, he confronts Barrison on that same snowy landscape, accusing him of using his wealth to buy his Jedi Knight position and Krynda’s affection. Barrison strikes him, telling him that he will not intercede with the Jedi Order, so Haazen’s Jedi days are over, but he will somehow allow Haazen to remain with the Draay family in some fashion. (To be continued below . . . )

(Vindication)

Knights of the Old Republic (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Vindication (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Vindication (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Vindication, Part II [flashback] (comic: John Jackson Miller)

4,006 BBY
- Finhead Stonebone becomes first mate of a pirate vessel and begins saving money for buying his own ship. That ship, when finally purchased, would be the Starjacker.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)

4,005 BBY
- Miners create a colony on the planets Sundari and begin trading with the newly-settled Garos IV, a neighboring planet.
  (conjecture based on Turning Point)

4,004 BBY
- The Vultan Jedi Oss Wilum leaves Master Arca on Stenness (whom he had been training with after leaving Master Garnoo) after completing his training and goes to Ambria to live with Master Thon.
  (conjecture based on The Saga of Nomi Sunrider and Dark Lords of the Sith)

4,003 BBY
- Novar convinces King Ommin to teach him Sith magic.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)

4,002 BBY
- Qrrl Toq first leaves his home planet.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- Old Republic explorers make contact with the planet Onderon, where offworld arms traders begin supplying the Beast Lords with the weapons they will need to combat their adversaries.
  (conjecture based on Ulic Qel-Droma and the Beast Wars of Onderon)
- Andur Sunrider begins training to be a Jedi under Jedi Master Chamma on H'ratth.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- Mandalorian Crusaders ravage the Deep Core world of Kuar, setting up camps there.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

4,001 BBY
- King Ommin’s health fails and he turns over Novar’s training to Amanoa. As Ommin leaves more and more of the ruling duties to Amanoa, she becomes content to merely rule Iziz and let her Dark Side studies falter, leaving Freedon Nadd without a suitable heir to his legacy.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion and The Dark Side Sourcebook)
- Kith Kark discovers a group of Jedi Knights and follows them to Mroon Jassa's training center. He wishes to be a Jedi, but he is deemed to not be ready. (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- Keval Raffaan ends his schooling on Chandrila at the age of sixteen. He wishes to join the Diplomatic Institute on Coruscant, but instead accepts an invitation to follow Jedi Master Ma'tien as a Jedi Peacemaker, utilizing his innate Force abilities.* (conjecture based on Ruins of Kabus-Dabeh)

NOTE: This assumes that the Tales of the Jedi era story Ruins of Kabus-Dabeh actually takes place at exactly 4,000 BBY, rather than just sometime during that era. It further assumes that his schooling on Chandrila, which must have ended before he was 18 so he could be a Jedi at 17, ended when he was 16. (Just an arbitrary, but logical, date choice on my part.)

4,000 – 3,950 BBY

- Czerka Corporation (formerly Czerka Mining and Industrial) reaches the height of its power under the leadership of President Pollard Seario. Seario establishes Czerka’s headquarters on Korriban, where the city of Dreshdae begins forming around it. (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)

4,000 BBY

- On H’ratth, Vima Sunrider is born to Andur and Nomi Sunrider. (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- Lucien Draay is born to Krynda and Barrison Draay this year, on the same day that Ulic Qel-Droma first touches the Dark Side during the Beast Wars of Onderon. (conjecture based on the Knights of the Old Republic Handbook)
- Ssseeesesetek is born on Fyodos. (conjecture based on Planets of the Galaxy: Volume Three)
- The Tallaan shipyards are built. (conjecture based on Cracken’s Rebel Operatives via TimeTales, abridged)
- Kith Kark tries again to be trained as a Jedi Knight and is once again rejected, though the rejection allows him to determine what was keeping him from training so he can later succeed. (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- Around this time, the Valley of Royalty on Duro, one of the Twenty Wonders of the Galaxy, is abandoned due to acidic pollution. (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
- Dace Diath begins Jedi training under Jedi Master Sidrona Diath, his father. (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- Kevan Raffaan becomes Jedi Master Ma’tien’s Padawan Learner. (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- In this era, Darth Igrol maintains an estate on Dromund Fels in Sith Space. (conjecture based on Force and Destiny Core Rulebook)
- Colonists first come to Muzara from the Brentaal League. (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- The Kyrr supernova renders the Ootmian Pankapolla (or “Ootmian Pabol”) impossible to navigate. Many outsiders that had previous done business on Nal Hutta and Nar Shaddaa leave for Sleheyron to gain access to alternate hyperspace routes. (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas and Lords of Nal Hutta)
- Around this time, a passenger liner makes an emergency landing near Shakamm Crater on Aurea. While the ship is repaired, artist Coovo Mardri explores the area, discovering its natural beauty and natural crystals that can be used to create crystalline glass. He refuses to leave when the time comes, instead begging for resources from his wealthy family. He uses those resources to found an artistic colony known as Mardri Soulworks Collective. As the planet is further colonized, a capital city is developed nearby, known as Crysallia.* (conjecture based on Suns of Fortune)

NOTE: This rounds “several millennia ago” to 4,000 years.

- The Old Corellian language becomes extinct. A variant survives on Socorro, and plenty of people still remember bits of it, but it’s popular usage ends here.*
(conjecture based on Old Corellian: A Guide for the Curious Scholar)*

*NOTE: The Old Corellian article says it’s been gone almost 4,000 years. Since we can’t be sure exactly when Old Corellian’s run-in with Karl Ancher takes place in relation to the Drake Paulsen stories, I assumed concurrence with SW4 (or just after) and just rounded to exactly (not just under) 4,000 years for how long the language has been gone.

- During a Sith ritual, Queen Amanoa of Onderon is visited by the ghost of the ancient Sith Lord Freedon Nadd. He warns her that if the ongoing battle between Iziz and the Beast Riders continues, she will be destroyed. In a panic, Amanoa calls upon the Jedi Knights to help bring the war on her world to an end.*
(conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion via TimeTales, verbatim)*

*NOTE: As noted, this item has been borrowed from Chris McElroy’s TimeTales. However, I have placed it at 4,000 BBY instead of its dating of 3,998-3,997 BBY because of discrepancies in our dating of Ulic Qel-Droma and the Beast Wars of Onderon. I personally have them dated at 4,000 BBY, which necessitates that this action (required as having taken place before that storyline) must go here.

- On Krayiss II, Jedi Vara Nreem conducts a Sith ritual that calls forth a Sith spirit from a slumber of 10,000 years. She attempts to learn from it, since she believes that the Force is all one energy field, rather than having Dark or Light Sides. She is dreadfully wrong, as the Sith spirit proves by mocking her beliefs, then devouring her physical form, leaving her spirit in torment for eternity.

(A Tale from the Dark Side)

- Sometime shortly before the outbreak of the Sith War, the Mandalorians struck the cyborg “mad scientist” Iskalloni, freeing many of their slaves. Among these slaves is a young boy named Antos Wyrick, who had been taken by the Iskalloni slavers at a young age and never developed his normal Zeltron empathic abilities. Instead, he served the Iskalloni and learned much about their hideous experimental ways. Having been freed of the Iskalloni, he becomes a Mandalorian (and will one day become known as “Demagol” or “demar’agol” the “flesh-carver”).*
(conjecture based on Demon)*

*NOTE: This could be closer to the events of The Sith War, but Wyrick’s age in the flashbacks to this era have him as a boy, then he is a young man after The Sith War, so I’ve put it here to make him perhaps a young teen.

- On Goroth Prime, war breaks out between the Corellian and Aqualish mining factions. Trans-Nebular Sector Governor Matri Bey is unprepared for the conflict. To handle the situation, the “Planetary Defense Arm” (or D’Jar’Min), a military police force, is created. J’Kek D’rith Kalama, a member of the J’Kek j’ber, becomes the Re’Kan of his people at this time. Due to his work in negotiating between the Corellians and the Aqualish earlier, he obtained great wealth for the P’Dar’Ken, but by this time, the fact that he was blind to the coming of the Scouring has caused many Gorothites to view him as evil incarnate, and while his supporters wish for him to be made Re’Kan for life, the P’Dar’Ken do not allow it.
(conjecture based on Goroth: Slave of the Empire via TimeTales, paraphrased)

- Dylinium begins to be mined.
(conjecture based on Goroth: Slave of the Empire via TimeTales, abridged)

- The Battle of Basilisk takes place.*
(conjecture based on Star Wars Annual 2008)*

*NOTE: All information from Pedigree Books’ Star Wars Annual 2008 was submitted by Luke Van Horn. It is unknown whether this is the same Basilisk conflict that sees the Mandalorians take much of their weaponry that the EGIW later dated to 4,017 BBY, noted above.

- On Arcadia, Master Arca Jeth determines that his three students, Ulic Qel-Droma, Cay Qel-Droma, and Tott Doneeta (Tottdon’ee’ta) are ready for their first assignments as Jedi Knights. He sends them to Onderon, where the government has asked for Jedi aid against attacks of the newly-armed Beast Lords in the conflict known as the Beast Wars of Onderon. Upon arrival, the Jedi notice that something is odd about the people of Iziz, Onderon’s capital. Princess Galia of Onderon is soon kidnapped in a Beast Lord raid, and although his fellow Jedi are reluctant to continue, Ulic plans a rescue attempt. On their way, their ship, the Nebulon Ranger, is shot down. They must use their Jedi abilities to tame local beasts and ride them to the Beast Lords’ base. Once there, they learn that Galia’s “kidnapping” was of her own design so that she could marry Oron Kira, a young Beast Lord. The Jedi take this proposal to Queen Amanoa of Onderon and learn that the Dark Side has taken control of Iziz, partially personified in Amanoa. A battle thus begins between the forces of Iziz and the Beasts Lords. During the conflict, Cay Qel-Droma's left arm is severed, though he will be able to replace it with parts from a droid. The Jedi and Beast Lords are nearly defeated by Amanoa's Dark Side powers, but Master Arca arrives and turns the tide, allowing the Beast Lords to win the battle. Arca then exposes Amanoa to the Light Side, causing her death and thus the end of her threat. Galia and Oron Kira are then married and rule a united Onderon.

(Ulic Qel-Droma and the Beast Wars of Onderon)
- In the wake of the Jedi freeing Onderon from the Dark Side, the Sith Holocron that once belonged to King Adas, Lord Garu, and Freedon Nadd is recovered and banished under millions of tons of water on the planet Kodai, where it can do no more harm.
  (conjecture based on Evil Never Dies: The Sith Dynasties)
- Jedi Master Ortraag sends his student, Shalavaa, to help protect a nerf herding settlement, which he believes is his first assignment as a full Jedi Knight. When a herder goes missing, Shalavaa investigates a nearby ravine, facing natural predators, powerful plants, and more, only to end his journey by discovering Ortraag waiting for him. The entire assignment was not his first mission as a Jedi Knight, but his last test before becoming a Jedi Knight. Shalavaa is now ready.
  (Jedi Protector)
- Jedi peacemaker Keval Raffaan, student of Jedi Master Ma'tien, is given his first diplomatic mission on behalf of the Jedi. He is sent to the planet Muzara, where he is to negotiate peace between Brentaal League settlers (farmers, mostly) and the native Muza. Before he can do so, he must complete a trial to prove himself to the Muza. He is sent into the Ruins of Kabus-Dabeh (possibly Sith ruins) to retrieve a sack of coins left by a Muza warrior. In doing so, he faces various challenges, but he eventually emerges with the coins, found in a dried riverbed underground. He has proven himself to the Muza and can now make peace between the Brentaal League settlers and the Muza. His first mission has been a success.
  (Ruins of Kabus-Dabeh)
- A Force-sensitive little girl helps a self-exiled Jedi Knight deal with his fall from grace.*
  (Light and Shadow)*

*NOTE: Don't remember this one? Don't be surprised. This summary is based on research conducted by frequent contributor Andrew Gordon into stories proposed or put into production for the Official Continuity but eventually canceled for some reason. The story never came to exist, so the information is just flavor text for our purposes, with no C-Canon (or even S- or N-Canon) backing whatsoever at this point. Consider it historical curiosity.
- Around this time, the original Neti homeworld, Ryyk, is destroyed by a supernova. The only Neti who survives this destruction is Ord Bnar, a Neti supposedly born off of Ryyk, instead on the planet Myrkr.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Alien Species)

A Tale from the Dark Side (RPG short story: George R. Strayton)

Knights of the Old Republic (comic series: Tom Veitch)
Ulic Qel-Droma and the Beast Wars of Onderon (comic series: Tom Veitch)

Tales of the Jedi [continued] (comic series: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)
Tales of the Jedi Omnibus: Volume I [continued] (comic series: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)
Ulic Qel-Droma and the Beast Wars of Onderon (comics: Tom Veitch)
Ulic Qel-Droma and the Beast Wars of Onderon, Part I (comics: Tom Veitch)
Ulic Qel-Droma and the Beast Wars of Onderon, Part II (comics: Tom Veitch)
Tales of the Jedi Audio Dramatizations (audio drama series: John Whitman)

Jedi Protector (SWGM13 short story: Peter Schweighofer)
Ruins of Kabus-Dabeh (RPG short story: Peter Schweighofer)
Light and Shadow (canceled AJ short story: Paul Danner)*

A Tale from the Dark Side (RPG short story: George R. Strayton)
Tales of the Jedi [continued] (comic series: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)
3,999 BBY

- On Ulda Frav, Qrrl Toq encounters a group of Jedi Knights. They tell him he has potential to be a Jedi, even though has no idea what Jedi Knights are. He goes with them to Ossus for training.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- Kith Kark begins Jedi training under Mroon Jassa.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- Vici Ramunee begins training as a Jedi under Master Tannis.
  (conjecture based on The Most Dangerous Foe)
- Andur, Vima, and Nomi Sunrider leave H'ratth on a trip to Stenness. The crystal cargo that Andur brings along attracts the attention of Bogga the Hutt, whose henchmen confront the Sunriders at the Stenness spaceport and kill Andur. Andur's spirit appears to Nomi and tells her to take his lightsaber and defend herself and Vima. She does so, escaping to the planet Ambria to meet Master Thon as Andur had been planning to do. Upon arrival, Nomi meets Oss Willm, whom she takes to be Master Thon. He tells her that she is mistaken and introduces her to Thon. Bogga the Hutt has followed Nomi and attacks Thon's home, only to be repelled by Thon and Oss Willm. Within the next short while, Nomi grieves on her own. She then begins training to be a Jedi under Master Thon, but refuses to ever take up a lightsaber again. Her training continues and comes to a head as Bogga's forces once again attack them on Ambria. Thon surrenders to save Nomi and Vima, forcing the reluctant Nomi to take up a lightsaber and save all three of them. She is able to drive off Bogga's henchmen and has reached a new plateau in her Jedi training.*
  (The Saga of Nomi Sunrider)*

*NOTE: The inside cover timelines for the Golden Age of the Sith and Fall of the Sith Empire mini-series incorrectly noted this story as taking place in the year 3,999 BBY. That date was corrected later to 4,000 BBY, which is noted also in The Comics Companion. It was later moved back to 3,999 BBY in the first Tales of the Jedi omnibus. My thanks go to Matt Brunercandi for suggesting that I look into this again. (I had not known about the newer TOTJ omnibus dating tweak.)

Tales of the Jedi [continued] (comic series: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)
Tales of the Jedi Omnibus: Volume I [continued] (comic series: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)
Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: Tom Veitch)
The Saga of Nomi Sunrider (comic series: Tom Veitch)
The Saga of Nomi Sunrider, Part I (comic: Tom Veitch)
The Saga of Nomi Sunrider, Part II (comic: Tom Veitch)
The Saga of Nomi Sunrider, Part III (comic: Tom Veitch)
Tales of the Jedi Audio Dramatizations [continued] (audio drama series: John Whitman)
Tales of the Jedi Audio Dramatization [continued] (audio drama: John Whitman)

3,998 BBY

- Dace Diath leaves his Jedi Master (and father), Sidrona Diath, to train with Vodo-Siosk Baas on Ossus.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- Old Republic Senator Netus becomes Minister of Defense.
  (conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi Companion)
- On Onderon, a sudden uprising of Dark Side warriors lays siege to Iziz in the first stages of the Naddist Uprising. Arca, Cay, Ulic, and Tott, the Jedi of Onderon, realize that this may be caused by residual Dark Side energies from Freedon Nadd, a deceased Sith Lord. The Jedi attempt to take Nadd's coffin off of the planet to the Dxun moon, but during the transfer, they are attacked by Naddists led by Warb Null (originally known as Shas Davos), who effortlessly steals the coffin. Oss Wilum, newly arrived from Ambria at Arca's urging, is of little help. Upon speaking to King Ommin of Onderon (who had been absent from the political scene for some time), they realize that Ommin is behind the Naddists. Ommin is under the direction of the spirit of Freedon Nadd. Ommin then kidnaps Arca in a confrontation that leads to Warb Null’s death at Ulic’s hands. Ulic then calls the Republic for help. On Ossus, Nomi Sunrider has arrived with Master Thon to continue her growth as a Jedi. She begins construction of her own lightsaber under the direction of Master Vodo Siosk-Baas. Among her fellow Jedi in this activity is Shoaneb Culu of Alpheridies. Learning of the Onderon crisis, Nomi and Thon travel to Coruscant to plead the Jedi’s case for aid to the Senate. While the Senate debates their options, two cousins on Coruscant, Satal and Aleema Keto become enthralled by Sith artifacts in the Galactic Museum and steal some of them, realizing that they can learn even more on Onderon. The Senate finally agrees to aid the Jedi of Onderon, and Nomi is sent to lead a Republic Fleet to stop the Dark Side machinations of the Naddists. As the fleet moves into position around Onderon, Satal and Aleema fly though the forces to land on Onderon. Shortly thereafter they meet Ommin and Nadd and are instructed in the ways of the Dark Side. The combined Jedi and Republic forces commence an attack against the Naddists and their war droids. The Jedi and Republic forces win the battle outside and proceed into the lair of Ommin just as Satal and Aleema make their escape. The Jedi kill Ommin and free Arca. Freedon Nadd’s spirit, however, tells them that all that has transpired was of his design and that the Jedi have not won but are about to lose. The Jedi take the coffin containing the body of Freedon Nadd, and that containing the body of Queen Amanoa and send them to the Dxun moon, assuming that this will free Onderon from the Dark Side. Unbeknownst to them, however, Satal and Aleema remain at large, growing strong in Sith magic.

(The Freedon Nadd Uprising)

Tales of the Jedi [continued] (comic series: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)

Tales of the Jedi Omnibus: Volume II (comic series: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)

The Freedon Nadd Uprising (comic series: Tom Veitch)

The Freedon Nadd Uprising (comic: Tom Veitch)

Initiates of the Sith (comic: Tom Veitch)

3,997 BBY

- Satal and Aleema Keto lead the Krath--a secret society of Darksiders they have founded--in carrying out a political coup d'etat in the Empress Teta system. The two freeze their parents in carbonite. Using this and their Sith magic, the two Dark Side cousins make the coup a success. As the Jedi prepare to retake the Empress Teta system, Ulic Qel-Droma uncovers a Sith artifact and receives a vision of Freedon Nadd, hinting at Ulic's future as a Dark Lord of the Sith. Ulic and Nomi Sunrider lead a force to retake Koros Major in the Empress Teta system but are defeated by the Krath forces and Sith magic of Satal and Aleema. A convocation of 10,000 Jedi is called on Mount Meru of Deneba and is presided over by Odan-Urr. They discuss the situation, and Ulic proposes infiltrating the Krath to learn its secrets and destroy it from within. The other Jedi advise against this action. Krath war droids arrive and attack the Jedi. The Jedi win the day, but Master Arca dies in the struggle. This event hardens Ulic’s resolve, and he proceeds with his plan to infiltrate the Krath. He arrives on Cinnagar and stops an assassination attempt on the Ketos’ lives. The attempt was arranged by Satal and Aleema in order to snare Ulic--and it worked. While testing Ulic’s loyalties, the Ketos inject him with a Sith poison, but finally release him. Aleema then begins to seduce Ulic, both to her and to the Dark Side. Detached from this struggle by many lightyears, other events unfold concurrently. On Dantooine, Jedi student Exar Kun studies under Master Vodo Siosk-Baas. Kun has been studying Sith teachings against Master Vodo's wishes and appears to be becoming darker every day. After a series of duels between Kun and fellow students Crado and Sylvar, Kun nearly kills Master Vodo. He decides to pursue Sith teachings on his own and follows the Force to the Dxun Moon of Onderon. Once there, he encounters the spirit of Freedon Nadd, who leads him to Korriban, an ancient world ruled at one time by the Dark Lords of the Sith. Once on Korriban, Kun discovers ancient Sith ruins, and between the attack of Sith creatures and the machinations of Nadd, he is left near death with only two options--death or the Dark Side. Kun chooses to live, allowing the Dark Side to claim him. Kun and Nadd's spirit then proceed to Yavin IV to the ruins of the temples created a millennium before by Naga Sadow. Using his Sith powers, he overtakes the Massassi and begins to use Sadow's facilities for his own ends. He orders the temples augmented and increased to focus his own Sith powers. Nadd expresses a desire to have a physical body once again, and Kun will not stand for it. He uses his Sith powers to destroy Nadd's spirit, but not before Nadd can use his final moments to alert the Ketos to the new threat to their Sith supremacy—Exar Kun. Back on Cinnagar, following the aforementioned events, Ulic has been greatly influenced by Aleema. Nomi Sunrider, in love with Ulic, stages a rescue attempt to save Ulic from himself. The higher Jedi authorities allow this, but only with the stipulation that the choice between Light and Dark is Ulic's, and if he chooses Dark, he must be allowed to follow his choices to their end. The Jedi break into Aleema's quarters and find that their worst fears have been realized. Ulic has turned to the Dark Side and attacks them so that they will leave in safety, but leave him behind. Soon after the Jedi leave in resignation, Exar Kun, newly arrived on Cinnagar from Yavin IV, breaks into Aleema's quarters and attacks Aleema and Ulic. The spirit of a Marka Ragnos intervenes and stops the conflict, telling Kun and Ulic that they are now ready for their destiny. Telling them to work together and branding them with traditional Sith markings on their foreheads, the spirit declares Kun the new Dark Lord of the Sith and Ulic his lieutenant and first apprentice.*

(Dark Lords of the Sith)*

*NOTE: This timeline placement is correct and confirmed by multiple sources, including Leland Chee, “Keeper of the Holocron.” There was an erroneous date change (3,992 BBY) made by mistake in the Star Wars Comics Companion, but that did not represent a date change, just an error. The authors apparently used the incorrect dates that were originally shown on the inside cover timelines for the Golden Age of the Sith and Fall of the Sith Empire mini-series, rather than using the corrected dates that came later.

- In the early days of his reign as Dark Lord of the Sith, Exar Kun traps several Massassi children in a Golden Globe. Parents of the trapped Massassi children leave Yavin IV and proceed to Yavin VIII to enlist the aid of the Melodies. When the Melodies are unable to help, the Massassi carve their woes into the side of the Sistra mountain, hoping that someday someone will find a way to free them.

(conjecture based on The Golden Globe)

- At some point during the six months of the Sith War after Ulic’s turn to the Dark, Ulic’s superior, Exar Kun, begins to strike the Republic with a massive Force-draining, Force-powered superweapon known as the Dark Reaper. It is only with information provided by Ulic (who has fallen to the Dark Side in his actions, but still believes he is working for the good of the galaxy) that the Jedi are able to stop the superweapon, eventually scattering its major parts across the galaxy to protect the Republic from its threat ever again.*

(conjecture based on The Clone Wars)*)

*NOTE: The timing of this series of events is totally conjectural. We hear about all these Dark Reaper events in The Clone Wars, but that game was made around the time of Attack of the Clones, whereas the Tales of the Jedi comics were written years earlier. Apparently, the game creators figured they could slip this into the continuity without any big shenanigans, but it really doesn’t fit anywhere within the earlier comic book stories. My only guess, then, is to put it into this six-month gap that was created by the first issue of The Sith War, which allows for the threat to exist, be defeated, and then subside with enough time passing that it wouldn’t be mentioned again in the later stories (written before the threat existed in the game). Jeez, what a way to try to slip an elephant through a keyhole, huh?

- On Toprawa, Barrison Draay leads Jedi Knights against Massassi forces loyal to the Sith Lords. Haazen, former Jedi apprentice, is now with the Draays in helping to clean up the bodies from the battle. His anger and frustration get the better of him while arguing with Dossa, who is also on the battlefield. They decide on a plan to remove Barrison as an obstacle to Haazen’s ascension. Haazen claims that Dossa is hiding in the nearby Ansharri caverns. He leads Barrison and other Jedi into a trap, but Dossa blows up their explosives before Haazen is out of the way. His body is decimated, but he is “saved” by Dossa’s ally, Doc Uburluh has rebuilt is body with Sith droid parts. Haazen is appalled until Dossa and the doctor explain that one of the Sith artifacts that he wears will allow him to influence the future into something that the Jedi can perceive, but wherein his own presence will not be noticed. He can basically plot against the Jedi now without fear of being caught in the act by Force visions. Haazen takes their advice . . . then kills them. Haazen returns from the war, bearing news of Barrison’s death. He is taken in by Barrison’s widow, Krynda, formerly Krynda Hulis, the woman whom Haazen had hoped to love before Barrison “stole” her from him. (To be continued below . . . )*

(Vindication)*
*NOTE: *Homecoming seems to put this event in the lead up to the broader Sith War, and Barrison’s comments might be seen that way as well. Given the lead-up within the six month gap between Dark Lords of the Sith and The Sith War, I am placing this and the following entry here, so as to be most accurate with the information as presented in Homecoming and Vindication.

- Shortly after the death of Lucien Draay’s father, his mother, Krynda, comes to visit him in the family home on Coruscant, only to begin having serious doubts about Lucien’s potential with the Force, especially the ability to see the future. (To be continued below . . . )

(Homecoming)

Tales of the Jedi [continued] (comic series: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)

Tales of the Jedi Omnibus: Volume II [continued] (comic series: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)

Dark Lords of the Sith (comic series: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)

- Masters and Students of the Force (comic: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)
- The Quest for the Sith (comic: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)
- Descent to the Dark Side (comic: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)
- Death of a Dark Jedi (comic: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)
- Sith Secrets (comic: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)
- Jedi Assault (comic: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)

Tales of the Jedi Audio Dramatizations [continued] (audio drama: John Whitman)

Dark Lords of the Sith (audio drama: John Whitman)

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)

Vindication [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)

- Vindication [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
- Vindication, Part II [flashback] (comic: John Jackson Miller)

Flashpoint (comic series: John Jackson Miller)

- Flashpoint (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
- Homecoming [flashback] (comic: John Jackson Miller)

3,996 BBY

- The Kalduu intercede in a brutal world war waged by the Ropagu nations. The warring finally ends.

  (conjecture based on Twin Stars of Kira)

- Ession is settled.

  (conjecture based on Wraith Squadron)

- Dace Golliard begins working with the Crucible.

  (conjecture based on Destroyer)

- Corellian and Aqualish colonies spring up around the Goroth system, and come into open conflict. The Gorothites, under the rule of Rel’kan J’Kek, declare neutrality and set off a bidding war between the two sides, making demands on both sides in return for use of the planet’s resources. Intoxicated by the feeling of power over these two warring sides, J’Kek’s demands soon become unreasonable. Furious, the Aqualish “Barralenal” and the Corellians join forces to send giant asteroids slamming into Goroth Prime. The planet becomes a fiery wasteland, almost uninhabitable, and the Gorothites are slaughtered almost to the point of extinction. The Republic and the Jedi, preoccupied with the Sith War, ignore Goroth’s plight. In later years, the planet becomes forgotten as the Gorothites struggle to rebuild their civilization.

  (conjecture based on Goroth: Slave of the Empire via TimeTales, verbatim)

- On Teya IV, Vici Ramunees faces her final test in becoming a Jedi Knight. Her Jedi Master, Mistress Tannis, sends her into the Cave of Truth. As she approaches the cave, her brother, Veni, arrives, having followed her. He has her lightsaber, but, since Tannis told her not to bring it, she won’t accept it . . . until they meet the Jedi who will guide her to the Cave. The guide is Willm Lywin, who appears to be a dragon (since he’s a Duinuogwuin). She takes the lightsaber and prepares to defend herself and her brother before realizing that Willm is her guide. He takes her to the Cave, which she must enter alone, to seek her challenge. In the next five hours, she faces lessons in impatience (when she misses a door), physical limits (when she is hungry and tired), fear (when facing fierce winds), doubt (in a tight tunnel),
During the Sith War, groups of civilian healers known as “Mercy Corps” are deputized and allowed to travel to hotspots in the war zone. The Mercy Corps will still exist conceptually over thirty years later and be used by Revan to bring the Jedi into conflict with the Mandalorians without official Jedi Order consent.

(Conjecture based on Demon)

Six months after Exar Kun being dubbed Dark Lord of the Sith, the forces of Lord Mandalore the Indomitable attack the Empress Teta system. Ulic Qel-Droma defeats Lord Mandalore in a one-on-one duel on Harkul, ending the invasion and giving command of the Mandalorian warriors to Ulic. On Ossus, Exar Kun manages to convince twenty Jedi to join him as his apprentices. Before leaving the planet, he confronts Odan-Urr, murdering him and stealing his Sith holocron. Ulic leads a Krath/Mandalorian force against the shipyards of Foerost and manages to steal 300 Republic warships. Ulic decides that they should move on Coruscant, but Kun informs him that he will not support the attack. He is busy training the new Jedi recruits, and if Ulic goes forward with his attack on Coruscant and fails, Kun will simply continue on his own. Ulic proceeds with the invasion of Coruscant. During the battle, Ulic leads ground forces and when the tide of battle turns against the Krath, Aleema decides to leave Ulic behind and replace him at her side with Lord Mandalore. Mandalore, however, is more loyal to Ulic than Aleema, and arranges with Exar Kun to rescue Ulic from Coruscant. Kun intends to wait until Ulic is put on trial by the Senate and then rescue Ulic while destroying all of the Jedi present in the process. Kun breaks into the trial and places the Senate under his Sith magic. He kills the judge and his former Master, Vodo Siosk-Baas, and escapes with Ulic. Mandalore informs Ulic of the circumstances of his capture, as the students of Exar Kun carry out a murder spree of their own Jedi Masters. In retaliation for her betrayal, Ulic sets Aleema up to die during a battle at Kemplex. She and several Jedi (Shoaneb Culu, Dace Diath, and Qrrl Toq) die in the destruction of the ten stars of the Cron cluster (via supernova) by Naga Sadow’s Sith technology. The supernovas create not only the Cron asteroid field, but also a shockwave that speeds towards Ossus. As the shockwave heads for Ossus and the Jedi try to get off-planet and preserve as much Jedi artifacts as possible, the Dark Jedi attack. During the battle, Ood Bnar transforms himself into a tree to save a trove of Jedi items. Elsewhere, Cay Qel-Droma manages to track Ulic’s ship until the two finally face-off on the ground. A furious lightsaber duel ensues. The duels ends as Ulic, with one slice of his lightsaber, slays his own brother. The resulting emotional reaction from Ulic makes him realize that he has taken the wrong path— a realization that has come too late. Nomi comes upon Ulic just as he has killed Cay and, in a fit of anger and grief, summons the Light Side of the Force and uses it to blind Ulic Qel-Droma from the Force forever. Now, essentially blind and deaf to the Force, Ulic decides that the only way to give his life meaning and to make right some of what he has caused, is to be the one to destroy Exar Kun. As he and the Jedi escape Ossus, the shockwave finally strikes the planet, making it a wasteland. On Onderon, the Mandalorians attempt to retake Cinnagar but are repelled by Republic forces. Lord Mandalore is killed in battle, and another of his warriors, while in retreat, takes his armor and takes up the mantle of “Lord Mandalore.” The Jedi head, at Ulic’s direction, to Yavin IV to take out Exar Kun. To ensure his eternal survival, Kun saps the lifeforce from the local Massassi and uses that lifeforce in conjunction with Sith magic to trap his spirit in the Yavin IV temples. The Sith War, which will soon come to be known to some as the “Exar Kun War” to distinguish it from other Sith Wars, is over. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Sith War)

*NOTE: This timeline placement is correct and confirmed by multiple sources, including Leland Chee, “Keeper of the Holocron.” There was an erroneous date change (3,991.5 BBY) made by mistake in the Star Wars Comics Companion, but that did not represent a date change, just an error. The authors apparently used the incorrect dates (3,991 BBY) that were originally shown on the inside cover timelines for the Golden Age of the Sith and Fall of the Sith Empire mini-series, rather than using the corrected dates that came later. (This event falls in 343 BTC on the Treaty of Coruscant calendar.)

During the Sith War, the planet Mustafar, a lush green world orbiting the gas giant Jestefad,
The Ductavis Holocron, created by Jedi Grand Master and Republic Supreme Chancellor Biel Ductavis is believed lost with Ossus due to the Jedi being unable to access its special vault and take it during their evacuation.

(conjecture based on Force and Destiny Core Rulebook)

- During the waning days of the Sith War, Mandalorian Antos Wyrick has come to wonder how their new leader, Ulic Qel-Droma, was able to best Mandalore the Indomitable in combat. He searched Ulic’s quarters at one point and discovered a Jedi robe that Ulic always carried with him, from which he hoped to gain genetic traces of what made the Jedi special. He is unable to investigate any further, though, as the Sith War ends with Ulic’s defeat. Wyrick gives up his Mandalorian armor and takes the robe, escaping into the Republic. He finds a place at an Arkanian University that had recently been renamed after fallen Arkanian Jedi Master Arca Jeth. He uses the resources there to search for answers, but when the Adascas expelled all alien students from their universities. He then heads underground with the Arkanian Offshoots. With many expelled medical students, he discovers that the robe had actually belonged to Arca Jeth, Ulic’s former master, not Ulic himself. He gathers the Offshoots and forms a new research facility on Osadia, using funding from the Mandalorians, who wish to get revenge against the Jedi one day. Their goal is to use the genetic material of Arca Jeth to create a race of Mandalorian Knights

(conjecture based on Demon)

- During the Sith War, the planet Mustafar, a lush green world orbiting the gas giant Jestefad, is devastated when a Sith weapon (likely targeted at the Jedi training center there for over 1,300 years) changes Jestefad’s orbit in relation to another gas giant, Lefrani, catching Mustafar in the powerful gravitational tug of war in the middle. Its surface is fractured, and lava begins flowing freely, creating the hellish landscape that most come to associate with Mustafar.

(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

- Future generations of Mandalorians will refer to Mandalore the Indomitable’s era of leadership during the Sith War as the “Great Shadow Crusade.” The clan best known for combat training, Clan Keldau, uses the mythosaur skull as its sigil, and while the clan will eventually die off, the symbol will become a common one for Mandalorians.

(conjecture based on The Bounty Hunter Code)

- Future Admiral Saul Karath will carry a grudge against Dace Golliard from this time forward. Golliard fled the Foerost shipyards during the Sith War, leaving Karath’s father to die.

(conjecture based on Demon)

- Unbeknownst to many, one Massassi warrior, Kalgrath, had been altered by Exar Kun into a large, green, monstrous version of his previous form, and allowed to survive Kun’s sapping of all of the Massassi species’ lifeforce to save his spirit.

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Alien Species)

- The Tapani Sector develops the Pelagia Duplex Command Assault Gunship (or “Orphanmaker”) to protect itself against the Sith War. The ships perform well, and Baron Karoll “The Mad” Cilarnus orders a private version with double the weaponry. However, Cilarnus’ company goes into receivership after a series of unsound investments, leaving the ship without a buyer. Eventually it is saved from the scrapheap by the Moomo brothers, Dob and Del, who name it the Moomo Williwaw.

(conjecture based on the Knights of the Old Republic Handbook)

- Thanks to the Sith War, Merr-Sonn Munitions gains great prominence as a weapons manufacturer.

(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Weapons and Technology)

- Around this time, the remains of Freedon Nadd, left on the Dxun moon of Onderon by Arca Jeth, begin to taint the entire moon, which over the next four millennia will become an entire Dark Side moon.

(conjecture based on The Dark Side Sourcebook)

- When the Cron System is destroyed during the Great Sith War, it is believed that the Dashade, a race of reptilian humanoids native to the planet Urkupp, becomes extinct. An ancient Falleen, who had 38 Dashade enforcers in his employment, had them cryogenically frozen for later use.

(conjecture based on Secrets of the Sisar Run via TimeTales, abridged)

- With the destruction of the Dashade shadow killers' homeworld, Pollux Poi is saved from the Hutt bounty that the Dashade were trying to collect on his head. Unfortunately, Poi himself dies of natural causes in his hiding place on Kashyyyk a short time later. His assassin droid creations remain on Kashyyyk in the underlevels, where they encounter the Rakatan Star Map. The droids allow themselves to be recreated by the so-called "Builder Forge." After being replicated for a while, several hundred of the droids eventually leave Kashyyyk for Gree space, hoping to find more remnants of ancient civilizations like the Rakatans, but they are instead employed by the Gree as assassin droids.

(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)

- As a result of the Great Sith War, Jedi Knights discover bloodlines powerful in the Force in the House Pelagia in the Tapani Empire.

(conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)

- In the wake of the Sith War, Sylvar and Crado are memorialized on Cathar in works of tree-art.

(conjecture based on Power of the Jedi Sourcebook)

- In the wake of the Sith War, the charge of crimes against civilization is used for the last time until the trial of Kar Vastor after the Haruun Kal crisis nearly four millennia later.

(conjecture based on Shatterpoint)

- In the wake of the Sith War, the Jedi Order remove all record of the Yavin system, but it will eventually be rediscovered by settlers traveling along the Hydian Way. The Gordian Reach hyperspace route that leads to the system will eventually collapse.

(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

- In the wake of the Sith War, Metallos III's telescopic devices are used to seek profitable areas in Known Space (and on the edges thereof), turning the moon into a haven for the rich and the site of auctions to purchase planets, moons, and rights relating to them.

(conjecture based on Prophet Motive)

- In the wake of the Sith War, the survivors of a Jedi vessel that crashed on Haruun Kal begin to mingle with the native Korunnai. Over the next four thousand years, this will grow into a natural Force-attunement in nearly all Korunnai.

(conjecture based on Shatterpoint)

- Blazing Chain pirate crews encounter Sith ships fleeing into the Unknown Regions. While most of these encounters are deadly, some of the lesser Sith join the Blazing Chain, teaching the pirates Sith Force techniques.*

(conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn.

- In the wake of the Sith War, the Jedi Order begins considering centralizing their activities in one location. The idea does not go through.

(conjecture based on Power of the Jedi Sourcebook)

- In the wake of the Sith War, Jedi Padawan (and sideline smuggler) Jolee Bindo, whose wife (whom he met while smuggling and began training in the Force without the Jedi Council's permission) had fallen to the Dark Side and taken Exar Kun's side in the war, is cleared of any wrongdoing by the Jedi Council in not fighting harder to keep her with the Light. They consider his lesson learned and intend to promote him to full Jedi Knight. Jolee, though, cannot forgive himself, so he leaves the Order and begins wandering the galaxy, eventually ending up in the lower depths of the Kashyyyk jungle.

(conjecture based on Power of the Jedi Sourcebook)

- In the wake of the Great Sith War, the Mandalorian Crusaders take their defeat as a sign that the prophesied "Last Great Battle" will soon be at hand. In their frenzy, which will eventually lead to attacks on non-Republic worlds and the Mandalorian War.

(conjecture based on The History of the Mandalorians)

- In the wake of the Great Sith War and the devastation of Ossus, the Senate approves funding for an expansion of the Jedi Temple on Coruscant.

(conjecture based on Coruscant and the Core Worlds)
• In the wake of the Great Sith War, the Jedi Order turns its might against the Sith-tainted Mecrosa Order in the Tapani Sector. The subsequent destruction of Sith-influenced elements in the Order comes to be known as the Cleansing of the Nine Houses. The Mecrosa Order survives, but it becomes more of a straight assassin order than anything Force-related. Unfortunately, the Jedi Order, in following the current Supreme Chancellor’s politically-motivated request to destroy the Mecrosa Order, has allowed some of the remnants of the Great Sith War to slip through their fingers, which will eventually lead to the corruption of Jedi Master Phanius as “Darth Ruin” and the advent of the “New Sith” almost two millennia from now.

(conjecture based on Evil Never Dies: The Sith Dynasties)

• In the wake of the Great Sith War, Sith follower Larad Noon hides out on the moon Susevfi, where he discovers cortosis ore, a mineral that can cause lightsabers to fail on contact. He fashions himself a suit of armor from cortosis, hoping to save himself from Jedi that might hurt him down. None do, so he dies alone, leaving behind a journal that tries to integrate both Jedi and Sith philosophies into what he calls “integrating the shadow” or Jiaasjen.

(conjecture based on Evil Never Dies: The Sith Dynasties)

• In the wake of the Great Sith War, Celeste Morne’s family is dead. Celeste will eventually be taken in by the Jedi Covenant to become one of their Shadow Agents.

(conjecture based on Vector)

• In the wake of the Sith War, Jedi Master Tolaris Shim records his thoughts on Ulic Qel-Droma’s fall to the Dark Side, noting the four stages of the Dark Side in his view: temptation; imperilment; submission; and atonement. (To be continued below . . . )

(Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)

• In the era after the end of the Great Sith War, the Jedi branch of the Praji family goes extinct following the enacting of the prohibition of Jedi marriage.

(conjecture based on Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Praji: A Cartel of Genes)

• Sometime in the era of the Old Sith Wars, the Jewel of Yavin, a huge corusca gem, begins to be written about in documents that will provide hints as to its origins millennia from now.

(conjecture based on The Jewel of Yavin)

The Adventures of the Vorsoons (AJ/TFTE/SWH short stories: Angela Phillips)

Tales of the Jedi [continued] (comic series: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)

Tales of the Jedi Omnibus: Volume II [continued] (comic series: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)

The Sith War (comic series: Kevin J. Anderson)

Edge of the Whirlwind (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)
The Battle of Coruscant (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)
The Trial of Ulic Qel-Droma (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)

Jedi Holocaust (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)

Brother Against Brother (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)

Dark Lord (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)

Main Story Section

"Ulic Dies Storyline" (canceled comic storyline: Tom Veitch)*

*NOTE: The storyline obviously never came to exist. At one time, though, Tom Veitch, had he been penning The Sith War, had planned on leaving Ulic a Dark Lord and letting him die at the end of the series, rather than carrying over to be redeemed in another mini-series (which became Redemption). I list it here as an historical curiosity.

The Dark Side [continued]

Dark Jedi [continued]

Four Stages of the Dark Side

3,994 BBY

• Carth Onasi is born on Telos.*

(conjecture based on Knights of the Old Republic)*

*NOTE: This is based on his profile on the game’s website, which refers to him, specifically, as 38 years old.
Ulic Qel-Droma returns to Yavin IV to survey the devastation the moon suffered at his hands. While he is there, Exar Kun’s spirit cries out to him, but Ulic, now blind to the Force, cannot hear him.*

(The Sith War)*

*NOTE: This timeline placement is correct and confirmed by multiple sources, including Leland Chee, “Keeper of the Holocron.” There was an erroneous date change made by mistake in the Star Wars Comics Companion, but that did not represent a date change, just an error.

Tales of the Jedi [continued] (comic series: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)
Tales of the Jedi Omnibus: Volume II [continued] (comic series: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)
The Sith War [continued] (comic series: Kevin J. Anderson)
Dark Lord [continued] (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)
Epilogue

3,993 BBY

- In the wake of the first Sith War, the Jedi discover that several remaining Sith Dragons, the “terentatek” creatures, remain in the galaxy and are killing Jedi. As a result, the Jedi Council orders the Great Hunt, a massive quest to eliminate these creatures from the galaxy.

(conjecture based on Knights of the Old Republic)

- After a successful terentatek (Sith Dragon) hunt on Tatooine, Jedi Knights Duron Qel-Droma (cousin of Ulic Qel-Droma), Guun Han Saresh, Shaela Nur, and Cale are recalled to Dantooine. There, the Jedi Council tells them of one last refuge of the beasts—the Sith funeral world of Korriban, where adherents of Sith philosophy have already founded their own society (which will later be co-opted and brought into a new Sith Empire by Darths Revan and Malak). The three uninjured members of the hunting party (that is, everyone but Cale) will be going to Korriban to take the last beasts out. Guun is worried, though, as he believes that Duron and Shaela’s feelings for each other will get in the way of the mission on such a Force-strong world. The trio arrive at the settlement of Dreshdae on Korriban and find hints as to where to find the terentateks. While they gather clues, though, Guun begins to indulge in cheap encounters (avoiding attachment, but certainly fulfilling his lusts), while Duron and Shaela give in to their feelings for each other. The affair between the two Jedi leads to a verbal confrontation with Guun Han, after which Guun Han leaves Korriban altogether. He will pursue a lead to Kashyyyk that might be a terentatek, while the other two deal with the Korriban beasts. Guun Han cannot handle the beast on Kashyyyk alone, though, and he is struck down by it. Even as Duron and Shaela sense his death in the Force, they come under attack by the Sith Dragons in the Valley of the Sith Lords on Korriban. Duron is killed, but before he passes away, he tells Shaela to leave him there, so that someone named Revan might someday find the Qel-Droma robe he wears. Coupling this with visions that Shaela has had on Korriban of an unknown man (Darth Malak, years later), she agrees and leave him where he dies. She then enters the Tomb of Naga Sadow, where she senses great darkness and chooses to face another Sith Dragon on her own... It will be her last act among the living. The mission has been a failure, thanks to the all-too-human nature of the Jedi.

(Shadows and Light)

- With the loss of Duron Qel-Droma, Guun Han Saresh, and Shaela Nuri and the belief that the terentatek “Sith Dragons” will remain isolated to Korriban, the Jedi call off their Great Hunt and leave the remaining creatures to their refuge.

(conjecture based on Knights of the Old Republic)

- On Coruscant, Lucien Draay’s mother Krynda continues to refuse to have anything to do with the Jedi Order (owing to the loss of Lucien’s father during the early days of the Sith conflict), but her advisor, Haazen, brings her another potential Jedi Seer student, Q’anilia, whom Krynda instantly recognizes as having potential. Her acceptance of Q’anilia is noticed by Lucien, whose lack of seer abilities has left him neglected by his mother. (To be continued below...)

(Homecoming)

Shadows and Light (SWT23 short story: Joshua Ortega)
Shadows and Light (SWT23 short story: Joshua Ortega)
Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Flashpoint [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Flashpoint [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Homecoming [flashback] (comic: John Jackson Miller)

3,988 BBY

- During Antos Wyrick’s attempts to create Mandalorian Knights on Osadia, he tries to create Arca Jeth clones, but they cannot make it work, so they try to modify children in vitro, but that is also unsuccessful because Arca Jeth was not a pure Arkanian but had some genetics from the Sephi race (without their pointed ears because of surgical reconstruction prior to the Sith War). As it turns out, only the Offshoots with their malleable genetics, are able to bear the experimental children. The first is the child of two Offshoot researchers. The child is named Edessa (later known as “Jarael” to Zayne Carrick and others).

- On Coruscant, Lucien Draay’s mother Krynda is now teaching a group of potential Jedi Seers, including Q’anilia, Xamar, Raana Tey, Feln, and others. Lucien wants to be trained with them, but she will only allow him to train with her advisor, a failed Padawan named Haazen. Haazen tries to explain her actions to Lucien after she blows up at him. According to Haazen, Krynda blames herself for being unable to look into the future and see the rise of Exar Kun, which brought about the Sith War, which claimed the lives of her Jedi Master (Vodo-Siosk Baas), Lucien’s father, and Krynda’s sister. Now, she intends to train a new generation of Jedi Seers to keep anything similar from ever happening again. (To be continued below . . . )

- At the Draay estate on Coruscant, Raana Tey shares a vision with Q’anilia and races to tell Krynda about it. Instead, she accidentally overhears Krynda giving the Prophecy of the Five: “And in the time of tribulation to come, there will be five. One for the darkness . . . and one for the light. Another from the darkness stands in the light, while one from the light stands in the darkness. The last one stands apart from all. And between them, all that has been built will fall.” (To be continued below . . . )

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Flashpoint [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Homecoming [flashback] (comic: John Jackson Miller)

3,986 BBY

- Ulic Qel-Droma, now blind to the Force and drifting about the galaxy, hires Hoggon, a spacer, to find him a remote planet to live the rest of his life on. Hoggon, ignorant of Ulic’s identity, takes him to Yavin IV, where the ghosts of events past haunt Ulic. Yavin IV will certainly not do. On Ryloth, Tott Doneeta has been spending time with his clan. He saves many of them from a heat storm, but refuses treatment for his wounds because he must get to Exis Station. At Exis Station, a Great Convocation of Jedi has been called by Nomi Sunrider. Among the participants are Sylvar, Master Thon, and a young Vima Sunrider. On Rhen Var, Ulic has finally found a place free from the ghosts of the past. Pleased that his passenger has found what he was looking for, Hoggon heads back to Exis Station to witness the Convocation. On the station, Sylvar calls for the hunting down and execution of Ulic. Sylvar has never forgiven Ulic for killing Crado during the Sith War, mainly because she cannot take another mate. On Rhen Var, Ulic is restless. When he almost dies falling into a crevice, he is more than willing to let himself die. The spirit of Master Arca appears before him, though, and tells him that he must live. He manages to save himself, but is unsure what Arca meant. What must he live for? Tott Doneeta and Sylvar take off for Ryloth to help Tott’s clan rebuild. Upon arrival, they find a clan war raging. While Tott goes to try to mediate a truce, Sylvar riles up Tott’s clan for war. Finally, with the clan ready to go to war against the other clan, Tott returns to tell them that a truce has been mediated. The war is over before it has barely begun. Sylvar, disappointed and angered, leaves the planet. Back on Exis Station, Vima has finally had enough of her mother’s lack of attention, so she decides that if Nomi will not teach her to be a Jedi, she will go to Rhen Var (based on comments from Hoggon) and be trained by Ulic. She stows away on Hoggon’s ship and convinces him to take her to Rhen Var. Once there, she speaks to Ulic, but he refuses to teach her. The thought of her spending a night alone in the harsh frozen plains of Rhen Var, however, helps to change his mind. Perhaps this is what Arca meant that he had to finish before he could pass on. Vima leaves a message for her mother telling her that she is training with Ulic, and Nomi is, of course, distraught. Tott and Sylvar go to Sylvar’s home planet of Cathar. Her people welcome her as a hero, but she doesn’t feel like one. Sylvar is dangerously close to the Dark Side, but cannot defeat her anger. She tries going on a ritual Blood Hunt, but even that does not slake her anger. When a scout informs her of Vima’s disappearance, she heads back to Exis Station. Vima’s training goes very well. Ulic teaches her what he can, including the building of her own lightsaber, lightsaber combat, etc. Together they carve an ice relief with their lightsabers of Andur Sunrider and Arca Jeth. On Exis Station, Hoggon realizes who his passenger was and wants to tell Nomi where Vima is, but won’t be admitted to see her. He can tell Sylvar, however, and Sylvar knows what she “must do.” Sylvar heads for Rhen Var with Hoggon as Nomi heads there herself, now that the Convocation is over. Nomi reaches Rhen Var first and realizes that Ulic and Vima have been good for each other. Ulic is less haunted, and Vima is a Jedi. Sylvar arrives soon thereafter and attacks Ulic, enraged. Ulic talks to her, and at the final moment of the duel, Sylvar stops herself from fulfilling the Dark Side’s will and killing Ulic. As she stops, however, Hoggon steps up and shoots Ulic himself, believing that it will make him famous. All that Vima, Sylvar, and Nomi can do is watch Ulic die, but as he lies dying in Nomi’s arms, he vanishes . . . Even blinded to the Force, Ulic Qel-Droma was still a Jedi Knight."

(Re redemption)*

*NOTE: This timeline placement is correct and confirmed by multiple sources, including Leland Chee, “Keeper of the Holocron.” There was an erroneous date change made by mistake in the Star Wars Comics Companion, but that did not represent a date change, just an error. The authors apparently used the incorrect dates that were originally shown on the inside cover timelines for the Golden Age of the Sith and Fall of the Sith Empire mini-series, rather than using the corrected dates that came later. That meant that The Sith War was at 3,991 BYB (which they translated to 3,991.5 BYB), to which the Companion authors just added ten years to get an erroneous date of 3,981.5 for this story. Nope, sorry, it’s an error. The story remains at 3,986 BYB, as it should be.

- The life of Ulic Qel-Droma will eventually be referred to as the Qel-Droma Epics, which some will believe are mere legend.

(conjecture based on Nexus of Power)

Tales of the Jedi [continued] (comic series: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)
Tales of the Jedi Omnibus: Volume II [continued] (comic series: Tom Veitch & Kevin J. Anderson)
Redemption (comic series: Kevin J. Anderson)
  A Gathering of Jedi (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)
  The Search for Peace (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)
  Homecoming (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)
  The Trials of a Jedi (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)
  Master (comic: Kevin J. Anderson)

3,985 BYB
- Orielle Kitai is born to Candra Kitai on Kesh.
  (conjecture based on Purgatory)

3,984 BYB
- Human Darth Xedrix joins the Dark Council, approximately a decade before his future rival, Darth Nyriss.
  (conjecture based on Revan)
3,983 BBY

- On Coruscant, Lucian Draay engages in lightsaber combat practice with his mother Krynda's Jedi Seer students (including Q'anilia, Xamar, Raana Tey, and Feln), soundly kicking their butts. Krynda steps in to stop the combat, annoyed with Lucien's roughness, but his teacher (failed Padawan Haazen) points out that he is an excellent father (like his father who died in the Sith War's early days). Master Vandar Tokare has even offered to bring him into the Jedi Order on a trial basis. Krynda, in her anger, finally expresses to Haazen that the four seers, the best of their species, are the group that she had foreseen. They are the Jedi Seers who will "do what must be done." This causes Haazen to set events in motion to help the group, including suggesting that Lucien be allowed to join them as a protector. And so, the quintet of Jedi Masters who will eventually set in motion tragic events on Taris and beyond during the hunt for Zayne Carrick has been formed . . . (To be continued below . . .)

(Homing)

- Sometime around this time, when Edessa (Jarael) is still rather young, Antos Wyrick's Mandalorian Knights project on Osadia takes a terrible turn. He has been needing more Arkanian Offshoots for his experiments, so he has contracted with a group of slavers called the Crucible. During one of his trips back to report to Mandalore on his progress, the New Generation school that houses his "students" (i.e. "creations") that he believes could be Force-users one day, is attacked by the Crucible. Edessa and others are taken by the slavers, and the remaining scientists want nothing more to do with Wyrick, who has now cost them their children. Wyrick returns to the Mandalorian fold completely, becoming known later as the "Flesh Carver" or "Demar'agol," known to the rest of the galaxy as the "mad scientist" Demagol. (Unbeknownst to Wyrick, he had already sent a Force-sensitive student away as a "failure," his own daughter, Kessarah, later known as "Chantique" when working for the Crucible.)*

*NOTE: The date her is conjecture, given that Jarael is still quite young at this time.

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Flashpoint [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Flashpoint [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Homecoming [flashback] (comic: John Jackson Miller)

3,982 BBY

- Zayne Carrick is born to Arvan and Reiva Carrick on Phaeda.

(conjecture based on the Knights of the Old Republic Handbook and Dueling Ambitions)

3,980 BBY

- Around this time, Atton Rand is born.*

(conjecture based on information posted by Chris Avellone on the forums for Obsidian Entertainment, which he cited as coming from the casting document sent to LucasArts for Knights of the Old Republic II: The Sith Lords)*

*NOTE: Atton is "29 – 33" in The Sith Lords. I have used 29 since it ends on this round numbered year.

- Better navicomputers leave no need for hyperspace beacons.

(conjecture based on Tales of the Jedi audio drama)

- The Old Republic Scout Service is created.

(conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 8: Scouts)

- The Expansion Region is created in the area known as the "Slice."

(conjecture based on Han Solo and the Corporate Sector Sourcebook)

- Six years after his death, Vima Sunrider records her thoughts on the redemption of Ulic Qel-Droma and his final days. (To be continued below . . .)

(Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)

The Dark Side [continued]
Dark Jedi [continued]

Ulic Qel-Droma’s Return to the Light

Mandorla (canceled novel: Alex Irvine)*

Mandorla (canceled novel: Alex Irvine) *

*NOTE: This novel never came to exist. Consider it historical curiosity.

3,978 BBY

- Mandalore the Ultimate is approached by an agent of the Sith Empire’s Dark Emperor. Mandalore assists the agent in finding the remains of Sith Lord Dramath II on Rekkiad, so that he can take the body back to the Dark Emperor (Dramath II’s half-brother who sent him into exile in the first place). Upon acquiring the body, the agent lies to Mandalore and describes the Dark Emperor as having visions of the Mandalorians sweeping across space in battle against the Republic. He informs Mandalore that it will be a great victory, which prompts Mandalore to begin readying for an invasion of the Republic. Little does he know that this is all a Sith plot to test the Republic’s defenses before the reborn Sith Empire invades as part of the Dark Emperor’s long-term plans for revenge against the Republic.*

(conjecture based on Revan)*

*NOTE: This assumes that we can trace the Mandalorian wars to 3,976 BBY, when they first start making their moves, rather than when they first reach Republic worlds. (The Old Republic Encyclopedia confirms this.)

- Mandalore the Ultimate returns to Mandalorian Space and claims that he has had a vision on Shogun (rather than the Sith Empire’s Dark Emperor having a vision) of future conquests. As a result of this “vision” and the need for a coherent fighting force that will now focus on capturing and holding space, rather than moving like locusts from world to world, Mandalore the Ultimate declares that any non-Taungs who prove themselves in battle and uphold the Mandalorian warrior code can now be accepted as full members of the Mandalorian clans. (This is apparently due to his belief that the age of the Taungs is ending, but their work is unfinished, necessitating the use of non-Taung Mandalorians.) This focus on growth and the holding of territory creates a new stratification of Mandalorian society that will now include artisans, merchants, farmers, and slaves beneath them all on worlds controlled by Mandalorians. This Mandalorian reformation creates the movement known as the Neo-Crusaders. Mandalore the Ultimate will be known to the Mandalorians as the “Great Shadow Father” of the Mandalorian clans. It will be the Mandalorian Cassus Fett (who may or may not be an ancestor of Boba Fett, though Boba will not care either way) who will recognize that while previous Mandalorian armor had been individualized because many Mandalorians were Taung, which served to unite them, the new, more diverse Mandalorian culture will need a more uniform style of armor to create similar unity and a command structure. He will suggest what is known as Neo-Crusader armor, which are all of similar style and color coded for positions: blue for regular troops, gold for field marshals, red for rally masters, and silver for both front-line troops and veteran units. (Also, due to the number of new Mandalorians being added to their ranks, there is not enough beskar to craft enough armor, so most Mandalorians will wear armor crafted from other materials.) Cassus Fett will also design a Neo-Crusader logo out of a stylized Mandalorian skull to symbolize the authority of the Mandalore to interpret the will of the war gods.

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare and The Bounty Hunter Code)

3,977 BBY

- Zayne Carrick is taken from Phaeda to the Jedi Academy on Dantooine shortly after his fifth birthday. Jedi Master Vandar Tokare recognizes his difficulties in using the Force, but is pleased enough with Zayne’s personality to consider him a potential future asset to the Jedi Order.

(conjecture based on the Knights of the Old Republic Handbook)

- The planet Vortex enters the Republic.

(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

3,976 BBY

- Mical is born.*
3,975 BBY

- At the age of thirteen, Edessa, still a slave of the Crucible, challenges a girl around her own age, Chantique (AKA Kessarah Wyrick, daughter of Antos Wyrick AKA Demagol), who has been her overseer. She stabs Chantique in the back, literally, which leads Chantique to be given over to the fate of the discarded (presumably sex slavery). Edessa becomes the new overseer, soon helping other slaves, including those captured with her from Wyrick’s school. She tries to protect them from the excesses of the Crucible, earning her the new name (and facial markings to match), “Jarael,” which means “Protector” in the Crucible’s language.

  (conjecture based on Destroyer)

  *NOTE: Some sources attempt to pin down Chantique joining the Crucible, though we have no exact date for that event. Those sources often claim that she came into the Crucible in 3,996 BBY, owing to her comment in Destroyer about “thirty-three years with the Crucible.” This is erroneous, as she is referring to Dace Golliard being with the Crucible for 33 years, not herself.*

3,974 BBY

- Mira is born.

  (conjecture based on information posted by Chris Avellone on the forums for Obsidian Entertainment, which he cited as coming from the casting document sent to LucasArts for Knights of the Old Republic II: The Sith Lords)

  NOTE: The document states that she is 23 in the game.

- On Coruscant at the Draay estate, the scheming Haazen reports to Lady Krynda that her new class of seers was correct about a Sith text being discovered by the Library of Chandrila. The text has been subsequently disposed of by a Covenant Shadow agent. Her Economic Circle has also correctly predicted that a breakthrough naval system is in the works from Vanjervalis
(the so-called "Vanjervalis Chain"). Haazen has arranged for the Draay Trust to purchase a controlling interest in the company working on it. He also reports that Lucien Draay has arrived on Taris to begin training a group of new students, which should not distract him from their real mission on Taris, which is to secure the Muur Talisman. (To be continued below . . . )

*NOTE: This date is entirely conjectural. I have simply allowed a ten year gap between the formation of Lucien’s academy on Taris and the events that kick off the Knights of the Old Republic comic book series.

- Around this time, Darth Nyriss joins the Dark Council. She finds herself immediately squared off against a rival on the Council, Darth Xedrix.

*NOTE: She has been on the Dark Council for “nearly” 20 years, but this is often referenced as simply 20 years. I am assuming this means she is so close to 20 years on the Council that there is little enough difference for this date, 20 years before Revan, to be accurate.

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Vindication [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Vindication Part II [flashback] (comic: John Jackson Miller)

3,973 BBY
- As the Mandalorians move on to assault their second non-Republic world in their broader plans, the Cathar race is driven to near-extinction after the attack on their homeworld of Cathar. Mandalorians under Cassus Fett round up the Cathar, drive them into the sea, and then, despite pleas from another Mandalorian that they are defeated and need not be wiped out, kills them all from orbit, including the offending Mandalorian.

*NOTE: I had originally put the attack on Cathar early in the Mandalorian assaults on Republic worlds a while later, but The Essential Atlas has clarified that Cathar was one of the first two Mandalorian targets overall in the pre-Republic assaults. However, The Essential Guide to Warfare then further clarified that Cathar was attacked three years after Althir III.
- With the destruction of Cathar, a group of survivors, including the young Juhani, escapes to the planet Taris. Juhani herself, though, is saved from the anti-alien Tarissan culture, when the Jedi Knights, on their way to yet another battle, find her and send her to the Jedi Academy on Dantooine to be trained as a Jedi.

*NOTE: SWT-G reader Pavel Klimeš noticed that I had put Feln being discovered here in the same year that the troubles and Covenant use of the Sanctum began. Given that Feln is seen in an earlier segment of Homecoming, there is actually nothing to directly tie Feln leaving the first time (to train as a Jedi) and these events, only the idea that he returned at some point and started to allow the Jedi Covenant into the Sanctum. Thus, I have reworded the entry to reflect this.

3,970 BBY
- Provisional Governor Myrial of Argazda declares Argazda’s home sector, Kanz, independent, then proceeds to annex or forcefully take all of the other worlds in the sector into his own rule, including the world of Lord. The Kanz system is renamed the Argazdan Redoubt. Thus begin the Kanz Disorders. As a result of being subjugated, the Lordians, forbidden to speak with one another, create a complex language based on physical signals. Those who remain loyal to the Republic are killed in mass executions on Argazda, while the Ereesi (the slavers whose predation had convinced Argazda to petition for Republic entry in the first place) are attacked by the Argzdans, who wipe out all live on their planet of Ereesus. With the Mandalorian Wars taking up Republic attention, the system has picked the perfect time to rebel.
3,967 BBY
- Jelph Marrian’s desires to keep the Sith from ever returning to devastate another world like his homeworld of Toprawa finally goes too far from the Jedi Order. He is expelled, but he becomes a shadow agent for the Jedi Covenant.
(conjecture based on Purgatory)

3,966 BBY
- The Mandalorians start threatening Vanquo, Tarnith, Suurja, and Jebble, all resource worlds that feed into the planet Taris. At the urging of Lhosan Industries, the Republic grants the Outer Rim world membership. Its senator, Gorravus, then convinces the Republic to provide protection to Taris, which is not at all normal for an Outer Rim world, which are generally unprotected.
(conjecture based on Days of Fear)
- Warlord Ugroth swears fealty to Darth Nyriss when she quells a potential uprising in his territory.
(conjecture based on Revan)

3,965 BBY
- Just over a year before the murder of the Padawans on Taris, the Mandalorians capture their last populated system in the Outer Rim.
(conjecture based on The Taris Holofeed: Prime Edition, found in Knights of the Old Republic #0, the flip-book comic that is also Rebellion #0)
*NOTE: For the purposes of this entry, I am assuming that the Knights of the Old Republic comic book series starts around the start of 3,964 BBY, which would mean that events taking place a little over a year before that story would be right near the beginning of 3,965 BBY.
- Four months before the murder of the Padawans on Taris, the Mandalorians capture the Flashpoint stellar research station in the Outer Rim.
(conjecture based on The Taris Holofeed: Prime Edition, found in Knights of the Old Republic #0, the flip-book comic that is also Rebellion #0)
*NOTE: For the purposes of this entry, I am assuming that the Knights of the Old Republic comic book series starts around the start of 3,964 BBY, which would mean that events taking place multiple months before that story must take place late in the prior year, 3,965 BBY.
- Six weeks before the murder of the Padawans on Taris, conflict between the Republic and Mandalorian forces on Suurja begins and quickly enters a stalemate that includes four battles over the next six weeks.
(conjecture based on The Taris Holofeed: Prime Edition, found in Knights of the Old Republic #0, the flip-book comic that is also Rebellion #0)
*NOTE: For the purposes of this entry, I am assuming that the Knights of the Old Republic comic book series starts around the start of 3,964 BBY, which would mean that events taking place multiple months before that story must take place late in the prior year, 3,965 BBY.

3,964 BBY
- There are many dates which individuals use to date the beginning of the Mandalorian Wars, depending upon whom one asks, where they lived, and so forth. The official historical date for the beginning of the Mandalorian Wars from the perspective of Republic scholars is this year.
(conjecture based on various sources and information provided by Leland Chee)
*NOTE: One rather oddball item, Pedigree Books’ Star Wars Annual 2008, notes the Mandalorian Wars beginning in 3,995 BBY, which is the earliest bizarre date I’ve yet seen for this event.
- During the Mandalorian Wars, the Bounty Hunters Guild’s organization is so fractured (mostly by young Bounty Hunters taking inspiration from Gank mercenaries to become more mercenaries than bounty hunters) that Guild leader Vossk quits in disgust.
(conjecture based on The Bounty Hunter Code)
• Sometime during the Mandalorian Wars, Jedi Master Val Isa tries to stay clear of conflict by operating her ship, the Sanctuary, as a medical and rescue vessel to help whomever she can. As things get more dangerous, she takes the ship to a Koler to hide, but Mandalorians discover and attack the ship. The Mandalorians board and at least one battles Val to the death. The Mandalorian’s Basilisk war droid refuses to leave its master, eventually going dormant in the same room in which the Mandalorian battled and killed Val.
  (conjecture based on Lessons from the Past)
• The era of the Mandalorians Wars under Mandalore the Ultimate will come to be known to the Mandalorian Neo-Crusaders as the “Onslaught.”
  (conjecture based on The Bounty Hunter Code)
• On Taris, Baron Hieromann begins seeking investors for his Market Street Outdoor Exchange to help bring fleek eels from Hocekureem to the Upper City on Taris as a delicacy. He promises that within eight months, the eels will be highly sought after.
  (conjecture based on The Taris Holofeed: Prime Edition, found in Knights of the Old Republic #0, the flip-book comic that is also Rebellion #0)
• The Sith known as Scourge comes to Dromund Kaas to train at the Sith Academy.
  (conjecture based on Revan)
• Despite its best efforts, the Republic is unable to push back Mandalorian forces along the Jeeble-Vanquo-Tarnith line on Suurja during the fourth battle there in six weeks. Republic officials, though, are hopeful that Captain Saul Karath’s line will not only hold, but soon allow the Republic to push into Mandalorian-held territory.
  (conjecture based on The Taris Holofeed: Prime Edition, found in Knights of the Old Republic #0, the flip-book comic that is also Rebellion #0)
• The Taris Holofeed: Prime Edition features headline stories on Taris patrols redoubling their hunt for Zovius Mendu, the stalemate on Suurja, investors being sought for fleek eel fishing, and hopes regarding the Jedi class on Taris that includes Zayne Carrick. (Exact date of report via The Taris Holofeed: 39:56:1434)
  (conjecture based on The Taris Holofeed: Prime Edition, found in Knights of the Old Republic #0, the flip-book comic that is also Rebellion #0)*
• The era of the Mandalorian Wars under Mandalore the Ultimate will come to be known to the Mandalorian Neo-Crusaders as the “Onslaught.”
  (conjecture based on The Bounty Hunter Code)
• On Taris, Baron Hieromann begins seeking investors for his Market Street Outdoor Exchange to help bring fleek eels from Hocekureem to the Upper City on Taris as a delicacy. He promises that within eight months, the eels will be highly sought after.
  (conjecture based on The Taris Holofeed: Prime Edition, found in Knights of the Old Republic #0, the flip-book comic that is also Rebellion #0)
• The Sith known as Scourge comes to Dromund Kaas to train at the Sith Academy.
  (conjecture based on Revan)
• Despite its best efforts, the Republic is unable to push back Mandalorian forces along the Jeeble-Vanquo-Tarnith line on Suurja during the fourth battle there in six weeks. Republic officials, though, are hopeful that Captain Saul Karath’s line will not only hold, but soon allow the Republic to push into Mandalorian-held territory.
  (conjecture based on The Taris Holofeed: Prime Edition, found in Knights of the Old Republic #0, the flip-book comic that is also Rebellion #0)
• The Taris Holofeed: Prime Edition features headline stories on Taris patrols redoubling their hunt for Zovius Mendu, the stalemate on Suurja, investors being sought for fleek eel fishing, and hopes regarding the Jedi class on Taris that includes Zayne Carrick. (Exact date of report via The Taris Holofeed: 39:56:1434)
  (conjecture based on The Taris Holofeed: Prime Edition, found in Knights of the Old Republic #0, the flip-book comic that is also Rebellion #0)*

*NOTE: The date notation here doesn’t really make much sense in Star Wars context, so I hesitate to try to translate it. The date is given as “39:56:1434.” This makes very little sense in relation to normal Star Wars dating, which is YY:MM:DD. It would translate as Year 39 (which could make sense), Month 56 (which would make no sense in a universe that uses 12-month calendars and had previously used the outmoded 10-month calendar), Day 1434 (which would make no sense in the context of months with 30 – 35 days, at most). This could be some kind of MM:DD:YY style date, which would mean that they’re trying to call this Year 1434, which might be kind of cool . . . but then we’d still have the issues of too many days in a month and too many months in a year. Thus, take that date with a grain of salt – a huge grain of salt.

• On the planet Taris, the criminal Marn “Gryph” Hieroglyph is in the process of purchasing stolen Republic-issue blaster power packs (which were supposed to be going to Captain Saul Karath), when the deal is interrupted by the arrival of Jedi Padawan Zayne Carrick. Zayne bumbles the arrest, ending up flying off on his swoop, involuntarily, as his cloak gets caught on his swoop when Gryph sends it flying off. Luckily, Zayne manages to save himself from the swoop. He is saved from a fall by a Jedi Knight, who goes by the nickname “Squint,” who leaps through the air and tackles him to a rooftop. The Jedi was sent to find Zayne by Master Lucien (who simply told him to “follow the trail of debris”). Squint tells Zayne that he is on Taris to recruit Jedi to join him and other Jedi on the battlefront of the Mandalorian conflict. The Jedi are split on the issue of intervention in the situation, since many on the Jedi Council believe that it is the Jedi’s duty to guard against the return of the Sith (with the Sith War against Exar Kun being a not-too-distant memory). Squint leaves for the front, but he tells Zayne (who doesn’t think he’s likely to become a full Jedi Knight) that he has a hunch that Zayne has a larger role to play in the galaxy than he might think. As Squint leaves, Jedi Master Lucien bears witness as the Miralukan Jedi Master Q’anilia has a dire sensation through the Force. “Lines have crossed. Something has changed. Something bad. Something near. Several somethings.” Lucien promises that they will find out for sure what is happening, and then they will do something about it . . .

(Crossroads)*

*NOTE: This story, which was Knights of the Old Republic #0 shares the same title as the story Rebellion #0.
Both were in the same “flip-book” comic.

- Antos Wyrick AKA “Demagol” keeps a journal of his experiments with the Mandalorians to determine the nature and source of Jedi abilities in order to neutralize their advantage or provide those advantages to the Mandalorians (and Wyrick’s own experiments). In journal entry #6005, he recounts a gathering called by Mandalore the Ultimate in which the leader praised Demagol for his research. Cassus Fett, meanwhile, frequently remarked against the project, expecting it to be just another “New Generation Project,” and prefers simply defeating the Jedi by force of arms, rather than the Force itself. In a subsequent entry, #6019, he notes that the Mandalorians have captured Flashpoint, where Demagol will now base his experiments while guarding the outpost. (To be continued below . . . )

*NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issues 0 and 1.

- On the planet Taris, the criminal dealings of Marn “Gryph” Hierogryph are interrupted by the appearance of Jedi Padawan Zayne Carrick. Gryph is able to escape from Zayne, but only after dousing Zayne in rancid waste and causing him to slip from a ladder far above the city. Zayne thumps from air vehicle to air vehicle before crashing through a window and facing several lightsabers pointed directly at him. He has fallen into a reception hall, where a promotion ceremony from Padawan to Knight is about to be held for worthy Padawans (which Zayne hopes he would be considered as well). His own Jedi Master, Lucien Draay, chastises him for his appearance, tardiness, and overall bumbling, but his friends and fellow Padawans welcome him, including fellow Padawan Shad Jelavan’s sister, Shel Jelavan, whom Zayne cares for. Meanwhile, the Masters confer on some kind of coming dark deed that involves “missing” the Padawans . . . Shortly thereafter, as Zayne prepares to pay for the damages from his crashing into the place, he spots Gryph outside. He leaps outside and captures Gryph, but is running late, so he leaves Gryph shackled to an airspeeder as he races inside the reception hall to attend the knighting ceremony. But as he enters, he finds a scene of horror. The five Jedi Masters (including Lucien Draay, Raana Tey, Q’anilia, Xamar, and Feln) stand over the dead bodies of the other four Padawans (Shad Jelavan, P’den Robalt, Gharn, and Oojoh), whom the Masters themselves have just killed! Zayne quite literally runs for his life, dropping down a lift shaft and cutting his way into a lower level, then dropping down a chute. He ends up back by the speeder with Gryph, whom he then escapes with (Zayne driving with Gryph behind him, the sidecar ripped off). The Jedi pursue them (Lucien flying with Raana Tey), but a quick drop down a garbage chute saves Zayne and Gryph from capture. As the two fugitives now try to evade both the Jedi and the civil authorities, Lucien and Q’anilia (another Master) discuss the situation, including a mysterious “associate” on Coruscant and the question of whether Zayne could be “the one.” Meanwhile, the fugitives find themselves in a pub, where they discuss the situation. Gryph suggests that Lucien might be a Sith (well, he says “Bith,” but Zayne corrects him), but Zayne counters that the masters hate the Sith . . . which causes him to wonder what all could be going on, since “hate” is not something the Jedi are supposed to do. He wonders just what it is that the Masters are afraid of. In order to escape prying eyes, Gryph suggests that they make their way to Taris’ Undercity. Little do they know that the Jedi Masters are meditating and having just “overheard” Gryph’s plan . . . (To be continued below . . . )

*NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issue 2.

- Luckily for Zayne Carrick, Marn “Gryph” Hierogryph’s plan (“overheard” by the meditating
The Star Wars Timeline Gold: Legends Timeline, Vol. 1

Taris Jedi Masters) is actually to go to the outskirts of Machineville, using the Undercity plan as a sort of red herring. Even as he and Zayne head for Machineville, the Jedi Masters take on rakghouls in the Undercity. Jedi Master Xamar informs Lucien that Taris Security is after Zayne and that he’s been spotted on his way to Machineville. (So much for a head start.) Gryph and Zayne reach their destination, a place called the “Last Resort,” run by the Arkanian tinkerer known as the Camper (Gorman Vandrayk). As they arrive, they are attacked by one of Gryph’s old friends, Camper’s comrade Jarael. After arguing a bit with both Jarael and the Camper about their need to get out of there, the Taris Constable Sawr’s forces arrive to capture Zayne and Gryph. Luckily, the “Last Resort” is actually a starship, the Last Resort (aptly enough). They launch in the old junk hauler, but, unfortunately, there’s no way such a ship can outrun patrol cruisers . . . especially when all power systems fail and leave them adrift. Luckily, Camper is able to get power going again and launches them into a nearby asteroid field, where the patrols are unwilling to follow. Zayne continues to bicker with Jarael about how dangerous it is to have him aboard. Eventually, Zayne has an idea. He can contact the nearby Dantooine Jedi Academy, where he might be able to find an ally in Jedi Master Vandar Tokare, a member of the Dantooine Jedi Council. He takes the ship out of the asteroid field (and into harm’s way) in order to make contact, but Vandar has already heard that Zayne was responsible for the deaths of the other four Padawans. He tells the truth to Vandar, who finds it strange that four of the five Masters on Taris were specialized Jedi Consulars, which is unusual. He tells Zayne that the Dark Side might have clouded his memories and he could really still be the killer, but Zayne won’t believe it. When Vandar suggests he turn himself in, Zayne is about to disagree, but Jarael knocks him out and cuts off the communication because he’s put them in harm’s way to send it. Zayne soon realizes that the decision of the Masters to kill the Padawans seems to have come after meditation that was a result of their last training mission to Taris’ Rogue Moon. Zayne has them go to that moon (which is perpetually bombarded by meteorites), hoping to find answers. When he realizes that T1-LB, the Jedi’s droid, “fell” to his doom in a nearby valley, he rushes off to find the droid, which likely saw whatever caused the Masters to flip out. His suspicions become even greater when he notes that the droid didn’t fall to its doom, but was apparently pushed with the Force. As they prepare to get out of there with T1-LB, they have bigger problems afoot . . . Lucien has arrived with the Taris police! Luckily, the Last Resort is a scavenger ship, so it is able to quickly scoop the fugitives up into the ship and escape. They rewire T1-LB and play back its memory. They discover that while Zayne and the Padawans were on their last training mission on the Rogue Moon, the Masters Xamar, Q’anilia, Raana Tey, and Feln all meditated and had a shared vision of darkness and doom, wherein they were all cut down and the Jedi faced a new threat from the Sith. Amid that vision, they saw a figure in the same type of spacesuit that the Padawans were wearing, so they naturally assumed that one of the Padawans would turn out to be the new Sith they would come up against. They therefore decided to kill the Padawans in order to, in essence, save the future. Given that T1-LB saw this taking place, Lucien orders the droid to the edge of a cliff, then Force-pushed him over the edge. This has caused issues with T1-LB’s programming, since it cannot accept that its master would order its own destruction, nor that it would destroy itself. To sort this out, the droid purges the last month of its memory, leaving them without further evidence. As they ponder the revelations of the recording, they are met by the bounty hunter ship Oroko. The crew of the Oroko will allow Camper and Jarael to go, since there are no bounties on them, and they strike a bargain with Gryph, who admits that things have gotten just too big for him to deal with. (He seems actually remorseful at having to leave Zayne). Meanwhile, Zayne will be turned over to the Taris Jedi for the bounty. Later, when Jarael discovers Zayne about to steal the Last Resort and escape, she argues with him over how he disrupted her life and Camper’s, along with questioning his intentions. Finally, he makes a decision: If he is truly the threat that the Masters saw in their visions, then he will stop the prophecy from coming true by turning himself in to the authorities. The captain of the Oroko takes Zayne back to the Jedi Enclave chamber on Taris. There, Zayne (and the captain) learn the truth. The Masters are part of a covenant whose goal is to look into the future and prevent another Great Sith War. They had intended to wait for all five Padawans to arrive, then kill them and use the cover story that they had rejected Shad Jelavan, who had then become enraged and killed the other four before the Masters killed Shad himself. However, things didn’t work out that way. Shad had arrived late and questioned the Masters about Zayne being promoted as well. When he realized that the Masters were lying about promoting Zayne, he confronted them, which led to the Masters killing the four before Zayne could arrive. Now, the Masters intend to kill Zayne. Then, upon killing the Oroko’s captain, Lucien notes that they will also have to kill Gryph, Camper, and Jarael because the threads of disaster in the Force that they feel could actually be coming from how Zayne’s very existence affects those around him, who might fight for him. Zayne makes only one last request, that the Jedi Masters look after Shad’s sister and little brother, who are now in financial need without Shad’s Jedi stipend. Lucien says he’ll consider it, then readies to kill Zayne . . . but the enclave is attacked. A figure in the same type of space suit as in the Jedi’s vision, bearing Zayne’s lightsaber, bursts in through the ceiling. The Masters are so shocked at the presence of this supposed Sith Lord that they had seen in their vision that they are slow in realizing that it is actual Jarael, come to save Zayne. She launches them away to the nearby landing pad, where the Last Resort awaits. Jarael had been impressed that Zayne was willing to sacrifice himself for them, so they decided to save him. As Zayne escapes, Gryph makes him an offer to be partners, of a sort. Zayne is no longer a member of the Jedi Order, but his search for justice will continue . . .

Three weeks later, Taris is in flames. Riots are in progress and the public has no faith in the Jedi Masters after having heard of Zayne escaping from their own enclave twice. The Masters have now been recalled to Coruscant, which will leave Taris open to Mandalorian attack, most likely. Lucian assures his comrades, though, that they will be able to continue their work, even if separated. They then receive a message from Zayne, sent through some of Gryph’s connections. In that message, Zayne sets out his current mission. He intends to hunt down all five of the Masters until one of them comes forward and confesses Zayne’s innocence. Whomever does so will live, while the others will be killed. Zayne will find them . . . “And if I do end up collapsing the Jedi Order,” Zayne tells Lucien, “just remember one thing. You started it.”

(Commencement)

- In entry #6062 of his journal, Demagol notes the capture of two Republic vessels from Suurja with a large number of Jedi Knights. One of the warriors who captured them is Rohlan Dyre AKA “Rohlan the Runner,” whom Demagol somewhat respects as an old school Mandalorian, rather than a Neo-Crusader, despite his tendency to race off into situations that do not concern him. In Entry #6066, he marvels at one of the test subjects, captured Jedi Knight Alek Squinquargesimus, who seems resistant to extreme pain and holding a perhaps inherent hatred of Mandalorians. He intends to vivisect Alek when his usefulness as a test subject ends. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol)*

*NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issue 6.

- On Vanquo, refugees fleeing the Mandalorian advance are holed up with Republic patrols at a mining colony. When an apparent starving refugee comes to the patrol post for aid, he is rebuked but helped briefly. While the refugee is present, they receive a transmission from Jedi Master Q’anilia, who orders them to evacuate because the Mandalorians are invading Vanquo. They do so, but it turns out that the “refugee” was Zayne Carrick playing mind tricks on them, and the image of Q’anilia was, in fact, Jarael in disguise with Zayne’s lightsaber. Using this distraction, our heroes manage to loot as much as possible to load up provisions on the Last Resort. However, Gryph’s idea of a fake Mandalorian invasion comes true as the Mandalorians really do come down on Vanquo. Seeing Jarael acting like a Jedi, the Mandalorians take her captive. Even as Elbee gets Camper to safety, Zayne and Gryph avoid the Mandalorians, still hoping to get back to the ship and find a way to save Jarael. Unfortunately, the Mandalorians reach the ship first, stealing our heroes’ only means of transport. Elbee, Camper, Zayne, and Gryph leap up onto the ship, barely getting inside. (Elbee even gets a limb snapped off in the process.) Camper and Elbee subdue the Mandalorian pilot, Rohlan Dyre, even as the Republic fleet coming to the rescue of Vanquo, headed by Captain Saul Karath, discovers that Zayne was on the planet. This makes them believe that he is a Mandalorian operative, making it Karath’s mission to capture and punish him. As for our heroes and their captive, they learn that Rohlan is a Mandalorian who believes that there is something else behind the current war. He intends to find answers, but every time he tries to leave the fighting behind to seek those answers, he is thrown back into fighting by the Mandalore. He wants answers, and now the war has sped up. He tells Zayne that it was the deaths of the Jedi Padawans on Taris (for which Zayne is blamed) and the Jedi leaving Taris (as a result of Zayne’s conflict with the Jedi Masters) that led the Mandalorians to strike the entire sector now, while it is ripe for the picking. Zayne feels a need to make up for this, and he comes up with a plan to rescue Jarael. As for Jarael herself, she is dropped onto the Mandalorian prison world of Flashpoint, where the scientist Demagol experiments on Jedi. Realizing that she isn’t a Jedi, another prisoner, Squint (who had met Zayne on Taris before the deaths of the Padawans), agrees to another round of experiments, buying her time to survive. (To be continued below . . . )

(Flashpoint)

- In entry #6087 of his journal, Demagol notes that Mandalore the Ultimate’s onslaught has begun and the “shadow war” is over. His studies of captured Jedi on Flashpoint, however, have not yielded many clues to their abilities, suggesting to Pulsipher that he may be right about the source of their abilities being purely mystical. In entry #6093, he notes the capture of Jarael and is intrigued by the fact that she is an Arkanian Offshoot, since he lost his research files on Offshoots when the New Generation Project collapses. He intends to study her once he is done studying Alek Squinquargesimus. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol)*

*NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issues 8 and 9 (well, sort of issue 9, given that it was released out of order; more like between 8 and 10).

- Zayne Carrick, Rohlan Dyre, Camper, Marn “Gryph” Hierogryph, and Camper engage in a daring plan to rescue Jarael. First, Rohlan delivers Zayne to Demagol as a special prisoner, while Gryph and Camper remain aboard the ship, hidden in a special compartment, and Elbee sits as a supposedly deactivated droid. Just as Jarael is about to be taken in for experiments (upon Squint’s return), Demagol is persuaded to take Zayne instead. Rohlan and Zayne then incapacitate Demagol, allowing Zayne to wear his armor and take his place. (To be continued below . . . )

(Flashpoint)

- In entry #6107 of his journal, Demagol records while stuck in a locker by Zayne Carrick and Rohlan Dyre. He realizes that Jarael might have been one of his Osadia subjects from the New Generation Project and seeks to find a way to not lose everything all over again. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol)*

*NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issue 10.

- Still as Demagol, Zayne Carrick uses the Force to place charges outside the Flashpoint facility, which then explode in conjunction with a message from “Admiral” Gryph, who claims that the Republic has sabotaged their own materials that were stolen. Eventually, this leads to the Mandalorians abandoning Flashpoint in their own ship, leaving Zayne and the others to save the prisoners. In the aftermath, our heroes prepare to continue their mission aboard the Last Resort. Rohlan is offered a place within the Republic military as an asset to inform about the Mandalorians, though he won’t take it. (In truth, Rohlan returned to get Demagol but had the tables turned on him. The Demagol being taken into custody is actual Rohlan Dyre in a coma in Demagol’s armor, while “Rohlan Dyre,” for quite a while, will actually be Demagol in Rohlan’s armor, masquerading as Rohlan for his own purposes.) As for Squint, we are again teased with the possibility that his master is Revan. We learn that his real name is Alek (sounding a bit like “Malak”), and as he leaves, he wears a red spacesuit that the others give him . . . the very same suit that the Sith or Dark Jedi was wearing in the Jedi Masters’ vision of doom that started everything on Taris in the first place. Could Squint be the dark one that has been foreseen?
In entry #6108 of his journal, Demagol, hiding aboard the Last Resort, tests his ability to record spoken journal entries into the helmet he has taken from Rohlan Dyre. Upon confirming that this is the case, and with his previous journal materials loaded into the helmet as well, he records entry #6109 and considers his next moves, intending to keep an eye on Jarael and otherwise impersonate Rohlan Dyre when and if discovered. (To be continued below . . . )

NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issue 10.

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Commencement (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Crossroads (comic: John Jackson Miller)
The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)
Enter #6005
Enter #6019

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Commencement [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Commencement, Part I (comic: John Jackson Miller)
Commencement, Part II (comic: John Jackson Miller)
The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)
Enter #6025

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Commencement [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Commencement, Part III (comic: John Jackson Miller)
Commencement, Part IV (comic: John Jackson Miller)
Commencement, Part V (comic: John Jackson Miller)
Commencement, Part VI (comic: John Jackson Miller)
The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)
Enter #6062
Enter #6066

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Flashpoint [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Flashpoint, Part I (comic: John Jackson Miller)
Flashpoint, Part II (comic: John Jackson Miller)
The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)
Enter #6087
Enter #6093

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Flashpoint [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Flashpoint, Part III (comic: John Jackson Miller)
The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)
Enter #6107

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Flashpoint [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
3,963 BBY

- The Mandalorians begin invading Republic worlds, starting with the Dxun moon of Onderon, forcing the Senate to respond by sending the Republic fleet to stop them. Thus begins the Mandalorian War, but while the Republic responds to the threat, the Jedi Council refuses to send Jedi to aid in the war, believing that cooler heads will prevail, if given time. Several Jedi choose to ignore this directive of inaction and head off to war anyway (in what is called the Jedi Crusade), including Jedi Knights Revan (former Padawan of Kreia) and Malak (Revan’s own student), who begin to shift the tide toward Republic victory.
  (conjecture based on Knights of the Old Republic and The Sith Lords)

- Voren Renstaal and his Jedi master fight against the Mandalorians in some of the early skirmishes with the Republic. During the First Battle of Onderon, Renstaal’s master is killed, which will spur him to join the Revanchists.
  (conjecture based on The Betrayal of Darth Revan)

- During the Mandalorian War, Mandalorian Dungeon Ships are first used. These are accompanied by the Meteor-class Q-carriers, which launch from the Dungeon Ships.
  (conjecture based on The History of the Mandalorians)

- On Coruscant, Jedi Masters Lucien Draay, Raana Tey, Q’anilia, Xamar, and Feln attempt to visit Lucien’s mother, only to be turned away. Lucien, however, is given a message that he is to “wait for contact.” Shortly thereafter, Lucien must speak in front of the Jedi High Council. The five Masters arrive, just as the Council is criticizing the actions of a hooded Jedi (likely Revan), who has sent “scouting missions” into Mandalorian territory, which apparently led to the capture of many of the Jedi (like Squint) held at Flashpoint. In defending their actions to the Jedi Council, Lucien admits to killing the Padawans . . . but only in the sense that he was supposedly unable to stop Zayne Carrick from turning to the Dark Side and killing them. They request to be allowed to stay together and lead the search for Zayne, but the Council rejects the notion and decides to assign the quintet to separate posts. After the meeting, they decide to continue their search for Zayne, despite the Council’s orders, and Raana Tey gives Lucien a data disk with information about a project she has been working on . . . Lucien is then called to his meeting (the one he was “waiting for contact” about). The man (well, now a cyborg from injuries in the Sith War) Lucien meets at his mother’s home turns out to be his old teacher, Haazen, who berates him for almost revealing the existence of the Covenant. He orders Lucien to bring Zayne to him and Lucien’s mother, but Lucien intends to kill Zayne to stop the dark visions about the Sith from coming true. Lucien leaves, but while Haazen has secrets that he won’t reveal to Lucien, Lucien has his own secrets, kept even from Haazen . . .
  (Homecoming)

- The crew of the Last Resort stop on the planet Telerath, a rather unconventional banking world that is more like a vacation resort. Camper is posing as Baron Hyro Margryph in order to convince the Telerath officials that there has been a mistake that caused “his” account to be frozen, when, in reality, they are trying to get access to funds placed in there by Marn Hierogryph, whose funds have been frozen legally. As Gryph gives information via secret comlink and Zayne Carrick waits with him, Camper speaks with bank officials with Jarael as his employee, “Chantique.” (The name will be ironic later when Jarael’s past with the real Chantique is revealed.) They meet a man named Arvan, a newcomer to the business, who tries to help them, but they are soon set upon by a pair of bumbling Ithorian robbers, Del and Dob. The Ithorians strike, and Jarael fights back, but instead of being after Jarael or Camper, the Ithorians capture Arvan and run off with him. Knowing that they need the banker, Zayne races to the rescue, only to discover that the banker is none other than Zayne’s own father. A short time later, after Zayne is knocked down and unable to save Arvan, Raana Tey contacts... the dimwit brothers and angrily berates them for blowing their “covert” mission to watch Arvan, using him as bait for Zayne. (They weren't hired to capture Zayne, only alert her to when he arrives, and they, as of yet, don't realize that the young man they encountered was Zayne himself.) Now, though, Zayne and the others must enact a rescue plan to save Arvan. To do so, Gryph meets with Dob, offering to turn Zayne over to him, while simultaneously cutting Del out of the deal. As Dob returns to their ship, Zayne follows him, eventually overhearing another transmission from Raana Tey, noting that she and the other Masters intend to apparently kill Arvan. Zayne breaks in, saving Arvan, who never believed that his son was guilty of anything. He also reveals that he was recently transferred to Telerath, which seems fishy and is made even more obviously a trap when Zayne learns that Jedi Master Lucien Draay’s family has a heavy financial interest in the bank. As Gryph arrives with “Zayne” (Camper in a cloak), Zayne sparks a brawl between the two brothers, allowing them to escape, and get access to Gryph’s funds. (To be continued below . . . )

(Reunion)

- In entry #6124 of his journal, Demagol, hiding aboard the Last Resort, notes his ability to leave the compartment he has hidden inside, thanks to Camper being gone from the cargo hold. (To be continued below . . . )*

(The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol)*

*NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issue 12.

- Zayne Carrick starts being paid for his services with Gryph, and his first share is transferred to someone on Taris. They then arrange for Arvan Carrick to be transferred to Dantooine to act as a finance manager for the Jedi Academy there, under Jedi Master Vondar Tokare, one of the few beings in the galaxy that Zayne believes he may be able to trust.

(Reunion)

- With the death of Republic Admiral Jimas Veltraa during the defense of Taris, he is memorialized on Coruscant. It is briefly considered that the new Interdictor-class vessels be renamed after him, but the original name sticks for the vessel type (which he himself proposed). Meanwhile, various promotions fill the ranks as the struggle continues, including: Saul Karath being promoted to Rear Admiral; Teelo Vang and Bask Modl being promoted to Captain; Dias Athacorr and Owen Delstar being promoted to Commander; and Jerrit, Carth Onasi, and Rutu being promoted to Lieutenant. The same issue of The Admiral's List that reports these events also includes an article about Admiral Noma Sommos, now hospitalized, griping about the presence of fringers in the Republic fleet.

(conjecture based on Days of Fear)

- The Adjudicator, a freelance security professional holofeed, reports on the state of Outer Rim bounties (in an article by Krav Noblis), along with updating a list of the hottest Outer Rim bounties. At this point, those bounties include: Zayne Carrick; Marn Hierogryph; Kelven Garnatrope; and Baron Hyro Margryph (Camper).

(conjecture based on Days of Fear)

- On Raltir, Marn “Gryph” Hierogryph and his “henchman” Zayne Carrick attempt to sell mechanical parts taken from Camper’s Last Resort to two art collectors, Dremullar Obohn di Garthos and “Father.” Using the Force to help with the scam, Zayne convinces them that the items are the work of artist Ineas Tikartine. When Camper shows up, angry about them stealing the parts, the art collectors think that he is the artist and the others stole from him. Thus, the artwork is stolen and the artist knows it, making them even more valuable. Oddly, the Last Resort crew make a profit from the bizarre situation.

(Labor Pains)

- In entry #6130 of his journal, Demagol, hiding aboard the Last Resort, wonders what separates a successful and unsuccessful Jedi Padawan and whether it is common practice for failed students to become orderlies for smugglers. (To be continued below . . . )*

(The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol)*

*NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of Labor Pains just before issue 13.
On Raltiir, the crew of the Last Resort is about to finally part ways. Elbee, Camper, and Jarael are to take the Last Resort, while Zayne Carrick, now hired as a “henchman” for Marn Hierogryph, will go with Gryph on a ship (the Little Bivoli) he is having delivered. Unfortunately, it is delivered by a nutty Trandoshan named Slyssk, who tries to get more money out of them, until Zayne helps Gryph create a fake life debt to get what they need from him. Seconds later, the ship’s original owners, the Republic military, comes to claim the ship. They get away, but they end up drawn into a military convoy, for which they are supposed to be a food supply vessel. Meanwhile, the somewhat ailing Camper has been identified in recordings by Eejee Vamm and reported to Lord Arkoh Adasca. (What that means at this point is anyone’s guess.) While in hyperspace, Camper collapses just as he and Jarael are confronted by a stowaway, the killer droid HK-24. Unfortunately for HK-24, Elbee springs into action, accosting him, just before the Mandalorian warrior Rohlan, also a stowaway for a long while now, emerges and destroys the droid. Meanwhile, at a Republic staging area, the spacers known as “Fleet” arrives, soon discovering the Little Bivoli, which has essentially become a cafeteria for the troops, run by Gryph, Zayne, and Slyssk. While there, Zayne is serving and helping with droids when he accidentally annoys newly-promoted Admiral Saul Karath. “Fleet” comes to the rescue of Zayne’s ego, telling him not to worry about Karath. Zayne introduces himself under the alias of “Shad Camper,” while “Fleet” reveals himself to be Lieutenant Carth Onasi, who serves under Karath on the Courageous. Both Zayne and Carth feel for the native Stereb sentients, but there’s not much they can do with them caught in the middle of the war, and the Mandalorians seem to strike the very next day. That night, Zayne tries to convince Gryph to leave, to no avail, then he has a vision of the Mandalorians utterly devastating the world to make a point. (To be continued below . . .)

(Days of Fear)

In entry #6144 of his journal, Demagol, now having revealed himself aboard the Last Resort, records his thoughts on revealing himself to Jarael and his displeasure at losing a chance to study Zayne Carrick due to Camper, Jarael, and Elbee parting company with Zayne and Marn Hierogryph. He wants to study Jarael, though, and he knows that Camper appears to be ill, so he just might have to speed along Camper’s death. (To be continued below . . .)*

(The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol)*

*NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issue 14.

Zayne Carrick tells Gryph about his vision of the Mandalorians devastating Serroco, and Gryph agrees to leave, but Zayne won’t be coming with him. He has to talk to Admiral Karath. Zayne stows away aboard Carth’s ship, but he is quickly discovered. He tells Carth about his vision and will be allowed to go with Carth to meet with Karath. Meanwhile, Gryph and Slyssk keep serving food and making money, keeping them on the planet much longer than they should be . . . Soon, aboard the Courageous, Zayne meets Karath, but he is recognized and arrested as not just a Jedi-killer but also a suspected Mandalorian spy, thanks to events on Taris and Flashpoint. Karath refuses to believe his claims about a vision of Serroco being decimated by nuclear weapons. While Carth tries to contact “Squint” to prove Zayne’s story, the Mandalorians launch an assault of nuclear weapons, which bypass the Republic ships and head straight for the settlements and military bases on the surface, destroying them utterly and showing the Republic the folly of setting up bases by local settlements. Zayne’s vision has come true. What’s worse: he’s not certain, but it looks like Gryph and Slyssk also perished in the assault. Now a prisoner, Zayne is kept aboard the Courageous. The only upside is that Carth heeded his warnings and sent messages to seventeen Stereb communities, urging them to get to safety underground. Zayne might have saved at least a few lives after all . . .

(Days of Fear)

Unbeknownst to Zayne Carrick, Slyssk freaks out during the attack on Serroco. He grabs Marn “Gryph” Hierogryph and races aboard the nearest transport, launching it when its flight crew is not aboard. They unknowingly save half a battalion. When they return to the Republic forces, Gryph becomes “Captain Benegryph Goodvalor,” subject of propaganda broadcasts. Gryph works on obtaining licensing rights to go with this new persona, which allows him to open a chain of restaurants on Coruscant and elsewhere.
(conjecture based on Demon)

- The Taris Holofeed reports Republic defense official Catronus Steffans’ thoughts on the Serroco tragedy, prints an editorial on how culpable Senator Gorrvus and others have been in the destruction of Taris in the Outer Rim, and a comical report of a city surveillance droid giving a parking ticket to an unexploded Mandalorian bomb.
(conjecture based on Days of Fear)

- Jedi Master Raana Tey is having nightmares (or visions) of the Padawans that were killed on Taris trying to kill her and the other Jedi Masters, claiming that “the one who confesses lives.” She awakens with the belief that the only way to end the nightmares is to kill Zayne Carrick and Jarael, who helped save him from the Masters. Speaking of Jarael, she has gone to Arkania, hoping to find medical assistance for the ill Camper, who remains aboard the Last Resort with Rohlan. The society there, though, is highly segregated, requiring Jarael to be sent to where the lower class of society (offsprings, as opposed to purebloods) lives, taking her further from where she needs to be in order to get medical information for Camper. Camper has been hiding from Adascorp on Arkania for most of his life, but now she needs to get there to help him. She stays with an offshoot family, after having met a young woman named Zadawi. Zadawi knows how to sneak into Adascorp, which will be tough, given how different Jarael’s features are compared to even a normal offshoot. She is snuck into the Adascorp tower, where she almost succeeds in bribing for the information she needs, but the authorities are on to her and she finds herself captured (or seemingly so). (To be continued below . . .)

(Nights of Anger)

- In entry #6168 of his journal, Demagol laments having supported Jarael going to Arkania to gain help for Camper. He did so to gain her trust, but he cannot set foot on Arkania in his armor, and he cannot let the Arkanians realize what Jarael is for fear of them taking her away. His hope is to learn more about her from Camper, who has regained consciousness. (To be continued below . . .)*

(The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol)*

*NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issue 16.

- Aboard the Last Resort, Camper and Rohlan Dyre are soon contacted by Lord Adasca’s very own ship, the Arkanian Legacy, but they are not contacted by Adasca alone. He contacts Camper with Jarael at his side, claiming that everything is alright and that Adasca can save him. Once they get Camper aboard the ship for treatment, under the care of Eejee, Adasca reveals to Jarael that Camper had once worked for the company during somewhat darker times. Camper had apparently contracted Balinquar’s Virus, which only affects offshoots, and only after many years. She seems to believe this, but it is all a lie. Once Camper is healed of maladies that came from the Last Resort sitting for too long and getting crud into its air systems (not used until flight), he is forced to help continue a project he’d started before leaving the company, and if he won’t, Jarael will die. (To be continued below . . .)

(Nights of Anger)

- In entry #6174 of his journal, Demagol laments having been captured by Lord Adasca and forced to maintain his cover as Rohlan Dyre. He does not know how much longer he can keep up this ruse. (To be continued below . . .)*

(The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol)*

*NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issue 17.

- Rohlan Dyre is found by Adasca to be knocking out guards that are keeping tabs on him and is captured, then released under guard and allowed to check out the Arkanian Legacy. Meanwhile, the Courageous comes under attack and must be evacuated. Morvis, Karath, and Carth fall back to the prison area, where they enlist Zayne’s aid to escape the doomed ship. On Telerath, Jedi Master Lucien Draay is informed by Hazen that his mother, Lady Krynda of the Covenant, is concerned about new Force visions of a mindless hunger led by Lord Adasca. Lucien is sent to investigate . . . Meanwhile, aboard the Arkanian Legacy, Adasca continues seeming to seduce Jarael, even as he forces Camper to give him the information he needs to complete a nefarious scheme, while he also looks into Jarael’s unique physiology. Adasca then approaches Rohlan, needing his help. He needs Rohlan to contact someone for him. Rohlan, who knows that the “Balinquar’s Virus” is bogus, has figured out that Camper is being used by his former boss and Jarael is just a key in keeping Camper in line. He wants Adasca to give him Jarael’s freedom for contacting his “friend.” Adasca shows Rohlan some sensitive information, convincing him to make the contact. It seems that Rohlan is on board with whatever might be going on . . . (To be continued below . . . )

(Nights of Anger)

- In entry #6181 of his journal, Demagol notes Lord Adasca waning him to contact Mandalore the Ultimate for him. He has done so, and he has used the opportunity to let Mandalore know that he is still alive, posing as Rohlan Dyre. He is now using Adasca’s lab equipment to run tests on a piece of hair that he took from Jarael’s pillow in her absence. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol)

NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issue 18.

- Eejee Vamm makes contact on Lord Adasca’s behalf with the Republic battle group from Serroco, namely the escapees from the Courageous, offering a chance to defeat the Mandalorians once and for all. Finally, we learn what this has all been about, as Adasca reveals his amazing plans to Jarael. His people have discovered space-faring creatures known as exogorths (space slugs) that are extremely powerful and destructive. While working for Adasca, Gorman “Camper” Vandrayk discovered how to manipulate and control the creatures. That is what Adasca wanted from him, and now he has it. Soon, the might of the exogorths will be in Lord Adasca’s hands . . .

(Nights of Anger)

- Aboard the Arkanian Legacy at Omonoth, Lord Adasca welcomes Admiral Saul Karath (along with Carth Onasi, prisoner Zayne Carrick, and the other survivors of the Courageous) aboard. Jarael is excited to see Zayne, but Zayne is again locked up, so she now has two lives in her hands (his and Camper’s). Moments later, a Jedi ship arrives, bearing Jedi Knight Alek (“Squint”), apprentice to Revan. They expect another visitor shortly, but the one that arrives was not expected. It is, in fact, Lucien Draay, come to check on the dark tidings surrounding Adasca’s current plots. Lucien is knocked out and removed from play so that Adasca can continue his plans. Finally, the last party arrives, Lord Mandalore of the Mandalorians. All will be negotiating for the ability to use the exogorths for their own purposes. As for Zayne, he is tied up to Lucien and the former Master and Padawan are surrounded by HK-24 assassin droids, under guard. Back at the meeting area, both Karath and Alek draw weapons on Mandalore, but Adasca will not allow them to attack. Mandalore then tells Rohlan that he has become known as “Rohlan the Questioner” among the Mandalorians, and he can return, but Rohlan does not wish to. Instead, he will accept new Mandalorian Neo-Crusader armor from his former leader, along with pretending to be dead at Mandalore’s hands. (To be continued below . . . )

(Daze of Hate)

- In entry #6208 of his journal, Demagol notes how odd it was to see Alek Squinquargesimus again aboard the Arkanian Legacy, though he is even more surprised that his disguise as Rohlan Dyre has fooled “Squint.” He is annoyed at how Cassus Fett has used the story of Rohlan Dyre as propaganda. He is, however, glad to know that if Jarael does not turn out to be one of his subjects, he can now return with Mandalore the Ultimate and end this charade. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol)

NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issue 20.

- Soon, the test of the exogorths concludes, and Mandalore the Ultimate offers Adasca exclusive weaponsmith rights for the entire Mandalorian army. Meanwhile, Zayne Carrick and Lucien Draay are forced to work together to free themselves of the droids, then must work together to make their way to the others, even as Eejee is told an amazing truth about Jarael’s blood sample... a truth that gets him and the doctor who tested it blasted by an unknown assailant, who is trying to protect that truth. (To be continued below . . .)

(Daze of Hate)

- In entry #6213 of his journal, Demagol expresses his excitement at learning, thanks to Adasca’s scientists, that Jarael is indeed his long-lost “student” (and test subject) Edessa. Now, he needs to find a way to leave with her, which suggests the need to help Zayne escape and join him in doing so. Fortunately, the secret is safe with him, as he has killed anyone who has seen the results of the tests Adasca was running on Jarael’s DNA. (To be continued below . . .)*

(The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol)*

*NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issue 21.

- Carth Onasi joins up with Zayne Carrick and Lucien Draay, who are then met by Rohlan Dyre. Together, they decide to solve the situation by causing a free-for-all amongst the attendees who all hate each other. Dressed as a Mandalorian in Rohlan’s spare armor, Zayne and Carth start a fight at the meeting, then Zayne reveals himself to be a Jedi, just as Lucien enters. Together, they (with a little impromptu help from Alek), make Mandalore believe that Adasca has set up the Mandalorians to capture their leader. During the ensuing firefight, Camper has the Last Resort launch to head for him, leaving Elbee behind in the docking bay. Knowing that Jarael is now safe, Camper turns the tables on his “captors” (fellow scientists) and escapes the control platform, but not until turning the exogorths against the Arkanians. The exogorths attack the Legacy, presumably killing Adasca, even as the others make their escape. Carth lets Zayne go, escaping with Karath. Zayne, Elbee, Jarael, and Rohlan find themselves left behind when Camper takes the Last Resort and makes the exogorths follow him into deep space to keep them from harming anyone else ever again. The only hope of escape looks like it will be to go with Lucien, but they are rescued by the surprise appearance of a ship flown by Dob Moomo and Slyssk. It turns out that Slyssk and Marn Hierogryph were not killed. They managed to escape, and Gryph has become the leader of the resistance against the Mandalorians on Taris. They all escape, leaving Lucien behind, but the Jedi Master tracks his former Padawan, intending on finishing their business on Taris, where the hunt began . . .

(Daze of Hate)

- The Admiral’s List reports that Admiral Saul Karath has returned to Coruscant after the destruction of the Arkanian Legacy. He offered his resignation to the Admiral of the Fleet for the loss of the Serroco battle group and the Courageous, but he was instead commended and his resignation refused. Now, the question remains as to his future. Rumors speculate that he may become the new commanding officer of the Swiftsure, set to leave drydock at Corellia very soon. (conjecture based on Knights of Suffering)

- The Admiral’s List reports that speculation continues as to what will be the future of Adascorp, as the only remaining heir to the House of Adasca is missing since the devastation of Serroco . . . (conjecture based on Knights of Suffering)

- The Moomo starship Williwaw arrives at Taris, with Dob Moomo, Slyssk, and Alek “Squint” Squinquargesimus in the cockpit . . . and Zayne Carrick in red Mandalorian armor clinging to the ship. Zayne releases himself to fall down into the Undercity of a world now teeming with Mandalorians under the command of Cassus Fett. Amid the battle in the streets, Zayne makes it to the base of the Hidden Beks, a swoop gang, where he is met by Gadon Thek, their leader, and his old friend Marn “The Gryph” (yes, it’s “The Gryph” now) Hierogryph, who survived the attack on Serroco. Del Moomo is also there (as are faces familiar from the Knights of the Old Republic video games, including Zaedra). The Beks are wanting to link up with the real Resistance on Taris, and they are doing what they can so far, but they need a connection. They had hoped to use the connections of Jervo Thalien, the head of Lhosan Industries, who had sent Gryph on a mission to find Senator Gorravus, who has apparently disappeared and become the leader of the Resistance on Taris. Unfortunately, a local constable is preventing Gryph from seeing the senator, as her own family has been kidnapped and she doesn’t trust the swoop gang. They intend to turn Zayne over to her as a bargaining chip, but a young girl named Mission Vao (whose brother, Griff Vao, has been working off and on with Gryph) shows Zayne that the Hidden Bek Brejik was the kidnapper and Griff has been helping keep the kids fed. When this is revealed, they are able to give the children back to the constable, rather than turning over Zayne. All is not well, though, as they head for the meeting with the constable, only for Zayne to come face to face with Shel Jelavan, sister of Shad Jelavan, one of his Padawan friends who was killed by the Masters . . . and rather than offering a welcoming smile, she offers him death for killing her brother, goaded onward by Jedi Master Rana Tey . . . Senator Gorrvus, there to coordinate efforts, calls Raana Tey off before the two sides can start shooting each other, saving Zayne.

Gorrvus reveals to Gryph that he did buy off senators for Lhosan Industries, but then when Lhosan left Taris, he is threatened to go public. Just as he does so, the Moomo brothers grab him, intending to collect the bounty Jervo put on Gorrvus’ head. Raana Tey stops him, but Jervo tries to detonate the hologram message box he was speaking through, only to find that it doesn’t work. Gorrvus then blackmauls Jervo into sending aid to Taris. At the Taris base, Shel confronts Zayne and Gryph with her accusations about Zayne killing Shad, then Raana Tey interrupts, again accusing Zayne. Meanwhile, aboard the Moomo Williaw, Alek makes a move on Jarael, but she rebuffs him, claiming to be too fragile after what Adasca tried to pull on her. He wonders if it is perhaps feelings for someone else, such as Rohlan, that causes her to pull away. (To be continued below . . .)

(Knights of Suffering)

- In entry #6235 of his journal, Demagol expresses his frustration over Zayne Carrick taking them to Taris on a mission of his own. He also notes that he has gotten Jarael to spar with Alek Squinquargesimus as a means of secretly checking out her abilities. He finds that he is annoyed with how she is torn between “Squint” and Zayne and wonders how anyone is ever born with romance and mating so convoluted. (To be continued below . . .)*

(The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol)*

*NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issue 23.

- Finally, the Resistance is able to strike at Cassus Fett, the Mandalorian leader on Taris. He has set up a base in the old Jedi Temple, and they are planning to strike, but they need a recon mission first to confirm his presence. This recon team will consist of Zayne, Shel, and Raana Tey, all of whom have been there before. Before the mission, Raana Tey informs Shel of how to get to Shad’s lightsaber to use it in killing Zayne . . . On the day of the recon, Gadon Thek, Gryph, and others wait near a shaft into the Temple through which Raana Tey will enter, while Zayne and Shel enter under the guise of a Mandalorian and his female prisoner. The two bicker about the past and their potential relationship at the time, until she is forced to protect their cover by kissing him. In the storage level, they come across the lightsabers. Shel takes Shad’s to kill Zayne, but she can’t do it, as she sees him shedding tears over his lost friends. As he continues deeper, she lets Raana Tey in, and the Jedi Master is none too pleased at her inaction. In the very same chamber where Zayne discovered his fellow Padawans dead, Zayne learns that Cassus Fett has left the Temple already. When he is nearly stopped by a Mandalorian, Raana Tey cuts the man down, then attacks Zayne, claiming to be doing it because of a prophecy that she overheard from the leader of the Cabal twenty-five years earlier, the Prophecy of the Five, not just because of the Rogue Moon Prophecy. As Zayne battles her, Cassus strikes at the Resistance base, forcing everyone to race to help, leaving only Gryph and Gadon to go back to save Zayne. Inside, Raana Tey is about to deliver a killing blow to Zayne, but she is stabbed from behind by Shel, who finally understands that Zayne didn’t kill Shad or any of the Padawans. As Gadon and Gryph swing over the broken glass ceiling, dropping a rope for Zayne and Shel, Raana Tey leaps up to follow them. When she doesn’t make it, Zayne offers his hand to save her, saying that no one else should die in that building. She is shocked, but intends to go with him, but her hand is stuck in a pane of broken glass. As she lifts her lightsaber to cut off her own hand... and save her life, Gryph sees it as her attacking Zayne and triggers the explosives in the Temple. As the building crumbles, Raana Tey's last words to Zayne are asking him to tell Krynda that she is sorry. As our heroes escape the crumbling tower, Zayne now has a name: Krynda . . .

(Knights of Suffering)

- Captain "Benegryph Goodvalor" (actually a propaganda character created by the Republic and portrayed by Marn Hierogryph’s brother) breaks into Mandalorian communication channels and broadcasts a series of propaganda messages, seeking to cause desertion among the Mandalorian ranks. After false information leads the Mandalorians to Zongorlu, they begin to suspect that Goodvalor is feeding false message to Mandalorian troops.

(Interference)

- Noana Sowrs, former Constable on Taris, is able to get her children to safety via the Moomos before finding herself stuck in the Undercity. The Williwaw takes the children to Alderaan. Meanwhile, Zayne Carrick and Marn “Gryph” Hierogryph stay with the Undercity’s outcasts, until Gryph accidentally leaves a door open, allowing rakghouls to enter the outcast settlement.

(Conjecture based on Vector)

- On Coruscant, Jedi seer Q’anilia has another vision. This time, she sees Taris overrun by rakghouls, creatures created by a deadly disease in the Taris Undercity. The Jedi Covenant members are fighting the creatures, which are being controlled by one mind. She also sees an unknown individual, flanked by a lightsaber-wielding comrade. That unknown individual wears the Muur Talisman, an ancient Sith artifact that is said to have powers over the manipulation of life itself. She also sees Zayne Carrick, whom she recognizes, and three other surprising visions: Darth Vader; Luke Skywalker; and Cade Skywalker. The events in her vision will somehow impact the next four millennia! The Covenant investigates the Muur Talisman, which Xamar was hunting on Taris before the Mandalorians forced them to evacuate. Rather than going themselves, since the Jedi Council has given them different orders, the Covenant calls upon one of Lucien Draay’s “Shadows,” the Jedi agent Celeste Morne. Meanwhile, on Taris, Celeste is in the Undercity, where she saves the life of former Constable Noana Sowrs, who has been in the Undercity for most of the time since the Mandalorians wiped out much of the Taris Resistance. Unfortunately, she has been bitten, and when she begins turning into a rakghoul, Celeste is forced to kill her. Just as she does so, Zayne and Marn Hierogryph (“Gryph”) come running from another band of rakghouls. She would prefer to do him in, given charges against him, but she doesn’t have time. They follow her, though, hoping that she will have a ship to get off of Taris. They soon come across an excavation. Mandalorians, led by Demagol’s assistant Pulsipher, have discovered the Muur Talisman! Seeing them leave, Celeste dons a jetpack and follows. Zayne grabs one of his own, then follows her, carrying Gryph. Soon, the Muur Talisman is brought to the ice planet Jebble (as are our heroes, who have stowed away on Pulsipher’s ship). Unfortunately, the Talisman “comes alive” and attaches itself to Pulsipher, giving him power . . . As for Zayne, Gryph, and Celeste, they sneak into the Mandalorian base (which is readying for an attack on Alderaan), but they find larger problems when the rakghoul plague breaks out on Jebble, turning Mandalorian recruits into the creatures, which seem to have more skills left from their “former life” than others on Taris. If the creatures become part of the invasion fleet, the galaxy could be in danger. As the Mandalorians start fighting “Mando-Raks,” Zayne tells Celeste the truth about the slaughter of the Padawans on Taris and that he now has a name to follow, thanks to Raana Tey (Krynda), still not realizing that Celeste works for the Covenant. They head for a communications center to warn the Republic. Alone at first, Celeste contacts Lucien, who orders her to kill Zayne, though she does not believe it is the right thing to do. When Zayne enters, she almost kills him without him realizing it, but she lets him contact Cassus Fett to warn him against landing his ships and having them infected. Fett does not believe him. Meanwhile, Gryph, looking for financial records, views a recording from Lucien, which explains that the Muur Talisman was once worn by Karness Muur, an ancient Sith Lord, who used its power to transform sentient beings into mindless monsters, but it has no effect on Force-sensitive individuals and some alien species (like, apparently, Snivvians). He also learns that Celeste Morne is a Covenant Shadow Agent. Before he can warn Zayne about Celeste or tell him that the “rakghoul plague” is not a plague at all, but an effect of the Muur Talisman, Zayne is captured by Pulsipher’s men. He intends to torture Zayne for more information about why the Jedi followed him to Jebble, though he might also put Zayne into the Sith Lord Dreypa’s oublielette that would basically put him into a “living death” (suspended animation, but aware?) for as long as Pulsipher wishes. The talisman has other plans, though. Drawn to a Force-user, it leaps off of Pulsipher (who is attacked by his own rakghouls) toward Zayne, but Celeste saves Zayne by taking the talisman herself. It attaches to her, allowing her to see a vision of Karness Muur, who claims to be “the future” when she asks his identity. The rakghouls now follow Celeste, who is somewhat possessed by Muur. When Gryph finally catches up and reveals that Celeste works for the Covenant, she reveals the truth and provides another bit of information for Zayne – that Lucien is Krynda’s son. She intends to carry out her missions for the Covenant, but Zayne points out that the Sith force in their visions might be her and her Mando-Raks, a new “Sith army” to take over the galaxy. She refuses to let that happen, begging him to kill her. Instead, they place her in the oublielette, intending to take her to the Covenant researchers at the Sanctum of the Exalted on Odryn, where she was to take the Muur Talisman. She also tells Zayne to find Krynda because if Zayne didn’t kill the Padawans, then Krynda would never have allowed the slaughter and something is not adding up. Shortly after they put her in the oublielette, the Williwaw arrives to save them. Unfortunately, Fett shows up as well, decimating the surface from orbit to end the rakghouls threat, but he manages to bury the oublielette with Celeste inside. As for Zayne, he now has a key to the Sanctum on Odryn and asks his friends to join him in taking down the Covenant in clearing his name . . . (This crossover continues in the pages of Dark Times.)

(Vector)

- In entry #6272 of his journal, Demagol notes that he is having trouble finding a lightsaber to test Jarael with, though he will continue his search. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol)

*NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issue 27, though after issue 28 seems to make more sense, given that they are “in transit” at the time.

- Jedi Master Dorjander Kace resigns from the Jedi Council and leaves the Jedi Order to form a group of Mandalorian Knights, disaffected Jedi who join the Mandalorian side in the growing conflict, rather than the Republic’s side alongside the Revanchist. This leaves a space open on the Jedi Council for Lucien Draay.

(conjecture based on War)

- On Coruscant, Lucien Draay is made a member of the Jedi Council. His first motion, which the Council agrees with, is to order to recall and possible detention of all of those who follow the Revanchist, along with others involved in the war, including Alek and Zayne Carrick. Lucien is contacted by Hazen, who tells him to head back to the Draay estate because Celeste Morne has completed her mission to get the Muur Talisman . . . but Celeste is actually “buried” in the ruins of Jebble. When “Celeste” arrives on Odryn (homeworld of the Feeorin), she is taken to the Sanctum of the Exalted by Borjak, their current leader (in the absence of their true leader, the eldest Feeorin, the “Exalted,” which happens to be Jedi Covenant member Feln). Once she is alone (well, except for her “assistants” Dob and Del Moomo), “Celeste” (actually Jarael in disguise with makeup to change her skin tone) opens her crate to free its contents – Zayne and Marn “Gryph” Hierogryph. They use the key from Celeste to gain access to a treasure trove of stashed Sith artifacts collected by the Covenant. Seeing how the sanctum is used to study those artifacts, Zayne intends to take evidence of the secret project to the Jedi Council to bring down the Covenant. On their way back, though, they are spotted sneaking around and captured by Borjak, who is upset about Feln leaving Odryn and possibly bringing about the horrible weather that has plagued the planet for a decade since Feln left. Before Zayne can convince him to turn on Feln, though, the Jedi Master arrives, brandishing his lightsaber. Zayne and Gryph are tied up, while Feln contacts Lucien. Lucien orders that the Sanctum be destroyed, along with the artifacts, but Hazen contacts them, ordering that the artifacts be saved and brought back to Coruscant. Either way, Zayne will be executed, but Borjak reminds Feln that since they have been in the Sanctum, they can only be killed in unarmed one-on-one combat. Zayne battles Feln, until Feln has him at his mercy. Just then, Zayne’s comrades get near enough to be noticed, forcing Feln to destroy the Sanctum with explosives, rather than let the Sith artifacts be stolen. The explosion ravages not just the Sanctum but the entire village, thanks to poor upkeep. Feln blames Zayne for “forcing him” to destroy the Sanctum, but Borjak and the others, citing the Sanctum’s destruction, lash out at Feln, killing him. They will rebuild elsewhere. As for Zayne and Gryph, the others arrive, only to reveal that the Moomo brothers stole some Sith artifacts, leaving Zayne with the evidence he needs to out the Covenant. Back on Coruscant, Xamar and Q’anilia are shocked that Feln is dead, just as in the Rogue Moon vision. They are quickly losing faith in Lucien and want to see Krynda themselves, but Lucien will not allow it. He has contacted Admiral Karath, telling him that Zayne and his vessel are on their way to raid Coruscant on behalf of the Mandalorians. He is sending Xamar to join Karath, even though that is precisely where Xamar is to die in the Rogue Moon vision . . .

(Exalted)

• In entry #6305 of his journal, Demagol notes that he has acquired a lightsaber to test Jarael with, thanks to stealing one from the Moomo brothers, which they had found amid the Jedi stash on Odryn. He needs chemicals, however, in order to free it from its container. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol)

*NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issue 30.

• On Coruscant, Lucien Draay is formally moved into his office for his new position on the Jedi Council, but he takes little triumph in it, as he believes his late father, Barrison Draay, was a true hero and deserves to be there, not Lucien himself. Elsewhere on the planet, Jedi Council Members Vandar and Vrook secretly meet with “Captain Malak,” who has information about Zayne Carrick. As it turns out, “Captain Malak” is Alek “Squint” Squinquargesimus, who has now shaved his head and given it a series of markings to hide his identity under the guise of “Malak.” He is there with an equally undercover Shel Jelavan. Together, they are there to tell the Jedi Masters that Zayne wants to come in to clear his name and prove his case against Lucien and his comrades in the Covenant. Meanwhile, in space above Coruscant, Admiral Saul Karath commands the Swiftsure with Jedi Master Xamar of the Covenant on board. In order to keep any ships from getting through a blockade of Republic hammerhead vessels, Karath has their systems all slaved together. When the Moomo Williwaw approaches the line of ships, they are confronted by Republic starfighters led by Carth Onasi (who has been busted down to Lieutenant). Carth recognizes Zayne, but he can’t let the Williwaw through. As the ship is attacked, Karath suggests that Xamar, an excellent Jedi pilot, join the fray. Xamar does so, but his visions of dying in space from friendly fire seem to be coming true, slowly but surely. To get Zayne through the line, the Williwaw crashes into the docking bay of the Swiftsure with only Del Moomo, Dob Moomo, and Jarael emerging. Meanwhile, Carth’s old ship, the Deadweight has been launched from the Williwaw. Given that it is a Republic ship, Carth allows it through. Finally landing on Coruscant, Zayne and Marn “Gryph” Hierogryph emerge with the luggage full of Sith artifacts from the Sanctum of the Exalted on Odryn. They are immediately captured by Xamar, who holds them at lightsaber point as Vrook, Vandar, Malak, and Shel arrive for their meeting. Could Xamar be the instrument of Zayne’s demise, or could he be the insider within the Covenant that Vrook and Vandar need if they are going to bring the Covenant down with Zayne’s evidence?

(Turnabout)

• Xamar returns to the Draay estate with Zayne Carrick and Marn “Gryph” Hierogryph. Zayne is wearing a fake Muur Talisman and pretending to be Xamar’s prisoner. They intend to bust the conspiracy of the Covenant wide open by getting Zayne in to see Krynda herself, rather than relying on the words of Lucien, whom Xamar has come to distrust. When they present Zayne as a Sith to Lucien, Haazen enters, agreeing that Krynda should see the threat, but since she “cannot be disturbed,” Haazen will look into it. This throws our heroes’ plan a bit off. Still, Xamar will open the gates to the estate to allow the Jedi Order come after the Covenant, and Zayne promises to protect Krynda when he finds her, since he promised that he would. Pretending to need to return to Zayne’s ship to recapture Sith artifacts, Xamar leads a team to the front gates, which he has opened, just as the Jedi descend upon the estate. Fighting ensues, even as Haazen reveals Zayne’s deception and turns the tables on both Zayne and Gryph inside. Haazen announces that Zayne is not a Sith, and Zayne tells them that Celeste has the real Talisman, but she is long gone. As the Jedi attack, though, Haazen puts a grand plan into motion. Using the code word “vindication,” he mobilizes all of the Covenant’s secret operatives, claiming that a Sith force from their prophecy has been discovered inside the Jedi High Council. He even claims that Lucien was the one who discovered the Sith. In doing so, he severs the High Council’s links to the galaxy, secures the storehouse of artifacts that the Jedi hold, and call all of their knights and shadows to protect the Draay estate. It is, in effect, a Covenant insurrection against the Jedi Order itself. With Q’anilia, a devoted follower of Lucien, shocked and dismayed, Lucien reveals that this had been a contingency plan just in case there were Sith discovered in the Jedi High Council, but he never wanted this to happen. Lucien has been used by Haazen all along. Zayne warns him that the Jedi are coming in force, but Haazen remotely calls forth Karath’s fleet, leading them to blast the skybridge on which Xamar and others battle, and parts of the estate, to rubble. As flames engulf parts of the estate, Haazen emerges, clad in war regalia, stating that the Prophecy of the Five has been fulfilled and the fire of truth will now rain down . . . As the fleet blasts the planet, Haazen reveals that he bought the company that was to produce the Vanjervalis Chain to control the ships above. When he refers to himself, Zayne, and Lucien as being on the same side, Lucien tries to strike at him, but Haazen has on the Gauntlet of Kresh the Younger, who will not let anyone touch him without his consent. Jedi enter, but Haazen easily defeats them, then begins to tell Zayne and Lucien of the Prophecy of the Five, whom he believes are Q’anilia (“one from the light stands in the darkness,” due to her Jedi nature and her blindness as a Miralukan), Gryph (“one from the darkness stands in the light,” owing to his criminal nature yet siding with the Light Side), Zayne (“one for the Light”), Haazen himself (“the last one stands apart from all”), and . . . Lucien as the “one for the Darkness.” Haazen intends to rule as “Darth Hayze,” leading two parallel armies: a Sith army led by Lucien (as “Darth Luzion” or perhaps “Darth Sion”) and a Jedi army led by Zayne. Haazen gives Lucien a red lightsaber, which he uses to stop Zayne when Q’anilia runs off to find Lady Krynda, followed by Gryph. Gryph finds Q’anilia at what appears to be a coffin bearing Lady Krynda. She has taken poison and dies in front of Gryph, who then tries to save the day by recognizing that Krynda is in a stasis module (an oubliette) like the one bearing Celeste Morne. He opens it to save her, not realizing that she is deathly ill. Below, Zayne tries to convince Lucien to find Krynda and show her Haazen’s true nature, so they can stop him, but Lucien refuses, intending to keep Zayne far from her. Gryph enters with Krynda, who cries out to Lucien that he has done wrong, and that she had seen a vision of him killing his students that profoundly hurt her, leading Haazen to convince her to fight her illness by entering the stasis pod. Telling Lucien to face the future with humility, Krynda dies in her son’s arms. Upon realizing that it was Gryph to took her out of stasis, and thereby blaming Gryph for her death, Lucien is driven toward the Dark Side, forcing Zayne to duel with his former master again. Zayne tells Lucien that he can atone for his actions and serve the higher purpose that Krynda would want . . . or he can give in and become Haazen’s pawn. Meanwhile, Haazen has received the Sith artifacts that the Jedi High Council was holding, and he has killed the Jedi that brought them to him. He intends to destroy the High Council’s building, thereby sending the Jedi into chaos, until Lucien, controlled by Haazen, emerges and tells the Jedi that Krynda formed an emergency Council on Coruscant to lead. Thus, Haazen could pull the strings for everyone, Jedi and Covenant alike. Moments later, Gryph is Force pushed into the courtyard with Haazen, chased by Lucien, lightsaber in hand. Zayne follows close behind, dueling Lucien to save Gryph. Zayne causes a statue of Lucien’s father to fall upon him, seemingly delivering a killing blow to Lucien. Haazen, still protected by the Gauntlet, allows Zayne to approach and kneel before him, touching him as if to bestow authority. Zayne reaches up just then, grabbing Haazen’s mechanical arm, claiming to see a vision of the future . . . without Haazen. It was all a ruse. Zayne slashes out with his lightsaber, cutting off Haazen’s droid arm. Haazen uses Force lightning to send him flying, but the arm falls near where Lucien has been playing dead. Armed with the severed arm, which bore both the Gauntlet and the controls for the ships above, Lucien uses it to cause the ships in orbit to fire upon the Draay estate, destroying Haazen and his plans . . . Days later, in the wake of what the Republic is calling a “Mandalorian terror plot,” the war escalates, as the Swiftsure (soon to be spaceworthy again) is to take the fight to the Mandalorians. Zayne’s name is cleared completely, and the Moomos are even paid for their services. Alek (er, Malak) has testified for Zayne, but he is being sent back to the Jedi Crusaders with a warning to cease their activities against the Mandalorians. Malak is going under protest and intends to remain “Malak” until the war is over. Jarael intends to continue on with Rohlan in his quest for answers. Gryph intends to go back to his life of crime alone, but Zayne has decided to join him. He has turned down the Jedi Council’s offer of making him a full Jedi Knight, telling them that he already has a job . . . as Gryph’s business partner. Elsewhere, Lucien Draay, having been spared by the Kresh Gauntlet except for the loss of his sight, sets up a sort of Jedi commune, where the Jedi will serve each other in a sort of sanctuary, where a group of Jedi may not be able to avert the coming doom, but will certainly survive it. Whatever happens, the Jedi will go on . . .

(Vindication)

• In entry #6358 of his journal, Demagol notes that he has survived Zayne Carrick’s mad plan to clear his name, and he has seemingly gained Jarael’s trust. They will soon leave Coruscant again. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol)*

*NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issue 35.

• In the interim between the defeat of the Jedi Covenant’s plot against the Jedi Order and Marn “Gryph” Hierogryph’s con on Metallos III, Zayne Carrick heads out on his own secretive mission. He uses money from the Exchange, invested by Zayne’s father, to create the Rogue Moon Project on Coruscant, set up with the help of Shel Jelavan and the families of the murdered Padawans of the Jedi Covenant, to help keep an eye on things and help “regular people.” He keeps the project a secret from his companions for now.

(conjecture based on Demon)

• While on assignment as a shadow for the Jedi Covenant, Jelph Marrian learns of their fall. He leaves for an uncharted region of the galaxy, where he accidentally crashes on Kesh. He creates a new life for himself as a simple farmer, acting as a slave who owes loyalty to the Lost Tribe of the Sith, while he tries to figure out a way to deal with them.

(conjecture based on Purgatory)

• On the moon known as Metallos III, an abundance of telescopic devices have allowed those on the moon to document systems on the far edges of Known Space. This has allowed a thriving business to emerge, wherein crimelord Nunk Plaarvin (behind the scenes), via his Chev slave Cipiter, runs auctions for anything from planets and moons to trading and travel rights to those systems and more. It is Metallos III that is the newest target for Marn “Gryph” Hierogryph and his crew (minus Zayne Carrick, who has taken a brief leave from the group to visit family and carry out other secretive business). Gryph, in the guise of “Professor Gryphomarn,” is on the world to take part in the bidding. Shortly after his arrival, a ship known as the Hot Prospect, a mining ship of Calipsan registry, arrives, and all hell seems to break loose. Captain Brackel (Jarael) has arrived with a being in a suit (Rohlan Dyre) that is said to have already been living on the resource-rich planet Itlabos, which was sold via the Metallos III auctions. They demand compensation and the voiding of that original sale, and the buyers from the original sale want their money back. When Cipiter takes this to Nunk, Nunk has recognized Gryph. Nunk sends his goons to grab Gryph, Jarael, and Rohlan. Jarael and Rohlan are captured, but Gryph is saved by the timely arrival of his new business partner . . . Zayne Carrick. As Jarael and Rohlan are taken onto Nunk’s Dustskimmer, Gryph points Zayne to the spaceport, where their new ship, recently purchased by Slyssk (who is dumb as a brick apparently when it comes to ship purchasing, rather than ship stealing), is waiting.

The ship, the Hot Prospect, is a piece of junk. Elsewhere, at the old stellar observatory, Rohlan and Jarael are chained up to the ceiling and about to be turned into a cloud of heated gas by a focusing lens for the local star’s light. Just as the light is about to strike them, killing them, Rohlan convinces Jarael to reach out with her inherent connection to the Force . . . Moments later, Zayne and Gryph break in, claiming to be there to keep an eye on Nunk’s operation for the Raff Syndicate. They have dressed up Slyssk, who used to work for the Syndicate, as a Syndicate courier. They convince Nunk that he is wanted by the Syndicate leadership on Jebble (alone, at that very moment). When Nunk leaves, the Chev slaves Cipiter is in charge, and he will run things less violently. As Cipiter informs them that they were too late to save their friends, Jarael and Rohlan emerge from the room where they were held. Apparently Jarael does have great Force potential, so she will need Zayne to teach her. Overall, they have made money on the Italbos deal, but one has to wonder just what Rohlan’s stake is in Jarael’s future . . .

(Prophet Motive)

- In entry #6378 of his journal, Demagol notes that he has seen Jarael use the Force with his own eyes. He is glad that Zayne Carrick can now begin teaching her how to use it. He would have preferred Alek Squinquargesimus (now “Malak”) be her teacher, but he worries that Malak would have taken Jarael away from him, and he needs to keep an eye on “his Edessa.” (To be continued below . . . )*

(The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol)*

*NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issue 37.

- The crew of the Hot Prospect have used Zayne Carrick’s Force abilities to discover the Chancellor Fillorean, a vessel lost within the Core Worlds region. They find it silenced by nebular interference, but otherwise intact. Zayne, Slyssk, Rohlan Dyre, and Jarael all go aboard, where they find the crew dead of unknown causes. When Zayne is set upon by a droid, K-OB7, they nearly destroy it before they are urged to stop by the droid’s owner, Toki Tollivar, the last surviving passenger of the ship. As they investigate what happened to the ship, K-OB7 (Kayo) activates T1-LB (Elbee), the loader droid that has been with Zayne since the beginning of his quest to clear his name from the Jedi Covenant’s conspiracy. Rohlan discovers that the crew were all strangled, just as Slyssk himself is found by Jarael, unable to breathe. Rohlan uses battlefield medicine to save Slyssk. Zayne believes evidence points to Kayo as the killer, since Toki, a Bimm, is so small and unassuming. Zayne attacks Kayo, cutting off the droid’s hands, but Elbee convinces Zayne to listen to Kayo’s story. Kayo believes that Toki is responsible somehow. Zayne and Rohlan reach Toki, just as he is Force choking Jarael. Toki was taken in by the Sith during the recent Sith War and trained as a Dark Side Adept. He has become a strangler (serial killer) in the time since. He and Zayne briefly duel, but Zayne is outmatched. Before Toki can deliver a killing blow, Kayo arrives, grabbing his master to protect everyone (including Toki from himself). Kayo electrocutes Toki, just as Rohlan blasts them both into oblivion. Zayne chastises him for killing them both, but Rohlan claims that Zayne will be no good to him if he is not willing to protect Jarael at all costs when necessary. As things wind down, Zayne talks to Elbee, who is the only one who will quietly listen. He is concerned about Slyssk, because he is now more timid than ever after the attack, despite his confidence regained on Metallos. Rohlan fights differently, talks differently, and is obsessed with protecting Jarael, making him quite different from when they met at Flashpoint. Jarael is an unknown quantity, but Toki the Dark Side Adept seemed offended by her very existence. As for Zayne, he wonders how long it will take for Gryph to ask where he was during his little vacation recently . . .

(Faithful Execution)

- On Jervo’s World, Lhosan Industries’ satellite containing numerous Dueling arenas over the planet Pantolomin, run by the so-called Franchise, fan-favorite Goethar Kleej wins the Solo Aerials event for the fourth time in a row. Shortly thereafter, the Hot Prospect arrives, bearing extreme fan Zayne Carrick. Zayne and Jarael watch several of the events from the first qualifier for this year’s Tandem Open. Mam “Gryph” Hierogryph is there to make money, though. He intends to swindle the Franchise by betting with Zayne’s Force intuition, using the seconds-long delay in video feeds to make money. Zayne, though, instead wants to win a “Goethar Special” swoop, designed to look like his sports hero’s vehicle, so he enters the open in an attempt to place highest and win the bike. Meanwhile, Goethar has spoken out about the brutal lower levels of the sport, against Franchise representative Bardron’s wishes. He wants out. However, Bardron has made sure that Goethar’s son, Aubin Kleej, is in the Tandem Open. Goethar wants to join to fight alongside him and protect him, but he must make a deal in order to do it. If they win once they finally meet at the end of the event, they will be able to truly retire, but if either loses, they are in for life. Elsewhere, Rohlan Dyre goes to find what is keeping Jarael, who is talking with Gryph, but when he is seen in Mandalorian armor, he is nearly captured. Only Gryph, acting as inspector “Bulgrosh Mandrake,” is able to save him by claiming that he is Jarael’s client, who is only dressed up as a Mandalorian as a gimmick for the sport. In preparation to compete, Rohlan is given a tune-up to his armor.

Zayne meets Aubin and then his hero, Goethar, but Goethar accosts him, telling him that he has to keep Aubin in play and safe until the finals, or Goethar will kill Zayne and anyone he loves. The fun and games are over. Soon, Zayne and Aubin survive the semi-final “culling together, as do the unlikely duo of Goethar and Rohlan (AKA “Spikes”), who secretly coordinate. Later, as Zayne unburdens his thoughts to Elbee, Jarael awakens from a nightmare in which she sees herself being told to be what she is meant to be by an unusual quartet of Malak, Demagol, Rohlan, and Lord Adasca, even as Zayne is taken captive by a mysterious sixth figure. Upon viewing the real statement of Goethar from his recent win, Zayne and the others resolve to do something about the slaves being held by the Franchise. Zayne confronts Goethar about this, but Goethar and his son can’t leave. Goethar himself once challenged the evil of the Franchise’s gangleader, a woman who cut off Goethar’s Gotal horns and likely ordered the death of his wife, leaving Aubin with no one to help him cope with his Gotal senses, which are leaving him nearly catatonic. Luckily, Zayne’s time learning about the Force lets him help Aubin somewhat. (Rohlan resents that he would help Aubin but not Jarael, but Zayne retorts that Jarael has not asked to be trained.) Elsewhere, Gryph, in hiding in a vent, witnesses Bardron conversing with his true master, Jervo Thalien, his nemesis and owner of Jervo’s World. As the competition commences, Jarael, in disguise, flatters the composer of the event’s musical score, stealing the cube with his score and replacing it once it is reprogrammed. Elbee, meanwhile, steals a trash bin for later use. In the arena, the game becomes more deadly as Jervo and Bardron try to eliminate threats. Working together, Zayne, Goethar, and Aubin burst out of the arena, saving themselves and allowing themselves time to hide Aubin and Goethar in the trash container. The “music” begins to play, but it has been replaced by Goethar’s statement from earlier about the truth of the slavery going on. As the crowd, the only ones hearing it, turn on Jervo, he orders Bardron to distract everyone. He declares Rohlan the winner. In the aftermath, at a Pantolomin spaceport, Aubin and Goethar thank Zayne and Gryph for their help, while Rohlan finds little interest in the swoop he has won. When Jarael emerges from the ship, though, Goethar freaks out, then claims that Zayne and the others are the opposite of who they claim to be. When Zayne confronts Jarael about her facial markings that Goethar reacted to, she admits that she was once a slaver. Shortly thereafter, Jervo and Bardron inform their slave supplier, a representative of the Crucible, that Lhosan Industries and the Franchise will have nothing more to do with her. She, still actually in league with Bardron, kills Jervo. She is Chantique, and she intends to find Jarael (who was once very much like Chantique) and make her and her comrades pay... but for what?

(Dueling Ambitions)

Intending to show influential Jedi Masters just how bad the Mandalorians could be (and knowing that places like Jebble and Serroco are behind enemy lines and unreachable), the Revanchist, Malak, and fellow Jedi Ferroh arrange a meeting on the planet Cathar, where the Mandalorians had wiped out a sizable portion of the population twelve years earlier, leaving only refugees in the broader galaxy alive. Little convinces the Jedi Masters of the need to join the war against the Mandalorians, until the Revanchist picks up a Mandalorian mask and unexpectedly induces a sort of Force vision, in which all of the Jedi present witness the past. In that past, Mandalorians under Cassus Fett round up the Cathar, drive them into the sea, and then, despite pleas from another Mandalorian (whose mask the Revanchist holds) that they are defeated and need not be wiped out, kills them all from orbit, including the offending Mandalorian. The vision shocks the Jedi present into agreeing with the need to stop the Mandalorians, and the Jedi High Council will almost immediately follow suit, giving sanction to the Revanchist's actions. However the “Revanchist” has been transformed. From here on, he vows to wear the mask of that heroic Mandalorian until the Mandalorians are defeated once and for all. With this new visage, he shortens his given title and assumes a new name: the “Revanchist” is now “Revan.”

(conjecture based on Masks)

- On Wor Tandel, Jarael and Zayne Carrick are still trying to sort of what to make of Jarael’s background as a slaver with the Crucible. She had grown up as a slave, fighting in Crucible slave pens, before challenging the trainer, who was a slave herself, in order to take over that role and save herself (and others) at least some of the misery they were experiencing. She had been saved by Gorman Vandrayk (AKA Camper) and has done her best to blend in when no one recognizes her tattoos. However, she knows that the Jedi could not accept her, despite her Force sensitivity, because of her past, or at least she thinks that is the case. She returns to their ship only to find Malak waiting for her. He has come to take her away with him finally, now that the Jedi Order has apparently agreed to join in fighting against the Mandalorians, thanks to revelations made by (and to, in a sense) the Revanchist (now calling himself “Revan”) on Cathar. Zayne, meanwhile, learns much the same from old Jedi friend Ferroh, a Cathar, who is there with Republic Captain Telettoh of the Testament. When Malak learns of Jarael’s Force talents from Marn “Gryph” Hierogryph and tries to leave with her, Rohlan (who is now considered a sports hero with gimmick armor who can move about freely) intercedes, attacking Malak and using his older nickname, “Squint.” Malak holds Rohlan’s helmeted head inside a fire before Telettoh and Ferroh pull him off, citing the need to avoid the scandal of a major Jedi in the war effort assaulting a sports hero. Zayne steps in and settles the matter by kissing Jarael, faking that they are in a relationship, so that Malak will leave, for now. They know he will not forget about Jarael, but at least it buys her time to decide what she truly wants. For now, Zayne (with resources he has told no one about, owing to events during his time away from the group after taking down Haazen) will assist Jarael in her goal of bringing down the Crucible. General Malak, meanwhile, heads off to war.

(Masks)

- In entry #6429 of his journal, Demagol recounts the loss of his chemicals to free the lightsaber from its container, but Gryph has agreed to replace the chemicals “for a markup.” He is more concerned about Malak trying to take Jarael, and the unrestrained fury of Malak when Demagol stepped in as Rohlan Dyre. Fortunately, Zayne Carrick stepped in to end the fray. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol)

*NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issue 42.

- With the revelation of the tragedy on Cathar, the Republic is still wary of working with rogue Jedi like Revan and Malak, but since teams of civilian healers (the “Mercy Corps”) have been deputized to go into hotspots in war, and the Jedi Council has never in over thirty years refused a Jedi’s request to volunteer for the Mercy Corps, Revan is able to lead a Jedi expeditionary force as a “Mercy Corps” group into war.

(conjecture based on Demon)

- In the Koornacht Cluster, a mining cooperative, based out of the Sungrazer, led by Sariyah Budan, uses “dustdivers” to search for valuable materials in comets and asteroids. The dustdivers are slaves, purchased from the Crucible, who are sent into the hazardous conditions of the comets and asteroids to seek valuable materials without any kind of propulsion or safety equipment. They are expendable in the eyes of the Sungrazer operation. Just as Sariyah is dealing with a particularly disgruntled (yet successful and still living) dustdiver, Qohn, two new arrivals from the Crucible show up, demanding more payment for their slaves. In actuality, they are Zayne Carrick and Jarael in disguise, there to disrupt the operation, deal a blow to the Crucible’s business, and free whatever slaves they can. Marn “Gryph” Hierogryph is not aware of the plan, nor are Rohlan Dyre or Slyssk aboard the Hot Prospect, but Zayne and Jarael have agreed to hurt the Crucible without their knowledge. When they discover that the number of slaves present far exceeds what they expected, even as Sariyah contacts the Crucible and learns that Zayne and Jarael are impostors, plans must change quickly. Jarael and Zayne escape with the next batch of dustdivers, then call in the Hot Prospect to pick them up, along with all of the dustdiving slaves present. Before they can be rescued, though, a real Crucible vessel, the Gladiator (commanded by Captain Dace Golliard), arrives and uses skyreapers to capture Qohn and other fleeing slaves. He demands that the Hot Prospect surrender and be forfeited to the Crucible under interstellar law. Jarael knows Golliard. He was the man who found Jarael (under her real name, Edessa) as a child and took her into the Crucible. When he tries to single her out and recapture her, Zayne saves her, then Rohlan sweeps in and saves them both. They get back aboard the Hot Prospect and uses its explosive cargo and centrifuge to grapple with the Gladiator and send Golliard packing amid explosions throughout his ship. In the aftermath, though, our heroes do not plan to stay out of the Crucible’s path. They intend to go after the Crucible to free the rest of the colonists who were taken when Jarael was taken years ago. Meanwhile, Golliard limps back to the Crucible, where he is nearly killed by Chantique, but she is ordered to stop by Magister Protector Bar’injar of the Crucible. They will use Jarael’s past and her connection to her new allies to bring them down to protect the Crucible and its true, unknown agenda.

Elsewhere, on Coruscant, the Mandalorian butcher from Flashpoint, Demagol, awakens from his long coma.

(The Reaping)

- In entry #6447 of his journal, Demagol expresses his excitement over learning about what happened to Jarael after she left Osadia. He is intrigued by Zayne Carrick’s unlikely plan to find the others. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol)*

*NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issue 44.

- Zayne Carrick, using the alias “Lieutenant Carth Kamlin,” uses an aurek fighter, claiming to be part of the escort for the Vindication, allows himself to be captured by the Crucible to infiltrate their operation.

(conjecture based on Destroyer)

- Among the ruins on Volgax, Captain Dace Golliard delivers captured slaves to Chantique of the Crucible. Among them is Zayne Carrick, undercover to infiltrate the Crucible, under the alias “Carth Kamlin.” When he is forced to fight a Caamasi known as “Snout,” his Force use nearly gives him away. He eventually gets a break from “training” to speak with the usually-quiet “Snout,” who identifies himself as Ralthar Sitan. When Zayne asks what the Crucible is doing, Ralthar shares his memories with Zayne, allowing him to see the horrible truth of kidnappings, fighting, and more, all over the span of hundreds of years of shared Caamasi memories. Once this action proves that Jedi can read Caamasi memnii (the shared memories), Chantique takes Zayne to her quarters, revealing that she knows his true identity and intentions. She knows of him from, among other places, the recordings Bardron passed along from Jervo’s World, where he was seen with Jarael. When Zayne questions how Jarael could ever have been part of the Crucible, Chantique reveals that “Jarael,” whose real name was once Edessa, was one of the worst of the Crucible. In fact, her unique facial markings, marks of the Crucible, read: “Destroyer.” Soon, with Zayne out of contact, Jarael becomes worried. Rohlan argues against trying to get to Zayne, as does Gryph, who notes that the mercenaries they hired to help have taken a new job. Jarael turns to Elbee, who had not so much been talking to him on Jervo’s World, but through him to one of his contacts. Jarael uses him to contact that individual . . . Shel Jelavan. Meanwhile, on Volgax, Zayne learns more about Jarael than he had wanted to know. She had indeed challenged an overseer during her time with the Crucible, and that had been Chantique, whom she had literally stabbed in the back, leaving Chantique to a miserable life (suggested to be that of a sex slave), only for Chantique to later return and assume power as Magister Impressor of the Crucible. Zayne tries to convince her to change the Crucible from within, but she refuses. Zayne is pit against Ralthar by Bar’injar. The two battle, even though Zayne does not wish to injure Ralthar. Ralthar kills himself during the battle, giving the victory to Zayne and saving Zayne’s life. This, however, has broken Zayne’s spirit somewhat. The Crucible packs up and abandons Volgax, leaving Zayne behind to be found by Jarael, pointed in that direction by Shel. Zayne, though, lashes out at Jarael for her past. She tells him off and decides that it is time to go their separate ways. She then tells him that the reason she continues to wear the marks and bear the name she had as a member of the Crucible is that she truly had tried to protect her own by being an overseer. The marks and her name do not mean “Destroyer,” as Chantique had said. They mean “Protector.”

In entry #6469 of his journal, Demagol expresses his excitement at learning that the rest of his “children” are still alive and that Edessa (Jarael) wants to leave with him after recent events. He also briefly notes that it seems that ever since he was able to recently use chemicals to free a lightsaber from Odryn from its container, he has felt as though he has been more successful in being persuasive. (To be continued below . . . )

On Coruscant, the old Senate Chamber, replaced after the tragedies of the Sith War, has been opened for a special event: the public show trial of the Mandalorian defendant and butcher, Demagol, who has recently awakened from his coma. Zayne Carrick and Mam “Gryph” Hierogryph are there to witness the trial, as is Malak, whose forces have managed to retake Omonoth long enough to salvage the Arkanian Legacy, aboard which they found Lord Adasca’s cyborg assistant mutilated, which reminds them of Demagol’s kind of act. Malak regrets that Jarael is not with them, but she is elsewhere, traveling with Rohlan Dyre. While on Coruscant, Gryph finally has to come clean about what he was doing post-Serroco, which includes the opening of a chain of restaurants, based on his heroic propaganda persona. Zayne still, however, does not reveal what the secret project is that he has been working on with his share of their profits, which he began during his time away from them. The trial is about to start when Zayne makes an off-hand remark to Elbee that with Rohlan gone with Jarael, Elbee won’t have to constantly look at the Mandalorian who broke his hand (Rohlan). Elbee startles them all when he states that the Rohlan that is with Jarael is not the Rohlan who broke his hand. The man’s weight is all wrong. They put the pieces together that the Rohlan Dyre that they have been traveling with since Flashpoint isn’t Rohlan Dyre at all. Demagol managed to switch places with him! They have been traveling with Demagol all along, and now Jarael is alone with him, and the real Rohlan Dyre is about to be put on trial for Demagol’s crimes. At the trial, Malak goads “Demagol,” only to blast him with a Force push. “Demagol” wonders aloud who will save the Republic from Jedi like Malak, and then “Demagol” is taken away. Once aboard a small speeder, he takes off his helmet, revealing that he is, in fact, Rohlan Dyre. The others in the speeder, though, know this: they are Zayne and Gryph, who spirit him away to safety. (To be continued below . . . )

In entry #6477 of his journal, Demagol records his final entry in Rohlan Dyre’s armor. He and Jarael have left Wor Tandell to head for Osadia, and he intends to reveal himself as his true self, Antos Wyrick of the New Generation Project, while they are in hyperspace. (To be continued below . . . )

In hyperspace, “Rohlan Dyre” and Jarael try to figure out where the Crucible have hidden her schoolmates. It was said to be somewhere “ironic,” leading Jarael to conclude that it must be Osadia, where she was taken from as a child. “Rohlan” knows where that is, even though Jarael has no idea. When she asks how he could possibly know where her school had been, “Rohlan” takes off his helmet, revealing his face. He is not only Demagol, the Mandalorian butcher, but he is also Antos Wyrick, master of the very school on Osadia that Jarael had attended. He intends to find the rest of his former students to set things right, but given Jarael’s unique genetic qualities (which had so intrigued Lord Adasca), one wonders if there is more to this mad scientist’s plot than meets the eye . . . Wyrick explains to Jarael (who still believes his other identity is Rohlan, not Demagol) that he has been searching for her and their classmates for years. They reach Osadia, where Wyrick arms Jarael with Exar Kun’s double-bladed lightsaber and sends her into the New Generation school to face the Crucible. On Coruscant, Zayne and Gryph learn about Demagol’s true history from Rohlan. Demagol was using Arkanian offshoots and the genetic material of Arca Jeth to try to create a race of Mandalorian Knights (Force-users), and Jarael (Edessa) is the culmination of that project, just as Chantique of the Crucible was Wyrick’s own daughter, whom he cast aside as a failed experiment. Shel Jelavan joins them, as does Slyssk, and they all go into a secret underground base (what Zayne was setting up during his “missing” period), which he refers to as the Rogue Moon Project, run with the parents of the other dead Jedi Covenant Padawans. When they realize that the Dark Side lightsaber of Exar Kun is in Jarael’s hands and may already be corrupting her, they try to figure out where Osadia is. They realize that Dace Golliard of the Crucible knows where it is, so they convince Rohlan to contact Cassus Fett on Zayne’s behalf. Cassus, who owes Zayne from saving Mandalorians from Celeste Morne’s rakghouls, engages in a feint against Saul Karath’s fleet near Ithor, which draws Karath to where Dace is hiding in his pirate vessel nearby. Karath has a grudge against Dace for leaving his father to die at the Foerost Shipyards during the Sith War, and, once he is captured by Karath, he gives information to Zayne, and Zayne uses his leverage over Karath (that most of Karath’s big, famous victories were Zayne’s victories, not Karath’s) to get Captain Telettoh to take them to Osadia, where Jarael is already facing the Crucible alongside Wyrick. En route to Osadia, Zayne finally reveals to Gryph that he has a special relationship with the Force that seems to balance things out any time he tries to influence events, by making things go heavily one way, then heavily the other (bad fortune followed by good fortune, for instance). As they near the planet, Jarael discovers Chantique within the training hall at New Generation School. When Chantique threatens to one day put Zayne back in the dueling pits, Jarael attacks her, and the two engage in a vicious duel. Even as Jarael is about to deliver the killing blow, Zayne arrives (flown into battle by Rohlan in “his” sports star armor, not his real armor, which Wyrick still wears) and crashes into the training hall, falling directly into Jarael. Jarael loses her grip on the lightsaber, which falls into Chantique’s hands. Zayne must then duel Chantique (now that he has his lightsaber back from Shel). Zayne reveals that he knows (and has confirmed through Snout’s memories) that Jarael was the Protector at the school, while Chantique was the Destroyer. He also reveals to Chantique that her father is nearby. Speaking of Wyrick, Rohlan finds and attacks him, only for Wyrick to, out of nowhere, Force push him away. When Zayne reveals Wyrick as Demagol to Jarael and checks on whether she has been corrupted by the lightsaber, he is surprised to find that she felt nothing from the weapon. Jarael is not the successful Mandalorian Knight. Instead, Chantique is able to reclaim Kun’s saber and Zayne’s (after knocking him down with a Force push). She cannot attack them, though, as she is attacked by her own father, who cares nothing for her as an unsuccessful result of his experimentation. He wants the other students, whom she says are in the courtyard, only for them to realize that “in” the courtyard meant that she killed them all and buried them there. Rohlan and Zayne reveal what they have come to understand: that Demagol (Wyrick) is the real Force user. His students were never a success, as their “Force use” was actually his, and the only student he ever had that was Force-sensitive was his own daughter, Chantique, not because of the experiments but because she inherited his ability to touch the Force. With this truth revealed, Chantique leaps toward her father with a knife, ready to kill him, but he instinctively calls on the Force to bring both lightsabers to him. He grabs the first one to come near and activates it while pointing at the incoming Chantique, only for Zayne’s Force-balancing ability to cause things to work out in the end: the lightsaber was Kun’s, so as it activates and stabs through Chantique, it also stabs backward through Wyrick with its other blade. (To be continued below . . . )

(Demon)

- In one final entry in Demagol’s journal, stored in Rohlan Dyre’s helmet, Rohlan Dyre, now back in possession of the armor, speaks of his disgust at Demagol, his desire to return to the war, and that he will be carrying out one quick trip to help put right some of Demagol’s crimes before he leaves. (That short trip will be to find Jarael’s parents and bring them back to her.)
(The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol)

NOTE: The entries in The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol have numbers, and those numbers correspond to issues of the KOTOR comic series. The middle two numbers represent the KOTOR issue number that the story is either just before, just after, or during. In this case, this segment is set around the time of issue 47.

- Days after the defeat of Antos Wyrick AKA Demagol, Zayne Carrick apologizes to Jarael and reunites her with her parents, thanks to Rohlan Dyre having interviewed them a long time ago when they were exiled from the Osadia research project. That done, Rohlan disappears again, always the runner. Gryph's business is booming at his restaurant with Slyssk cooking making a name for the place. Zayne intends to help the Rogue Moon Project and even possibly help the Jedi Order train others with his unique style of Force connection, which was always seen as a learning disability. Before he can leave the restaurant, though, Gryph asks him to help a special customer . . . Jarael, who finally approaches Zayne romantically. Gryph can only smirk at his maneuvering to finally get the two of them together before Zayne can leave again. After all, he is a mastermind . . .

(Demon)

- Zayne Carrick, no longer a Jedi, is a citizen of Phaeda, having moved there with his family from Dantooine. As a regular citizen, he is drafted into the war effort against the Mandalorians and will end up serving as a grunt alongside the makeshift Republic Navy.

(conjecture based on War)

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)

- Flashpoint [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Flashpoint [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Homecoming [continued] (comic: John Jackson Miller)
  - Reunion (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
    - Reunion, Part I (comic: John Jackson Miller)
    - Reunion, Part II (comic: John Jackson Miller)

The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)

- The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)
  - Entry #6124

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)

- Flashpoint [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Reunion [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Reunion, Part II [continued] (comic: John Jackson Miller)

Labor Pains (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)

- Labor Pains (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)

The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)

- The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)
  - Entry #6130

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)

- Days/Knights [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Days of Fear, Nights of Anger (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Days of Fear (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
    - Days of Fear, Part I (comic: John Jackson Miller)
    - Days of Fear, Part II (comic: John Jackson Miller)

The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)

- The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)
  - Entry #6144

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)

- Days/Knights [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Days of Fear, Nights of Anger [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Days of Fear [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
    - Days of Fear, Part III (comic: John Jackson Miller)
    - Nights of Anger (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
      - Nights of Anger, Part I (comic: John Jackson Miller)

The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)

- The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)
Entry #6168

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)

Days/Knights [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
- Days of Fear, Nights of Anger [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Nights of Anger [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Nights of Anger, Part I [continued] (comic: John Jackson Miller)
  - Nights of Anger, Part II (comic: John Jackson Miller)

The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)

Entry #6174

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)

Days/Knights [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
- Days of Fear, Nights of Anger [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Nights of Anger [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Nights of Anger, Part II [continued] (comic: John Jackson Miller)
  - Nights of Anger, Part III (comic: John Jackson Miller)

The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)

Entry #6181

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)

Days/Knights [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
- Days of Fear, Nights of Anger [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Nights of Anger [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Nights of Anger, Part III [continued] (comic: John Jackson Miller)
  - Daze of Hate, Knights of Suffering [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
    - Daze of Hate [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
    - Daze of Hate, Part I (comic: John Jackson Miller)
    - Daze of Hate, Part II (comic: John Jackson Miller)

The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)

Entry #6208

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)

Days/Knights [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
- Daze of Hate, Knights of Suffering [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Daze of Hate [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Daze of Hate, Part II [continued] (comic: John Jackson Miller)

The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)

Entry #6213

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)

Days/Knights [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
- Daze of Hate, Knights of Suffering [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Daze of Hate [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Daze of Hate, Part III (comic: John Jackson Miller)
  - Knights of Suffering [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
    - Knights of Suffering, Part I (comic: John Jackson Miller)
    - Knights of Suffering, Part II (comic: John Jackson Miller)

The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)

Entry #6235

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)

Days/Knights [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
- Daze of Hate, Knights of Suffering [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Knights of Suffering [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
    - Knights of Suffering, Part II [continued] (comic: John Jackson Miller)
    - Knights of Suffering, Part III [continued] (comic: John Jackson Miller)
Interference (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)
Interference (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)
Vector (comic series: John Jackson Miller & Mick Harrison & Rob Williams & John Ostrander)
Volume I (comic series: John Jackson Miller & Mick Harrison)
  Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  Vector (comic series: John Jackson Miller & Mick Harrison & Rob Williams & John Ostrander)
  Vector, Part I (comic: John Jackson Miller)
  Vector, Part II (comic: John Jackson Miller)
  Vector, Part III (comic: John Jackson Miller)
  Vector, Part IV (comic: John Jackson Miller)
The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)
  Entry #6272
Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Vindication [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  Exalted (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
    Exalted, Part I (comic: John Jackson Miller)
    Exalted, Part II (comic: John Jackson Miller)
The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)
  Entry #6305
Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Vindication [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  Turnabout (comic: John Jackson Miller)
    Turnabout (comic: John Jackson Miller)
  Vindication [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
    Vindication, Part I (comic: John Jackson Miller)
    Vindication, Part II [continued] (comic: John Jackson Miller)
    Vindication, Part III (comic: John Jackson Miller)
    Vindication, Part IV (comic: John Jackson Miller)
The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)
  Entry #6358
Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Dueling Ambitions (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  Prophet Motive (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
    Prophet Motive, Part I (comic: John Jackson Miller)
    Prophet Motive, Part II (comic: John Jackson Miller)
The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)
  Entry #6378
Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Dueling Ambitions [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  Faithful Execution (comic: John Jackson Miller)
  Dueling Ambitions (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
    Dueling Ambitions, Part I (comic: John Jackson Miller)
    Dueling Ambitions, Part II (comic: John Jackson Miller)
    Dueling Ambitions, Part III (comic: John Jackson Miller)
The Secret Journal of Doctor Demagol [continued] (SWH short story: John Jackson Miller)
  Entry #6429
Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
• As the Mandalorian Wars rage, the Republic is dealt a major defeat at the Battle of Jaxus Cluster. The leader of the Mandalorians at this battle, Cassus Fett, will eventually escape capture and become the single most wanted Mandalorian (possibly the most wanted sentient period) in the galaxy for war crimes.
  (conjecture based on Knights of the Old Republic)

• During the Mandalorian Wars, some Mandalorian Neo-Crusaders suggest using the drug kryotin powder as a biological weapon, but the more traditional Mandalorians strongly oppose the idea. The latter’s influence is enough to prevent use of the tactic.
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)

NOTE: Information provided by Luke Van Horn. This is simply “during the Mandalorian Wars.”

• At some point while Canderous Ordo is in command of Mandalorian forces (though it could very well be before this war), Canderous sees a strange asteroid that acts like a starfighter, unknowingly witnessing one of the first Yuuzhan Vong scout creatures in the galaxy to be seen by sentient eyes.
  (conjecture based on Knights of the Old Republic)

• Wortan, a city on Iridonia, is heavily damaged by fighting during the Mandalorian Wars, especially its underground sector, Banol.
  (conjecture based on Iridonian Darkness)

• Essien falls to the Mandalorians.
  (conjecture based on War)

• The Republic experiences a major defeat at the Battle of Duro, which is prevented from being a total disaster by the actions of Revan and Malak, who keep the Mandalorians from getting away with massive stocks of materiel from the shipyards. Under pressure from the public to back this renegade Jedi movement, Supreme Chancellor Tol Cressa names Revan commander of the Republic’s military forces.

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

- With the Jedi now in the Mandalorian Wars on the side of the Republic, thanks to the efforts of the Revanchist (Revan), Zayne Carrick finds himself on Essien, where a Jedi-led Republic force is taking on the Mandalorians. Zayne is trying to save as many lives as possible, even Mandalorian ones, despite the rather harsh intentions of Republic Navy Captain Dallan Morvis and his right-hand being, Scrope. When it seems that Morvis has slaughtered Mandalorians who aren’t attacking, Zayne is having words with him when a Basilisk war droid falls upon the command skiff, nearly killing them. Zayne helps one of the Mandalorians aboard save herself and a Mandalorian child, but he is reprimanded for it. When he claims even the Jedi shouldn’t decide who should live and die, he meets four Jedi who led the recent battle, including former Jedi High Council member Dorjander Kace. Kace reports that the Mandalorians have been routed and are now hiding in a nearby forest. The Jedi will lead a battle into the forest, which should destroy the Mandalorians and capture needed vessels at a nearby spaceport. Zayne, though, does not want to see the slaughter of those who are not engaged in actually attacking the Republic force, so he deserts and heads into the forest to warn the Mandalorians. He discovers, though, that there aren’t Mandalorians in there, just armor made to stand and look like Mandalorians. Morvis’ group starts to burn the forest with Tibanna-6 gas, but Zayne survives by grabbing a Mando mask and hiding beneath the surface of some of the water in the area. Morvis thinks Zayne is a traitor, but Zayne reveals that the Mandos aren’t real. It is all a trap! The real Mandalorians descend upon Morvis’ group, killing many, but Zayne is able to push Morvis to safety. That’s when they learn the awful truth: the trap was laid by Kace and his three Jedi allies. They are working with the Mandalorians as “Mandalorian Knights,” and Morvis’ survivors (along with Zayne himself) are to be their next “recruits” for the Mando cause. Shortly thereafter, Zayne is with a group of Mandalorians that takes over the signal station on Halthor. Both Morvis and Zayne are frowned upon by the other Mandalorians, but the woman whose child Zayne saved, Kor Sornell, protects them from fellow Mandalorian Kra’a’ke. After hearing a “rousing” speech by Kace, Morvis tries to escape (and is stopped), then tries to take out Ko, which Zayne stops. Morvis is taken to a slave pen, no longer allowed to serve as a Mandalorian. Kace then reveals to Zayne that he knows Zayne’s history and the Mandalorians have dreadnaughts ready to level Phaed in their next offensive. Zayne’s only chance to help his family will be to go with them. He does so, helping to make it look like the Reciprocity was hit by a biological attack, so that they can bring Mandos aboard a Pheda Planetary Defense Force ship. They do so, but Kra’a’ke, ever the jerk, opens fire and kills the crew, rather than waiting patiently as ordered. He and Zayne continue to be more at odds. On the plus side, Sornell was able to reach Marr “Gryph” Hieroglyph for Zayne. With Gryph’s help, he learns the truth about Kace. Kace was captured by the Mandalorians during the Sith War, then returned to the Jedi after years living among them. He became a staunch opponent of the Jedi joining the fight against the Mandalorians, until he was kicked out of the Order and decided to join Revan’s cause, only to get behind enemy lines and set up a new group of Mandalorian Knights to make it an even fight. Now, he intends an attack the Jedi Academy on Dantooine, where innocents will die. With Kace now in control of the Phaedacomm Satellite, they can carry out the mission with three dreadnaughts that Kace has waiting at Halthor. However, Zayne convinces Sornell to honor her debt to him by letting him go if he swears not to betray her. He gets into the holding area where Morvis is being held on Halthor with a plan to steal a dreadnought. Zayne steals Mandalorian armor by mind-tricking a Mando. He also steals some vile-rat stew. After some arguing between Morvis and Zayne, during which Zayne puts him in his place, they get aboard the dreadnought Parjai, where Zayne confronts Field Marshal Garon Born in the guise of supporting Kace. Unfortunately, Kra’ake turns out to be aboard. Before he can attack Zayne, they put their plan into motion, taking off their helmets to reveal goop on their heads (the stew), which Zayne calls Jedi Brain Fever, a fake disease. The real Mandalorians all head for the escape pods, and the dreadnought is left under the control of Zayne’s team. At Dantooine, Kace pretends to be there to help protect the Jedi students below, rather than to kidnap them to turn them into Mandalorian Knights. Sornell, who has taken the comm station position on Kace’s ship, makes sure he learns nothing of what is happening on Zayne’s ship, as the Mandalorian Knights drop to the surface of Dantooine. As the Mandalorian Neo-Crusaders attack the academy outright, Kace faces off with instructor Jedi Zhar Lestin. The arrival of another dreadnaught arrives, as does Field Marshal Borm’s shuttle from the dreadnaught. When Kace mentions scuttling their stolen Republic ship, one of the “Mandalorians” accidentally reveals himself in his reactions to be Morvis. “Borm” unMASKs as Zayne. Zayne blows up the shuttle as a backup plan, then retrieves his lightsaber from Morvis (who hid it in a staff). They have the Republic ship with captive Padawans aboard take off, removing them from Kace’s control, even as Zayne takes on Kace one-on-one. Sornell intervenes, however, informing Kace that his use of Jedi “magic” and willingness to put children into harm’s way has caused Mandalore to decide that Kace and his “Mandalorian” Knights are no longer welcome in their ranks. Zayne also reveals that Varda, of whom Kace carries a hologram, was killed by a Jedi while carrying his unborn child. This was Kace’s attempt at payback. Faced with his true motives and her memory, Kace surrenders to Zhar, requesting only that Sornell be allowed to go back to her own family with the Mandalorians, rather than being arrested as well. In the aftermath, Kace is turned over to the Republic for a rather flashy show trial. Morvis receives a medal from his mother the Senator. The Mandalorians leaves Halthor, and Sornell makes it back to her family. As for Zayne, he visits his family (finally), which includes not only his siblings but also his significant other, Jarael. He does not stay for long, though. Zayne returns to the Republic military as Lieutenant Zayne Carrick, Special Diplomatic Agent attacked to the Reciprocity under Morvis. In a sense, Zayne is Morvis’ “conscience,” and the two will continue to try to find a way to win this war with restraint.

(War)

- Late in the Mandalorian Wars, in the ruins of a small plaza on Onderon, a battle-hardened Mandalorian squad engages in a fighting retreat with a squad of Republic troops. The troops are inexperienced, but they are led by several Jedi Knights. As the Jedi and Republic troops move to cut off the Mandalorians’ escape route, the Mandos resolve to take out as many of their enemies as they can.*

(Onderon Cutoff)*

*NOTE: This summary was provided by Luke van Horn.

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)

War (comic series: John Jackson Miller)

- War (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
- War, Part I (comic: John Jackson Miller)
- War, Part II (comic: John Jackson Miller)
- War, Part III (comic: John Jackson Miller)
- War, Part IV (comic: John Jackson Miller)
- War, Part V (comic: John Jackson Miller)

Onderon Cutoff (miniatures game: Sterling Hershey)

Onderon Cutoff (miniatures game: Sterling Hershey)

3,961 BBY

- On Kesh, Sith High Lord Lillia Venn becomes the new Grand Lord of the Lost Tribe of the Sith. She is a compromise candidate and twenty years older than any previous Grand Lord. With her ascension, Candra Kitai becomes a new High Lord in her place and, as a swing vote, becomes the second most influential member of the Lost Tribe. (conjecture based on Purgatory)

- The Mandalorian War ends with the Mandalorians’ surrender at Malachor V amid the “Great Last Battle” (known by its Mandalorian name, An’la Akaan). One of the most powerful weapons of mass destruction in existence, a mass-shadow generator, is used to win the planet-wide battle. It is used under Jedi Knight Revan’s orders by fellow Jedi Knight Meetra Surik (a woman known in later years as “the Exile”) and the technical expert Bao-Dur. The device destroys Malachor V’s surface and both Mandalorian and Republic ships, but Meetra’s ship and Revan’s ship are both out of range. Revan, for his part, has gone after the Mandalorian leader, Mandalore the Ultimate. Revan, leader of the Jedi Crusade, kills Mandalore. Upon his defeat, Revan takes Mandalore’s Mask and learns from Mandalore that the Sith were the ones who set them against the Republic. Revan and fellow Jedi Knight Malak also learn that a Sith tomb is on the planet Rekkiad. The extreme amount of death on Malachor V causes a wound in the Force, which is felt strongly by Meetra. To save her own mind from the pain, which is due to an extreme Force bonding ability she has that is somewhat unique, Meetra cuts herself off from the Force entirely. As for the Mandalorians, they are punished by the destruction of their war droids in front of their eyes (though some refuse to turn the droids over for destruction), but the Mandalorians accept the defeat at the hands of a superior foe as honorable. The Mandalorian clans scatter without a leader bearing Mandalore’s Mask to unite them. (Clan Ordo is one of those that scatters, with their leader Tegris also dead.) During what will later be thought of as a conspicuous three day absence from the warfront, Revan and Malak visit Rekkiad, where they find the empty tomb of Sith Lord Dramath II. They leave Mandalore’s Mask in the sarcophagus, along with a datacron that they briefly use to learn of Dramath’s background and the location of the Sith worlds of Nathema and Dromund Kaas. Revan and Malak take a third of the Republic’s fleet and vanish into the Unknown Regions, ostensibly to go after remaining Mandalorian forces, but truly to find the Sith Empire that they believe still exists.*

(conjecture based on Knights of the Old Republic, The Sith Lords, the timeline found on StarWarsTheOldRepublic.com, Revan, and The Bounty Hunter Code)

NOTE: For some reason, The Essential Atlas puts the Malachor V battle in 3,960 BBY, rather than 3,961 BBY.

- Of all of the Jedi who left the Jedi Order to follow Revan and Malak into the Mandalorian Wars, only one, Meetra Surik (who cut herself off from the Force due to the devastation at Malachor V), returns to the Jedi Council to face judgment. The Council senses the danger in Meetra’s Force-bonding abilities and the power awakened in her by the deaths of so many Jedi and others on Malachor V that they choose to exile her from the Jedi Order. Stabbing her lightsaber into a stone in the Jedi Council chamber, she renounces the order and leaves the galactic scene for several years. In that time, Meetra, now banished, will come to be known as “the Exile.”.*

 (conjecture based on The Sith Lords)

- In the wake of their defeat in the Mandalorian War and the death of Mandalore the Ultimate, the Mandalorian Neo-Crusaders disband, devolving into the culture that comes to be referred to as the Mandalorian Mercs. (During the next decades, Canderous Ordo will take the reigns as a new Mandalore, reuniting some of the dispersed Mandalorian clans, and Master Jaing, the Mandalorian who will be partnered with the Gen’Dai Durge eventually, will also be successful in uniting some of the clans again.) There will be many Mandalorians (particularly in the later “Death Watch” movement), who see the Mandalorians’ defeat (An’I’a Akaan) as the beginning of a process of their “Emergence” that denotes a new era for the Mandalorians, finally free of the Taungs (Progenitors). They will refer to the period of weakness after An’I’a Akaan as the Arasuum (“Stagnation”). During this “stagnant” era, individualism will tend to return to Mandalorian armor.

 (conjecture based on The History of the Mandalorians and The Bounty Hunter Code)

- In the wake of the Mandalorian War, Revan comes into possession of the assassin droid HK-47, which he reprograms to assassinate individual targets that he believes are “destabilizing influences” to galactic order. (Essentially, Revan wants to see future “necessary killing” done in an individual fashion, rather than the excessive manner used at Malachor V.)

 (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)

- In the wake of the Mandalorian War, Mandalorians hold a grudge against Revan for having defeated them. His reappearance as a Sith makes no difference. As a result, Mandalorian mercenaries, when the opportunity presents itself, eliminate small groups of Sith whenever they are able.

 (conjecture based on Payback)

- The Revanchist discovers lol and arranges with the mining colony to trade technology for fuel and supplies.*

 (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn. It is stated as being “during the time of the Mandalorian Wars and the Jedi Civil War,” and there is some question as to whether this would have been Revan as the “Revanchist” or as “Darth Revan.” Luke argues, and I am inclined to agree, that since Iol is in the Unknown Regions, it makes sense for this to take place after Revan chases the Mandalorians into the Unknown Regions and “vanishes.”

- At some point while HK-47 is working for Revan, the droid refers to Revan’s apprentice Malak as “meatbag.” Revan is so amused that he orders the droid to always refer to humans that way.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)

- At some point before returning to the Republic to conquer, Revan wipes HK-47’s memory. The droid comes into the possession of various owners for a few years, until ending up on Tatooine, where the droid will be purchased by Revan once again, while he suffers Jedi-induced amnesia.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)

- Voren Renstaal is among the Jedi who follow the Revanchist into the Unknown Regions. While there, he embraces the Revanchist’s new teachings and becomes a member of Darth Revan’s Sith order.
  (conjecture based on The Betrayal of Darth Revan)

- Orielle Kitai takes over control of Candra Kitai’s box at the Korsinata stadium on Kesh. This eventually leads her to seek the source of flowers used for the box, which brings her into contact with Jelph Marrian, who, unbeknownst to her, is not a slave but a Jedi.
  (conjecture based on Purgatory)

- Acaadi, a fallen Jedi turned Sith, infiltrates a band of Mandalorian Neo-Crusaders on Iridonia who have become mercenaries. His plan is to use the mercs to create an opportunity in which he can convince his old friend Duqua Dar to leave the Jedi Order.*
  (conjecture based on Iridonian Darkness)

*NOTE: This is “a few months” before Iridonian Darkness, which would put it near to when Revan and Malak return. I’ve chosen to put it just prior to that event, which I think best fits the context.

3,960 BBY

- The miners on Iol begin to starve due to the loss of supplies traded to the Revanchist. Morale suffers significantly and production drops. The colonists form the Miners’ Union and stage an armed revolt, intending to take over the mines and run the colony independently of Tangan Industries. TI security forces put down the rebellion and negotiate a settlement with the miners’ leader to end the revolt.*
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn. This is within six months of contact with Revan. See the related entry in 3,961 BBY for the rationale for this placement.

- Revan and Malak do indeed discover Dromund Kaas, where the Sith Empire is alive and well, reborn under a new Dark Emperor (Lord Vitiate). Revan and Malak discover that the Emperor plans a new attack on the Republic. They set out to stop him, getting Imperial Guard Yarri to let them into the Emperor’s citadel. It is a trap, though, and the Emperor uses his mental powers to dominate the minds of Revan and Malak, turning them to the Dark Side. Although the Emperor claims that they were Republic spies and that they were executed, he has secretly corrupted them. Without the Dark Council’s knowledge, Revan and Malak are sent back out into the galaxy by the Dark Emperor to seek out the ancient Star Forge to build a massive fleet for the Sith Empire, which would allow the Dark Emperor to invade the Republic centuries ahead of schedule. Revan and Malak do indeed use a Star Map in the ancient “Builder” (Rakata) ruins on Dantooine to seek out similar Star Maps on Tatooine, Manaan, Kashyyyk, and the ancient Sith world of Korriban to rediscover the Rakatan homeworld and the powerful ancient weapon known as the Star Forge. Using the power of the Star Forge, the duo, who have tasted battle and power, begin augmenting their forces with new and improved battleships and starfighters. However, they have partially beaten the Sith Emperor’s mental domination. They no longer believe that they are following the will of their Sith Empire masters as a vanguard to invasion. Instead, they declare themselves Dark Lords of the Sith in their own right (still influenced by but not remembering the Sith Empire), and the two follow the example of Exar Kun and Ulic Qel-Droma, making the stronger of the two, Revan, the Master, and the weaker, Malak, the Apprentice. They forge their force into a powerful military force and ad hoc political entity (based out of the political structure that has already emerged on Korriban), far surpassing the “normal human” following in their Sith ranks than Satal and Aleema Keto’s “Krath” group ever had. On Korriban, they set up a training facility, their answer to a Jedi Academy, to train new Force-sensitive followers and soldiers in the Dark Side of the Force. Another is set up on Malachor V itself, headed by Revan’s former Jedi Master, Kreia. A new Sith War is about to begin. In fact, some will date the Jedi Civil War back to this year, when Malak and Revan became Sith Lords, rather than two years from now, when they actually invade the Old Republic.*

(conjecture based on Knights of the Old Republic, The Sith Lords, the timeline found on StarWarsTheOldRepublic.com, and Revan)*

*NOTE: I would have assumed that this portion of this event could be combined with the previous one in the previous year, but The Old Republic Encyclopedia puts this in 3,960 BBY, which would account for Revan and Malak needing time to find Dromund Kaas, while also making their return more immediate than it otherwise would have been.

• Late in the year, on Kesh, Lady Orielle Kitai, a member of the Lost Tribe of the Sith, visits Jelph Marrian’s homestead on the Marisota River to get flowers for an upcoming ceremony for Donellan’s Day, a Lost Tribe holiday. She has unresolved feelings, somewhat romantic, toward this lowly farmer, who has turned his back on his Sith heritage (or so the story goes) and entered the human slave class. All seven of the High Lords decorate their boxes in Tahv, so as to show up each other. Soon, at the Korsinata (a stadium in Tahv), politics rule the day. Grand Lord Lillia Venn is near death, and all of the High Lords are jockeying for position, including Ori’s mother, High Lord Candra Kitai. She is the newest High Lord, promoted to that position when Venn moved from High Lord to Grand Lord. (Ori, meanwhile, has her own rivals, the Luzo brothers, Flen and Sawj, among the Sabers.) When the uvak rider supported by the Kitai’s, Campion Dey, leaps toward Venn’s box with an uvak that has not had its wings clipped as it should have, the attempted assassination of Venn (and, it turns out, the successful murder of High Lords Dernas and Pallima) will quite obviously be blamed on the Kitai family. Ori heads home, only to discover that their belongings are being carted away. Prior to the assassination, the Grand Lord ordered them essentially to become human slaves, no longer Sith royalty. With nowhere else to go, Ori goes to Jelph’s farm to hide out. While there, Ori learns through her own sources that her mother is still alive. She hides her uvak, Shyn, in his old stable. Jelph suggests that it was actually Venn herself who arranged the assassination attempt, so as to eliminate those who would stand in her way of picking her own successor, including framing Candra, who had never truly picked a side and is a pivotal swing vote on the matter. Knowing that Candra and Ori are alive as examples to others, he suggests that she not return to Tahv, so that she cannot be seen as such an example. Instead, she stays with him, and the two become romantically involved. Jelph leaves to handle his farming and trading duties, leaving Ori alone. Shortly thereafter, the Luzo brothers, in on the plot, kill Shyn and confront Ori. They are there to bring back her lightsaber as a symbol of her submission, and, in return, they will not destroy the farm and kill Jelph. They leave her there, alone as a slave, and she finally succumbs to her humiliation and vents her rage with a shovel that was a “gift” from Venn on her new life as a slave. As she slashes through Jelph’s meager home, she hears a “clang” and discovers an Aurek-class Tactical Strikefighter (i.e. a Jedi starfighter) buried. She realizes that Jelph is, in fact, not of the Lost Tribe and never was. She has found something that might redeem her family in the eyes of the Tribe. Jelph was, in fact, working for the Jedi Covenant when he crashed on Kesh, having recently learned of their collapse. He returns home at a danger call through the Force to discover that she is gone and his ship uncovered. As the lone Jedi on a planet full of Sith, Jelph must stop Ori from exposing him . . . *

(Purgatory)*

*NOTE: The reason I call this “late in the year” will make sense when you hit the summary for the second bit of Sentinel, the next Lost Tribe of the Sith ebook, below.

• For their loyalty, Lost Tribe of the Sith Grand Lord Lillia Venn promotes Sawj Luzo and Flen Luzo to the rank of Lord.

(conjecture based on Sentinel)

• On Kesh, Jelph Marrian sits in a bar, concerned for the future. He has fallen in love with Orielle “Ori” Kitai of the Lost Tribe of the Sith, even though he himself is a Jedi Knight who has been stranded on the planet and had intended to keep these Sith from ever reaching out into the galaxy ever again. Now, Ori has discovered his Aurek-class Tactical Strikefighter, which may provide the Sith with a way to escape Kesh and warn the Republic of the Sith’s existence. He has made his way overnight toward the capital city, Tahv, believing that Ori is on her way there to expose him, but the ship remains at his homestead (without its communications gear working still) and there is evidence of other Sith having been there. In Tahv, Ori arrives and goes to the so-called “zoo” where her mother, former High Lord Candra Kitai has been relegated to cleaning up the mess of the animals after being framed in an assassination attempt on Grand Lord Lillia Venn two weeks earlier. She reveals that she found a ship to her mother, who tells her to deliver this news through their loyal ally Gadin Badolfa, but not to be specific just yet. As she sneaks around the aqueduct system, Jelph does so as well, remembering her mentioning it. It is there where Ori confronts him for his previous lies. He tries to get her to remember how she felt for him, but she claims it was all just part of “defeat” talking, but now she has the means to regain power for her family. He confronts her with the truth of what has transpired in the galaxy at large since the Great Hyperspace War, when the Omen crashed on Kesh. He is finally able to reach her, convincing her that she might be able to be with him and not follow the Lost Tribe’s apparently futile efforts to return to space and rejoin a non-existent conquering Sith Empire. She realizes, however, that the message (a vague one that suggest something of grave importance) has already been sent to have Sith representatives meet her at the farm that night. Together, Ori and Jelph steal an uvak and race back to the farm. She arrives to find Lillia Venn herself, along with Flen and Sawj Luzo, waiting for her. They have already reached the starfighter. Badolfa did not betray Ori, but her own mother did, having made Lillia aware of High Lords supposedly meeting with Ori in treason against Lillia, since she did not believe the starfighter actually existed. Instead, Lillia has discovered it after all. Lillia captures Ori upon arrival, but Jelph sneaks around their position and calls his stashed blasters to him. He attacks, giving Ori time to free herself. Lillia, however, is able to board the starfighter. Without explanation, Jelph urges Ori to flee. The two escape the immediate area just as the starfighter lifts off, pulling wires underneath that Jelph had set up as an anti-theft device. The wires activate proton torpedo warheads, blowing up the starfighter, the Luzos, and the Grand Lord with it . . . (To be continued below . . . )

(Sentinel)

- In the wake of the death of Grand Lord Lillia Venn on Kesh, the Lost Tribe of the Sith begins to refer to the night of her death as the Night of the Upside-Down Meteor. Learning of Lillia’s “disappearance,” Venn’s rivals attack her supporters, then attack each other. Those who are defeated often flee from Tahv to join with disenfranchised human slaves outside the city. The Sith will start to press more and more peaceful Keshiri into service as soldiers for the Sith. Over the coming centuries, Sith factions will conquer Tahv from other Sith, then splinter and fight amongst themselves until again losing the city, over and over again. Varner Hilts will come to call the era that begins here “The Time of the Rot.” Tahv experiences the worst of it, as the city falls into disrepair while so much time is spent in warfare. The aqueduct system will break down, the Sessal Spire will rage as never before in Keshiri memory, and the explosion the Sessal Spire unleashes will cause part of the Korsinata to collapse. The education system (and thereby many elements of Sith society) begins to collapse as well.

(conjecture based on Pantheon)

- During the Time of the Rot, the Doomed on Kesh very nearly intervene in Lost Tribe affairs to save Kesh further devastation, but they stop when they foresee a wise man rising to end the conflict in Sith society (Varner Hilts).

(conjecture based on Book of Sith)

Lost Tribe of the Sith [continued] (ebook series: John Jackson Miller)

Purgatory (ebook: John Jackson Miller)
- Chapters 1 – 4

Sentinel (ebook: John Jackson Miller)
- Chapters 1 – 3
3,959 BBY

- Darth Revan and Darth Malak return to the Republic at the head of their Star Forge-created battle fleet, striking at the Republic and scoring victory after victory. Another Sith War has begun, this time known as the Jedi Civil War (though some date the conflict back two years to when they declared themselves Sith Lords). One of the first strikes, which helps to prove Admiral Saul Karath’s allegiance to the Dark Lords, is a major attack on the planet Telos, which kills the wife of Saul's former friend and subordinate, Carth Onasi. Unbeknownst to Carth, his son Dustil survives the assault and will soon find himself joining the Sith Academy on Korriban that Revan and Malak have established.*

*NOTE: We really don’t have an exact time frame for how long it took for the Star Forge to create the Sith Armada, nor for just how long before their return to the Republic the two new Darths discovered the Star Forge. Moreover, I can’t imagine that the two Jedi decided to just take little vacations during the Mandalorian Wars to find the Star Forge. Basically, what this leads to is a bit of ambiguity. The Star Forge vessels may join the Sith Armada sometime over the next year or so, before the ambush that “kills” Darth Revan, and the quest for the Star Forge itself may have actually started during the Mandalorian Wars. You might best consider the Star Forge to be something that is being utilized in the background, out of sight, which makes this ambiguity somewhat appropriate.

- At the time of the Jedi Civil War, the planet Altiria/Anarris is embroiled in a worldwide war.*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn. This assumes that being at the time of the Jedi Civil War means that it coincides with the Jedi War’s beginning.

- Soon after the devastation of Telos during the early days of the Jedi Civil War, the Republic sets up Citadel Station above Telos to begin working on a reclamation project to save the world’s ecosystems. The Czerka Corporation takes an interest, as do the Ithorians, under Chodo Habat.

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn.

- During the Jedi Civil War, the Czerka Corporation begins manufacturing the VX series artillery droid and supplying them to both sides in the conflict.*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn.

- People from Shor attempt to colonize Giaca. Learning of this, the Peroenia military ambushes the colonists, sparking a war between the two planets.*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn.

- Eight weeks after the destruction of his starfighter, former Jedi Covenant member Jelph Marrian and his former Lost Tribe of the Sith lover, Orielle (Ori) Kitai, have set up a new settlement for themselves on Kesh, far from Tahv and anyone who might be seeking revenge for the deaths of Grand Lord Lillia Venn and the Luzo brothers, Flen and Sawj. She has lost all ties to her former life, and he only has one hope left of returning to the Jedi to warn them about the Lost Tribe: the transmitter he kept from the starfighter. When he is able to accept (but not send) some transmissions, he learns of Revan’s return to the Republic and the beginning of the Jedi Civil War. With no sense of what to do now, feeling cast away from the Jedi with the end of the Jedi Covenant, he takes Ori’s advice to live for himself for once. Together, they toss the transmitter into the nearby stream and begin building a life with each other.*

(Sentinel)*

*NOTE: Sentinel actually begins in 3,960 BBY, but after the jump of eight weeks between the third and fourth chapters, the Jedi Civil War has already begun. Given that information, we have to assume that the fourth chapter is in this year (a year later than the first three chapters), which would put the first three chapters sometime late in 3,960 BBY. Given that Sentinel begins the day after Purgatory, we have to also assume that Purgatory is late in that year.

- Sometime during the Jedi Civil War, a group of Sith troopers, marauders and guards are assigned to clear out some of the nastier creatures near a settlement on Korriban. While passing through some ruins, the team is attacked by a group of bomas, shyracks and massiffs.*

(Korriban Creatures)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke Van Horn.

- A group of heroes are ordered to ambush a band of Mandalorian mercenaries in the Arkora canyons on Iridonia. At the same time, Jedi Knight Duqua Dar is assigned to eliminate another band of Mando mercs. Both Mando teams are returning from a raid on a Republic military communications relay station. The heroes successfully attack in a narrow canyon arm and, after capturing the mercenaries, discover that they were hired to steal as much communications equipment as possible and bring it back to the city Wortan. When the heroes open a communications channel to Duqua Dar to see if he needs assistance, they hear a portion of a conversation between Dar and a Zabrak. The Zabrak is attempting to convince Dar to leave the Jedi Order and go off with him to learn greater power, offering as proof of his greater power the fact that he saved Dar from the Mandalorians. Unknown to the heroes, the Zabrak is Acaadi, a former Jedi and friend of Dar who has fallen to the dark side and become a Sith. Moreover, he has succeeded in convincing Dar to leave the Order, although not yet to explore the dark side. The heroes head in the direction of Dar, concerned about the conversation they overheard. By the time they reach where he fought the mercenaries, Dar and Acaadi are gone. Investigating, the heroes discover a set of red Neo-Crusader armor hidden behind a boulder. Knowing that the armor was worn by the mercs’ leader, the heroes deduce that the Zabrak was the leader, and he used them as pawns, betraying them so he could “save” Dar. They travel to the nearest city, Wortan, and begin looking for Dar. They hear some rumors about shuttles landing in the ruins rather than the landing pads and mentions of unknown Force users, but nothing definitive. Following the Force user rumors, the heroes find themselves in Banol, an underground city sector destroyed during the Mandalorian Wars. Stealthily moving to a plaza, they are approached by Jirany Sha, a Miralukan Luka Sene practitioner, and Darok-Tho, a Keetael. They report that their masters dispatched them to find and assist the heroes in stopping Acaadi, who had studied with both Force traditions before falling to the dark side. The Force users inform the heroes that Acaadi is located in an abandoned hangar and lead them there. As soon as they enter the building, Acaadi flees in a shuttle, leaving Dar behind. Dar has not yet fallen, so the heroes and their Force using companions attempt to convince him to remain in the light. They succeed, but several Sith soldiers immediately attack them, having been left behind by Acaadi in case Dar fails his “test.” The Sith are eventually defeated, and Dar then reveals that Acaadi plans to infiltrate the Republic capital ship Champion of Iridonia and disable it prior to a surprise Sith raid. The heroes immediately report to Admiral Rokon aboard the Champion, who orders them to come to him. They take a shuttle left by Acaadi, but once they leave the atmosphere, they see that the Sith fleet has already arrived and engaged the Republic ships. The heroes land in the Champion’s hangar next to Acaadi’s shuttle and quickly head to the bridge. Rokon orders them to capture Acaadi and the commandos he brought with him, as security has tracked them to an engineering subsection. They are too late, however, as Acaadi flips a switch which causes every bridge station to emit electrical arcs which kill or wound most of the bridge officers. The heroes can only watch helplessly as the ship begins to drift, its guns silenced, and overhear several Republic ships declare their allegiance to Darth Revan and his Sith Empire. While reeling from this news, Acaadi and his commandos invade the bridge, intent on capturing the ship for the Sith fleet. The heroes fight back and eventually defeat the Sith, including destroying several shuttles attempting to board the vessel. With the fighting over, the heroes are able to take control of the ship and turn it over to Republic officers. They are praised for their work, as it was crucial in stopping the Sith raid and protecting Iridonia.*

Iridonian Darkness

NOTE: This summary was submitted by Luke Van Horn. The story is set “a few months” after Revan and Malak return with their StarForge fleet.

Lost Tribe of the Sith [continued] (ebook series: John Jackson Miller)
Sentinel [continued] (ebook: John Jackson Miller)
Chapter 4
Korriban Creatures (RPG short story: Sterling Hershey)
Iridonian Darkness (RPG short story: Sterling Hershey)
A Troubling Transmission
Pursuing Duqua

A Night in Wortan
Searching Wortan
Unexpected Allies
Tipping Point
Fleet Action
Aboard the Champion
Showdown
Conclusion

3,957 BBY

- A group of Mandalorian mercenaries is trapped on Taris when the Sith arrive. Looking to take revenge against the Sith (who follow the Mandalorians’ hated enemy, Revan), they decide to attack a newly established Sith outpost on the planet. They burst into the building through multiple entrances, but find that Sith warriors are formidable adversaries.

  (Payback)

NOTE: This summary was provided by Luke van Horn. Since Sith are already present on Taris when you first emerge in the game, and the Mandalorians believe Revan to still be leading the Sith in the story, I’m placing this just before the events of the game.

- The son of Carth Onasi, Dustil Onasi, becomes a Sith trainee on Korriban’s new Sith Academy, but he is being held back in his training by a fellow student. That student is then executed by the Sith in order to push him forward, but all evidence of this event is kept from him.

  (conjecture based on Knights of the Old Republic)

- The Sith military has assumed direct control of Czerka 431, a secret research facility of the Czerka Corporation which supplies war materiel to the Sith. Joni Ree, a Czerka scientist who has been held captive by the Sith controlling the secret research facility Czerka 431, decides to inform the Republic of the facility’s location and escape during the subsequent raid. Since she has been working on Juggernaut war droids, she reprograms several to assist her in her escape. When Republic forces arrive, she puts her plan into action, with the Sith doing everything they can short of killing her to prevent her escape. They fail, though, and Ree is rescued.

  (Czerka 431)

NOTE: This summary was provided by Luke van Horn. We only know that it takes place sometime during the Jedi Civil War.

- The Czerka Corporation is vexed by Joni Ree’s rescue by Republic forces, as she could bring to light the company’s extensive ties to the Sith Empire. Worse, they learn that the Republic has assigned her to help access secure Czerka files from Czerka Lab AB-343, which was captured by the Republic early in the war. They decide Ree must be stopped and dispatch a Sith assassin to kill her. At the same time, the Genoharadan, for reasons of their own, decide that they don’t want Czerka’s nefarious dealings made public and so dispatch one of their own assassins to eliminate Ree. While working at AB-343, Ree and several guards suddenly realize that someone else has infiltrated the facility.

  (Permanent Demotion)

NOTE: This summary was provided by Luke van Horn. We only know that it takes place sometime during the Jedi Civil War, rather soon after Czerka 431.

- A group of heroes on a mission for the Republic arrive in Sernpidal City, capital of Sernpidal. Their mission: to find Commander Doel Scherp of the Sith Empire and take from him a cylinder containing the command codes for the sensors on Darth Revan’s flagship. They quickly learn where Scherp lives and, after sneaking past his sentinel droids, infiltrate his residence. They find Scherp, but a firefight breaks out. The heroes prevail over Scherp’s guards and droids, and eventually find the cylinder in Scherp’s jacket. They quickly abscond with the codes and return to the Republic fleet. Aboard the Viscount, the heroes are taken to a briefing led by Bastila Shan. She reveals her plan: the Republic will engage the Sith fleet, and during the battle, the heroes will clear a path to the Sith flagship so that Shan and her team can sneak aboard and either capture or kill Darth Revan. Soon, the battle begins and the heroes, in Aurek Tactical Strikefighters, destroy several Sith Interceptors and a Pelagia Duplex Command Assault Gunship. They reach the flagship and find its hangar open and empty. After landing, Shan orders them to proceed to Security Command and order all security teams to the rear of the vessel. In the corridors, they encounter resistance from several droids, commandos, and Sith Marauders, but eventually reach the Security Command station. Within, they find more commandos and Sith marauders, led by Darth Voren, formerly the Jedi Voren Renosta. A fierce fight ensues, but the heroes eventually defeat all the Sith, including Voren. They order all remaining security forces aft and contact Shan, informing her that the path to the ship’s bridge is clear. A few minutes later, Shan contacts them, requesting assistance with returning to the hangar. On their way to her, the heroes notice that several nearby ships have opened fire on the flagship. When they reach Bastila, they find her with an unconscious man draped over her shoulder, several Jedi defenders, and a squad of Sith troopers attacking. The heroes make short work of the troopers and help lead Shan and her group back to the hangar as the ship continues to be fired upon. The hangar is a mess, but everyone is able to get aboard the remaining ships and flee just before the flagship explodes. Shan signals to the fleet that her crew have returned and the entire Republic force escapes into hyperspace.*

(The Betrayal of Darth Revan)*

NOTE: This summary was submitted by Luke Van Horn.

- Unbeknownst to her comrades, Bastila Shan has faced off with the masked Darth Revan, and found herself aided when Darth Malak, seeing an opportunity to usurp full leadership from Revan, attacked his own master’s vessel. Bastila was able to defeat Revan with that unwitting assistance, but she chose not to kill him. Instead, Revan (the man found unconscious with Bastila) is taken back to the Jedi Council, and his mind is cleansed of his old identity as Revan. A new personality is implanted in Revan and the former Sith Lord is rehabilitated into a loyal soldier for the Republic, soon to join Bastila on a fateful mission. As for Malak, he takes a new Sith apprentice (Shadow Hand) as his direct subordinate, the new Darth Bandon.
  (conjecture based on Knights of the Old Republic)

- With Revan defeated, Bastila Shan secretly keeps his Mandalorian mask. She will keep it hidden from Revan, even after he returns to the Jedi Order, until Meetra Surik begins her search for Revan after the Sith Civil War.
  (conjecture based on Revan)

Payback (miniatures game: Sterling Hershey)
Payback (miniatures game: Sterling Hershey)

Czerka 431 (miniatures game: Sterling Hershey)
Czerka 431 (miniatures game: Sterling Hershey)

Permanent Demotion (miniatures game: Sterling Hershey)
Permanent Demotion (miniatures game: Sterling Hershey)

The Betrayal of Darth Revan (RPG short story: Patrick Stutzman)
The Betrayal of Darth Revan (RPG short story: Patrick Stutzman)

- Sernpidal
  - Obtaining the Code
- Engaging the Sith
  - Through the Sith Fleet
  - Repelling the Repellers
  - SecCom Showdown
  - Fight for Flight

3,956 BBY

- Scourge finishes his Sith training at the Sith Academy on Dromund Kaas and leaves the planet to quell minor rebellions in Sith territory.
  (conjecture based on Revan)

- Four decades have passed since Exar Kun and Ulic Qel-Droma engaged the Republic in the Sith War. That war, which has come to be known as the Exar Kun War, was just the beginning of this era’s Sith conflicts, however. Two fallen Jedi Knights, Revan and Malak, have emerged from the fires of the Mandalorian War as Dark Lords of the Sith (secretly acting as agents of the Dark Emperor of the reborn Sith Empire, though they have started to have designs of their own for their own new Sith Empire). They have shortened the title to “Darth,” and have kept their true names, making them Darth Revan and Darth Malak. Now, with systems falling before their surprisingly large fleet (whose origin is unknown), the new Sith Lords have been able to gather enough support from Republic military deserters and citizens of the planets they have taken over that the Sith are now an impressive military and political entity, powerful enough to engage the Republic in what is now becoming a new Sith War. Now, only Malak remains, having betrayed his Sith Master, Revan, during a confrontation with the Republic and leaving him to die at the hands of Jedi Knight Bastila Shan. Knowing that Bastila’s Jedi Battle Meditation is what allowed her to strike at Revan, Malak gives chase to Bastila, intending to either capture her and seduce her to the Dark Side (thus giving the Sith her Jedi Battle Meditation abilities), or to destroy her, so that she cannot be a threat to the Sith again. Bastila is making her way aboard a Republic vessel, the Endar Spire, when the ship is attacked by the Sith. In the chaos, Malak’s new apprentice, Darth Bandon, boards the ship. It is only the brave sacrifice of Republic soldier Trask Ulgo (who keeps Bandon busy) that allows the last two remaining Republic agents, Carth Onasi and the mysterious Jaren Pahl, to take an escape pod to the planet Taris below. Bastila, meanwhile, has managed to escape as well, but she has landed somewhere else on Taris. Carth and Jaren take it upon themselves to keep to their oath of service to the Republic and seek out Bastila. Jaren, haunted by strange visions of Bastila in combat with Darth Revan, and not understanding why, according to Carth, he was personally requested to join the Endar Spire’s crew by Bastila herself, nonetheless follows Carth in their quest, quickly becoming the leader of the pair. Carth holds his own secrets, but Jaren has a hard time getting him to open up. In truth, Carth’s former commanding officer, Saul Karath, turned on the Republic and joined the Sith. He is now the admiral of Darth Malak’s personal starship, the Leviathan, and Carth holds him personally responsible for the bombardment of Carth’s homeworld, which killed his family. After a while of scouting Sith activity on Taris and helping out those they can (including some bits of Panzaak card game betting and competing in a duel arena to earn some credits), the duo realize that if they are to make any headway in their search for Bastila, they must enter the Taris underground, a somewhat more wretched hive of scum and villainy than the surface (though it’s hard to think of anyone more wretched than someone who calls themselves a “Sith,” isn’t it?). After securing Sith soldier battle armor from a chance encounter with a soldier that was unlucky enough to be hassling an innocent swoop rider, they make their way into the underground. There, they learn of the two rival gangs in the area, the Hidden Bek’s (led by Gadon) and the Black Vulkars (led by Brejik), that criminal boss Davik runs much of the show in the lower levels, and that they may end up running into bounty hunter Calo Nord (who is on the planet) and the Mandalorian soldier (now mercenary) Canderous Ordo (who is working for Davik). Carth and Jaren finally meet another unlikely duo in a local cantina, a Twi’lek girl named Mission Vao and a Wookiee named Zaalbar. On Mission’s advice, they go to see Gadon at the Hidden Bek base, just in case he has info on Bastila. It turns out that he does (ah, Twi’lek girls are so helpful when they’re not being used as slaves, aren’t they?), but the news isn’t good. Bastila was captured by the Vulkars, and she is to be the prize in a swoop race that is coming up. Jaren and Carth agree to steal back a prototype swoop accelerator from the Vulkar base, in return for the Bek’s help with the Bastila problem. In order to get into the base, they call upon that sly little Mission’s help, but can only secure it when they help her save Zaalbar from a group of Gamorrean slavers (which also ends up with Zaalbar swearing a life debt to Jaren). While in the wilder areas underground, the group also gets their hands on a serum that could help cure those in the underground who have become rakghouls, which they later deliver to Dr. Zelka Forn in hopes of saving those poor souls. (They even manage to find journals that will help lead the poor citizens in the underground to the so-called “Promised Land” in the Undercity. Not bad for a day’s work on side missions, ey? Their quest is positively chock-full of these little side missions.) Finally, the group is able to enter the Vulkar base, steal the prototype, and, with it in the capable hands of swoop-piloting Jaren, win the race. Bastila should be free, but Brejik, the Vulkar leader, knows the race was unfair, so he refuses to turn her over. One quick brawl later, she’s freed and anyone left standing on the Vulkar side is wishing they had just turned her over. Bastila joins the group (which now consists of Jaren, Carth, Mission, Zaalbar, and Bastila), and they set about trying to find a way off of the planet. They run into good luck (and two soon-to-be members of their party) as they look for a solution. First, Canderous offers them the chance to steal Davik’s own personal starship, the Ebon Hawk, with him, which he can arrange, if they can secure the Sith codes needed to get them past the blockade above. Second, in pursuit of a way into the Sith base to get the codes, they are able to purchase (well, with some coercion) a droid, T3-M4 (a prototype of a new T3 utility droid line), who joins their party (uhm, as if the droid had any choice), who is able to open the Sith base door for them. Upon fighting their way through the base and gaining the codes, the group heads for Davik’s, where they are treated as guests . . . until they free the Ebon Hawk’s pilot, get security codes from him to let them into the ship, then, as a party now numbering seven, prepare to steal it out from under Davik’s crime-loving nose. As they approach the ship, Davik and Calo Nord face-off with them, but just as a fight is about to ensue, Darth Malak orders Saul to begin an orbital bombardment of Taris, just in case Bastila is still alive. In doing so, he inadvertently provides the opening our heroes need to get past Davik and Calo, steal the Ebon Hawk, and, using the codes stolen from the base, escape from Taris to the Jedi Academy on Dantooine. On Dantooine, Bastila reports to the Academy’s Jedi Council, who determine that, due to whatever mysterious bond is allowing Jaren and Bastila to share the same disturbing visions (mostly centering on the final battle between Bastila and Darth Revan, so far), the Jedi will heed the calling of Jaren’s obvious Force-attunement and train him (way, way, way, beyond normal age) as a Jedi. Jaren quickly becomes a full Padawan, having learned the physical and mental disciplines well. His final task is to remove darkness from an area nearby, which sounds as though the area is haunted, but ends up being a meeting and helping to redeem a Jedi from the Dark Side. The Jedi, Juhani, returns to the Academy. Jaren helps others while he has the time as well, including a widow that considers her droid to be akin to her late husband. (They give her a wake-up call by telling her the droid is destroyed, so she goes and meets a nice fellow at the Academy.) They also take on some Mandalorian raiders who have been plaguing the settlers nearby, and help two “star-crossed lovers” transcend their own inter-family feud. The Jedi, meanwhile, remain worried about the current course of the war against Malak and send Bastila and Jaren to investigate nearby ruins, which had once been investigated by Malak and Revan (when they were still Jedi Knights). Inside the ruins, they discover a long-lost droid caretaker and an equally long-lost device known as a Star Map, which, when combined with information from four others on distant worlds, could lead the Jedi to the heart of where the Sith built up their power. It would appear that their power comes from a mysterious superweapon (or at least super-device) called the Star Forge. One quick meeting with the Jedi Council (and one stowaway about the Ebon Hawk returned to safety) later, the Ebon Hawk, bearing Jaren, Bastila, Carth, Canderous, Mission, Zaalbar, Juhani, and T3-M4, sets out on the quest for the Star Forge. Arriving on the first planet in their quest, Tatooine (which, like Taris, has a sizable portion of its businesses under the auspices of the Czerka Corporation, which has a definite Trade Federation feel to it), the team soon discovers that Czerka (and some local Jawas) have been having problems with local Tusken tribes. Seeking out the Tusken, with a new addition, a droid they purchase named HK-47 (who has a really shitty attitude toward all organic lifeforms, it seems), they are able to strike a bargain. The Tusken release the Jawas and move on from the area in exchange for moisture vaporators, generously purchased by the group. The Tusken also, in their newfound sense of cooperation, give the heroes a map to the area of the Dune Sea where they can find the second Star Map . . . only it is stuck in a cave with a huge krayt dragon! Luckily, with the help of hunter Komad Fortuna, they are able to slay the dragon and not only share the glory for the rare kill, but also get the Star Map’s information. On the way out, the team is forced to clash with Calo Nord, but make mincemeat of the deluded bounty hunter. While on Tatooine, the group also manages to get a nice swoop deal going between racer Nico Senvi and the race-organizer, Motta the Hutt, while also saving a man named Tanis Venn from droids set upon him by a vengeful estranged wife. Finally, two reunions take place (Bastila with her estranged mother, Helena, after finding a holocron left by her father when he died in the krayt cave, then Mission with her brother Griff that she hadn’t seen in years, whom they’ll later help set up a nice little Tarisian ale venture on Kashyyyk), and our heroes are ready to leave Tatooine behind. Next stop: the ocean planet Manaan, a neutral party in the Sith War. On the very, very neutral (to the point of very strict regulations) world, Jaren speaks with the Republic’s representative in their embassy, who offers the location of the Star Map in exchange for Jaren and his crew stealing back data from a Republic-owned undersea droid that had been damaged and recovered by the Sith military on the world. A handful of the team members breaks into the Sith Embassy with an out-of-date code, and after a long series of battles with droids, Sith troopers, and Sith Apprentices (clad in gray and black, with hoods and ninja-style face masks over their mouths), they are able to not only recover the data from the droid, but also convince a group of young, impressionable (and Force-attuned) Selkath to turn away from their training with the Sith, much to the delight of their families. Their task fulfilled, they are finally told by the Republic rep that the Republic has a secret facility undersea to harvest kolto, which is a rare resource used for creating healing agents (much like bacta). After discovering an ancient artifact (the Star Map, anyone?) near the facility, all contact was lost. Jaren leads a team to investigate. What they find is a facility filled with mad Selkath, all being influenced by a huge mutant Firaxan (possibly Dark Side-mutated, but more likely genetically engineered by the “Builders” as a guardian). The team shuts down the machinery at the facility, calming the mutant, which allows them to finally reach the Star Map on the ocean floor. Three down, two to go. The heroes’ next stop is the planet Kashyyyk, home of the Wookiees. When they arrive, they discover that the planet is being used by the Czerka Corporation as a slave trade outpost (much as the Empire will enslave Wookiees millennia later), and Zaalbar’s brother, Chuundar, is now leading in their father’s place and collaborating with Czerka. As for Zaalbar, he was banished by his father, Freyyr, from the world for striking Chuundar over the issue, and Freyyr himself has now vanished into the lower depths of the Kashyyyk jungle. When they are taken to Zaalbar’s old village, Zaalbar is held there as an exile who has dared to return and face punishment. To save Zaalbar, Jaren, Bastila, and others must travel into the Kashyykyk depths to kill Freyyr. (Of course, they won’t do so unless there is no other option . . . or will they?) Upon reaching the surface (er, the underground real surface as opposed to what most would consider the “surface” atop the trees), the heroes are attacked by Darth Bandon, who has been sent after them after the failure of Calo Nord on Tatooine. The heroes, though, are too numerous for Bandon, and the young Sith Lord is killed. Continuing with their mission for Chuundar, the group runs into a “crazy old hermit” named Jolee Bindo, a former Jedi that now straddles the line between Dark and Light. After helping him deal with some poachers, the team is happy to have Jolee not only join their party, but also lead them to the Star Map . . . Well, sort of the map. The mysterious Builders have left a computer to monitor access to the Map, and it is only through answering the computer’s questions with obviously Dark Side-tainted answers (thanks to the previous visit to the Star Map by Malak and Revan), that they are able to gain access. With only one Star Map remaining (Korriban), they continue with their mission for Chuundar, sort of. They do find Freyyr, but they help Freyyr get his hands on the blade of the legendary first Wookiee chieftain, Bacca, which allows Freyyr to challenge Chuundar for the throne again. He does so soon, with the heroes at his side (but not before they can mop up some Mandalorians who were testing stealth technology in the lower depths). Chuundar falls, leading to a Wookiee rebellion against the Czerka Corporation and the redemption of Zaalbar, who will, however, still stick with Jaren because of the life debt. The heroes finally set course for Korriban . . . but they are snagged out of hyperspace by the Leviathan! Only one member of the party is able to evade capture, but that will be enough to save everyone else (they hope). Saul, Carth’s old CO, is put in charge of torturing Jaren, Bastila, and Carth himself until Darth Malak can arrive and do it himself. He plays with their emotions, hurting Bastila and Jaren (who have been showing obvious feelings starting to grow for one another) and revealing to them (after a round of “Where’s the Jedi Academy?”) that Malak has already destroyed the Jedi Academy on Dantooine since our heroes were last there, and very few managed to escape alive. A short time later, once they are left alone, they (and the others) are rescued by the last member of their party, leaving Jaren, Carth, and Bastila to storm the bridge if they ever hope to escape the ship’s interdiction field or tractor beams. On the bridge, Carth confronts Saul, killing him, but before he draws his last breath, Saul reveals a terrible secret to Carth, to which Carth can only react with anger . . . at Bastila! (Uh-oh!) They don't have time to discuss the matter, though, as the doors finally open to reveal Malak, newly arrived from the destruction at Dantooine. Malak is shocked to see Jaren, alive and well, not because of all that he must have gone through in the last while, nor even because of the efforts of Calo Nord and Darth Bandon . . . but because, even though Jaren had yet to figure it out on his own, Jaren is Darth Revan! It is revealed that when Bastilla’s Battle Meditation gave the Republic an opening to go after Revan, Malak turned on his master, firing on his ship. When Revan confronted Bastilla (as seen in their shared visions lately), Revan was left alive, but his memory was cleansed and replaced with a new personality that could serve the Republic rather than seek to destroy it. When the Jedi Council realized that Bastilla and “Jaren” had a connection from his days as Revan, they believed that he could be of use in subconsciously helping them locate the source of Malak’s Sith Armada (the Star Forge).

Bastilla has been lying to him, and, it seems, falling in love with the man whose life she is responsible for, in essence, erasing. “Jaren” (whom we’ll refer to hereafter as “Revan,” since “Jaren” is just a placeholder named used for this player-named character up until now, about which you can see the notes below) refuses to join Malak on the Dark Side again and goes after his former fellow Sith Lord. They duel fiercely with their lightsabers, until Bastilla finally frees herself from a stasis field cast by Malak and engages the Dark Lord, allowing Carth and Jaren time to escape. This is just what Malak would’ve wanted, though, as Malak had been searching for Bastilla and her powerful Battle Meditation abilities all along. As Malak bests Bastilla and takes her into custody, the rest of our heroes escape aboard the Ebon Hawk. After revealing the true identity of Revan to the others, they all agree that he is a new man, and while they’ll kick his ass if he starts to act like a Darksider, they are willing to stick by him in order to stop Malak and, somehow, save Bastila. (HK-47 even reveals that he is actually the property of Darth Revan, which releases all of his memory blocks, making him a more efficient member of the party.) Thus, with one member of their party now painfully absent, the remaining group (Revan, Carth, Canderous, Mission, Zaalbar, T3-M4, HK-47, Juhani, and Jolee) head for the final Star Map location, the ancient Sith Empire world of Korriban. Once there, Canderous runs into his former comrade Jagi, who still blames him for the events at the Battle of Althir, leading them to a final duel-like confrontation on Tatooin amid all of the preparations for the Korriban segment of the mission. Infiltrating a Sith training academy (sort of the Jedi Academy gone “baddie”), under the control of Master Uthar Wynn and his second-in-command, the Twi'lek Sith follower Yuthura Ban, Revan (who is, of course, not recognized for who he used to be, since he had worn a mask all the time as Darth Revan) tries to become the new Sith accepted this round, so that he can go with Wynn to Naga Sadow’s tomb, where the final Star Map is located. While in the Academy, Jaren discovers Dustil, Carth’s son, alive and well. He did not die during the attack on Telos carried out by Saul, but he is now a Sith trainee. Luckily, he is able to gather enough proof of their involvement in the death of a fellow student (and friend), who was holding him back, that he and Carth sway the young man back from the Dark Side and away from the Academy. After learning the perverse Sith Code (which, okay, is pretty cool, actually), Revan recovers the sword of Ajunta Pall from his tomb, helps a group of rebel students find safety, takes out Wynn’s insane former Master, Jorak Uln, in another tomb, and generally curries favor and gains prestige with Wynn, he becomes the winning student. He travels with Wynn and Yuthura to the Tomb of Naga Sadow, where he completes a few more mental tests before laying claim to a Sith lightsaber (to prove he made it past the tricky traps) and the information from the final Star Map. One way out of the tomb, Revan is given his final test before becoming a Sith. Yuthura intends for Revan to help her kill Wynn and usurp his place (with Revan at her side), while Wynn (whom Revan told of this) intends for Revan to kill Yuthura and gain prestige with him. Instead, Revan engages both Sith and is able to take them both out, allowing him to rejoin his comrades and use the information from all of the Star Maps to pinpoint the location of the Star Forge . . . an unknown world, where they soon end up crash landing, thanks to a dampening field in the system. What is almost worse than the dampening field that requires them to repair the hyperdrive and seek a way to disable the field, though, is the revelation in space just before crashing of what the Star Forge actually is. The Star Forge is a huge ancient battle station, of sorts, which draws its energy from both the system's star and the Force itself (especially the Dark Side). It is, in essence, an incredibly efficient and fast factory that is able to churn out battleships, starfighters, droids, or whatever Darth Malak needs, using the Force itself as its primary fuel. The heroes soon find themselves investigating the beach where they landed, discovering a civilization of aquatic beings known as the Rakata, who have seen Revan before, on his last trip here to gain the Star Forge. Upon meeting with young Rakatan rebels (and refusing to help them slay their elders, and taking out a group of stealth-endowed Mandalorians who were harassing the young Rakata), the heroes meet with the Rakatan Elders, who ask them to save one of their scouts from the younger Rakata.
After doing so, they learn much from the Elders. The Rakata used to be the rulers of a mighty "Infinite Empire," which spanned numerous systems, several millennia before the formation of the Republic. Their technology, including their ships, was based on a combination of conventional energy and a harnessing of the Force as an energy source. The Star Forge was their ultimate weapon, the source of their true might and fleet. After using "Force technology" for so long, though, they soon became unable to tap into it (possibly because it was mainly the Dark Side being used and it ate away at their species' ability to tap into the Force, even as the taint of the Dark Side caused the society to enter into civil war, leaving only this primitive society on their homeworld alive to carry on). They are the "Builders" that terraformed many worlds in what is now the Republic, including Kashyyyk, and they are said to be responsible for the development of various sentient humanoid races, including the Tusken of Tatooine. Knowing that the only way to disable the dampening field, learn more of the Star Forge, and find genetic information that might help the Rakata restore their connection to the Force (and help them redeem themselves enough to re-enter galactic society) is to get into the Rakatan Temple of the Ancients, Revan agrees to go in alone during a ritual to bring down its protection field. When they learn that there are Sith Apprentices (or Acolytes, if you will) prowling the place, Revan is allowed to bring Juhani and Jolee along to help even the odds and cleanse the temple. That they do, finally making their way to basement (where they gain the genetic info they need and info about the Star Forge), and then to the summit to stop the dampening field... where they come face-to-face with Darth Malak's new second-in-command, the newest Sith Lord... Bastila! Her natural inclination to question her calling, coupled with her anger over family issues with her mother, along with the taint of the Dark Side that entered her mind while saving Revan's life before his mind-cleansing has pushed her into Malak's grasp (not to mention that she was tortured constantly with Force lightning and other methods). She and Revan duel, but instead of being cut down or taken into custody, Bastila escapes from the Temple. The heroes disable the dampening field, fix the Ebon Hawk, and pursue Bastila into space, just as the Republic's battle fleet arrives to engage the Star Forge in space near the Rakata Prime (Lehon).
Knowing that Bastila's Battle Meditation is causing the Sith to be far, far more effective in battle than they should be, the leader of the Republic fleet, Admiral Dodonna, and one of the Jedi Masters from Dantooine who survived (Master Vandar, a member of Yoda's species), ask Revan and the others to go with a Jedi task force into the Star Forge to capture or otherwise remove Bastila from play. They do so, but within the first few minutes, the other Jedi are all wiped out. Fighting droids and dozens of Sith-trained, lightsaber-wielding badasses, Revan and the others fight their way through the interior of the Star Forge, finally discovering Bastila, who is indeed using her Battle Meditation, but who is also being allowed by Malak to draw upon the Dark Side through the power of the Star Forge itself. When she notices them, she freezes everyone but Revan in stasis and the two battle with both lightsabers and words. Finally, Revan's words (and the fact that he is able to fight her to a standstill and could surely defeat her) convince Bastila to turn back toward the light and accept his love (and her own for him). As Revan races off to deal with Malak, the others return to the Ebon Hawk to prepare for their escape, and Bastila uses her Battle Meditation to help the Republic fleet. As the fleet pounds the Star Forge, Revan gets through an onslaught of droids and finally confronts Malak in a huge factory room. The battle between the old Sith Lord comrades is fierce, made all the more difficult by the fact that Malak has several Jedi from Dantooine, caught at the moment just before death, trapped in devices all along the main and upper floors of the room, and he is using them to draw life energy into himself when injured. After disabling all of the devices with the Jedi, letting them finally rest in peace, Revan takes on Malak head-on, defeating his old subordinate. Malak, though, refuses to return to the light and dies at Revan's feet. Revan races back to his comrades on the Ebon Hawk, and they escape, just as the fleet's attack causes the Star Forge to explode in a massive ball of flame. The dangers of the Star Forge and the warfare brought about by Darth Malak and the former Darth Revan, have finally ended. This new Revan is now a hero, and this conflict will come to be known as the Jedi Civil War, the Second Sith War, the Old Republic Insurrection, and the War of the Star Forge, while its latter half is sometimes noted as the Malak War or the Return of Revan.

(Knights of the Old Republic)

NOTE: A few notes on this one. First, yes, this Tales of the Jedi era video game story shares its title with the Tales of the Jedi trade paperback that included Ulic Qel-Droma and the Beast Wars of Onderon and The Saga of Nomi Sunrider, and it also now shares its name with an ongoing Star Wars comic series (set four years before the game), but the stories are not the same (just think of it as another reused title, like the oft-used The Apprentice moniker). Second, the timing of this story is based on a reference in the game's on-screen dialogue, which refers to the "Exar Kun War" having taken place 40 years earlier. Most of the other in-game references, though, tend to be haphazard and refer to everything as 4,000 years before The Phantom Menace. This is just rounding off and laziness (well, in my opinion) on behalf of LucasArts and BioWare. The intended canonical dates are as given here, based on the in-game storyline and later sources. Third, this summary only includes the major, required events for the Light Side storyline and a few of the "subquests," since not all of the subquests actually play a role in the overall story, and act more as embellishment to the tale. Fourth, I would assume that it is possible to play the Star Map quests in this game in a different order, but I played them, and thus summarized them, in this order: Tatooine; Manaan; Kashyyyk; and Korriban. And, finally, since the "reborn" Darth Revan character is your player character in the game, and will thus have a different name for every player to play the game, I have simply chosen to call him "Jaren Pahl" as a reference to a pair of my fan-made audio dramas, Second Strike and Dreamscape. The character has no official name (other than "Revan" or his former title "the Revanchist." He does, however, have an official gender (male). So, ignore the "Jaren" name, as it is just a summarizing tool, alright? Good! Let's move on before my brain explodes. (This event falls in 303 BTC on the Treaty of Coruscant calendar.)

- In the wake of the Jedi Civil War, Revan and Bastila Shan are both offered the chance to be retrained by new Jedi Masters, given that both had at one point fallen to the Dark Side. Both refuse. Instead, Revan offers to teach their new view of the Force that embraces emotion and connections to other Jedi. The Jedi Council refuses to allow this. Revan and Bastila get married, against the Council's wishes. They decide upon a compromise, given Revan's hero status in the Republic. The Jedi Council allows their marriage and hero status, as long as they do not teach others their new teachings. They will also remain Jedi in good standing as long as they keep the ideas to themselves. For this reason, neither of them will visit the Jedi Temple much in the years after the Jedi Civil War.
  (conjecture based on Revan)
- In the wake of the Jedi Civil War, Revan receives the Cross of Glory in a ceremony broadcast on the HoloNet.
  (conjecture based on Revan)
- In the wake of the Jedi Civil War, the collected writings of Darth Malak will become known as the Morrigan Scrolls.
  (conjecture based on The Dead Road)
- In the wake of the bombing of Taris during the Jedi Civil War, many Tarisian stompers escape from devastated zoos. They thrive in the local environment, but when they start to feed on rakghouls, they mutate into so-called Tarisian devourers.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
- The original claim to Veroleem is lost during the Jedi Civil War, so the planet is claimed shortly after the war by a mining company fronting for the Exchange, a criminal organization. The cultist settlers on the planet are forced to oppose the claim in court, eventually winning. The case brings the cult to the attention of the Jedi, who warn them that they strongly oppose the cult's use of kryotin powder as a recruitment tactic.*
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke Van Horn.

- In the wake of the Jedi Civil War, only about 100 Jedi remain in the Jedi Order. The Sith Empire started by Revan and Malak is not dead, only defeated and weakened. Over a short while, the Sith abandon their old strongholds, such as the academy on Korriban, and go underground, intending on somehow striking out against the Republic in secret later. The Jedi, also greatly weakened, see the potential for great evil in all that has happened with the Sith War and the Jedi Civil War, so the Jedi Order breaks up. Those Jedi who have survived go underground, giving up their lives as Jedi, seeking to spare the galaxy from the pain and suffering that results from conflicts that are started by Jedi who become too powerful. Among them are surviving Jedi Council members Vrook, Lonna Vash, Kavar, Zez-Kai Ell, and Atris (who has gathered a collection of Sith Holocrons at the Telosian Jedi Academy). Their plan is to someday reform the Jedi Order if needed by assembling at the ruins of the Jedi Enclave on Dantooine. Meanwhile, the Sith continue to secretly hunt down and kill any Jedi they can find. They operate under new leadership now, as Darth Revan’s former Jedi Master, Kreia, takes on the mantle of Darth Traya and begins acting as Sith Master to two Sith Apprentices (Shadow Hands), Darth Sion and Darth Nihilus. Eventually, though, Sion and Nihilus on their master, as is the Sith way, and Kreia is banished. Sion (whose body is ravaged and held together by sheer force of will) and Nihilus (a victim of the atrocities on Malachor V, who managed to use the Dark Side to escape aboard a confiscated ship, the Ravager) are now the reigning Sith Lords. Now, the Sith begin to consolidate their power.

- In the wake of the Jedi Civil War, Revan Canderous Ordo stays on Coruscant, refusing various jobs, intending on joining Revan on his next adventure, which he expects will certainly come, though when is an open question.
  (conjecture based on Revan)

- In the wake of the Jedi Civil War, the Sith Empire hears nothing of Revan and Malak’s attack that was to be the prelude to a Sith invasion. Assuming that they have failed, the Sith’s Dark Emperor returns to his original, longer-term plans for an invasion centuries later.
  (conjecture based on Revan)

- In the wake of the Jedi Civil War, Jolee Bindo and Juhani remain Jedi Knights and do not follow Revan and Bastila Shan in distancing themselves from the Jedi Council’s teachings.
  (conjecture based on Revan)

- In the wake of Darth Bandon’s death, Sith Acolytes preserve his severed head.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)

Knights of the Old Republic (video game series: LucasArts)
Knights of the Old Republic (video game: LucasArts)

*NOTE: You can tackle the Tatooine, Manaan, Kashyyyk, and Korriban planets in KOTOR in whatever order you like. The order of the first three and final two locations is required. In the summary above, I have assumed an order for the four Star Map quests, which may or may not fit how you end up playing the game. Also, I should note that the “Rakata Planet” has since been given the names “Rakata Prime” and “Lehon.”

3,955 BBY

- In the wake of the Great Sith War, Mandalorian Wars, and the Jedi Civil War, Aratech sells G0-T0 droids to coordinate reconstruction on worlds damaged in the conflict. Around the same time that the G0-T0 droids are created, research begins on a supercomputer that could actually act as a planetary computer network by itself, the BRT supercomputer.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)

- Starting this year, Mission Vao and Zaalbar begin setting up a decent import-export business.
  (conjecture based on Revan)

3,955 – 3,951 BBY

- In the interim period between the introduction of the G0-T0 droids onto various worlds in need of reconstruction, the first hints emerge that the G0-T0 droids could be trouble. On Telos, the local G0-T0 droid decides that it cannot help protect the Republic within its programming parameters. As a result, this G0-T0 droid breaks away from legal programming and sets up a smuggling ring. Using a holographic representation of a human named “Goto,” the droid leads the operation in enriching Telos, while deciding to place bounties on the heads of various Jedi and Sith that are believed to be destabilizing the Republic through their conflict with one another. In order to take on these Jedi and Sith, “Goto” establishes a droid factory on Telos that secretly manufactures HK-50 assassin droids. Quite a few of them end up being put into the Republic fleet as protocol droids, where they sometimes cause negotiations to go awry.

(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)

- In the interim between the Jedi Civil War and the Sith Civil War, encounters between remnants of Darth Malak’s Sith Empire and the Jedi occur, which come to be referred to as the “Dark Wars.”
  (conjecture based on Knights of the Old Republic Campaign Guide)

- During the Dark Wars, 90% of the members of the Blazing Chain pirate crews are Force-users.
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn.

3,954 BBY

- Two assassination attempts are made against Darth Nyriss. In the second, a serving droid is replaced by one meant to kill her. Instead, it kills one of her servants, a chef. With this attempt on her life, the Sith Emperor chooses to send a Sith Lord to investigate.
  (conjecture based on Revan)

- Darth Scourge is recalled to Dromund Kaas. With his two year mission to quell rebellion over, he is anointed as a full Sith Lord.
  (conjecture based on Revan)

- Two years after rediscovering his identity, Revan (now married to Bastila Shan) is plagued by dreams that seem to be Force visions of a world covered in storms. He thinks this might be a hint to what happened to him after the Mandalorian Wars that caused him to turn to the Dark Side before returning to the Republic as Darth Revan. Meanwhile, across the galaxy, the Sith Empire is alive and well. Sith Lord Darth Scourge returns to Dromund Kaas, the Sith Imperial homeworld after two years, now on assignment from the Sith Emperor. He is to meet with an advisor to Darth Nyriss, Sechel, then travel to her estate to begin investigating a series of assassination attempts against Nyriss, a member of the Dark Council. He goes to her estate, where he meets her security chief, Murtog. He has suspicions of both Sechel and Murtog, but his immediate concern upon arrival is an attack on him (not Nyriss) by a pair of mercenaries. He takes out one, then attempts to question the other, but she is killed by Murtog’s guards. In truth, the whole incident was a test of his skill, arranged by Darth Nyriss herself. She explains that the last attempt on her life (a serving droid being replaced by a duplicate meant to kill her that instead killed her chef) has been traced back to a droid factory on Hallion, a world only recently conquered by the Sith (relatively speaking). On Coruscant, Revan and his astromech, T3-M4, get together with their ally from the Jedi Civil War, the Mandalorian Canderous Ordo. He questions Canderous about the recent wars and begins to remember more about how he killed Mandalore the Ultimate and took his helmet (considered a necessary item for whomever will claim to be the next Mandalore) to an unknown location to leave them in disunity. He wonders whether whatever turned the Mandalorians against the Republic could be the same thing that Revan and Malak found in the Unknown Regions that caused them to turn to the Dark Side and return to wage war on the Republic as well. While Canderous spends time looking, Darth Scourge and Sechel break into the Uxiol Droid Manufacturing plant on Hallion. While Scourge engages droids, Sechel slices into the UDM systems to determine who sent the droid to kill Nyriss. Back on Coruscant, after a few weeks of Canderous looking for information with no report back yet, Revan visits the Jedi Temple to seek information himself. He investigates the battle at Malachor V that ended the Mandalorian War, and he runs into Jedi Archivist Atris, who is not at all happy to see him.
She reveals to him the fate of Meetra Surik and how she was cut off from the Force and exiled from the Jedi Order to become the so-called “Exile,” all because she remained loyal to him and then turned herself in to the Jedi Order for punishment after Malachor V. On Dromund Kaas, a week after the mission to Hallion, Nyriss reveals what they have discovered, along with explaining to Scourge that his great Dark Side power is to draw on emotional energy not just from himself but from those he is fighting, which is why he had some trouble against inorganic opponents (the droids on Hallion). She informs him that the data from UDM points to payment coming from a group of radical human separatists on Bosthirma who are acting against the Empire. Scourge, Sechel, and others loyal to Nyriss are to head to Bosthirda and take them out, while determining if there are any further connections beyond the radical group. On Coruscant, Revan (just under a month after talking to Canderous the last time) meets again with Canderous, who had no information about the stormy planet of Revan’s visions, but he is able to tell Revan that various Mandalorian groups are converging on the planet Rekkia, a frozen world where Revan realizes that he had hidden Mandalore’s helmet. Finding it would reunite the Mandalorians under a new Mandalore and, depending on who that might be, could reignite aggression toward the Republic. This could also help provide more clues for Revan about his life before having his memory erased by the Jedi Council. They leave HK-47 behind, and the trio of Revan, Canderous, and T3-M4 head for Rekkia aboard the Ebon Hawk. Bastila does not accompany them, as she reveals that she is pregnant with Revan’s child. She does not stop him from leaving, though, as she knows how important it is to him to determine the truth about his past and figure out whether the visions he has is a threat that still awaits to attack one day. (She does, however, instruct T3-M4 that if anything happens to Revan, the droid should seek her out to inform her, and the droid should tell no one else about what happened to Revan.) On Botsthirma, Scourge, Sechel, Murtag, and their team take out the radicals and recover part of a communication between them and the human Dark Council Sith Lord Darth Xedrix, a rival of Darth Nyriss. He is their backer, and it seems he intends to topple the Sith Emperor. Nyriss helps Scourge arrange a meeting with Xedrix, so that Scourge can assassinate him. At Rekkia, Revan manages to damage the ship while going to the surface, but they land safely. As T3-M4 remains with the ship, he and Canderous head out onto the frozen surface. They encounter a group of Mandalorians who are searching for the helmet, led by a woman named Veela. She is not happy to see an outsider (Revan, who is using the false name of Avner), and Canderous reveals that things are even more complicate: Veela is his wife. Meanwhile, on Bosthirda, Scourge is met by Darth Xedrix and his guards. Due to Xedrix being old and somewhat wakened, Scourge is able to take out his guards and kills Xedrix, but not before he can put doubts in Scourge’s mind about his own loyalty to Nyriss. On Rekkia, Revan has a vision or Force memory that points him to where the helmet was hidden. He leads Veela’s group in that direction, but is forced to reveal his Jedi abilities (and identity as Revan) to Veela (only her, though) during a brief battle with an opposing Mandalorian faction. Back on Dromund Kaas, Scourge attacks Sechel for information, and he learns that Nyriss was never being targeted for assassination by Xedrix. Instead, she manufactured the situation to draw suspicions away from herself . . . but why? Nyriss finally explains the truth of the situation. She reveals that the Sith Emperor is mad, seeking to eventually launch them into a new war with the Republic that, if carried out now, would spell disaster and the fall of the Sith Empire again. The Empire simply is not ready for such a confrontation. She and other Sith Lords, including Xedrix, are in a conspiracy to bring down the Emperor or at least delay the impending conflict in order to save the Empire. Xedrix was really working with the radicals against the Empire, but he was an ally of Nyriss. She had to distance herself from any possible suspicion, and managed to take out a rival at the same time with her ruse. Moreover, if anyone, including Xedrix (who seemed to be their weakest link) would have been suspected as being a traitor on the Dark Council, the Emperor would have killed everyone on the Dark Council, which would not only be bad for them but would also remove any check on his power, allowing the attack on the Republic to go forward even sooner than feared. She wants Scourge to be part of their cause and to report to the Emperor that Xedrix was indeed a traitor, but not Nyriss. In order to convince him of the truth of what she is saying, she decides to tell him the truth about the Emperor’s origins and let him see the barren wasteland of the Emperor’s homeworld, Nathema. On Rekkiad, Clan Ordo continues its hunt. Revan and Canderous follow Revan’s visions to a secret cave. Inside, they find the tomb of an exiled Sith Lord, and Revan finally remembers that Mandalore the Ultimate’s last words were to say that the Sith were the ones who sent the Mandalorians to attack the Republic. They promised him victory, but it was just a test of the Republic’s strength. This was the knowledge Revan and Malak found on Rekkiad. They then sealed Mandalore’s helmet in the Sith tomb and headed into the Unknown Regions to seek evidence of the Sith having survived the Great Hyperspace War. Revan and Canderous recover Mandalore’s Mask (as the helmet is known), but Veela refuses to let Canderous and Revan join them in taking the Mask back to the rest of Clan Ordo, since Revan is a sworn enemy of the Mandalorians. In the brief fight that follows, Veela is killed, and Canderous is left with the Mask. Revan reveals more of his memories about Mandalore and reclaims a datacron from within the Sith tomb that contains information on a Sith Lord named Lord Dramath II of the planet Medriaas (now known as Nathema). He intends to continue his hunt for answers on Nathema, while Canderous claims the Mask and declares himself the new Mandalorian leader – Mandalore the Preserver. On Nathema, Nyriss reveals the origins of the Sith Emperor, Lord Vitiate (the one who drove off Lord Dramath II from Nathema), and how he used a Dark Side ritual to suck all of the life from the planet in order to increase his own life span by centuries. The Force is simply absent from Nathema, and he intends to continue consuming life (and the Force) as he goes along, including doing so in Republic space. Scourge agrees that he must be stopped. They are still present when the Ebon Hawk lands on Nathema with Revan and T3-M4 aboard. Automated defenses blast the ship from the sky. When Revan leaves the ship (with T3-M4 still aboard to start figuring out repairs), he is attacked and captured by Nyriss and Scourge. A short while later, the Sith have learned little of what happened after the Emperor supposedly captured and sentenced Revan (and Malak) to death when they arrived in Sith space, but they have a theory. They believe that the Emperor used his power to dominate minds to control Revan and Malak, making them new Dark Lords and sending them out as a vanguard to attack the Republic, but something went wrong, and Revan was able to break from the Emperor’s domination. They must figure out how to break the Emperor’s power as Revan did if they are to have any hope of bringing him down before all is lost in a new war with the Republic . . . (To be continued below . . . )

(Revan)
- When Revan leaves Republic space, HK-47 demands to follow him. When Bastila Shan will not tell the droid where Revan has gone, the droid heads off in search of him by himself. He will later be found (in pieces) by T3-M4.
  (conjecture based on Revan)
- Vaner Shan is born to Bastila Shan and Revan (who has left for the Unknown Regions already).
  (conjecture based on Revan)
- With Revan gone from Known Space, Canderous Ordo (Mandalore the Preserver), Revan’s Mandalorian ally during the Jedi Civil War, heads for the Dxun moon of Onderon. Once there, begins to consolidate what remains of the Mandalorians on Dxun, hoping to one day reunite the entire Mandalorian people under the leadership of Clan Ordo.
  (conjecture based on The Sith Lords)
- In the three years following Darth Scourge torturing him for information on the assassination attempts on Darth Nyriss, Sechel stays out of Scourge’s way as much as possible.
  (conjecture based on Revan)

The Old Republic (novel series/comic series/video game: Sean Williams & Paul S. Kemp & Drew Karpyshyn & Alexander Freed & Rob Chestney)
The Old Republic (novel series: Sean Williams & Paul S. Kemp & Drew Karpyshyn)
Revan (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
Prologue
Part One
Chapters 1 – 16
3,953 BBY
- By six months after his capture by Darth Nyriss and Darth Scourge, Revan has revealed all that his erased memory will allow, which does not satisfy Nyriss, who had hoped to confirm that it is possible to defeat the Sith Emperor’s mental domination and how it was done. She gives up on him (just as they had given up on torture as a means of interrogation), but Revan’s connection to both the Dark and Light Sides of the Force is fascinating to Scourge, who continues to visit the captive until the arrival of Meetra Surik years later.
  (conjecture based on Revan)
- After nearly a year, T3-M4 is able to lift off from Nathema in the Ebon Hawk, which the droid has repaired. He begins limping back to Republic space in the ship to find Bastila Shan and tell her what has happened to her husband Revan on Nathema.
  (conjecture based on Revan)

3,952 BBY
- One year before Meetra Surik arrives on Dromund Kaas to rescue him, Revan learns from Darth Scourge (whose name he still does not know) the name of Darth Nyriss and the fact that she is part of a conspiracy to bring down the mad Sith Emperor. He begins to use this information to manipulate Darth Scourge, hoping to convince him to free Revan at some point.
  (conjecture based on Revan)

3,951 BBY
- The Sith, under Darth Sion and Darth Nihilus, begin to make their move against the Republic. At this time, several of the remaining former Jedi, including former Jedi Council members, have taken up residence on the Miralukan homeworld of Katarr. They are there to determine what to do next, at a Conclave (meeting), arranged by Jedi Council member Atris. Unbeknownst to them, Atris has set up the meeting as bait to draw the Sith out, so she isn’t going to attend herself.
  (conjecture based on The Sith Lords)
- Seeking to destroy the remaining Jedi, Darth Nihilus is drawn to the planet Katarr, homeworld of the Miraluka and hiding place of many of the remaining Jedi. Using his Dark Side powers, Nihilus ravages the world, killing everyone on it... with only one exception. Nihilus himself goes to the planet to take the last surviving Miralukan, Visas Marr, back to his ship with him. He begins to twist Visas Marr to the Dark Side as one of his Sith followers.
  (Unseen, Unheard)
- Only a few Jedi survive in the wake of the Katarr massacre, having not been there to be killed. Among them are surviving Jedi Council members Vrook, Lonna Vash, Kavar, Zez-Kai Ell, and, of course, the duplicitous Atris. Vrook goes into hiding on Dantooine, Vash goes in search of answers on Korriban, Kavar heads for Onderon, and Ell takes refuge on Nar Shaddaa. As for Atris, she begins to work under the notion that she is the last true remaining Jedi and starts her own plans to rebuild the Jedi Order under her own leadership at her academy under the frozen polar surface of the devastated planet Telos.
  (conjecture based on The Sith Lords)
- During the new Sith Lords’ attempt to wipe out the Jedi Order, Bastila Shan and her child (Revan’s child), Vaner Shan, go into hiding.
  (conjecture based on Revan)
- The Wavelength Gale smuggling band places a landing beacon on Mount Vorena (on the planet Volik).*
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn. This is “during the time of Darth Nihilus.”
- It is five years after the Jedi Civil War, in which Darth Revan and Darth Malak led a new Sith Empire against the Republic. Victory came only after Revan himself turned back to the Light Side and defeated Malak. Now, one of Revan’s former generals, Meetra Surik, a heroine of the Mandalorian Wars known to many as “the Exile,” a former Jedi cast out by the Jedi Council, believed blinded to the Force, is about to have her own adventure in Revan’s wake.
In space, the Ebon Hawk, Revan’s former vessel, is found adrift exiting the Unknown Regions. It is taken aboard the Republic vessel Harbinger, which bears Meetra. When Sith raiders attack the Harbinger, though, in part looking for Meetra, many of the Harbinger’s crew are killed, and Meetra is drugged and taken aboard the Ebon Hawk by droid bounty hunter HK-50. The ship is damaged even more, and only the quick thinking of T3-M4 (Revan’s former droid, who was left on the ship) gets the ship’s sublight drive fixed and gives enough triage treatment to Meetra to keep her alive. The droid sets the Ebon Hawk’s course for Peragus II, a fuel mining colony set up in orbit of the blasted out remains of the planet Peragus, placed amid highly-combustible asteroids. Upon awakening on the Peragus station, Meetra searches around and discovers that the Ebon Hawk is locked down in the hangar, and the mysterious non-Jedi, non-Sith Force-user Kreia (whom she doesn’t really remember, thanks to someone tampering with her kolto tank) is in the morgue, and T3-M4 is lost somewhere on the station. What’s more, a stretch of time has passed, in which Meetra’s presence sparked conflict between the station administrators and a group of thugs led by Coorta. In the resulting conflict, even as droids started mysteriously going haywire and attacking humans, everyone either evacuated the station or died. Meetra seems to be the only human left. Upon checking the morgue, though, this is revealed to be untrue. Kreia is alive, but had been in a Force-induced state that made everyone think she was dead, apparently. Leaving her in the morgue, Meetra searches around and finds another human survivor, the smuggler Atton Rand. Atton, like Meetra, is a veteran of the recent galactic conflicts that have ended with the Jedi Order essentially disbanding itself. Rumor has it that only one true Jedi remains, and the Sith, who have also gone underground in the galaxy, believe Meetra to be this last Jedi. All of the others have either been killed, turned to the ways of the Sith, or gone into hiding, giving up the Jedi calling. Meetra frees Atton, and the two begin to make escape plans. With some help from T3-M4, whom they contact via comlink, they are able to get into the main body of the station. They also get some help from another droid (an HK-50 model) on the station. Kreia soon joins them, and when the Harbinger, under control of Sith assassins, docks with the station, they take a detour through the ship to get around obstructions in the station and into the docking bay to get the Ebon Hawk. With all four of our heroes reunited, they are about to make their escape as the creepy, evil Sith Lord, Darth Sion, emerges to stop them. Sion’s body is held together by sheer Dark Side willpower, as he should’ve been dead dozens of times over by now. Kreia holds Darth Sion off long enough for the others to escape, but is wounded. En route to the Ebon Hawk, the others are temporarily stopped by HK-50, the “helpful” droid that turns out to be an assassin droid sent to take out Meetra. They destroy the droid and continue to the Ebon Hawk without Kreia. Luckily, as they blast away from Peragus, heading for Telos (the only safe route they know of out of the area), Kreia reveals that she has gotten aboard and escaped with them. As for Peragus... errant fire from their escape destroys one asteroid, starting a chain reaction that completely obliterates the Peragus fuel station. Now, they head for Telos, a planet that they have now doomed, in essence, because it relies on Peragus fuel to survive. Landing at Citadel Station, in orbit of Telos (a world greatly harmed by the Jedi Civil War, where the Republic has begun reclamation efforts to restore the environment), our heroes are taken into custody by Lieutenant Dol Grenn of the Telos Security Force (TSF) for their suspected role in the events at Peragus. Before they are put under temporary house arrest, Meetra is nearly killed by an assassin claiming to be Batu Rem. The real Batu Rem, though, is missing. It is proven that the remnants of the Harbinger were found around Peragus, which shifts suspicion away from Meetra to the Harbinger, letting them go free, albeit under restriction to stay on Citadel Station. They are soon approached by the Ithorian Moxa, who works for Chodo Habat, another Ithorian. The Ithorians are there trying to help the reclamation efforts, but they are in conflict with the Czerka Corporation, which is also trying to get in on the very profitable action. Hearing of Meetra as a Jedi (well, former Jedi), Chodo asks for their help. Before stepping in, Meetra goes to see Grenn, only to find that the Ebon Hawk has been mysteriously moved to the surface of Telos, outside of the reclamation zones somewhere. Now, they need to find a way off the space station. Getting involved in some local squabbles, they help the Ithorians keep a necessary restoration droid that is about to be stolen from them by Czerka. The Ithorians then ask Meetra’s party to help call off the Bumani Exchange Corporation (the Exchange), which has been harassing them. In order to do so, Meetra tells Luxa, the second-in-command of local Exchange leader Slusk’s operation, that she’ll kill Slusk for her. Upon getting into the Exchange offices, though, Luxa emerges and betrays him, and both of the Exchange leaders end up defeated. The Ithorians are safe from Exchange interference. Finally, as a last quest for the Ithorians, Meetra is asked to steal Czerka mainframe data to prove to the government that the Czerka Corporation is up to no good. To do so, they bribe Czerka employee Corrun Falt, who tells them that they need to get access to the Czerka droid B-4D4 in order to get into the mainframe. They go to Opo Chano, a droid repair specialist, and pay off one of his debts to get his droid repair credentials, which they then use to bring B-4D4 with them from the Czerka offices to the Ithorian compound. The droid is reprogrammed and sent back to the Czerka offices, where he enters the mainframe room, sets the highly unstable droid T-1N1 on his Czerka masters, and steals the info. That info is taken to Grenn, who starts a crackdown on Czerka’s activities. In return, the Ithorians tell Meetra that her party can take the Ithorians’ shuttle to the surface, where they should talk to a former Mandalorian Wars soldier named Bao-Dur, who served under Meetra at the final Mandalorian Wars battle at Malachor V. Bao-Dur can help them find the ship.

They take the shuttle, but are shot down by Czerka excavation site defenses on the surface and crash. Everyone survives, and they are found immediately by Bao-Dur. Seeking to find the location of the Ebon Hawk on the surface of Telos, the group (Meetra, Kreia, Atton, and Bao-Dur only, as T3-M4 was aboard the Ebon Hawk) searches the excavation site, where they learn of an unusual shielded area in a polar region. They then enter an old military base (currently being used by some Mandalorian mercenaries) and steal a shuttle to head for the polar region. Above the polar region, they get shot down . . . again. Bao-Dur is unconscious, leaving it up to the remaining trio to take on a group of HK-50 assassin droids before looking for shelter. The shelter they find gets them captured! They have stumbled across former Jedi Council member Jedi Master Atris’ Jedi Academy, which is hidden under the polar ice. It is here that Atris studies Jedi history, including a huge treasure trove of Sith artifacts, which seem to be influencing her personality, whether she realizes it or not. Kreia, Atton, and Bao-Dur are taken prisoner, while Bao confronts Meetra. She was one of the Jedi Council members who cast Meetra out of the Jedi Order for following Revan (later known as “Darth Revan”) into the Mandalorian Wars, against the Jedi Council’s wishes. In fact, Atris still has Meetra’s lightsaber, which she refuses to return to her, since she’s technically no longer a Jedi. He tells her that she is being hunted by the Sith because they believe she is the “Last Jedi,” and she scoffs because Atris herself is the so-called “Last Jedi,” the last remaining Jedi to outwardly claim to be one, the Jedi who believes that she can single-handedly revive the Order someday on Telos. Meetra feres Bao-Dur, Kreia, and Atton, then finds and frees T3-M4. On their way out, she talks to the only one of Atris’ Echani handmaidens to not look exactly like all of the others (she’s a half-sister to the others). Finally, they get to the Ebon Hawk and take off. While in space, T3-M4 reveals that he copied some of Atris’ files, which lets them see a holovid of Meetra’s banishment session in the Jedi Council. They also learn the names and hiding locations of all of the remaining Jedi Council members (as, apparently, Atris isn’t as alone as she pretends to be in her ego trip). Master Vrook is on Dantooine (site of the now-deserted Jedi Academy that helped the brainwashed Revan find his identity again five years earlier), Master Zez-Kai Ell is on Nar Shaddaa, Master Kavar is on Onderon, Master Vash is on Korriban, and Master Atris, as they already know, is on Telos. Now, they set course for Nar Shaddaa. Arriving on the Smuggler’s Moon, the group’s first hassle is with Quello, the Toydarian that runs the landing pad they use. The Red Eclipse slaver gang is going to be landing a ship there soon, so they’d better get the ship out of there. Of course, they leave it. They are hoping that the more trouble they cause, the better chance their fellow Jedi, Zez-Kai Ell, will emerge from hiding to contact them. They proceed to help some of the unfortunate refugees on Nar Shaddaa, work out a deal for new fuel for Telos with Vogga the Hutt (solving part of the problem Meetra began upon her escape from Peragus), settle some trade disputes, and stop a local swoop race runner from fixing his races. They attract the attention of the Exchange and quite a few bounty hunters, all hired by the crimelord Goto. Among the hunters are Mira and Hanharr the Wookiee. Hanharr has a life debt to Mira, but hates her with a passion. The two are blood enemies, yet bound by the debt. When the Red Eclipse thugs arrive to claim their docking rights, they try to steal the Ebon Hawk. Our heroes take them out, saving the ship, only to discover an apprentice of Sith Lord Darth Nihilus, Visas Marr, aboard the ship. She is waiting for Meetra, to test her, so she is ready to be found and turned by Visas' masters. However, Meetra bests her in combat and spares her life. She sees a way to continue her mission of ensuring that Meetra is ready by joining up with her in her quests. (This is partly because she is a Miralukan, a near-human race nearly wiped out when their homeworld of Katarr was utterly devastated by the Sith Lords in their attempt to destroy the Jedi in hiding on the planet.) When the local crimeboss, Saquesh, decides to cut Goto out of the action, he sets up a meeting with Meetra at a local cantina, Jekk'Jekk Tarr.

Meetra heads off to attend the solo meeting, but Mira stops her. She gasses Meetra, intending on getting the bounty on her later, then goes to confront Saquesh in Meetra’s stead, hoping to find out what’s going on and possibly reveal her betrayal to Goto for a profit. According to Mira, though, it isn’t Meetra or herself that is in trouble. Meetra’s companions are more vulnerable without her. This proves to be true, as Atton stops in a cantina for a drink and some pazaak, but is set upon by the female Twi'lek assassin duo known as Twin Suns. He defeats them, but it’s a hard fight. Meanwhile, Mira gets in to see Saquesh, but he captures her (didn’t see that coming, did we?) and forces her into his arena. The intent is that Meetra may come looking for her and still be trapped. As for Mira, she’s put to the test in the arena against Hanharr in a duel to the death. She defeats him, leaving him right at the teetering point between life and death, then she escapes, letting Meetra, who has regained consciousness (after a brief visit from Zez-Kai Ell himself) and come to save her, enter the facility. (Unseen by Mira, Kreia enters the arena and revives Hanharr, forcing him into a life debt to her as well, telling him that he still has a role to play in some coming event.) Meetra is captured and taken aboard Goto’s starship up in orbit. Luckily, Mira gets Atton and the others enough information about the situation for T3-M4 to get them a new transponder ID code for the Hawk, which lets them dock with Goto’s ship and enter to save Meetra. They do so, letting its cloaking device down, which lets numerous bounty hunters (angry at Goto’s methods) get aboard. Among them are Twin Suns, who are soundly defeated this time. As they leave, they discover that a droid (kind of like the interrogation droid used on Leia Organa on the Death Star) has stowed aboard. The droid proclaims itself to be there on behalf of Goto, but in reality, the droid is Goto, whose name is actually “G0-T0.” They prepare to continue looking for Zez-Kai Ell, only to be told by Mira that he is waiting for Meetra. Meetra confronts Zek-Kai Ell, and the two duel with words and lightsabers. As a result, Meetra learns greater saber techniques and Zek-Kai Ell is convinced to return to the Jedi Order. He heads off to Dantooine, to the ruins of the Jedi Enclave, where the Jedi Council vowed to meet and rebuild the Order when the time was right. Finally ready to leave Nar Shaddaa, the Ebon Hawk launches for their next destination, the planet Onderon, site of many of the conflicts from the Sith Wars about half a century earlier. Above Onderon, our heroes encounter Colonel Tobin’s Republic military starships, which proceed to strike at the Ebon Hawk. The Hawk must set down on the Dxun moon of Onderon, where Atton begins repairs. Meanwhile, the others set out to find an alternate route to Onderon. During their travels through the jungle, they discover a hidden Mandalorian base, where Mandalorians that were left after the Mandalorian Wars (on Dxun) have set up a new enclave. Their leader, Mandalore (actually former companion of Revan, Canderous Ordo, now bearing the mantle of “Mandalore,” which is the name always given to the Mandalorian leader) offers to take them to Onderon if Meetra can prove herself. She does so by fixing some equipment, proving herself in combat, and helping protect the Mandalorian settlement from Republic scouts. Unfortunately, they can’t protect the settlement from incursion by cloaked Sith assassins, but after they take out those assassins, Mandalore takes Meetra (with a lightsaber that she has built from pieces of Sith assassin sabers, by the way) and two companions down to Onderon aboard his G-wing. On Onderon, our heroes discover strange things afoot. Queen Talia’s reign is under threat from General Vaklu, head of the armed forces, who is being manipulated by the Sith. They hope to stay out of the conflict, but the fact that Vaklu wants to secede from the Republic makes it, in part, their fight. Their first necessity, though, is to find Dr. Dagon Gent, an acquaintance of Mandalore, who might be able to get them word into the palace, which is the most likely way of being able to contact Master Kavar. They find that Gent has been arrested for the murder of one of his close friends, but upon investigating, they are able to reveal that he is innocent, gaining his gratitude. He contacts Kavar for them, but Colonel Tobin, who is secretly working with Vaklu against the Republic, interrupts their meeting with the former Jedi Council member. Tobin is injured as Kavar and the heroes make their escape (again, though, Tobin lives to fight another day, thanks to Kreia stepping in secretly). They will have to catch up with Kavar sometime soon. For now, they need to get the heck off of Onderon, so they aren’t captured and executed by Vaklu’s forces. They head back to the Dxun moon, where Mandalore decides to join their quest, intending on using it as a way to start rebuilding the Mandalorian culture, under his leadership and that of Clan Ordo. With that, the new party, now numbering nine, leaves for Dantooine. Once on Dantooine, they discover that the rightful government in Khoonda, under Administer Adare, is threatened by rebellion from a group of mercenaries led by Azkul, a Mandalorian Wars veteran. They explore the ruins of the Jedi Enclave, where they find certain areas closed to them. Inside, they find a Jedi heritage disciple (an historian who studies Jedi lore) named Mical, who soon joins their party, owing to a sense of connection with Meetra that will slowly develop into a sort of innocent (non-sexual) love. When they leave the Enclave, they find that Master Vrook is being held by mercenaries loyal to Azkul. They save him, but by doing so, they spark Azkul into action in Khoonda. Vrook and Meetra work together with Adare’s forces to stop the insurrection. Vrook departs their company, and the heroes head off to their final “find the lost Jedi” planet, the Sith burial world of Korriban, site of the Sith Academy that was once run by Darth Revan and Malak, which now lies empty. On Korriban, they search through the Sith Academy ruins, only to find that Master Lonna Vash is dead. She was apparently captured and killed by the Academy’s automatic systems. Before leaving the world, Meetra follows a call through the Force and enters a secret tomb within a nearby shyrack cave. Inside, she faces visions from her own past. She relives the moment when Malak, still a Jedi at that point, recruited Jedi to fight with him and Revan in the Mandalorian Wars. She relives one of the intense battles of the war. Finally, she faces off with a vision of Darth Revan himself. More confident in her own past, and feeling that her Force connection has continued growing since the start of this adventure, especially after the cave experience, she and her companions set out for Onderon, from whence Master Kavar has sent a call for aid. It seems General Vaklu has declared all-out civil war and is trying to overthrow Queen Talia. Our heroes get as far as the Onderon system, but they land on Dxun first, hoping to find allies among the Mandalorians. After aiding the Mandalorians again, this time by entering Freedon Nadd’s crypt and stopping Sith agents from stealing artifacts and Force power from Nadd’s sarcophagus, the group of heroes are given support by Clan Ordo and head for Onderon’s capital city, Iziz. Once there, Meetra and her companions face Vaklu’s forces, plus Sith forces, before finally confronting the last of the enemies in the throne room, where Vaklu and Talia duel (both very good with a blade). Master Kavar enters, taking out most of the enemy forces, allowing Meetra to strike at Vaklu, taking him down, but convincing Talia to lock him up, rather than having him executed and making a martyr out of him. Finally, with the Onderon crisis averted, Meetra and her companions (who now also include Revan’s old droid, HK-47, who was in a storage area of the Ebon Hawk and is now fixed, thanks to parts Meetra has found along her travel) take off for Dantooine. Once they arrive, they enter the ruins of the Jedi Enclave, this time from a newly-opened entrance. While Kreia, Meetra’s only real mentor up to this point waits down the hall, Meetra meets with the three members of the Jedi Council who have assembled: Ell; Vrook; and Kavar. They confront her with the truth about what has happened. Meetra has an unusually-powerful ability to form Force bonds with other beings. This not only allows for relationships like those of a master and apprentice, but also acts to subtly manipulate others. In essence, the reason that Atton, Bao-Dur, Mical, Mira, Mandalore, and Visas follow her is that she is now bonded to them. What’s even more disturbing is that Meetra is still blind to the Force . . . but somehow, she is using it. It seems that at the final battle of the Mandalorian Wars at Malachor V, a horrible gravity well weapon was used against the Mandalorians. The immense amount of death caused by that weapon of mass destruction (no pun intended) caused a huge wound in the Force. Meetra, being bonded so easily to others, was bonded to the horror of that instant, which made her both incredibly powerful and incredibly prone to being destroyed by that attachment. To save her own mind and body, Meetra purposely shut herself off from the Force and retreated into the far reaches of space, only to return when hints of her past started to surface. When the Jedi Civil War ended, the Jedi saw terrible power in the hands of the Sith, and they decided to go underground, disbanding the Jedi Order, even as the shattered Sith did the same. It was the Jedi Council’s hopes that they could avoid allowing the Sith, or anyone else, from ever discovering and using that same bonding power that Meetra has developed. It would be power enough in the wrong hands to sway the balance of power in the galaxy, or utterly destroy it. That is, in part, why the Sith are after Meetra, aside from the notion of her as the “Last Jedi.” In point of fact, Meetra is still blind to the Force, but she senses it and uses it by drawing power and attunement from those around her, her companions. They are her link to the Force, not Meetra herself. Now, the Jedi Council sees that she is back and believes the Sith may capture her and learn of this deadly power. Thus, they intend to strip her of the Force in much the same fashion as Ulic Qel-Droma was blinded to it after the Sith War. Before they can do so, though, Kreia enters. She confronts the three Council members, telling them that they are hiding from truths of the Force by denying the use of Meetra’s power. They won’t listen to her, though, as she was banished from the Jedi Order herself for leaving during the Mandalorian Wars. She was the Jedi Master who once taught Revan as a Padawan learner. Eventually, after Revan’s turn and Malak’s death, she even became Sith (though she isn’t any longer) . . . and it is those powers that she now uses to kill three of the Council members and incapacitate Meetra . . . . When Meetra awakens, she returns to the Ebon Hawk to find that Atris’ handmaidens from Telos have come and captured Kreia to take her to Atris for execution. Meetra, believing that Kreia’s connection to her could mean death for both of them if Kreia were to die, races with her allies to Telos. Upon arrival, they find that Kreia is long gone, but her damage is done. Kreia was once Darth Traya, the so-called “Queen of Betrayal,” in the days after her banishment from the Jedi Order. It was Kreia who trained Darth Sion (the so-called “Lord of Pain”) as a Dark Lord of the Sith, but he betrayed her and cast her out, making her an exile from both Jedi and Sith. Now, though, the Sith studies of Jedi historian Atris have corrupted Atris far enough that Kreia has been able to corrupt Atris to the Dark Side, naming her the new Darth Traya. Meetra enters and confronts Atris (er, Traya), defeating her in a lightsaber duel. She lets Atris live, giving her a chance to seek redemption. Now, knowing that Kreia’s next move was to head for Telos, Meetra and her companions (minus Kreia, of course), charge off to Citadel Station, which they find besieged by Sith forces, with Republic cruisers under command of Carth Onasi taking on Sith ships in orbit. Luckily, reinforcements for Telos have arrived from Onderon, Dxun, and Dantooine. Meetra battles Sith forces throughout the station, managing to stop them from crashing the station into Telos itself. She, Mandalore, and Visas then take a shuttle and board the Sith flagship, Darth Nihilus’ personal vessel, the Ravager. The Ravager had been one of the vessels at Malachor V, and Nihilus (who seems to be a spiritually and physically twisted survivor of the battle there) had used the Dark Side to free the vessel from orbit and escape the planet. Once aboard, the trio of heroes, along with a few Mandalorians, set charges to blow up the vessel when they make their escape. They also face a Dark Side-tainted Tobin, left alive to help lead this assault by Kreia. They are able to turn him back toward the light to save Onderon, since Nihilus won’t stop with Telos. They then head for the bridge to confront Darth Nihilus (the so-called “Lord of Hunger”). It seems that Nihilus must feed on the deaths of other Force-users in order to survive. Unfortunately, Kreia’s false information about more than one Jedi (other than Atris, that is) on Telos has led Nihilus and his forces all the way out here to Telos for nothing, allowing Nihilus to be weakened. In the battle that follows, Visas, Mandalore, and Meetra kill Nihilus. Now, only Darth Sion and Kreia herself remain. To face them, Meetra and her companions must take the Ebon Hawk to the place where this whole tragic mess began . . . Malachor V. On Malachor V, Meetra enters a hidden Sith training structure on the world, Trayus Academy (named after Darth Traya, it seems). Meanwhile, as she makes his way into the academy, Mira searches a bit on her own and finds herself face to face with Hanharr, who was saved for this moment, so that he could slaughter Meetra’s companions. She is able to defeat him, though, and the companions are safe. Back inside the Trayus Academy, Meetra battles through legions of Sith warriors in various stages of training before finally coming face to face with Darth Sion. The two duel, but Sion just keeps getting up, since he is technically already dead, only being kept alive by the power of the Dark Side. Eventually, Meetra bests him and proves that Kreia will only betray him, so Sion allows himself to let go in the Dark Side and to finally die for the last time. Meetra then enters the Trayus Core, deep within the heart of Malachor V, where he finds Kreia. Meetra will not allow Kreia to use the power of Malachor V, the power that she herself is connected to, and by extension, which Kreia is now connected to, to attack the Republic. In fact, Meetra has already had Bao-Dur send his remote (followed by the deadly G0-T0, but to no major consequence just yet) to the wreckage of four downed Republic warships on the planet's surface, which are set to go critical and reactivate the same destructive power that wiped out the warriors on Malachor V the first time. Kreia explains that she hates the Force, as it is nothing but a manipulative puppeteer. She wants to destroy the Force, or blind the galaxy to it, and with the power that can be drawn from Malachor V with Meetra’s abilities, along with the technique that Meetra had used to cut herself off from the force in the first place, she intends to find a way to blind the entire galaxy to the Force, forever removing such notions as “Jedi” and “Sith.” The two duel, first with Force powers, and then with lightsabers, as Kreia uses the Force to use three floating sabers against Meetra. Finally, with Kreia nearly defeated, Kreia gives her a glimpse of what is to come and more truths about what has taken place. Atton will continue to be his old self. Mira will give up bounty hunting. Mandalore (Canderous Ordo) will reunite the Mandalorians until their splintering and defeat millennia later. Visas will return to the ruins of Karran. Mical will become one of the founding members of a rebuilt Jedi Order. She can see nothing of Bao-Dur or the droids. The Republic will fall eventually, but the fall will take a millennium (obviously from the Battle of Ruusan to the rise of Palpatine). As for Meetra, she must now decide to leave Known Space, just as Revan did. Revan had discovered great power on Malachor V, when he was studying to find Korriban. He realized, though, that Korriban and Malachor V were the edge of something bigger. Somewhere in the Unknown Regions, the remnants of the original Sith Empire, the one thought utterly destroyed by the Great Hyperspace War over 1,000 years earlier, remains, and it may be the greatest threat that the Republic will ever face. Revan left to try to find a way to defeat that threat, and if she is true to her calling and her feelings, Meetra knows that with her power, she must leave as well. Finally, Kreia is killed, and Meetra and her remaining companions escape from Malachor V, just as the explosions of the buried vessels wipes out everything on the planet’s already-ravaged surface. In the aftermath, Meetra boards Citadel Station and is called before Admiral Carth Onasi. Carth tells Meetra of his service with Revan and that Revan had asked him to stay in the Republic when he had left for the Unknown Regions. Carth has continued to protect the Republic ever since. If Meetra ever finds Revan in his own self-imposed exile from Known Space, Carth wishes her to tell Revan that he is continuing to follow those orders. As Meetra leaves the room, Bastila Shan, Revan’s former love and fellow Jedi Knight emerges. Both she and Carth wonder whatever truly became of Revan. Meetra will soon meet with Bastila, learn the truth of what happened to Revan from T3-M4, then head into the Unknown Regions in search of him . . . In the wake of this conflict, it comes to be known as the so-called “Sith Civil War” (a counterpoint to the “Jedi Civil War” five years earlier).

The Sith Lords

NOTE: Just like with the original KOTOR game, you can hit several of the worlds in any order you wish, and your character can be male or female and take on whatever name you give him/her. The character has since been confirmed as female and given an official name, Meetra Surik. The gender of your character does play a role in the story, as it determines whether or not you end up with the Handmaiden (if you’re male) or the Disciple (if you’re female) on your quest. This summary also assumes the Light Side endings of both KOTOR and KOTOR2 as the correct endings (as fits with other material like the Revan novel). That alignment also determines whether Mira (Light Side) or Hanharr (Dark Side) are with you. Also, I have not mentioned some of the side quests in the game, as they aren’t essential to the overall story. If I covered them all, the summary would be even more gigantic than it already is!

- During the standoff on Malachor V, G0-T0 is tracked down by its own HK-50 assassin droids (reprogrammed by HK-47 at their droid factory on Telos), which had been programmed to kill Meetra Surik. In the standoff that ensues, G0-T0 is destroyed by the combined HK-50 droids and HK-47.

(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)

- In the wake of his participation in the conflict on Malachor V, HK-47 will eventually come to survive for several millennia by storing his consciousness in various electronic systems.
Meeta Surik gives HK-47 to the Jedi Council for safekeeping, but the droid’s programming to find and assist Revan overpowers him again. He heads out into the galaxy to once again find Revan, and the Jedi begin searching for the droid.

In the wake of the Sith Civil War, the reviving Jedi Order and the Republic wipe out remaining Sith adherents and their known academies.

Three years after Revan disappeared in the Unknown Regions (where he was captured on Nathema and has been a prisoner of Darth Nyriss of the Sith Empire since then), Meeta Surik visits Bastila Shan, who has finally come out of hiding with her son (and Revan’s), Vaner, who is now three years old. Meeta reveals everything T3-M4 was able to record on Nathema regarding what happened to Revan, along with how T3-M4 was able to fix the Ebon Hawk, then sought out Bastila (who was in hiding) and joined Meeta when Bastila could not be found. Meeta intends to find her old mentor and receives both Bastila’s blessing and the Mandalorian mask that Revan had worn as a Sith Lord. She had kept it from him, fearing what seeing or touching it might reawaken in Revan from his past. Now she wants Meeta to give it to him when she finds him. Bastila also gives her a holorecording of her son’s last birthday to give Revan. Meeta and T3-M4 head out in the Ebon Hawk to find Revan. They visit Nathema, where T3-M4 gathers old data from what’s left of the databanks in a government building. They use clues in there to find coordinates for Dromund Kaas and head there to continue their investigation. On Dromund Kaas, Revan, a prisoner for three years, is attempting to convince Scourge (subtly) to free him and become his ally by suggesting that Nyriss and her allies are afraid to go up against the Sith Emperor, so they will have to do so themselves. Scourge, meanwhile, is intrigued by Revan’s talk of being able to see visions of the future, which Scourge and many modern Sith have not experienced. It is during one interrogation session when Revan (after giving some cryptic false projections of them working together one day and such) that Revan has a new vision of Meeta and realizes that she is, in fact, coming to save him. When Meeta reaches Dromund Kaas, she goes through a few steps to arrange a meeting with someone who might be able to get her in touch with the Sith in T3-M4’s recording of Revan’s capture. The person she is put in touch with is actually Sechel, who warns Scourge about someone possibly planning to lure him into a trap. Scourge takes the bait, though, and meets with Meeta. When he does, he realizes that she is the person Revan claimed he saw a vision of coming to help him. He sees this as a sign that much of Revan’s falsehoods over the last three years are actually true, and Revan should be his ally. With Murtog dead while trying to attack Meeta before Scourge realized who she was, Scourge visits Sechel, gets all of his files that implicate Nyriss and her co-conspirators as being traitors to the Empire, then kills Sechel to cover his tracks. In order to rescue Revan, Scourge returns to Meeta with a plan to go to the Emperor himself. Scourge goes to the Emperor’s citadel, where he tells guard Captain Yarri that the Emperor is in danger. He is allowed in to see the Emperor and gives him the files from Sechel. Yarri will check the data, and they intend to move against Nyriss soon. They send Scourge back to Nyriss’ estate so that he does not raise suspicion. The Emperor’s troops will know not to harm Scourge in their assault. Entering the estate with Meeta as a “new slave” and T3-M4 fit with a fake restraining bolt, Scourge gets the trio into the dungeon, where they free Revan. Meeta gives him his old mask, which ignites more memories for Revan. They are stopped by Nyriss herself, but when she attacks, Revan confronts her, now wearing his mask again. He refers to himself as “Revan reborn” and uses her own Force lightning to kill her. Rearmed with his lightsaber (thanks to Scourge), Revan and his three allies escape, even as the Emperor’s forces decimate those loyal to Nyriss and her fellow conspirators. Scourge scouts around and learns that the entire Dark Council has been killed (to send a message, even though only five out of the twelve were implicated in the data), and martial law has been declared. Revan also shares his own memories that the mask helped awaken. He remembers that he and Malak had tried to get close to the Emperor to stop him, but it was a trap set by the Emperor, so that they could be dominated and head back to the Republic as the vanguard of a Sith assault. They apparently were able to fight his control enough that they believed they were Sith Lords in their own right, rather than part of something larger. When they did not report back, the Emperor must have believed that they had failed, so he was biding his time to build up a greater force to attack the Republic later. Both Revan (when he was there before) and Scourge (during his meeting to turn over the files) have touched the Emperor’s mind. Both know how mad he is. Together, Scourge, Revan, Meetra, and T3-M4 must find a way to bring him down before he can use the Dark Council’s destruction and a lie about the conspirators being tied to the Republic to rally the people for a new attack on the Republic or a new Dark Side ritual to use their life force to become even more powerful.

Before they can go to the citadel, Scourge has his own vision of them being taken out by the Emperor when they try to bring him down. Revan seems to recognize that they might fail, but he knows that even if they do, their move on the Emperor is likely to cause him to be more cautious and hold off. Any new time they can buy for the Republic to be stronger before such an attack would be helpful in the long run. Revan and Meetra are willing to sacrifice themselves if it keeps the Republic safe. They arrive at the citadel and take on some of the Emperor’s guards (including Captain Yarri), then confront the man himself. The Emperor, however, is far too powerful. He destroys T3-M4 and gravely wounds Revan while Scourge and Meetra battle his guards. When Meetra goes to help, Scourge follows, but he has another Force intuition. He knows that a Jedi will rise to bring down the Emperor, but it will not be any of those present in this encounter. Knowing that someone must live to learn more about the Emperor’s plots to act against him later, Scourge stabs Meetra with his lightsaber and claims that he was there to save the Emperor. For this, he hopes he will be awarded a seat on the Dark Council when it is reformed. Instead, the Emperor uses a dark ritual to infuse him with the life force of others, much as he had done with himself, and Darth Scourge becomes a brand new, “immortal” (not invulnerable) being known as the Emperor’s Wrath. As for Meetra and Revan, Meetra dies, but Revan is kept alive in a cell. The Emperor feeds off of the life force of Revan and engages in mental warfare, trying to learn from him. Meetra’s spirit, however, does not fade into the Force at her death. She remains linked to Revan and, unbeknownst to him, her spirit feeds Force energy to Revan, keeping him alive and able to fight back. Unbeknownst to the Emperor, the connection goes both ways, and Revan is learning more and more about the Emperor’s plots and the Empire. Revan will remain his prisoner, engaging in this mental battle, for the next three centuries . . . (To be continued below . . . )

*NOTE: Most of the references for this part of Revan put it three years after the first part, yet in one place, it refers to it being four years. I have assumed the huge bulk of the dates are correct, not the one that differs.

- In the wake of his encounter with Revan, the Dark Emperor (Darth Vitiate) creates the position of Emperor’s Voice to host his disembodied spirit in times of need.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
- Five years after the destruction of the Jedi enclave on Dantooine, Jedi Deesra Luur Jada records a Holocron entry that explores the fall and redemption of Revan, along with the events of the Jedi Civil War and Sith Civil War. Deesra sees hope for rebuilding in the redemption of Revan. (To be continued below . . .)
  (Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)
- As the Jedi and Sith Civil Wars wind down, the Hutt Cartel acquires what is left of the Exchange, effectively ending this incarnation of the organization.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

Unseen, Unheard (SWT24 short story: Chris Avellone)

Unseen, Unheard (SWT24 short story: Chris Avellone)

Knights of the Old Republic [continued] (video game series: LucasArts)
The Sith Lords (video game: LucasArts)
The Ebon Hawk
Peragus
Telos
Nar Shaddaa*
Dxun*
Onderon*
Dxun [continued]*
Dantooine*
Korriban*
Onderon [continued]*
Dantooine [continued]*
Telos [continued]*
Ravager
Malachor V

*NOTE: You can tackle the Nar Shaddaa, Onderon, Dantooine, and Korriban quests in KOTOR2 in whatever order you like. (You must face Dxun immediately before and after Onderon, though.) The order of the first three and last two locations are predetermined. In the summary above, I have assumed an order for the four order-changeable quests, which may or may not fit how you end up playing the game.

The Old Republic [continued] (novel series: Sean Williams & Paul S. Kemp & Drew Karpyshyn)
Revan [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
Part Two
Chapters 17 – 29

3,951 – 3,900 BBY
- At some point after the Jedi Order’s disbanding, the Order is re-established with the Republic’s support.
  (conjecture based on early reports on Knights of the Old Republic II: The Sith Lords)
- Many decades after the destruction of the Exchange, the organization is rebuilt, virtually from scratch, by willing criminals.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

3,950 BBY
- The planet Grizzmalt’s new queen, Elsinore del Tasia, begins a decades-long colonization effort to spread the people of Grizzmalt to new worlds.
  (conjecture based on Galactic Battlegrounds)
- Among the fourteen colonies sent out by Queen Elsinore del Tasia of Grizzmalt is the colony of Renatasia that will become “lost” and eventually become part of the Centrality.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

3,949 BBY
- After ten years, the war on Altiria/Anarris is largely over, continuing only with minor sea combat war.*
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn. This assumes that this war being at the time of the Jedi Civil War means that it coincides with the Jedi Civil War’s beginning. It lasts for 10 years.

3,946 BBY
- A group of Aratech G0-T0 planning droids start a rebellion against the Republic. They take over sixteen planets in the Gordian Reach and rename their territory “400100500260026.”
  When the territory secedes from the Republic, Supreme Chancellor Cressa refuses to grant political recognition to droids (especially after such a bloody takeover), so the Republic military liberates the territory, returning it to the Republic. In the wake of this crisis, the company that produced the droids, Aratech, is nearly ruined. As a result, research into Aratech’s BRT supercomputer takes a major step backward, and the BRT won’t be completed and launched for public purchase until 200 BBY.
3,946 – 3,900 BBY

- In the era following the Great Droid Revolution, the use of war droids in the Sith War, and the G0-T0 rebellion, the Republic cracks down on the droid industry. Droid companies are forced to pay massive damages for these events, until the Republic backs off in light of the need for droids in society. New manufacturing laws are enacted, which put a cap on how sophisticated a droid brain can be, thereby stunting industry development for millennia. Droid buyers must now obtain ownership licenses and wipe droid memories regularly. The Droid Statutes are also enacted in this era, promising harsh punishments for owners whose droids break the law.

(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)

3,901 BBY

- After fifty years, Bastila Shan has raised Vaner Shan, the son of her marriage to Revan, without him. At a family gathering with Vaner (who has no Force ability), his wife Emess, and their children, Reesa and Bress. Vaner is running for Supreme Chancellor. Bastila still believes Revan is alive somewhere, but wherever he is, the darkness he expected to attack the Republic has not arrived, suggesting that he succeeded in his mission, even if he never returned home.

(Revan)

- The life of the Revanchist (Revan) will eventually be referred to as the Revan Mythologies (compiled by Jedi Master Orpin), which some will believe are mere legend.

(conjecture based on Nexus of Power)

The Old Republic [continued] (novel series: Sean Williams & Paul S. Kemp & Drew Karpyshyn)

Revan [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)

Epilogue

3,900 BBY

- When a lush planet (later known as Naboo) is discovered by a Kwilaan (a Republic Scout), Queen Elsinore Del Tasia of Grizzmalt sends three ships (the Mother Vima, the Beneficent Tasia, and the Constant) to the planet. They establish their first settlement, Theed, but are soon engaged in warfare with the native Gungans. As this conflict ensues, the humans (who have called the planet Nabu after one of their deities and will come to be called the Naboo as the planet takes an updated version of the name itself) choose a woman to lead them. She takes the title of Queen, but makes it clear that while the name suggests a hereditary bloodline, she wishes the position of leadership in their new society to be one based on democracy and elections. Thus, her actions have set up the notion of an elected monarch, which will come to be how the Naboo choose their leaders after her death. Early in these days, the Royal Security Force is formed.

- As the first colony ships arrive at Naboo, a Gungan guardian of an Elder statue senses the new arrivals during his meditation and looks up to see a gray tear coming from the statue’s stone face. That tear becomes an artifact later known as the Tear of the Elders, and it carries a strong connection to the Force.

(conjecture based on Nexus of Power)

3,830 BBY

- Karagga the Hutt (AKA Karagga the Unyielding) becomes the Supreme Mogul of the Hutt Cartel. *

(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*

*NOTE: He has ruled the Hutt Cartel for “nearly two centuries,” which I have interpreted here as 190 years, as of TOR.
3,837 BBY
- Bowdaar is born on Kashyyyk. He will be taken to be a slave when he is just a child and be a slave for 100 years.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
*NOTE: He is 197 in TOR. His actual years of slavery are not specified, only the duration.

3,809 BBY
- When shipments from the mining operations on 244Core cease, the Systino crime syndicate investigates. They find that a massive meteor storm has devastated most of the southern hemisphere of the planet and thrown so much debris into the atmosphere to render it uninhabitable for centuries, leading the syndicate to desert the planet.*
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*
*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn. This takes place 200 years after the planet's discovery.

3,800 BBY
- Tyl the Deplorable, known as a military genius, becomes the first leader to conquer the entire planet of Trunska. Tyl then turns his army into a police force, and suddenly discovers that the funds which were going into the planetary wars waged by the Trunsks are quite substantial. Tyl begins saving them, and eventually develops plans to foster the creation of new technologies.
  (conjecture based on The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #14 via TimeTales, verbatim)

3,790 BBY
- T7-O1 is built.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
*NOTE: This is 150 years prior to TOR.

3,761 BBY
- Gifted Jedi Padawan Eison Gynt and his Jedi Master, Barel Ovair, travel to Yavin IV to explore the ancient Sith temples of Naga Sadow that remain there. They encounter the Massassi and engage them in battle. Ovair returns to the Jedi Order, claiming that Gynt has been killed on Yavin IV. Unbeknownst to anyone in the Jedi Order, Ovair is actually an agent of the Sith Empire’s leader, the Dark Emperor of the Sith. The Dark Emperor believes that the ancient Sith spirits on Yavin IV and elsewhere could be a threat to him during the war he plans to ignite with the Republic, so he has sent Ovair to Yavin IV to destroy the spirit of Naga Sadow. Gynt is still alive on Yavin IV, but he has been taken over by the spirit of Naga Sadow and drove Ovair from the moon.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic, the timeline presented on StarWarsTheOldRepublic.com and information provided directly by Leland Chee via email)*
*NOTE: See the note with Gynt's return in 3,756 BBY below.

3,758 BBY
- Qawohl is born on Byss. He will later be known as Teneb Kel's slave, “Maggot.”
  (conjecture based on Burn the Future)

3,756 BBY
- Jedi Padawan Eison Gynt, now possessed by the spirit of long-dead Sith Lord Naga Sadow, returns from Yavin IV and hunts down his former Jedi Master (and spy for the Dark Emperor of the Sith Empire), Barel Ovair. With Sadow’s abilities, Gynt tries to kill Ovair, but Ovair is finally able to kill Gynt (and destroy the spirit of Naga Sadow), thus completing his mission for the Dark Emperor, even if it did take several years from when he first set out for Yavin IV.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic, the timeline presented on
3,740 BBY
• An entrepreneur cyberforms the Tytun 4 moon into a huge databank to listen and record all communications in the galaxy. It is operated by droids and protected by contracted mercenaries. It will eventually run out of storage, so the entrepreneur gathers starship wrecks for their data storage use and puts a fleet of them in orbit of Tytun 4.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
*NOTE: This is about 100 years prior to TOR.

3,716 BBY
• Darth Vowrawn is born.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
*NOTE: He is 76 in TOR.

3,710 BBY
• The well-respected Sith Lord Darth Ikoral, a Sith Pureblood, is obsessed with finding other pureblooded Sith that left Korriban centuries ago. He believes such pureblooded Sith (like himself) are genetically superior to other species. He finally convinces the Dark Council to allow him to take an expeditionary fleet into the galaxy in search of these “lost” Sith. He disappears into the galaxy on his quest for the next seventy years.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
*NOTE: This is 70 years before TOR.

3,709 BBY
• Satele Shan is born to Tasiele Shan. Tasiele had been a Jedi, but she followed the unorthodox views of her ancestors, Bastila Shan and her husband Revan, in believing that attachment and marriage were appropriate for Jedi. For this, she was exiled. Years from now, political pressures will have subsided, and the Jedi Order will seek out Tasiele, but she will already be gone (presumed dead). They bring Satele into the Jedi Order, allowing her to have access to journals left by Tasiele for her daughter.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
*NOTE: She is 69 in TOR.

3,707 BBY
• Nasan Godera is born on Balmorra.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
*NOTE: He is 67 in TOR.

3,706 BBY
• Hedarr Soongh becomes the youngest bounty hunter to ever win the Great Hunt.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
*NOTE: This is “over 65 years” before TOR, which I have interpreted as 66 years.

3,705 BBY
• Eckard Lokin is born, possibly on Dromund Kaas.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
*NOTE: The character is believed to be 65 in TOR.
• Freia Kallea, a daughter in House Kallea who refuses to be married off to another House and instead sees her destiny as among the stars, is beloved by her best friend, Arhul Habea, an errand boy for House Brentioch. She rebuffs his advances, intending to remain single to pursue her dreams, not realizing that Arhul is actually Sival Brentioch, the seneschal of House Brentioch. Continuing to hide his true identity, Sival arranges a commission for Freia, along with a ship, the Hope. She is tasked with linking several separate small hyperspace routes into one larger route. She takes to the stars, charting a route through the dangerous Crombach Nebula during this first year of her journeys.*

(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

NOTE: This is the story as it is retold in the opera The Kallea Cycle, which is produced millennia later. It is likely that some liberties have been taken in the story, as noted in The Essential Atlas.

3,704 BBY
- Having secured a treaty with the Nalroni of Celanon, Freia Kallea also manages to chart a reliable route to connect Serenno and Telos. In doing this, she frustrates rivals Duros Banu Hydia and Neimoidian duo Thoax and Farge Ossax. Upon returning to Brentaal, Sival Brentioch requests to meet with her, intending on revealing that he is her secret benefactor and her best friend, Arhul Habea, a secret identity he has known her under. She refuses to meet with Sival, expecting another marriage proposal from a grand House, as she has never met Sival. As “Arhul,” Sival meets with her, dejected. He keeps his secret and asks what she will do now. Her answer is to continue her commission to blaze a new unified hyperspace trail.*

(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

NOTE: This is the story as it is retold in the opera The Kallea Cycle, which is produced millennia later. It is likely that some liberties have been taken in the story, as noted in The Essential Atlas.

3,703 – 3,702 BBY
- Neimoidian merchants pressure navigators Thoax and Farge Ossax to take out Freia Kallea, their chief rival in hyperspace navigating in the region of what will become the Hydian Way. They try to hire Freia’s other rival, Banu Hydia, to kill her, but he refuses. Instead, he tries to warn her of the dangers she is facing, but she fails to heed his warning. After meeting with Banu to hear his warning, she is attacked by Gran thugs hired by the Ossaxes on Malastare. She is held captive, but soon freed by Banu. She returns to Brentaal, where she is met by her longtime friend (and secret benefactor) “Arhul Habea” (actually Sival Brentioch), who debates sharing his true identity with her finally but decides against it. Having blazed a hyperspace route to connect Denon to Malastare, Freia is ready for the next leg of her exploration. She returns to Malastare and continues on her way, but the Hope is crippled by the Ossaxes, forcing her to crash on Nuvar. There, she is stranded for six years.*

(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

NOTE: This is the story as it is retold in the opera The Kallea Cycle, which is produced millennia later. It is likely that some liberties have been taken in the story, as noted in The Essential Atlas.

3,703 BBY
- Around this time, Oren, future agent of the Exchange, is born.*

(conjecture based on Deceived)

NOTE: Assuming he is not changing his voice, Zeerid Korr believes Oren is in his late forties or early fifties (which I have rounded to 50 years old) in Deceived.

3,702 BBY
- Ngani Zho is born. He is soon taken to the Jedi Temple.*

(conjecture based on The Lost Suns)

NOTE: Zho refers to 60 years of experience during The Lost Suns. Assuming that means that he is 60 years old, this puts his birthdate here . . . assuming that The Lost Suns is actually in 3,642 BBY.
- Darth Marr is born.*

(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

NOTE: He is 62 in TOR.

3,701 – 3,699 BBY
- While Freia Kallea is stranded by the Ossax brothers on Nuvar, others chart the Seswenna Expansion of the trade routes that she has charted, connecting Malastare to Clak’dor.*
The Star Wars Timeline Gold: Legends Timeline, Vol. 1

192

*NOTE: This is the story as it is retold in the opera The Kallea Cycle, which is produced millennia later. It is likely that some liberties have been taken in the story, as noted in The Essential Atlas.

- As Malastare becomes a major trading world on what will be called the “Hydian Way,” Neo-Tayan Gran from Kinyen begin colonizing in greater numbers. Their sheer numbers convince the native Dugs that this is not colonization but an invasion. Given the Gran supporting the Republic and the Dugs not doing so, a war for dominance ensues, from which the Gran emerge victorious. The Gran population will soon exceed that of the native Dugs, and the Gran will dominate the planet. The Dugs will become virtual slaves to the Gran, which causes the Gran of Kinyen, whose principles are against such warfare and slavery, to essentially disown the Gran of Malastare, considering them to be almost a different species entirely.*

*NOTE: Strongholds of Resistance suggests that Gran colonizing is only about a 1,500 year process as of ANH, but that does not fit with all other references to such colonization in other sources.

3,700 BBY

- Veradun (the future Darth Malgus) is born on Dromund Kaas.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
  *NOTE: The character is 60 in TOR.

- Jace Malcom is born on Barcaria.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
  *NOTE: This that Jace joins the military in 3,682 BBY, which allows us to put his birthdate here, since he joined as soon as he came of age.

- The Moff (AKA “Moff Old Guy” to Vette) that will eventually be romantically involved with Tivva, is born.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: This is 60 years prior to TOR.

3,697 BBY

- Darth Baras is born.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
  *NOTE: He is 57 in TOR.

3,696 BBY

- Elin Garza is born.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

- After six years stranded on Nuvor, Freia Kallea is presumed dead, though her friends and her secret benefactor, Sival Brentioch (whom she knows as her lowly best friend Arhul Habea), refuse to believe she is truly dead. Thoax and Farge Ossax, who are responsible for Freia being missing, are now the heads of a Neimoidian trade cartel, having given up hyperspace navigation. Freia’s friendly rival Banu Hydia finds Freia on Nuvor, and she is worse off for having been living in the wild for six years. She returns to Brentaal with him, but she swears him to secrecy, disguising herself as a Bureau of Ships and Services hierophant to see how her family and “Arhul” are reacting to her “death.” She then returns to space, convincing Banu to join her in finding a hyperspace route to connect the rest of the trade route she has been charting (which now reaches the Rimma Trade Route) to the Corellian Trade Spine as well.*
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)*
  *NOTE: This is the story as it is retold in the opera The Kallea Cycle, which is produced millennia later. It is likely that some liberties have been taken in the story, as noted in The Essential Atlas.

3,695 BBY

- Teneb Kel (the future Darth Thanaton) is born.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
  *NOTE: He is 55 in TOR.

3,694 BBY

- Tyresius Lokai is born on Coruscant (allegedly).*
(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*

*NOTE: He is 54 in TOR.

- Banu Hydia and Freia Kallea chart a hyperspace route to connect Triton near Clak’dor to Terminus, then to connect Terminus to Imynusoph. They have succeeded in connecting hyperspace routes from Farana and Bonadan all the way to connect with the Rimma Trade Route and Corellian Trade Spine. Seeking revenge on Thoax and Farge Ossax for stranding her on Nuvar, Freia lures them to Imynusoph, where she tries to have the natives take out the brothers when she reveals himself. As the brothers bring in their own Gran thugs, the natives decide to turn on all of the offworlders, instigating a three-way conflict. Sival Brentioch (finally told by Banu that Freia is actually alive) arrives with a force from Brentaal. They win the day, saving Freia, but Banu is killed. As he lay dying, Sival finally reveals that he is Freia’s secret benefactor and her best friend “Arhul Habea.” They return to Brentaal to bury Banu.*

(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)*

*NOTE: This is the story as it is retold in the opera The Kallea Cycle, which is produced millennia later. It is likely that some liberties have been taken in the story, as noted in The Essential Atlas.

3,693 BBY
- Having connected the Dustig Trace, the Sprizen End Run, and dozens of other one-hop routes into a single hyperspace route, Freia Kallea has finally connected those routes to the Rimma Trade Route and Corellian Trade Spine. She chooses to name her new route, now made public knowledge, after her former rival and friend who gave his life in an effort to save her, Banu Hydia. The route becomes known as the Hydian Way.*

(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)*

*NOTE: This is the story as it is retold in the opera The Kallea Cycle, which is produced millennia later. It is likely that some liberties have been taken in the story, as noted in The Essential Atlas.

3,691 BBY
- Rycus Kilran is born into a prestigious human military family on Dromund Kaas.*

(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*

*NOTE: He is 51 in TOR.

3,690 BBY
- Bowdaar battles the fabled rancor beast known as the “Fangmaster” in a one-on-one battle that lasts nearly 12 hours beneath the surface of Ryloth. He wins the battle, but the cave system they were fighting within collapses, killing over 70 spectators, including the fight’s organizer. In the wake of this battle, Bowdaar eats a hearty meal and sleeps for 72 hours straight.*

(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*

*NOTE: This is 50 years before TOR.

- While studying the tropical rifts on Belsavis, the Republic discovers an ancient Rakatan prison on the planet, including terrifying ancient prisoners and security droids. The Republic intends to keep an eye on this prison and sets up its own prison, the Tomb, nearby. The Tomb is to be used only in cases for the worst of the worst when execution is impractical or impossible. The Star Cabal pulls strings to have Megasecurity Ward 23 created and then immediately sealed.*

(conjecture based on The Old Republic Explorer’s Guide and The Old Republic)*

*NOTE: This is 50 years before TOR.

- Sometime many years prior to the Battle of Alderaan, during which Darth Malgus is injured and forced to wear a breather in later years, the young Veradun (who will become Malgus) is treated to a last handful of lessons from his adoptive father about the nature of life before he is sent off to Dromund Kaas to begin his Sith training.*

(The Third Lesson)*

*NOTE: This assumes that Veradun was 10 years old when he left for the Sith Academy, since in-game comments on Hutta (in a different situation) suggest that individuals enter the Sith Academy at no later than 10 – 12 years of age.

The Third Lesson [flashback] (SWI124 short story: Paul S. Kemp)
The Third Lesson [flashback] (SWI124 short story: Paul S. Kemp)
3,688 BBY
- Around this time, Aryn Leneer is born on Balmorra. She is found to have Force sensitivity and is brought to the Jedi Temple on Coruscant. She will eventually be the Padawan of Ven Zallow.*
  (conjecture based on Deceived)
*NOTE: Aryn is in her mid-thirties in Deceived. I have rounded to 35 years old in that story.

3,685 BBY
- Darth Jadus is born.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
*NOTE: He is believed to be 45 in TOR.

3,684 BBY
- Jedi Master Bestros convinces young Padawan Gnost-Dural to begin keeping a journal, given his interest in history and the Jedi Archives.
  (The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural)
  The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural (novel: Rob Chestney)
  On the History of the Jedi Order
  21359.76.512 Entry

3,682 BBY
- Around this time, Jace Malcom enlists in the Republic Army, now that he is of age. His first posting is to the Republic forces who have the often boring duty of guarding the old Sith world of Korriban. In one of his first missions, he rescues a team of archaeologists (single-handedly) from k’lor’slugs. He will be a corporal by the time his short time on Korriban ends with the return of the Sith Empire.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
*NOTE: This assumes a rather short time for these events, leading up to the events of the Return trailer. No date is given in The Old Republic Encyclopedia.
- Around this time, in the years leading up to the Great Galactic War, Darth Mekhis works on developing the Fury-class Interceptor for the Sith Empire.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)
- Padawan Gnost-Dural begins studying the origins of the Jedi Order on Tython and in later periods.
  (The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural)
  The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)
  On the History of the Jedi Order [continued]
  21361.21.768 Entry
  21361.57.139 Entry
  21361.62.033 First Entry
  21361.62.033 Second Entry

3,681 BBY
- The Sith Empire makes its move on the Republic. One of its first targets is the ancient Sith world of Korriban (having rediscovered its location due to the actions of Darths Revan and Malak). They strike quickly against the Republic’s orbital station at Korriban, where Jedi Master Kao Cen Darach, Padawan Satele Shan, and trooper Corporal Jace Malcom have just caught smuggler Nico Okarr with a hold full of Sith artifacts he was planning to escape with and sell. When the Sith vessels emerge from hyperspace and attack, Darach knows they must warn the Republic of the Sith Empire’s return, but Jace knows that their shuttles won’t outrun the Sith starfighters. That leaves Okarr’s ship as their best bet. They get to the hangar, where the ship is damaged, but spaceworthy. A Sith ship lands, revealing Sith Lord Vindican and his apprentice, Malgus. While Darach battles both Sith in a losing battle to buy them time to escape, the others join T7-O1 on Okarr's ship and escape, fighting through Sith starfighters. On the station, Darach incapacitates Vindican, but he cannot finish the job before Malgus engages him again, killing the Jedi Master. The ship escapes, but they will not be in time to warn the Republic about the Sith Empire, which they will soon learn about in reports from the Tingel Arm. As for Vindican, Malgus kills his wounded Sith Master. Korriban is now back in Sith hands, and they rebuild a new Sith Academy on the remnants of the one set up by Revan and Malak.

(conjecture based on The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural, Return trailer for The Old Republic, and The Old Republic Explorer’s Guide)

- Padawan Gnost-Dural is promoted to the rank of Jedi Knight on the same day that news arrives from the Tingel Arm. Several unidentified vessels have entered Republic space. With their identity unknown, Republic diplomatic vessels approach to make contact, only to be destroyed. A fleet is dispatched to respond accordingly, but they are already flying into a trap when word of the identity of the attackers (the returned Sith Empire) arrives from Korriban, which was hit earlier. The Sith have already made connections with governments in the Dalonbian sector, who now turn on the fleet as it arrives. The fleet is scattered and forced to retreat as far as Mirial (or, in some cases, even farther). *

(The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural)

NOTE: Even though this is dated in very late in 21,363 on the digital calendar in the journal (suggesting late 3,680 BBY), it must be late this year instead (3,681 BBY), given that all other dates put the Sith Empire’s return here. This is an issue that will be compounded in the next set of entries from the journal below.

- Having revealed themselves to the Republic, the Sith immediately begin an assault on Republic allies in the Aparo Sector, which falls before a Republic fleet can arrive. Having also established Sith-influenced governments on Belkadan, Serpidal, and Ruuria, those worlds openly turn on the Republic, trapping Republic fleet ships nearby in what is all of a sudden enemy territory. As the Republic withdraws its forces from the Tingel Arm entirely, the Sith strike throughout the Outer Rim, taking out the Sluis Van Shipyards, taking over the resources of the Minos Cluster, and blockading the Rimma Trade Route. The Republic attempts to respond by calling a special Senate meeting that includes the Jedi, but politics win out over practicality, and many systems refuse to go along with any plans that don’t protect their constituents at the cost of other worlds. In a sense, it becomes every world for themselves. If not for courageous military leaders and Jedi who do not wait for orders but instead take the fight to the Sith, the Sith Empire might have toppled the Republic right then and there. Instead, the fight to protect the Republic from this centuries-old plot of conquest begins. The conflict will become known as the Great Galactic War.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic, the timeline presented on StarWarsTheOldRepublic.com and information provided directly by Leland Chee via email)

NOTE: This event takes place 28 BTC on the Treaty of Coruscant calendar.

- With the Great Galactic War and the return of the Sith Empire to prominence, it becomes increasingly difficult to gather reliable intelligence throughout the galaxy, especially from Sith territory. This leads many intelligence agencies and corporations, such as Strategic Information Service, to spend as much time piecing together bits of information as gathering those bits of information in the first place.

(conjecture based on Fatal Alliance)

- Shortly after the start of the Great Galactic War, Elin Garza lies about her age (since she is only 15) and enlists in the Republic Army. When she eventually reaches the rank of lieutenant (sometime in the next eight years), she will be given command of a full platoon in the 45th Infantry Division.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

- Shortly after the start of the Great Galactic War, refugees begin seeing safe haven on Mirial, which the Mirialans welcome, but many Mirialans, expecting the Sith to attack the planet for taking in the refugees, join the Republic military.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

- With the beginning of the Great Galactic War, Republic intelligence services are reorganized to become the new Republic Strategic Information Service (SIS).
(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
• Shortly after the start of the Great Galactic War, Republic decryption agent Marcus Trant becomes a field agent for Republic Strategic Information Service (SIS).
(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
• Shortly after the start of the Great Galactic War, the Jedi Order recognizes the need for custom-designed starships for their military efforts and have Rendili Vehicle Corporation develop the Defender-class light corvette in a similar style to the Republic’s larger Thranta-class corvettes.
(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
• Shortly after the start of the Great Galactic War, Sith Lord Vich discovers the warlike people of Rattatak and promises them glory if they fight with him and the Sith Empire. Soon, he forges them into a fighting force that he turns against the Empire in a minor insurrection. Vich is killed, and so are many Rattataki. The Sith Empire then seeks to make use of the Rattatak, as Vich had supposedly intended, but many flee to join the Hutt Cartel or remain on Rattatak to fight the Sith, not for freedom or for the Republic, but simply for the thrill of battle.
(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
• Shortly after the start of the Great Galactic War, the Miralukans of Alpheridies begin to have visions of the destruction of Katarr at the hands of Darth Nihilus during the Sith Civil War. Many Miraluka return to the Jedi Order and end their isolation in order to fight against the returned Sith Empire.
(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
• During the Great Galactic War, the reigning Mandalores will call the Great Hunt three times, one of which will see the rise of Mandalore the Lesser, while another will see his fall and the rise of Mandalore the Vindicated.
(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
• With the outbreak of the Great Galactic War, the Republic prison on Belsavis, the Tomb, becomes a major site for the incarceration of Sith prisoners. Creatures created by Sith alchemy that cannot seem to be killed are incarcerated within the Hall of Heroes.
(conjecture based on The Old Republic Explorer’s Guide)

The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)
The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)
The Return of the Sith Empire
21363.98.659 Entry
21363.98.675 Entry

3,680 BBY
• Fideltin Rusk is born on Mindor.
(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*

NOTE: He is 40 in TOR.
• Weeks after the attack at Korriban, Jedi Knight Gnost-Dural is among a Jedi team being sent to the Minos Cluster. En route, they learn that Sluis Van has fallen to the Sith, its shipyards destroyed and anyone not immediately swearing allegiance to the Sith Empire slaughtered.

The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural

*NOTE: The date for this event seems a little odd. The Treaty of Coruscant (3,653 BBY) apparently happens right around the time that the year 21,389 becomes 21,390 on the calendar used in The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural. That should mean that any conversions between this digital calendar and the BTC calendar (and thus the BBY/ABY calendar) should be pretty straightforward, though it might require some minor approximations. (Just take the date from the journal and subtract it from 21,390 to get the number of years before the Treaty of Coruscant, then add that number to 3,653 to get the number of years BBY. Easy!) The first problem came when the return of the Sith Empire (set in 28 BTC or 3,681 BBY in multiple sources) was given a date of 21,363, which is 27 BTC, instead of 28 BTC. This was rough, since the journal suggests that it is at the very end of “21,363,” rather than anywhere near the beginning. The issue is compounded here, though. This event is “weeks” after the return of the Sith, but it is listed as in very early 21,364 on the journal’s calendar, which would be early 26 BTC (or 3,679 BBY), at least a year after the return of the Sith if that was in 3,681 BBY as all other sources claim. So, this event seems to be either in 3,680 BBY (weeks after the return of the Sith), or it is in 26 BTC (3,679 BBY). I’m tending to go with the “weeks” reference being the most accurate, but you can consider this something that may be in the next year. I really wish that when they create these new calendars, they were a bit more careful with the Having revealed themselves to the Republic, the Sith immediately begin an assault on Republic allies in the Aparo Sector, which falls before a Republic fleet can arrive. Having also established Sith-influenced governments on Belkadan, Sernpidal, and Ruuria, those worlds openly turn on the Republic, trapping Republic fleet ships nearby in what is all of a sudden enemy territory. As the Republic withdraws its forces from the Tingel Arm entirely, the Sith strike throughout the Outer Rim, taking out the Sluis Van Shipyards, taking over the resources of the Minos Cluster, and blockading the Rimma Trade Route. The Republic attempts to respond by calling a special Senate meeting that includes the Jedi, but politics win out over practicality, and many systems refuse to go along with any plans that don’t protect their constituents at the cost of other worlds. In a sense, it becomes every world for themselves. If not for courageous military leaders and Jedi who do not wait for orders but instead take the fight to the Sith, the Sith Empire might have toppled the Republic right then and there. Instead, the fight to protect the Republic from this centuries-old plot of conquest begins. The conflict will become known as the Great Galactic War.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic, the timeline presented on StarWarsTheOldRepublic.com and information provided directly by Leland Chee via email)

*NOTE: This event takes place 28 BTC on the Treaty of Coruscant calendar.

The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)
The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)

The Early Days of the Great War

21364.15.238 Entry*

*NOTE: See note with summary above for why this is listed in this year, not the next calendar year.

3,679 BBY

- After many months of being dug in on Eliad in the Minos Cluster, Jedi Knight Gnost-Dural faces his first Sith, even as the Republic is defeated in the Seswenna sector but succeeds in breaking up a blockade of the Rimma Trade Route.

(The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural)

*NOTE: As you probably saw above, the date for the Sith attacks in the Tingel Arm and on Korriban do not translate correctly from the journal (which would put them in 3,680 BBY) to every other source (which put those events in 3,681 BBY). That necessitated that the entry for Gnost-Dural arriving in the Minos Cluster “weeks” after the Korriban attack had to be put in 3,680 BBY, at the very latest, even though the Journal would suggest it as early in this year. This new entry is set “many months” after he arrived in the Minos Cluster, and it retains the same year number as the previous entry. I am using this entry here in 3,679 BBY (instead of in late 3,680 BBY) as my chance to get the dates back on track. From here onward, I will be simply using the year translations, based on the date of the Treaty of Coruscant, rather than dating forward from that apparently incorrect date given for the Sith emergence.

The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)
The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)

The Early Days of the Great War [continued]

21364.87.761 Entry*

*NOTE: See note with summary above for why this is listed in this year, not the previous calendar year.

3,678 BBY

- Tekla Ansgar is born.*

(conjecture based on Red Harvest)

*NOTE: Tekla is in her “early thirties” in Red Harvest, which I have assumed to be approximately 33 years old.

- Twenty-five years before the Treaty of Coruscant, a Sith named Teneb Kel infiltrates the planet Begeren, where miners have destroyed ancient Sith statues and other relics in their quest for profits. Amid a pitched battle between Sith forces and locals (aided by the Republic), Teneb kills the local governor. Teneb reunites with his slave, Maggot, who is nearly killed in the battle, while reassuring the Imperial leaders on the battlefield that Teneb would come (as he did to take out the governor). The Sith Empire wins control of Begeren. The Dark Council is pleased with Teneb’s victory, but his reprieve is at an end. He must now return to the Dark Council to face punishment for the crimes of his Sith Master, Lord Calpyho. Meanwhile, Exal Kressh, a Sith woman who is a hybrid of the original Sith race, arrives on Peragus. She has betrayed her master, the Sith Emperor, but she still hears his commands through the Dark Side in her mind. She seeks to silence that voice. On Dromund Kaas, capital of the Sith Empire, celebrations are held, as Lord Malchose reads poems in the ancient Sith language and Lord Ekage's Red Legion is celebrated, but the real celebration is for Lord Nankrang, who has defeated Jedi in the mid-Rim. Maggot urges Teneb to refuse to submit to the Dark Council, but Teneb must, as he is their servant. After warning a guard that Maggot is not to be harmed, he enters the Dark Council's Citadel, where he finds himself ordered to kill Lord Calypho, who is considered a rogue Sith who sought power that was not his to obtain. The two do battle, but before Teneb can deliver a final blow, Calypho is removed and again imprisoned for possible later usefulness. Calypho will now be forced to foresee the future in service to the Sith, whether he likes it or not. As for Teneb, it is suggested briefly that he might serve another Sith, such as Darth Marr or Darth Vowrawn. He had not yet completed his training with Calypho before he was arrested, which leaves Teneb safe from being punished for his master's crimes, but it also means he is not worthy of another master yet. Instead, he is sent to hunt down the AWOL Exal. Teneb is presented to the Sith Emperor, who sends him to Exal in the Lenico system, but only after the very touch of the Emperor sends him into a near coma with visions of his past training on Korriban and his own doubts about his abilities. When he comes to, he and Maggot take off to find Exal. A week later, a disc that Exal delivered to a smuggler on Peragus finds its way into the hands of Jedi aboard the Republic vessel Grace of Champalan Tides. The Jedi and Republic personnel aboard are among those being sent on a new mission, based on tactical information provided by Exal's data. Shortly thereafter, Teneb and Maggot arrive at Lenico Colony Blue above Lenico IV, where Teneb learns from Baron-Surgeon Ybann the Hutt that Exal came to the system, then disappeared. Following the clue that she dreams of her past, Teneb heads for a nearby medical facility, where Exal is in stasis (apparently attempting to quiet the Emperor's voice in her mind), but he is detected why entering. The droid monitoring Exal's stasis chamber begins to revive her . . .

(Shades of the Sith)

• On Lenico Colony Blue, Sith Apprentice Teneb Kel seeks the traitorous former Sith Apprentice to the Sith Emperor, Exal Kressh, not realizing that he himself is being tracked by a Jedi Padawan, whose Jedi Master Jerbhen Hulis (and others in the Republic) are preparing an offensive, based on information provided by Exal. They need to know how reliable she is and what she is tangled up in before proceeding. Teneb reaches the medical chamber where Exal has just been revived from stasis, and the two do battle. She is too much for him, though, forcing him to escape. She then damages the orbiting colony's power core, causing it to crash down into Lenico IV. Fortunately for Teneb, he is able to escape with the help of his slave, Maggot. As for Exal, she is going home. Shortly thereafter, Teneb and Maggot's ship crashes on Lenico IV, damaged in the destruction of the colony. Teneb leaves Maggot behind to work on the ship, while he searches for wreckage from the colony that might allow them to repair the ship to make it spaceworthy. While he is out there, the mysterious Jedi Padawan that had been following him, who had crashed aboard a ship nearby with Jedi Master Hulis, discovers Maggot at the ship and introduces himself in friendly fashion. As for Teneb, he gets lost and finds his wounds reopening, then stumbles his way into what appears to be a colony of Sith and Ortolans, led by Exal. It is not her, though. Instead, he is seeing a vision, which he has called upon through the Dark Side. In that vision, “Exal” and a mysterious guide with a face covered by a mask, take him through the Ortolan colony on Lenico IV, and “Exal” reveals that the Emperor sent her all over the galaxy to find the keys necessary for him to “hollow her out” and turn her into a vessel for his will, which is something he intends to do on a grand scale with many, many others. In that vision, he is also shown his future fate as a pitiful member of the Dark Council, and when he refuses that fate, the mysterious stranger, who reveals himself to be Darth Thanaton, blasts him with Force lightning (in the vision) and leaves him on the ground in a smoking heap . . .

(The Broken World)

• Emerging from his Force vision, Teneb Kel is attacked by Jedi Master Jerbhen Hulis. The two, however, realize they are both there after Exal Kressh, and they agree to share information and help get the survivors from Lenico Colony Blue into the ruins as a shelter.
Shortly thereafter, Teneb returns to his ship, while Hulis is helping the survivors. He arrives just as Hulis’ Padawan is leaving, having sparked doubt about the need for freedom in the mind of Maggot, Teneb’s slave. Teneb kills the Padawan without a second though, then they launch for Korriban. Elsewhere, Exal is not in prime mental condition, but she has managed to get the Republic to build up its forces to break through the defenses of Korriban based on her knowledge of those defenses. She intends to keep the Sith Emperor’s “children” from ever existing. As Teneb and Maggot reach the Horuset System, they find the Sith and Republic engaged in battle. They slip through the battle to head for the Sith Academy. On the way, Teneb informs Maggot that if he rises in rank, Maggot will have more responsibilities soon. If he dies, he wants Maggot to be free. Maggot is no longer his slave, nor is he an apprentice, but instead he is a loyal companion. Leaping down to the surface from the ship, Teneb makes his way into the academy grounds, where he finds Exal on a rampage. They engage in a duel, during which Teneb questions her motives. If she just wanted to bring down the Emperor’s plans, she could have joined the Jedi, rather than manipulating them and the Republic. She reveals that she took it as an insult that instead of becoming the Emperor’s true apprentice, she was just going to become the first of his “vessels,” which she regards as slavery. As they duel fiercely, Maggot, who considers himself a warrior if not a slave for much longer, barge in and fires on Exal. He gets a blast of Force lightning for his efforts, and the ensuing response from Teneb earns him a blast as well, which fries his lightsaber. As Exal holds Teneb up with the Force, ready to stab him through, he uses the Force to grab the lightsaber of a dead Sith and sends it into her back, killing her. She dies with the Sith Emperor’s laughter at her in her mind. Teneb and Maggot both survive the struggle, and Maggot tries to say that he is truly Qawohl of Byss and wants his freedom, but he does so in his native language. Teneb does not understand, leading “Maggot” to play dumb, pretending to only have heard bits of what was said between Teneb and Exal. That is enough, though. While Qawohl (Maggot) considers himself safe, Teneb kills him to keep the secret of the Emperor’s “children” from spreading. Teneb now has his own plans for the future, and he cannot risk them. Teneb returns to Dromund Kaas, where he faces the Dark Council. The Council praises him for stopping Exal, but they are of mixed feelings on him not preventing the attack on Korriban. Still, though, enough Republic forces were killed by the time the battle ended that they consider it a “win” for the Sith. Teneb is to be given a new Sith Master, but he refuses to allow this. Instead, he offers to tell the Dark Council about the Sith Emperor’s true plans for the future. In return, Teneb Kel becomes the newest Dark Lord, the very man from his vision . . . Darth Thanaton.

(Burn the Future)

The Old Republic [continued] (novel series/comic series/video game: Sean Williams & Paul S. Kemp & Drew Karpyshyn & Alexander Freed & Rob Chestney)

The Old Republic (comic series: Rob Chestney & Alexander Freed)

Blood of the Empire (comic series: Alexander Freed)*

Shades of the Sith (comic: Alexander Freed)*

Webcomics 1 – 4*

The Broken World (comic: Alexander Freed)*

Webcomics 5 – 8*

Burn the Future (comic: Alexander Freed)*

Webcomics 9 – 12*

*NOTE: These were originally released online as a series of webcomics. The first four made up Shades of the Sith, while the second quartet made up The Broken World and the final four made up Burn the Future. Each online issue was only seven pages long. These were reprinted as The Old Republic #4 – 6, which followed suit with Threat of Peace and did not use the storyline titles (i.e. Shades of the Sith) as issue titles.

3,677 BBY

- Malavai Quinn is born on Dromund Kaas to Rymar Quinn and his wife.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
  *NOTE: He is 37 in TOR.
- Skadge is born on Lijuter.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
  *NOTE: He is 37 in TOR.
3,676 BBY
- The Twi'lek later known as “Zenith” is born on Balmorra.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
*NOTE: He is 36 in TOR.

3,674 BBY
- According to his military records (which may have been falsified), Tanno Vik is born on Nar Shaddaa. He is raised more by local gangs than by his parents.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
*NOTE: He is 34 in TOR.

3,673 BBY
- Languss Tuno is born on Varn.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
*NOTE: He is 33 in TOR.
- Eight years into the Great Galactic War, Elin Garza (now 23) and her troops are shot down by Imperials on Bomodon. While awaiting extraction from the planet, her group joins with Republic Strategic Information Service (SIS) operative Marcus Trant in his activities on the planet. Rather than leaving, Garza works with Trant for ten months, until they finally bring down the Imperial Bomodon government. By that time, Garza and Trant have developed a romantic relationship. They are soon married.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

3,671 BBY
- Felix Iresso is born to refugee parents in the refugee camp known as Aven’s Rest on Rehemsa.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
*NOTE: He is 31 in TOR.
- Elin Garza and Marcus Trant, married 26 months ago, divorce. Within the next 18 years (by the time of the Treaty of Coruscant, in other words), Garza will marry two more times: first to naval captain Joron Tal’vor, who will die in battle in the Seswenna Sector, and later to a civilian from Coruscant, but their marriage will be annulled and the husband’s name classified for his own protection from Garza’s own enemies. Trant will go on to marry (and divorce) one more time before the Ascendant Spear campaign.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
- The Republic and Sith are still fighting in the Minos Cluster, but the Seswenna sector has been lost. The Sith, overconfident after taking the Seswenna sector, has set its sights on the Core, attacking Bothan space. However, Republic Admiral Greik predicted a Sith attack at Bothawui and has soundly defeated the Sith forces at the Battle of Bothawui, the first major victory for the Republic in the war. Just in case the Sith attempts a reprisal attack, the Republic leaves a new planetary shield for Bothawui, along with a ground force led by Jedi Master Belth Allusis. Imperials under Moff Zelos do indeed attack again, but the planetary shields hold. The Sith then send in ground forces to destroy the shield generator. Master Allusis’ forces hold for a while, but they soon break, losing much of their number. They fall back to the shield generator, where Zelos offers to spare them if they surrender. They refuse to do so, and in the resulting battle, all of Allusis’ forces die (including him), but they are able to kill enough of the Sith forces that there is no way the Imperials can hold onto the shield generator. They are forced to retreat by lack of manpower, and the shield remains operational.
  (The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural)

The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)
3,670 BBY

- Hestizo “Zo” Trace is born.
  (conjecture based on Red Harvest)
- Aric Jorgan is born on Rendili.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

NOTE: He is 30 in TOR.

- Hylo Visz purchases the Crimson Fleece, a ship that is so old that she has to repair it with mismatched parts of other vessels. It becomes her pride and joy, as she begins her career as a freighter captain. Within ten years, the upgrades she has installed will make it worth three times its original value.*
  (conjecture based on Smuggler’s Vanguard)

*NOTE: This assumes that Smuggler’s Vanguard is in 3,660 BBY.*

- Eckard Lokin becomes an Imperial Intelligence agent, eventually given the codename “Fixer Fifteen.” He will make twelve Republic-confirmed kills over the next three decades.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)

NOTE: This is 30 years prior to TOR.

- The Jedi finally intercede in the Kanz Disorders and free cultures like the Lorrdians by toppling the Myrialite regime of Argazda.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Alien Species and The Essential Atlas)

*NOTE: This event was moved to 70 years earlier by the NEgtAS, overwriting the original date of 3,600 BBY from the original EGtAS. It is unknown if this event will retain its placement in light of material released for The Old Republic.

- Jedi Knight Gnost-Dural goes to Coruscant to do more research into the origins of the Sith Empire. During his studies, he incorrectly suggests that the Emperor might somehow be Naga Sadow himself, but Naga Sadow is entombed on Yavin IV.
  (The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural)

3,669 BBY

- Tharan Cedrax is born on Anaxes.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

NOTE: He is 29 in TOR.

- Pierce is born on Ziost. He will spend his childhood as an orphan.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

NOTE: He is 29 in TOR.

- Kaliyo Djannis is born on Rattatak.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

NOTE: The character is 29 (supposedly) in TOR.

- After studying the origins of the Sith Empire on Coruscant, Jedi Knight Gnost-Dural has abandoned the idea that the Emperor might be Naga Sadow. However, he believes (again incorrectly) that the Emperor might be Ludo Kressh. At this point, the Jedi Order knows about Dromund Kaas, but they have no idea where the planet is actually located.
  (The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural)

3,668 BBY
- Akaavi Spar is born.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)
  NOTE: She is 28 in TOR.
- Yuun is born on Gand.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
  NOTE: He is 28 in TOR.
- Archiban Frodrick Kimble (later known as “Doc”) is born on Raltiir.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
  NOTE: He is 28 in TOR.
- Republic ships are going missing when an unexplained terror sweeps through their crews. Republic SIS listening posts in the Outer Rim learn of the "Dread Masters" and their Battle Meditation technique that instills terror in their enemies. Jedi Knight Jaric Kaedan and a Republic Special Forces team infiltrate the Dread Masters’ dreadnaught and capture them. The Dread Masters are interrogated and found to be centuries old. With the help of Jedi Knight Gnost-Dural, SIS works to crack Imperial intel found aboard the ship. The Republic claims to have executed the Dread Masters, but they are secretly sent to a prison on Belsavis due to their strategic value. Months later, Gnost-Dural cracks the Imperial codes on the intel from the dreadnaught. They learn bits of the background of the Dark Emperor from the information. They learn about how the Emperor is from Nathema and how he came to power (but nothing about his original origins or the ritual that made him virtually immortal). As a result of Gnost-Dural’s report on this information, the Jedi Order promotes him to the rank of Jedi Master. (He has now also, by the way, given up any belief that the Emperor could be Ludo Kressh.)

  (The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural )

The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)

- Talos Drellik is born on Dromund Kaas.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
  NOTE: He is 27 in TOR.
- Having continued studying the Sith Empire, Jedi Master Gnost-Dural discovers the connection between the Sith Empire and the Jedi Civil War. It was the Sith Empire that turned Revan and Malak into Sith Lords and sent them back, without memory of the encounter, into the Republic to wage war.

  (The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural )
- 3,667 BBY
  - Talos Drellik is born on Dromund Kaas.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
  NOTE: He is 27 in TOR.
- Having continued studying the Sith Empire, Jedi Master Gnost-Dural discovers the connection between the Sith Empire and the Jedi Civil War. It was the Sith Empire that turned Revan and Malak into Sith Lords and sent them back, without memory of the encounter, into the Republic to wage war.

  (The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural )
- Late this year, the Sith Empire attacks the planet Alderaan. The planet’s orbital defenses are destroyed, and the royal family is taken and held hostage. Jedi Knight Satele Shan is on the world, having been sent to root out Imperial spies supposedly being harbored by certain noble houses. She is too late to save the queen from the Imperials, who now march on Organa Castle. A Republic Special Forces group (Havoc Squad) led by Jace Malcom was on stopover on Alderaan when the attack began, and they are now leading a small resistance force against the Sith. Satele goes to join them and comes face to face with the Sith force, led by Darth Malgus. She engages Malgus in combat, and Malgus’ lungs are badly burned in the struggle, forcing him to later use a breather from this point forward. As for the Sith, their ground force has been defeated, but this has been the Sith Empire’s first (albeit temporary) victory over a Core world. As Malgus’ force falls back, Jace fires off a flare, as do other resistance members . . .

  (conjecture based on The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural and Hope trailer for The Old Republic)
- While in space over Alderaan, ready to be part of a group to give aid to the Republic resistance forces on the surface, Jedi Master Gnost-Dural sees the flares go up from Jace
Malcom and others. The Sith are in retreat, seeing nothing more to gain after their devastation below. What was to be a demoralizing defeat for the Republic is now a symbol of hope.

(The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural)

- On Alderaan, Darth Malgus, injured by Satele Shan, is among those still on the surface facing Republic forces during the Imperial retreat. He encounters two Jedi, a Zabrak and another named Vorin, whom he kills. In doing so, he remembers the early lessons on the nature of life that were taught to him by his adoptive father just prior to Malgus (whose real name is Veradun) leaving for the Sith Academy.

(The Third Lesson)

- Darth Malgus leaves Alderaan, possibly with the assistance of Shae Vizla.

(conjecture based on The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural)

- Amid Havoc Squad’s victory celebrations from the Battle of Alderaan, Jace Malcom and Jedi Master Satele Shan finally give in to their feelings for each other, despite the fact that she is a Jedi. After years of fighting alongside each other, the two become romantically involved. (To be continued below . . . )

(Annihilation)

- Shortly after Havoc Squad’s success in the Battle of Alderaan, Colonel Elin Garza decides that Havoc Squad should be the model for all Republic trooper teams. She works with Jace Malcom to design a new Republic Special Forces Division (SpecForces), though it will not be fully operational until weeks after the Treaty of Coruscant. Malcom removes himself from Havoc Squad so that he can train new SpecForce recruits for a while. Havoc Squad comes under the command of Malcom’s XO, Jek Kardan. One of Kardan’s first new members of Havoc Squad in the wake of the Battle of Alderaan is Harron Tavus, who also begins training with Malcom as a member of the new SpecForces division.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

- In the wake of the Battle of Alderaan, the relatively pacifistic people of Alderaan begin taking a more militant stance in the Galactic Senate.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic Explorer’s Guide)

- Shortly after the Battle of Alderaan, the Sith Empire, specifically Imperial Intelligence, begins to infiltrate arena events around the galaxy, eventually discovering a young gladiator in the arenas of Geonosis, whom they groom to be their chosen champion by rigging events. Over the next few years, his fame grows, and he becomes the leading candidate to be the next Mandalore. Little do those who begin to follow him know that he serves the Sith Empire, not the goals of the Mandalorians.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic, the timeline presented on StarWarsTheOldRepublic.com The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural, and information provided directly by Leland Chee via email)*

*NOTE: This event takes place 14 BTC on the Treaty of Coruscant calendar.

- Due to conflict on Alderaan between the Republic and the Sith Empire, hives of Killiks, long in hibernation on the planet, awaken and emerge to confront the “new” population of the planet.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

- Six months after becoming romantically involved on Alderaan, Satele Shan and Jace Malcom conceive a child (Theron Shan) together. Upon seeing how far Jace is willing to go in wiping out Imperial targets in revenge for those who have fallen in battle, and knowing how far he would go if Satele herself or their child were one day killed by the Empire, she decides not to tell him about her pregnancy. She arranges for Jedi Master Ngani Zho to report to the Jedi Council that he is sending her on a secret mission, the nature of which he cannot divulge, even to them. In this way, she will cover her pregnancy over the coming months. (To be continued below . . . )

(Annihilation)

The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)

The Battle of Alderaan
21376.89.702 Entry
21376.89.704 Entry
The Third Lesson [continued] (SWI124 short story: Paul S. Kemp)
The Third Lesson [continued] (SWI124 short story: Paul S. Kemp)
The Old Republic [continued] (novel series/comic series/video game: Sean Williams & Paul S. Kemp & Drew Karpyshyn & Alexander Freed & Rob Chestney)
The Old Republic [continued] (novel series: Sean Williams & Paul S. Kemp & Drew Karpyshyn & Alexander Freed & Rob Chestney)

Annihilation [flashback] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
Chapter 13 [flashback]
Chapter 19 [flashback]

3,666 BBY
- Elara Dorne is born on Dromund Kaas.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
  *NOTE: The character is 26 in TOR.
- Vector Hyllus is born on Juno.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
  *NOTE: The character is 36 in TOR.
- The mercenary who begins training Corso Riggs when Corso is 16 begins fighting for the Republic.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: Corso is 22 in TOR, and this is 20 years before he is 16.
- Out of sight in a cave, Jedi Master Satele Shan, aided by Jedi Master Ngani Zho, gives birth to her secret child (by Jace Malcom), whom she names Theron Shan. He will be raised by Ngani Zho, his true identity kept secret.
  (Annihilation)

The Old Republic [continued] (novel series/comic series/video game: Sean Williams & Paul S. Kemp & Drew Karpyshyn & Alexander Freed & Rob Chestney)
The Old Republic [continued] (novel series: Sean Williams & Paul S. Kemp & Drew Karpyshyn)

Annihilation (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)

3,665 BBY
- Teff’ith is born.*
  (conjecture based on Annihilation)*
  *NOTE: She is twenty-odd standard years old in Annihilation, which I have rounded to 25 years.
- Akaavi Spar leaves her mother to begin training as a Mandalorian warrior with her father.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: She is 26 in TOR, and this is when she is 3.
- On the day that Nomar Organa is to announce his engagement to Rehanna Rist on Alderaan, Nomar suddenly announces (under pressure from House Organa, his family, who, like House Rist, does not support the engagement) that instead of becoming engaged to Rehanna, he is choosing to leave Alderaan to continue his Force training with the Jedi Order. This draws outrage from Lord Rist, Rehanna’s father (who sees it as an insult, even though he was not supportive of the engagement to begin with). (As for Nomar, he will go on to eventually become a well-respected Jedi Master. Rehanna, meanwhile, will go on to refuse to marry any man, taking pleasure in humiliating those who attempt to woo her.)*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: This is between 20 and 30 years before TOR, so I have split the difference and put it 25 years before the game.
- Having heard rumors of a new Mandalore on Geonosis, Jedi Master Gnost-Dural goes to Geonosis to investigate.
  (The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural)

The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)
The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)

The Mandalorian Blockade
21378.00.213 Entry
3,664 BBY
- Kindra is born.*
  (conjecture based on Red Harvest)*
*NOTE: She is "one or two" years older than Mnah Ra’at.
- Raina Temple is born.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
*NOTE: She is 24 in TOR.
- Xivhkalrainik (AKA Xalek) is born on Kalee.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
*NOTE: He is 24 in TOR.
- Devotek begins serving the Sith Empire.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
*NOTE: This is 24 years prior to TOR.
- The Mandalorians re-emerge under a new Mandalore from the arenas of Geonosis and begin battling the Republic on the side of the Sith Empire.
  (conjecture based on The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural)
- A few years after the Battle of Alderaan, Shae Vizla’s brother is killed by Jedi Master Aurei Eadon, while on a mission to attack a political convoy. Shae challenges Eadon to a duel in response to her brother’s death, but Eadon refuses.*
  (conjecture based on The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural)*
*NOTE: This is “just a few years later” after the Battle of Alderaan, but we have no firm date for it. I have put it three years after the battle.
- After a year of investigating on Geonosis, seeking the origin of the new Mandalore, battles between Mandalorian forces and Republic forces have made one thing perfectly clear: the Mandalorians are indeed back, united under this new Mandalore. It is only now, though, that Jedi Master Gnost-Dural realizes that the new Mandalore was actually created through an Imperial Intelligence operation. They rigged the arena battles to make this new Mandalore a champion to bring the Mandalorians into the Great Galactic War on the side of the Sith Empire.
  (The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural)

The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)
The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)
  The Mandalorian Blockade [continued]
  21379.16.091 Entry

3,663 BBY
- When his wife, Maykia Grell, becomes pregnant with their daughter, Nadia Grell, future senator Tobas Grell stops exploring the dangerous jungles and ruins of Sarkhai and returns to be by her side throughout the pregnancy.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)

3,662 BBY
- Corso Riggs is born on Ord Mantell.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
*NOTE: He is 22 in TOR.
- Nadia Grell is born on Sarkhai to Tobas Grell and his wife, Maykia. Maykia dies in childbirth.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
*NOTE: She is 22 in TOR.
- Wim Nickter is born.
  (conjecture based on Red Harvest)
- Mnah Ra’at is born.
  (conjecture based on Red Harvest)
- Sometime before the Battle of Hoth in the Great Galactic War, Colonel Omas of the Republic Special Forces assembles a team of the galaxy’s greatest scientists. Led by Nasan Godera, they are tasked with creating a group of extremely powerful cloaked missiles known as the “Shadow Arsenal.”
Arra Yooms is born to Zeerid Kor and Val Yooms. Later, when Zeerid leaves Havoc Squadron and the Republic military, Val and Arra will be coming to see him when there is a tragic vehicle accident that kills Val and leaves Arra unable to walk. Zeerid will go to work for the Exchange to provide medical funds for Arra, while Arra lives on Vaced with Val’s sister, Natala Yooms. Arra carries her mother’s name in an effort to keep her existence secret from the Exchange, so none of Zeerid’s enemies can use her against him. Jedi Knight Aryn Leneer, whom Zeerid served with, will be there to help him deal with the emotional impact of Val’s death.

Sometime within the three years before the blockade of the Hydian Way by the Mandalorians, the Republic prepares a huge armada, including the technologically advanced vessels of the fleet, such as the Star of Coruscant, for a major strike against Dromund Kaas. They engage Sith Imperial forces (tipped off to the armada’s existence by the Chiss), eventually culminating in a massive battle over the planet Hoth (aptly referred to as the Battle of Hoth in this era), which is controlled by the Chiss Ascendancy. The massive battle, which includes Mandalorian vessels as well, litters the planet with wreckage, later known as the Starship Graveyard. These losses bode ill for the Republic in its continuing campaign against the Empire. As for Hoth, the White Maw pirates will soon come to Hoth to seek salvage from the advanced warships that are now wrecked on its surface. The Chiss Ascendancy will also set up a new spy enclave on the planet, allied with the Empire for now.*

In the wake of the Battle of Hoth, Imperial Admiral Layek Davos is stranded on Hoth for six months.

In the wake of the Battle of Hoth, during which Republic Colonel Omas has died, Nasan Godera, leader of the group of scientists working on the “Shadow Arsenal” project, moves on to other things. Those who knew about the Shadow Arsenal think that the project has been abandoned, but it will be completed by Godera in secret on Quesh. Believing the weapons are too powerful, Godera eventually wiped information on the project and hid it in order to keep it from ever being used.

Six months after the Battle of Hoth, Imperial Admiral Layek Davos, stranded on Hoth since the battle above the planet, is finally rescued.

3,661 BBY

Shigar Konshi is born on Kiffu.*

Ce’na (later known as “Vette”) is born on Ryloth.*

Risha Drayen is born aboard her father’s ship, the Mandellian Gambit.*

Jaesa Willsaam is born on Alderaan to Parvin and Gregor Willsaam.*

The Mandalorians, on behalf of the Sith Empire, blockade the Hydian Way. Jedi Master Gnost-Dural laments that the Republic could have defeated the Mandalorians if they had struck right as the Mandalorians emerged three years earlier, but after catastrophic losses at the Battle of Hoth, there is little hope of doing so now. The Republic forces are pushed back from the blockade line as far as Devaron. With the trade route cut off, starvation afflicts the lower levels of Coruscant and elsewhere in the Core. This leads to riots on Coruscant and a call for surrender.

(The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural)

The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)

The Mandalorian Blockade [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)

21382.55.137 Entry

3,660 BBY

- Ashara Zavros is born on Coruscant.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
  *NOTE: She is 20 in TOR.

- Cinzia Xandret (the future Eldon Ax) is born.*
  (conjecture based on Fatal Alliance)*
  *NOTE: This assumes that Fatal Alliance is set in 3,643 BBY. She is 17 in the novel.

- Kira Carsen is born on Dromund Kaas to human Sith parents.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: This is 20 years prior to TOR.

- Rowan Delk becomes a desert guide on Tatooine.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: This is 20 years prior to TOR.

- Gangster Nok Drayen singlehandedly kills half the Hutt Cartel's members in a single night. No one knows how. He is given an entire galactic quadrant out of respect, and it is not given back, even after his eventual death.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: This is 20 years prior to TOR.

- Watcher One becomes a Sith agent.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: This is 20 years prior to TOR.

- A prison gang attempts to break into the secretive Megasecurity Ward 23 at the Republic prison on Belsavis. They fail.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: This is 20 years prior to TOR.

- Eckhorn, a Republic bureaucrat (and Imperial spy), compiles a list of Imperial sympathizers in the Republic and hides that information in House Baliss territory on Alderaan. However, his ship explodes over Alderaan. It is ruled accidental, for now.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: This is 20 years prior to TOR.

- The Republic begins to hire out to unlicensed, uncertified freighter pilots to fly transport runs. Due to being sympathetic to the Republic in the Great Galactic War, pilot Hylo Visz of the Crimson Fleece, begins taking a few jobs from the Republic, rather than just the Hutt Crime Cartel.*
  (conjecture based on Smuggler's Vanguard)*
  *NOTE: This is a short time before Smuggler's Vanguard.

- Barrga the Hutt has sent smuggler Hylo Visz (captain of the Crimson Fleece) to deliver a cargo of prototype ion drives from a lab on Nar Shaddaa to Rendili Vehicle Corporation on Corellia, so that the Republic military can sample the drives and decide whether to purchase many more from the developers on Nar Shaddaa. She is accompanied by the Nikto Musk and an unnamed Weequay companion. Upon arrival, she becomes more and more suspicious about the situation, taking it as a sign that there is going to be trouble. Unfortunately for her, when she tries to get them back off of Corellia to fix their hyperdrive that has mysteriously gone dead, Musk and the Weequay take over the ship. She is able to escape out of a small hatch to the landing pad where they have parked, only to find the Weequay arranging for repairs, while turning over the prototype ion drives to the corporation's representatives in exchange for a box, presumably full of credits. When Musk and the Weequay (either trying to take the job for Barrga or to simply strike out on their own) try to take off in the Crimson Fleece, it explodes. The credits were, in fact, explosives, and Hylo realizes that the corporation isn’t intending to buy more drives, just to study the prototypes enough to replicate them for themselves. She sneaks inside the facility and bluffs her way aboard a prototype Vanguard starship that is being created for the Jedi Order. When the test pilot Jedi comes aboard, he does not immediately sense her, and she is able to get the drop on him (something she will wonder about later). Rather than killing him and risking more bad luck, she dumps him onto the landing pad, then escapes with the Vanguard to return to Hutta.*

(Smuggler’s Vanguard)*

*NOTE: There is no indication of exactly when this takes place in the story itself, but it is late enough into the many years of the Great Galactic War that the Republic has started to turn to unlicensed, uncertified pilots (smugglers and the like) as transport pilots, since the military is stretched too thin. I had originally put it around the time of the Mandalorian blockade in 3,661 BBY, but The Essential Reader’s Companion puts it in “circa 3,660 BBY.” With that being only a slight difference, I have shifted it to this year instead.

- On day 129 of the Sith Empire’s Rim Campaign, Sith forces led by Darth Malgus and Darth Venemal arrive on Ord Radama. After clearing out a Republic installation that was blocking further Sith landings, they signal the Lindworm for the rest of the troops to be sent down. Four days later, before writing of these events in his journal, Malgus delivers a rousing speech to his troops to prepare them for the coming march against Ord Radama’s capital city, Livien Magnus.

(conjecture based on Book of Sith)

- On day 133 of the Sith Empire’s Rim Campaign, Darth Malgus reports on progress on Ord Radama in his journal, noting that the capital of Livien Magnus will soon be taken. (To be continued below . . . )*

(Book of Sith)

*NOTE: Dan Wallace’s blog and Luke Skywalker’s comments (written by Dan, obviously) in the Book of Sith itself would claim that Darth Malgus’ journal entries in Book of Sith are from 3,655 BBY, but that is entirely impossible, given that The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural gives us the specific starting point of 3,661 BBY for the Mandalorian Blockade and the specific breaking point of the blockade of 3,660 BBY. Since the blockade and its breaking are mentioned in Malgus’ journals as current events, the journals must take place here, not five years later.

- On day 145 of the Sith Empire’s Rim Campaign, Darth Malgus and Darth Venemal begin a siege of the capital, Livien Magnus after being unable to take the city directly.

(conjecture based on Book of Sith)

- On day 150 of the Sith Empire’s Rim Campaign, Sith Lord Adraas arrives on Ord Radama, sent by the Dark Council to assist Darth Malgus and Darth Venemal in their siege of Livien Magnus, the world’s capital. Malgus is annoyed that their strategy would be questioned, given that a siege and subsequent starvation within the city is the same general tactic being used by the Sith Empire with the Mandalorian Blockade. An assault is carried out against the capital again, and Malgus and Venemal allow Adraas’ war droids to be a distraction, which allows Venemal to get inside the city and blast a hole that allows the rest of his and Malgus’ troops into the city, capturing it.

(conjecture based on Book of Sith)

- On day 152 of the Sith Empire’s Rim Campaign, Darth Malgus reports in his journal on the fall of Livien Magnus, the capital of Ord Radama, to Sith forces. He notes his annoyance at Lord Adraas taking credit for the victory, as one would have expected him to do. (To be continued below . . . )*

(Book of Sith)

*NOTE: See the note with the first Book of Sith summary portion in 3,660 BBY for the reasoning for this placement.

- With Livien Magnus taken and Ord Radama in Sith hands, Lord Adraas returns to the Dark Council on Dromund Kaas to gain favor as a result of the victory (which really belongs to Darth Malgus and Darth Venemal). Knowing that they can only hold the world if resupplied, Malgus sends requests for reinforcements and resupply to War Minister Shareis (since he knows that Minister Khamarr, who actually leads the Ministry of Logistics, is a favorite of the Dark Council and would be likely to fill the needs of Dromund Kaas to kiss Dark Council butt before actually helping in the war effort on Ord Radama). He has hear nothing back from
• On day 179 of the Sith Empire’s Rim Campaign, Darth Malgus reports in his journal that Ord Radama will be lost to the Sith if they are not resupplied soon. He further writes of his affection for his slave-turned-lover Eleena Daru. (To be continued below . . . )

*NOTE: See the note with the first Book of Sith summary portion in 3,660 BBY for the reasoning for this placement.

• With the Republic Senate near surrender to the Sith Empire due to the Mandalorian blockade and its effects on the Core, the Republic strikes a deal with Mirialin smuggler Hylo Visz. Visz loads her various ships with needed goods from the far side of the blockade, then distracts the Mandalorians in the blockade, using the distraction to try to break it. They are outmatched, but Republic Strategic Information Service learned of her actions and called ships from nearby worlds to help. The Republic and smuggler vessels defeat the Mandalorians and the blockade is finally broken. This allows shipments along major trade routes to the Outer Rim. These trade routes and affected worlds will still be recovering seven years from now. In the wake of the breaking of the blockade, Hylo becomes insanely rich for her deeds, but she disappears rather than attending a medal ceremony held in her honor.

• With no resupply from Minister Shareis, Darth Malgus and Darth Venemal have been left without more support for their Sith forces on Ord Radama. When Republic ships (having slipped the blockade that is now crumbling) emerge over Ord Radama, the Sith only have the Lindworm and two Harrower battle cruisers in orbit. As the Battle of Ord Radama begins in orbit, Darth Malgus boards his shuttle with Captain Karm to leave the capital city of Livien Magnus and join the battle above from the Lindworm. By the time he reaches the bridge of the Lindworm, one of the Harrowers is in flames and launching escape pods. The other is hit by torpedoes and falls into Ord Radama’s gravity well, where it is pulled down to explode into the center of Livien Magnus, where many Sith troopers and Darth Venemal are killed. Malgus’ rage at sensing the death of his comrades lashes out through the Force, not only destroying the viewport in front of him and causing the crew’s ears to bleed but also exploding the fuel slugs on incoming Republic starfighters, destroying them. They have no choice but to take the Lindworm back to Sith space in defeat. The people of Ord Radama will make New Raido their new capital after the loss of Livien Magnus.

*NOTE: See the note with the first Book of Sith summary portion in 3,660 BBY for the reasoning for this placement.

• Having broken the Mandalorian Blockade, the Republic is able to penetrate Sith space and make a small strike at Korriban, then begin a major move against Ziost. Republic starfighters and capital ships battle their Sith counterparts over Ziost, but the Republic is thus far unable to get through Sith defenses. Darth Angral believes that the two sides are evenly matched at the moment and calls for more vessels from Dromund Kaas. Darth Malgus urges caution, warning that a Jedi with substantial Battle Meditation abilities might be able to turn the tide in the Republic’s favor yet.

*NOTE: See the note with the first Book of Sith summary portion in 3,660 BBY for the reasoning for this placement.

• In the wake of the end of the Mandalorian blockade, the Sith’s puppet Mandalore becomes known as “Mandalore the Lesser” for his failure. He initiates a Great Hunt, a grand competition to revitalize the Mandalorians (and, in theory, find a new potential Mandalore to... challenge him for the title). The process works all too well, as Artus of Clan Lok wins the Great Hunt and challenges Mandalore the Lesser in an arena battle on Geonosis. Artus kills Mandalore the Lesser and becomes Mandalore the Vindicated. In the brief power fluctuation that follows, a group of Mandalorians that believe they should side with the Republic, not the Sith Empire, following the example of Mandalore the Preserver (Canderous Ordo), emerges. Mandalore the Vindicated crushes this new movement, keeping the Mandalorians loyal, paid agents for the Sith Empire. (conjecture based on information found on StarWarsTheOldRepublic.com and in The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

- In the wake of the end of the Mandalorian blockade, one of Hylo Visz’s allies, the smuggler Zale Barrows, is allowed great latitude in striking imperial targets. (conjecture based on The Old Republic)

- While Lord Angral’s forces are still gathered at Ziosk, the Republic strikes the Sith planet of Ashas Ree. The Sith arrive just in time to stop the Republic from taking the planet’s central garrison. Darth Malgus commands Sith forces made up of loyal troops and Sith doctrinists that want the Sith Empire to return to isolationism (but who join the fight in the name of all Sith). During the ongoing struggle for Ashas Ree, Malgus learns that the Jedi force is commanded by Jedi Master Ven Zallow. (conjecture based on Book of Sith)

- On day 258 of the Sith Empire’s Rim Campaign, Darth Malgus reports in his journal about the end of the Battle of Ziosk and the Republic’s strike at Ashas Ree. (To be continued below . . . )

(Book of Sith)

* NOTE: See the note with the first Book of Sith summary portion in 3,660 BBY for the reasoning for this placement.

Smuggler’s Vanguard (short story: Rob Chestney)

Smuggler’s Vanguard (short story: Rob Chestney)

Book of Sith [continued] (novel: Dan Wallace)

Book of Sith [continued] (novel: Dan Wallace)

“Journal of Darth Malgus”

- Rim Campaign – Day 133 – Malgus
- Rim Campaign – Day 152 – Malgus
- Rim Campaign – Day 179 – Malgus

The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)

The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)

The Mandalorian Blockade [continued]

21383.62.492 Entry

Book of Sith [continued] (novel: Dan Wallace)

Book of Sith [continued] (novel: Dan Wallace)

“Journal of Darth Malgus” [continued] *

- Rim Campaign – Day 215 – Malgus
- Rim Campaign – Day 221 – Malgus
- Rim Campaign – Day 258 – Malgus

3,659 BBY

- Mako is born on Nar Shaddaa. * (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*

* NOTE: She is 29 in TOR.

- Beelzil, secret son of the Sith known as Grathan and his wife, Cellvanta Grathan, is born.* (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*

* NOTE: He is “nearly 20” in the game, hence putting his birth here, 19 years before the game.

- The war between Shor and Peroenia ends with the Shorak victorious.* (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

* NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn. The war lasts 300 years.

- On Ashas Ree, Sith forces under Darth Malgus defeat Republic forces led by Jedi Master Ven Zallow. Once again, Lord Adraas tries to take the credit for Malgus’ victory, but the Dark Council, via one of its agents, assures Malgus that this victory means that he will not want for supplies like on Ord Radama ever again. Seeking to take down Zallow, Malgus learns from Imperial Intelligence that the Jedi Master is on Serenno. Unable to attack the planet directly due to the combined might of its royal houses, Malgus activates a Sith infiltrator that the Sith Emperor placed on Serenno decades ago and whom Darth Caba confirms is a high-ranking noble, now near Ven Zallow. The intent is for the infiltrator to assassinate Zallow, then for Malgus to attack during the ensuing disruption of Republic forces on Serenno.

(conjecture based on Book of Sith)

- On day 315 of the Sith Empire’s Rim Campaign, Darth Malgus reports in his journal about the end of the Battle of Ashas Ree. He will fast until the beginning of the attack on Serenno. (To be continued below . . . )*

(Book of Sith)

*NOTE: See the note with the first Book of Sith summary portion in 3,660 BBY for the reasoning for this placement. (I have assumed further that the gap between days 258 and 315 of the Rim Campaign can be the time in which this “year plus” journal of Malgus enters its second year.)

- The Sith infiltrator on Serenno attempts to kill Jedi Master Ven Zallow, but is killed instead. Even as the assassination attempt is taking place, Darth Malgus leads a Sith force to the planet, capturing it for the Sith Empire, even though Zallow and his men have escaped. The people of Serenno do not readily take to Sith invasion, and House Teramo and House Comprassi hire mercenaries to try to kill Malgus and the other Sith holding their planet. Malgus uses his own assassins to kill those who sent assassins for the Sith. The mercenaries flee.

(conjecture based on Book of Sith)

- On day 342 of the Sith Empire’s Rim Campaign, Darth Malgus reports in his journal about the failed assassination attempt on Jedi Master Ven Zallor and the rest of the Serenno operation. (To be continued below . . . )*

(Book of Sith)

*NOTE: See the note with the first Book of Sith summary portions in 3,660 BBY and 3,659 BBY for the reasoning for this placement.

- Darth Malgus, whom some in the Sith Empire blame for the death of Darth Venemal during the Battle of Ord Radama, is tasked by the Sith Emperor with recapturing Ord Radama from the Republic, thereby restoring his honor. He intends to go all-out this time, bringing his own Force-trained Sith warriors to bear on the world’s new capital, New Raido.

(conjecture based on Book of Sith)

- On day 399 of the Sith Empire’s Rim Campaign, Darth Malgus reports in his journal about his plans for the reconquest of Ord Radama. (To be continued below . . . )*

(Book of Sith)

*NOTE: See the note with the first Book of Sith summary portions in 3,660 BBY and 3,659 BBY for the reasoning for this placement.

- On day 410 of the Sith Empire’s Rim Campaign, Darth Malgus leads the attempt to retake Ord Radama from the Republic. The reconquest drags on for weeks, during which Malgus searches the planet for the Dark Reaper, which the Dark Council wrongly believes is hidden on Ord Radama.

(conjecture based on Book of Sith)

- On day 460 of the Sith Empire’s Rim Campaign, Darth Malgus reports in his journal about the slow ongoing reconquest of Ord Radama and his search for the Dark Reaper. (To be continued below . . . )*

(Book of Sith)

*NOTE: See the note with the first Book of Sith summary portions in 3,660 BBY and 3,659 BBY for the reasoning for this placement.

- On day 479 of the Sith Empire’s Rim Campaign, Darth Malgus reports in his journal that he is assembling a task force to stage a Coreward assault on Republic space.*

(Book of Sith)

*NOTE: See the note with the first Book of Sith summary portions in 3,660 BBY and 3,659 BBY for the reasoning for this placement. (This is the last portion of the book to receive a summary, as only Darth Malgus’ writings are in journal form. The rest is in a more textbook style format.)

- It is believed by some that Hylo Visz double-crosses the Hutts, and she is killed a year after her actions helped break the Mandalorian blockade and save the Core.
(conjecture based on the timeline presented on StarWarsTheOldRepublic.com)

Book of Sith [continued] (novel: Dan Wallace)

Book of Sith [continued] (novel: Dan Wallace)

“Journal of Darth Malgus” [continued] *

- Rim Campaign – Day 315 – Malgus
- Rim Campaign – Day 342 – Malgus
- Rim Campaign – Day 399 – Malgus
- Rim Campaign – Day 460 – Malgus
- Rim Campaign – Day 479 – Malgus

3,658 BBY

- Torian Cadera is born on Geonosis to Jicoln Cadera.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
  *NOTE: He is 18 in TOR.
- The hairstyle worn by Natala Yooms five years from now become stylish. It will be out of date by the time Natala wears it.
  (conjecture based on Deceived)
- At age 18, Felix Iresso joins the Republic Army and enlists in officer training.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
  *NOTE: He is 31 in TOR.
- Imperial superweapon designer Colonel Rebus begins a phase of his career (the next eighteen years) that will include working on the Gauntlet, the Blight Matrix, the Galactophage, subjugation droids, and the Plasm Resource. He even develops a weapon that could end hyperspace travel in given regions, but power requirements are too high, and the project is scrapped.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: This is 18 years before TOR.
- Cinzia Xandret is discovered to have Force potential. When the Sith attempt to take her away, her mother, droidmaker Lema Xandret, goes into hiding, but she is ultimately found. Cinzia is taken away and given a Sith mental block to hide any memories of her mother. She becomes “Eldon Ax” (a play on her initials) and will be the apprentice to Darth Chratis. Lema and the rest of the family (many of whom are also droidmakers) go into hiding. They set up a colony on the remote world of Sebaddon, which orbits a black hole. There, Lema eventually creates a new starship, the Cinzia, named after her daughter, then manages to create a clone of her daughter. That cloned Cinzia is placed in a special “amnioid” fluid (which retains some biological components from Lema and part of her consciousness, one could say, or her “will”). The fluid blocks any outsiders from sensing her Force potential. Lema also creates a new form of quickly-evolving droids that are partially biological, which later become known as “hexes.” Their sole purpose is to defend the clone Cinzia. Meanwhile, an order of termination that the Sith issue for Lema goes unfulfilled, leaving them with a failure that could be exploited to make them look weak.*
  (conjecture based on Fatal Alliance)*
  *NOTE: This assumes that Fatal Alliance is set in 3,643 BBY. This happens 15 years before the novel, when Ax is only 2.
- The Sith Empire stops using an Imperial cipher that will still be used by Lema Xandret’s hexes fifteen years from now.*
  (conjecture based on Fatal Alliance)*
  *NOTE: This assumes that Fatal Alliance is set in 3,643 BBY. This happens 15 years before the novel.

3,657 BBY

- Nok Drayen teaches his daughter, Risha, how to shoot when she is four years old.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: She is 21 in TOR, and this is when she is 4.
- At the age of 12, Kaliyo Djannis is nearly stomped to death on Rattatak due to being part of a “cursed family” (that of a former warlord on the planet). This convinces her that she needs to find a way to get off of her homeworld.*
The Star Wars Timeline Gold: Legends Timeline, Vol. 1

(conjecture based on The Old Republic)*

*NOTE: She is 29 (supposedly) in TOR, and this is when she is 12.

3,656 BBY

- According to Kaliyo Djannis, she and Anspi’shel become friends on a tramp freighter during Kaliyo’s first year away from Rattatak. They steal and share a holdout blaster during this time. (Anspi’shel will later claim this to be a lie, though Kaliyo seems to suggest that it is true with the possibility of some embellishment.)*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*

*NOTE: She is 29 (supposedly) in TOR, and this is in the first year after she leaves Rattatak when she is 12.

3,655 BBY

- Asher Zavros is born.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*

  *NOTE: This is 15 (“nearly 16”) years before TOR.

- Ashara Zavros joins the Jedi Order.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*

  *NOTE: This is 15 years prior to the Sith Inquisitor class storyline of TOR.

3,654 BBY

- After her mother, Diida, rebels against the family’s slave master, Vette’s family is broken apart and sold to different buyers. Vette (born “Ce’na”) is sold, as a slave, by her Hutt master to a being she refers to as “Three-Eyes” (possibly a Gran). At some point during Nok Drayen’s activities, Nok attacks a rival, Vette’s master, “Three-Eyes.” Nok frees the alien’s various slaves, including Vette, who chooses to join his crew as its littlest member. She befriends Risha Drayen, Nok’s daughter, who is the same age.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic and The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*

  *NOTE: She is 21 in TOR, and this is when she is “7 or 8.”

- Pergus Frode is hired as a maintenance worker for the hangar at the Sith Academy on Odacer-Faustin. He refits the hangar’s control booth to include a place to cook food and installs entertainment material.*
  (conjecture based on Red Harvest)*

  *NOTE: This is “almost ten years” (rounded to 9) before Red Harvest.

- In the last days of the Great Galactic War, a Republic force that included Jedi healer Syo Bakarn, Jedi strategist Bela Kiwiiks, Jedi warrior Jaric Kaedan, Jedi hero Satele Shan, 45th Battalion member Maxin Davers, and others, engages Sith forces under Darth Mekhis on Rhen Var. Satele engages Mekhis, leaving her . . . changed.
  (conjecture based on The Lost Suns)

- Imperial Colonel Rymar Quinn dies during the Battle of Rhen Var, leaving his son, Malavai Quinn, without a father but with an example to live up to in his military career.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)

- Around this time, Zeerid Korr goes to work for the Exchange and begins sending money to Natala Yooms and his daughter Arra Yooms on Vaced.
  (conjecture based on Deceived)

- One year prior to the Treaty of Coruscant, Marcus Trant becomes the bureau chief for Republic Strategic Information Service (SIS) on Nar Shaddaa.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

- Near the end of the Great Galactic War, an Imperial offensive reroutes Republic supply lines, causing Carrick Station (formerly Outpost 22) to become the heart of Republic fleet operations.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

- Shigar Konshi is discovered to have Jedi potential by Jedi Watchman Master Tengrove. He has already been using the Force by instinct to win races against his peers. He soon becomes the Padawan to Satele Shan, who herself will soon become the youngest Grand Master in Jedi Order history.*
  (conjecture based on Fatal Alliance)*
NOTE: This assumes that Fatal Alliance is set in 3,642 BBY. See the note with that novel’s summary for details. This is one year before the annexation of Kiffu and Kiffex, when Larin Moxla is adopted on Abregado-rae. For information on why that event was placed where it was (and thus why this one was placed where it was), see the note with that event. (We also have no date at all for when Satele becomes Grand Master, though we do know when she becomes a Jedi Master, nor knowledge as to whether Shigar immediately became her Padawan or waited a while before being chosen. We know only that he was with Satele for many years, traveling the galaxy as her apprentice.)

- The Sith Empire approaches the Republic with talk of a treaty to end the Great Galactic War. Talks are to be held on Alderaan months from now, and preparations begin.

(From The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural)

The Old Republic [continued] (novel series/comic series/video game: Sean Williams & Paul S. Kemp & Drew Karpyshyn & Alexander Freed & Rob Chestney)

The Old Republic [continued] (comic series: Rob Chestney & Alexander Freed)

The Lost Suns [flashback] (comic series: Alexander Freed)

The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)

The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)

The Sacking of Coruscant

21389.87.731 Entry

3,653 BBY

- By this time, Darth Jadus has removed himself from Dark Council politicking to focus entirely upon running Imperial Intelligence.

  (Conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

- After decades of conflict between the Republic (and Jedi Order) and the Sith Empire in the Great Galactic War, the war seems unwinnable for both sides. The Sith Empire, now in control of one half of the galaxy, has made a daring move. With the Sith Emperor and his twelve-member Dark Council frustrated that their victory has not been swift, the Sith Empire offers the Republic a chance at a peace treaty. With their trade routes and Outer Rim worlds still recovering from the devastating Mandalorian blockade that had finally been broken seven years earlier, the Republic (and even the cautious Jedi) are willing to negotiate. Republic and Imperial dignitaries convene on Alderaan . . .

  (Conjecture based on The Old Republic, the timeline presented on StarWarsTheOldRepublic.com and information provided directly by Leland Chee via email)

- As part of the lead-up to peace talks, battles between the Sith Empire and the Republic come to an uneasy halt, including those on Dantooine and in the Minos Cluster.

  (Conjecture based on The Threat of Peace)

- On Ord Mantell, former Republic soldier Zeerid (Z-Man) Korr is on a mission aboard his ship, Fatman, for the Exchange. When he realizes that his contact for the munitions he is delivering, Arigo, has been taken out by local goons that have set a trap for Zeerid, he escapes, using one of the munitions crates to blow up his attackers. Unfortunately, this means that he is in debt to the Exchange for the munitions and must answer to his handler, Oren. Meanwhile, on Coruscant, Darth Malgus and his lover, the Twi'lek Eleena Daru (who knows his real name, Veradun), await word from Mandalorian Shae Vizla that the planet’s defenses have been brought down. When word arrives, they head for the Jedi Temple. On Alderaan, Jedi Knight (and former Padawan to Jedi Master Ven Zallow) Aryn Leneer is restless as part of the peace delegation with fellow Jedi Knights Syo and well-known Satele Shan, under the leadership of Satele’s former master, Dar’nala. Something does not feel right to Aryn . . . On Coruscant, Darth Malgus and Eleena arrive at the Jedi Temple and make their way inside, where they are confronted by Ven Zallow and other Jedi. A Sith dropship, including Lord Adraas (a favorite of Lord Angral) crashes into the building, revealing a horde of Sith warriors. A fierce battle ensues within the Jedi Temple (which eventually includes Shae Vizla as well). During the battle, the Sith devastate the Temple and many Jedi are killed, including Zallow, who dies by Malgus’ blade. (Eleena is injured, but her owner/lover Malgus insists that the Sith force to let her aboard one of their medical ships, the Steadfast, instead of treating her like a common alien.) Even as this is happening, Zeerid Korr is As a Republic delegation (including, among others: Senator Paran Am-Ris; Jedi Master Dar’nala; and Jedi Knight Satele Shan; descendant of Bastila Shan) meets on Alderaan for peace talks with a Sith Imperial delegation led by Lord Baras, a Sith fleet takes advantage of the attention diverted to Alderaan to emerge over Coruscant. Its commander, Lord Angral, immediately opens fire, beginning the assault that will come to be known as the “Sacking of Coruscant.” As the attack begins, Republic Trooper Lieutenant Harron Tavus and Jedi Master Orgus Din have just reported in on the Minos Cluster to the Senate and Supreme Chancellor Berooken. They are the first to confront Lord Angral and his troops as they land at the Senate Tower. Orgus engages Angral in a duel, but a crashing ship ends the duel, allowing Orgus to escape with Tavus to check on the Jedi Temple. Meanwhile, Satele’s own reservations about the peace talks are verified when the Supreme Chancellor alerts them to the Sith treachery just as Angral kills him. Satele draws her lightsaber to attack Lord Baras, but he claims that the attack was meant to hold Coruscant hostage so that the Republic would agree to Sith terms without Jedi interference or long-term negotiations. Master Dar’nala, who was once Satele’s Master, orders her to stand down, as does Am-Ris. Back on Coruscant, Tavus and Orgus find the Jedi Temple decimated, the Jedi inside all dead. (To be continued below . . . )*

(Treaty of Coruscant)*

*NOTE: This event is the basis for the “0” of the Treaty of Coruscant calendar.

• The Sacking of Coruscant has been successful, but not nearly as devastating as Malgus would have liked. At Vulta, Zeerid is contacted again by Oren, who informs him that he will be making a spice run to Imperial-held Coruscant. As he waits on Vulta for Oren’s agents to load the spice, he visits with Arra and his sister-in-law, Natala Yooms. He is being followed by a Hutt Cartel agent, Vrath Xizor, who has orders to stop him from being able to deliver the spice he is going to be carrying. On Alderaan, Aryn makes the fateful decision to abandon the Jedi Order if she must, so that she can get to Coruscant, identify Zallow’s killer, and avenge him. She steals a ship and takes her droid, T6, as she leaves Alderaan and heads for Vulta, hoping that her old friend (and emotionally more), Zeerid, can help her get onto Imperial-held Coruscant. Meanwhile, back at Coruscant, Malgus is furious to learn that the peace process has concluded with a treaty and that Eleena was refused treatment on the Steadfast and forced into a medical facility on Coruscant’s surface. It is just another move in the game that seems to be putting Malgus at a disadvantage to Adraas in Angral’s power maneuvering. He collects her and they head for the Valor, as Malgus continues to grow in realizing just how much of a liability his feelings for Eleena have become. On Vulta, Aryn meets up with Zeerid, who has realized that he is being stalked (by Vrath). He agrees to help Aryn get onto Coruscant, and with her help, he is able to elude Vrath and Cartel goons to get off Vulta, forcing Vrath to give chase. The Fatman piggybacks on an Imperial vessel and is able to arrive at Coruscant, but Vrath has gotten there first and has been taken aboard the Valor, where he informs Malgus that a Jedi is coming (i.e. the Fatman is on its way). With Angral warning Malgus not to disrupt the fragile peace, he tries to stop the Fatman, but when the ship is blasted, Aryn is able to use the Force to get them free from the ship and into open air, getting them down to relative safety, even though the cargo is aboard the ship. Vrath, meanwhile, takes his ship, the Razor, down onto the surface of Coruscant, where he intends to wait aboard until he can leave the system. Malgus, meanwhile, knows who Aryn is, just as she will know that he killed Zallow, and Malgus decides that he will hunt the woman who is hunting him. He sends Eleena and members of his loyal Imperial soldier Kerse’s squad on a trip to the surface to find technology and capture certain individuals for him. Malgus himself will be disobeying orders to go to the surface and hunt Aryn. Aryn and Zeerid enter the Works and make their way toward the Jedi Temple, where they learn from a recording (thanks to another Jedi-owned droid, T7-O1) that Zallow was killed by Malgus. While Zeerid scouts the spaceport for a ship he can use to get offplanet and to find a way for Aryn to stow away and get aboard the Valor, Aryn slips out to the Jedi Temple ruins (on the surface this time, not through the Works) and senses Malgus above, scouting the area, awaiting her. Malgus leaps down to her, and they duel, but Zeerid and T7 come to her rescue (even though she is mostly holding her own), reminding her that she had agreed to help Zeerid. She disengages from the duel, claiming she intends to hurt Malgus before killing him, and they escape. They formulate a new plan, based in part on Zeerid recognizing Eleena at the spaceport during his recon. Malgus races for the spaceport, even as Zeerid, Aryn, and T7 arrive and use a faked emergency to go after Eleena. Zeerid and T7 then also try to steal a starship, which just happens to be the Razor . . . As Aryn subdues Eleena and waits for Malgus to show up, Zeerid encounters Vrath aboard the Razor and a fight ensues. Zeerid subdues Vrath and takes control of the ship, which has lifted off. Below, Aryn duels Malgus again and is defeated, but Malgus does not kill her. He tells her that since she spared Eleena’s life, he will allow her safe passage from Coruscant, which is about to be turned back over to the Republic as part of the treaty anyway. Taking the Sith shuttle, Aryn leaves. In space, Zeerid realizes how badly Vrath could hurt him, given his knowledge of where Arra and Natala area, and he acts in a way he believes Aryn might never forgive: he sends Vrath out of an airlock to his death. Below, Malgus spends one last moment with Eleena and then kills her, knowing it is the only way to remove the weakness she brings out in him . . . (To be continued below . . . )

(Deceived)*

- On Alderaan, Jedi Master Zym communicates the Republic’s intentions to Am-Ris and Dar’nala via holocomm. They have agreed to the Sith Empire’s terms, and Satele is to apologize to Lord Baras, despite the great faith Dar’nala has in her abilities as part of the Shan lineage. Elsewhere, on Dantooine, a bounty hunter hired by the Republic, Braden, is on the trail of a Wookiee, Dalborra, who is working with the Imperial Army. When his Republic commander in a starship above orders him to call off the hunt due to the Treaty of Coruscant having now been signed on Alderaan (with terms quite negative for the Republic), Braden refuses to do so. He is blasted from orbit, but manages to survive, only to be captured by Dalborra. Dalborra decides to accompany Braden, now his prisoner, back into custody on the Sith world of Korriban. Back on Coruscant, the battle has wound down as the Sith withdraw, their goals of the Treaty of Coruscant having been met. Tavus and Orgus emerge from the lower levels to find that the Jedi Temple has now been essentially leveled. Both Lord Baras and Lord Angral return to Korriban to report to the Sith Council and its Emperor. Baras turns down the possibility of future advancement and is forced to engage Angral in a brief duel over Angral’s annoyance at having been recalled before being able to do more damage to the Republic. A short time later, Satele and Dar’nala are aboard a Republic vessel as part of an effort to oversee troop withdrawals (and to keep them out of the way for the time being). They are being spied upon (or “officially observed”) by droid SP-99 when the ship comes under attack by a Sith ship. That Sith ship is the one carrying Braden as a prisoner, and the Sith aboard believe that they were attacked by the Republic ship first. Sith commandos board the Republic ship and attack and capture Dar’nala, while Satele and SP-99 launch in an escape pod on Dar’nala’s orders, unsure as to whether they will ever be found in this part of space. Meanwhile, at the Star Cluster Casino on Nar Shaddaa, a crime cartel makes a “deal with the devil,” forging a partnership with Lord Angral . . . *

(Treaty of Coruscant)*

*NOTE: This event is the basis for the “0” of the Treaty of Coruscant calendar.

- In the wake of the Sacking of Coruscant, Imperial military leader Rycus Kilran becomes famous as the “Butcher of Coruscant,” while he still bears scars from battling a Jedi boarding party during the assault. He is given the honorary title of “Grand Moff” for his actions during the attack on Coruscant.

(conjecture based on information found on StarWarsTheOldRepublic.com)

- In the wake of the Sacking of Coruscant, an Imperial terrorist cell remains on the planet, even after the Empire withdraws. This group and various psychopaths who thrive on chaos are organized by the Houk known as Skadge and quickly become the foundation for a new criminal gang and future crime syndicate, Black Sun. Skadge will remain their leader until a joint sting operation by police, the military, and Republic Strategic Information Service agents bring him down and send him to prison on Belsavis.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

- Jedi Orgus Din’s Padawan, Bengel Morr, is presumed dead when his body is not found after the attack on the Jedi Temple on Coruscant. Orgus will not take a new Padawan again until the “Hero of Tython.”

(conjecture based on The Old Republic)

- In the wake of the death of Jedi Master Ven Zallow, Shafu, a Rodian undercover agent that Zallow had saved from a life of crime, disappears in Hutt territory. Unbeknownst to anyone else, Zallow sent Shafu on a secret mission to uncover treachery among the Hutt Council, but Shafu’s ship was destroyed over Nar Shaddaa.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic)

- In the wake of the Treaty of Coruscant, Carl Norn makes Andronikos Revel his first mate aboard the Bloodshot Rancor.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic)

- In the wake of the Treaty of Coruscant, many Mandalorians break away from the somewhat unified force that they became to fight alongside the Sith Empire and become freelance bounty hunters. Clan Varad breaks away from the Mandalorian proper and pursues a ritualized quest for battle, known as aakaan’gaan.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic)

- In the wake of the Treaty of Coruscant, smuggler Zale Barrows is utilized as the Republic’s unofficial ferryman to Belsavis.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic)

- In the wake of the Treaty of Coruscant, Nasan Godera leaves his work on Republic superweapons because he sees the Treaty of Coruscant as giving in to the Empire. He hides out for years on the planet Taris.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic)

- After the Treaty of Coruscant, Imperial black ops is shut down, causing teams like that including Pierce (future member of the Emperor’s Wrath’s team during Darth Baras’ attempt to become the Voice of the Emperor) to be disbanded. With the end of black ops, Arlos, a member of Pierce’s team, begins drinking heavily.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic)

- Jedi Master Gnost-Dural reports on the Sacking of Coruscant and the Treaty of Coruscant in his journal. It falls to Gnost-Dural to provide the official report to the Jedi Council of the Sacking of Coruscant.

(The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural)

- At the Republic military base on Balmorra, General Buryn provides direction, now that withdraw orders have been issued in the wake of the Treaty of Coruscant. One particular Jedi Knight, though, Fortris Gall, ignores those orders to save Demolitions Squad 419 from custody at the Troida Military Workshop, where he infiltrates that night, killing a Sith guardian. Meanwhile, back on Coruscant at the Senate building, Rodian Ambassador Mareesh withdraws Rodia from the Republic, telling off Senator Paran Am-Ris about the Republic abandoning Rodia. Am-Ris then informs Jedi Master Zym that the Jedi Temple will not be rebuilt at the moment, due to needing funds for other rebuilding. Outside, Master Zym tells Jedi Knight Orgus Din about the Senate’s decision to not rebuild the Temple, but they have bigger concerns. Orgus is sent, along with Lieutenant Harron Tavus, to Balmorra to deal with the situation involving Fortris. Elsewhere, aboard the Sith vessel that was transporting Braden, captured Jedi Dar’nala is tortured and questioned about why the Republic ship she was aboard attacked the Sith ship. Dar’nala repeats that the Sith attacked the Republic ship, not the other way around. Knowing that she will likely be killed, Dar’nala assists Braden in escaping the Sith, making him promise to take a message for her to Nym and Satele Shan, her former Padawan. He escapes, but he has one stop to make first. He heads for Nar Shaddaa to meet with Nok Drayen, who offers to help him with his last mission if he will help Nok in return. Speaking of Satele, she and SP-99 are discovered in their escape pod, but their saviors are Mandalorian slavers, who intend to sell their new acquisitions on Geonosis. The ship bearing Tavus and Orgus arrives on the scene and blasts the Mandalorians, saving Satele and SP-99, who reveal the truth about the Imperial attack to Tavus and Orgus. Aboard the Sith ship, Dar’nala is blamed (rightly) for Braden’s escape, and Dalborra is allowed to execute her, since Braden was his bounty. This information is relayed to Tavus (and thus Satele) when they report to Master Zym about the earlier attack. The Senate is clamoring for war to resume. When Sivill’s ship arrives on Korriban, Dalborra is told that he is to leave the planet, since he no longer has a prisoner to require him to stick around, but a bomb blows up the ship after they disembark, and Lord Angral is spreading the word that the Republic is violating the Treaty of Coruscant already. Upon arrival at Balmorra, Orgus meets with Fortris, who is still fighting the Imperials. He sends Fortris, Satele, and Tavus to Dantooine to stop the fighting there as well in hopes that peace might still be an option. Fortris leaves in his own ship, while Tavus and Satele (with some flirtatious banter) go on another ship, taking SP-99 with them. On Coruscant, Braden uses false information to lure both Zym and Commander Gin Lesl (who had hired Braden and then ordered his death) to a meeting. Once there, Braden kills Lesl, then attempts to give Dar’nala’s message to Zym. Zym, however, sees only a killer and attacks Braden, who fires a missile that kills Master Zym. He has tried to deliver the message, but now he cannot. He has other business to attend to. As he leaves, the Senate Tower is bombed! By the time Satele and Tavus reach Dantooine, Senator Am-Ris is contacting them about the deaths of Lesl and Zym, plus the bombing. Satele hopes for peace still, but Tavus intends to stay and help Republic Major Dael fight on Dantooine, as does Fortris, who has already arrived and headed out on recon duty. Shortly thereafter, Fortris contacts Tavus, asking him to meet at the old Jedi Enclave nearby. Something is amiss. He blasts SP-99 to get rid of his meddling on behalf of the Sith and sets out. Meanwhile, as the Republic’s leader on Balmorra argues for staying, Orgus argues the latter, until he is sent by Am-Ris to track down Braden to determine if he was out for revenge or acting for the Sith. On Korriban, Sith Lord Baras, who is suspicious of Darth Angral’s motives lately, is attacked by an assassin, whom he defeats. He believes the assassin was sent by Angral . . .

(New Galactic Order)

- Jedi Master Gnost-Dural reports on the death of Jedi Master Zym and that Jedi Master Orgus Din will be tapped to investigate.

(The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural)

- Bounty hunter Braden returns to Nok Drayen on Nar Shaddaa, who has him take schematics that he took from the assassinated Gin Lesl to Dantooine. He reveals to Nok before leaving that the message he was told to bring from Jedi Master Dar’nala to Jedi Master Zym was that the Imperials who attacked their ship was under orders from the Sith Lord Baras (the very man who helped arrange the Treaty of Coruscant in the first place). On Dantooine, Lieutenant Harron Tavus meets with Jedi Fortris Gall at the old Jedi Enclave, where Fortris tells him that Fortris’ own comrades bombed the Senate Tower to take out the Senators who were believed to be spies that betrayed the Envoy (Dar’nala’s ship) to the Sith Empire. In space, en route to Dantooine, Sith Lord Angral is contacted by Nok, who informs him that the schematics are on the way to Dantooine, along with the information that Baras had arranged for the attack on the Envoy to break the peace. The captain of that ship, Sivill, died when the ship was bombed immediately upon returning to Korriban, covering Baras’ tracks. Angral immediately sets course to return to Korriban. Back on Nar Shaddaa, Braden has not yet left when he is attacked by Jedi Orgus Din, who has been sent to find him after the death of Master Zym. Braden states that he had nothing to do with the Senate bombing, but he will help Orgus find who is disrupting the peace if they journey together to Dantooine. On Korriban, Angral arrives and confronts Baras, who believes the recent attempt on his life was arranged by Angral. Angral and Baras duel, but they stop when Angral reveals that Dar’nala had pried Baras’ name out of Sivill’s mind and gave that information to Bardan before his escape. With plans seemingly revealed, Baras asks for Angral’s assistance . . . On Dantooine, Bardan is finally able to deliver Dar’nala’s message about Baras to Satele Shan, her former Padawan, but she doesn’t understand, since Baras seemed more at peace than even Dar’nala on Alderaan. At the nearby Jedi Enclave, the bounty hunter Dalborra arrives . . . with Dar’nala! The Jedi Master had Dalborra under her influence, so he only faked her execution aboard Sivill’s ship. Moreover, it is Dar’nala who is the leader of the same faction of Jedi and military officers to which Fortris belongs, and who bombed the Senate Tower. She reveals that they have plans in motion to reignite the war in order to save the Republic from the false Treaty of Coruscant that is only setting them up for a later Sith strike. Dar’nala’s message through Bardan was actually a ruse to blame Baras for reigniting the war, and now they only need to kill him when he arrives at Dantooine soon in order to cover those tracks. Tavus reluctantly joins them, though he still has doubts about what amounts to treason. When Braden escapes, Orgus goes after him, ordering Satele to remain at the base until he returns, rather than checking out the Jedi Enclave (which she learns of through the blasted SP-99). She disobeys immediately and heads for the enclave. Underground in ancient crystal caves, the Sith (Lord Angral, Lord Baras, and soldiers) await the Jedi team, who arrive to do battle. (The Sith have figured out that Dar’nala’s lies were at the heart of all of this, which was never a Sith plot on either Sith Lord’s side.) What was a Sith plot by Baras was to wait until the Jedi finally refused to accept the peace treaty and to expose their hypocrisy and hate. Baras and Dar’nala duel, revealing that Dar’nala arranged the attack on the Envoy and all of the recent violence. Now, as Angral and Satele duel, they realize that they are on the same side in one thing: preserving the peace. When Tavus blasts Angral and has him at gunpoint, it is Satele who orders him to stand down. When he does, Dar’nala decides that if she is going to stand against her own former master, Dar’nala will kill Tavus, whom she can sense is Satele’s love interest. Fortris stops the killing blow, seeing how far Dar’nala has truly fallen, but then she Force blasts him down, ordering Dalborra to kill him. Instead, the Wookiee, coming to his senses during the battle, delivers a deadly blow to Dar’nala, killing her for real this time. Angral tries to stop them from leaving, but Baras allows them to leave, but he makes a final offer to Satele, whom Baras believes to be the descendant of Darth Revan and Bastila Shan, to join the Sith, as the Dark Side runs in her bloodline. They leave, and Darth Angral decides to not follow Baras’ lead again. He will make the rules now. A short time later, Orgus returns, having lost Braden’s trail. The others tell him that the attacks will stop, now that a faction that was not truly aligned with the Republic or the Empire has been stopped, but they won’t say more than that. Now, the Republic is pulling out of Dantooine. Nearby, Dalborra is unable to escape Braden. The human bounty hunter takes down his Wookiee rival this time around.

(Uncertain Surrender)

- Among the terms agreed to in the Treaty of Coruscant is the concession of seven star systems that are mostly uninhabited and strategically unimportant from the Republic to the Empire. Each planet is given over to one of the seven surviving members of the Sith’s Dark Council, including Darth Mekhis, who claims the Vesla system.
  (conjecture based on The Lost Suns)
- In the wake of the Sacking of Coruscant, the Republic does not allocated funds to rebuild some areas, such as the Old Galactic Market, which makes these areas a perfect breeding ground for new criminal and extra-governmental organizations.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
- In the wake of the Sacking of Coruscant, the Republic creates a memorial to those who died during the event, known as the Cenotaph of the Innocents. One sapling is planted for every dead individual.
  (conjecture based on Fatal Alliance)
- In the wake of the Treaty of Coruscant, Jedi Knight Ardun Kothe leaves the Jedi Order (amicably) and joins the Republic’s Strategic Information Service.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
- In the wake of the Treaty of Coruscant, Jedi Master Syo Bakarn founds the Jedi Restoration Accord to help rebuild damaged regions of Coruscant.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
• General Var Suthra begins the weapons projects in the memory of the Jedi cut down during the Sacking of Coruscant’s Jedi Temple attack. The Power Guard program is authorized as part of this program.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)
• In the wake of the Great Galactic War, the Republic experiences an economic depression.
  (conjecture based on information found on StarWarsTheOldRepublic.com)
• In the wake of the Great Galactic War, the Republic armed forces begin training a select Special Forces legion known as the Republic Troopers. At times, they work with Jedi, who remain in some cases working with the Republic military, but often they protect the Republic in lieu of the Jedi.
  (conjecture based on information found on StarWarsTheOldRepublic.com)
• In the wake of the Great Galactic War, the corrupt leaders on Ord Mantell, led by Governor Mitraela decide it is more profitable to stay with the Republic. Much of the population, however, believes it would be better to be independent or side with the Sith Empire, so a Separatist movement emerges, sparking a civil war on Ord Mantell.
  (conjecture based on information found on StarWarsTheOldRepublic.com, The Old Republic Encyclopedia, and The Old Republic Explorer’s Guide)
• Sometime after the Great Galactic War and the Treaty of Coruscant, the Jedi Council instructs Jedi Master Ghost-Dural, Keeper of the Jedi Archives, to revise the Jedi Order’s historical records in light of new information that was discovered during the Great Galactic War about the Sith Empire and its history.
  (conjecture based on the timeline presented on StarWarsTheOldRepublic.com)
• In the wake of the Great Galactic War, Darth Malgus decides not to engage in power plays to become part of the Dark Council. Instead, he begins working toward taking over other worlds in the Unknown Regions to add to the Sith Empire.
  (conjecture based on information found on StarWarsTheOldRepublic.com)
• In the wake of the Great Galactic War, the galaxy enters what becomes known as the cold war between the Republic and the Sith Empire.
  (conjecture based on Fatal Alliance)
• In the wake of the Great Galactic War, the Mandalorians and the Sith Empire go their separate ways. Many of these now non-aligned Mandalorians go back to fighting in gladiator arenas, such as on Geonosis and Tatooine.
  (conjecture based on Fatal Alliance)
• At some point during the rule of Supreme Chancellor Paran Am-Ris, a religious conflict breaks out on Sarrassia that is only quelled by the world being conquered centuries later by Sith Lord Bactra.
  (conjecture based on Knight Errant Gazetteer)
• Shortly after the Treaty of Coruscant, Ngani Zho leaves the Republic to seek out the truth about the regions ceded to the Sith Empire in the treaty. He secretly joins a slave labor force for the Sith, who are working on the Sun Razer, a new superweapon, and testing other superweapons that are being developed in conjunction with the Sun Razer.
  (conjecture based on The Lost Suns)
• In the wake of the Sacking of Coruscant, the labor union known as the Migrant Merchants’ Guild begins to have its members fill leadership roles on Coruscant, either on their own or through allies, thereby making it a powerful (yet corrupt) organization on Coruscant.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
• In the wake of the Treaty of Coruscant, the Republic tries to keep the support of loyal planets by rewarding and empowering local leaders on many worlds, even if those leaders are corrupt, as is the case on Ord Mantell. Some on Ord Mantell grow frustrated with this situation and rise up to form the Mantellian Separatist Movement, which strikes against the legitimate (but corrupt) government, often not caring about collateral damage to others. Republic loyalists fight back to support the current regime.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)
• In the wake of the Treaty of Coruscant, both the Republic and the Sith Empire begin operations to recover technology from the Starship Graveyard on Hoth, though only the Empire does so with Chiss Ascendancy permission.
(conjecture based on The Old Republic Explorer’s Guide)

- In the wake of the Treaty of Coruscant, the Republic withdraws from Balmorra, which allows the Sith Empire to gain a foothold on the world, though loyal Balmorrans form a resistance movement to fight them. However, the Republic has secretly left a small contingent behind to aid this resistance movement. Eventually, the Empire will turn the planet’s own defensive satellites against the surface and its enemies. The Empire transforms the city of Sobrik into two sections: the outer town (mostly slums) and an Imperial military base at its center. The Empire also takes over the Troida Military Workshop to produce arms for the Empire, though the resistance and Republic faction will eventually gain its own base and weapon supply from the Balmorran Arms Factory. To keep the resistance from gaining another resource, the Empire sabotages the Okara Droid Company factory to have its droids attack anyone trying to enter.
(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia and The Old Republic Explorer’s Guide)

- In the wake of the Treaty of Coruscant, the Advozse of Rilfor find themselves marginalized. The Sith Empire wants them as cheap mercenaries and slaves, while the Republic cannot afford the resources necessary to defend them. Battlelord Kreshan brings together a splinter government that becomes known as the Advozse Hegemony, which will remain a minor power until discovering the long-lost Hammer Station as its new power base.
(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

- Shortly after the Treaty of Coruscant, a new individual is promoted to be the Keeper of Imperial Intelligence. He will remain in this position until being promoted to Minister of War after orchestrating several successful intelligence missions with Cipher Nine a bit over a decade from now.*
(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*

*NOTE: The Old Republic Encyclopedia contradicts itself by claiming that he becomes Keeper shortly after the treaty, yet referring to him as being in the position for “almost a decade” as of TOR, which is in 3,640 BBY, according to the same book.

- In the wake of the Treaty of Coruscant, the people of Alderaan, who suffered brutal losses during the Great Galactic War, feel that the Republic has betrayed its people by capitulating to the Sith Empire’s demands. Crown Prince Gaul Panteer declares Alderaan to be independent, leaving the Republic government (and his position in the Senate) in disgust. In the coming years, this weakens the world and heightens political tensions at home.
(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

- Weeks after the Treaty of Coruscant, Colonel Elin Garza and Colonel Jace Malcom’s Republic Special Forces Division (SpecForces) is officially founded, having been in development since just after the Battle of Alderaan. Garza is promoted to the rank of General and becomes its first commander. Among the program’s first fully-trained troops is Harron Tavus, who has been with Jek Kardan’s Havoc Squad long enough now to become its XO.
(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

- In the period following the destruction of the Jedi Temple on Coruscant during the Sacking of Coruscant, the ruins of the temple will become a haven for secret Imperial commandos and Sith researchers who seek to plunder the Jedi’s ancient secrets from the rubble.
(conjecture based on The Old Republic Explorer’s Guide)

- Sometime in this year, Imperial Intelligence agent Cipher Twelve dies.*
(conjecture based on The Old Republic)*

*NOTE: This is 13 years prior to TOR.

- As the Sith Empire consolidate its power, Kiffu and Kiffex are annexed. As a result, Larin Moxla’s parents send her away to Abregado-rae, where she is adopted by a family who had already adopted other children after the Treaty of Coruscant. (Her parents die in a prison on Kiffex.) As all of this is happening, Padawan Shigar Konshi is on Dantooine with Jedi Master Satele Shan, investigating ruins.*
(conjecture based on Fatal Alliance)*

*NOTE: This assumes that Fatal Alliance is set in 3,642 BBY. This is a tricky event. It must be after the Treaty of Coruscant, based on Larin’s adoptive family having already taken in kids since that event. However, Larin is also so young that she can’t remember these events clearly. That means it needs to be as long before Fatal Alliance as possible from a practical standpoint. Moreover, a year before this is when Shigar is found by the Jedi, and one would think that he would have been fairly young at the time. I have placed the event here, after the Treaty of Coruscant, but still in the same year, just to try to make sense of the event and give it a placement.

- Months after the Sacking of Coruscant, Darth Malgus secretly returns from his new posting in the Unknown Regions and kills Lord Adraas, claiming that there can be no peace with the Republic and the Jedi. Elsewhere, on Dantooine, Zeerid Korr has left his former life behind and become a farmer, reunited with Natala Yooms (his sister-in-law) and his daughter, Arra Yooms. They receive a surprise visitor: former Jedi Knight Aryn Leneer, who has come to finally be reunited with her friend and his family.

(Deceived)

- Between this time and one year before the Great Hunt that leads to its Grand Champion facing off with the “Voidwolf” (Imperial Grand Admiral Harridax Kirill), Mandalore the Vindicated will call one Great Hunt.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

- The Republic accidentally discovers (or re-discovers) Voss, meeting its two main native cultures, the Force-using Voss (who are divided into Mystics and healers) and the Gormak, who view Force use as heretical. (Unbeknownst to the Republic, it would seem that it was the arrival and actions of ancient Jedi that caused this rift between the Voss and Gormak, though the details are lost to history.) The Sith Empire tries to takes Voss, but the Republic defends it. Before a massive space battle can commence, ships simply vanish due to intervention from the Force-powerful Voss Mystics. Both sides begin negotiations to try to bring Voss into the cold war on their side, though, unbeknownst to them, the Star Cabal will make their own agreement with the Voss soon, which keeps them from being able to join the Republic or the Empire, while also being unable to reveal the truth of the matter.*

(conjecture based on The Old Republic Explorer’s Guide and The Old Republic)*

*NOTE: The Old Republic Explorer’s Guide says that this is shortly after the Treaty of Coruscant, but Athelis Kallis, in TOR, refers to having researched the Voss for 20 years. Obviously, something is screwy with the chronology of Voss encounters.

The Old Republic [continued] (novel series/comic series/video game: Sean Williams & Paul S. Kemp & Drew Karpyshyn & Alexander Freed & Rob Chestney)

Deceived (novel: Paul S. Kemp)

Day One

Chapters 1 – 3

Deceived [continued] (novel: Paul S. Kemp)

Day One [continued]

Chapters 4 – 9

Day Two

Chapters 10 – 11

Day Three

Chapters 12 – 13

*NOTE: See note with the remaining portions of Threat of Peace below.

The Old Republic [continued] (comic series: Rob Chestney & Alexander Freed)

Threat of Peace (webcomic series: Rob Chestney)*

Treaty of Coruscant (comic: Rob Chestney)*

San Diego ComicCon 2009 Preview Edition (comic: Rob Chestney)

Webcomics 1 – 3*

*NOTE: See note with Uncertain Surrender below.

The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)
The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)
The Sacking of Coruscant [continued]

21390.02.056 Entry

The Old Republic [continued] (novel series/comic series/video game: Sean Williams & Paul S. Kemp & Drew Karpyshyn & Alexander Freed & Rob Chestney)
The Old Republic [continued] (comic series: Rob Chestney & Alexander Freed)
Threat of Peace [continued] (webcomic series: Rob Chestney)*
New Galactic Order (comic: Rob Chestney)*

Webcomics 10 – 18*

*NOTE: See note with Uncertain Surrender below.

The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)
The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)
Events After the Treaty of Coruscant

21390.76.299 Entry

The Old Republic [continued] (novel series/comic series/video game: Sean Williams & Paul S. Kemp & Drew Karpyshyn & Alexander Freed & Rob Chestney)
The Old Republic [continued] (comic series: Rob Chestney & Alexander Freed)
Threat of Peace [continued] (webcomic series: Rob Chestney)*
Uncertain Surrender (comic: Rob Chestney)*

Webcomics 19 – 29*

*NOTE: When released online, The Old Republic: Threat of Peace was released as 27 webcomic “issues” that only consisted of three pages each. Those 27 webcomic “issues” are sometimes referred to as Threat of Peace, Parts I – XXVII, while sometimes being referred to as Treaty of Coruscant, Parts I – IX and so on, with nine parts for each storyline. Now that these have been released as actual, printed comic books, each of the three storylines has received its own issue of the comic series, but the storyline titles (i.e. Treaty of Coruscant) are missing from the comics, which are simply labeled as Threat of Peace, Parts I – III. To make matters more confused, there was a San Diego ComicCon preview comic in 2009 that included only the first five three-page “issues” in print form, making it only 5/9 of the first issue of the print series. For the sake of clarity, I’m referring to the online “issues” as “webcomics,” and I am referring to each issue of the printed comic series and its online nine-issue counterpart by the storyline names from the online release, which seems a proper way to differentiate between the issues.

The Old Republic [continued] (novel series: Sean Williams & Paul S. Kemp)
Deceived [continued] (novel: Paul S. Kemp)

Epilogue

3,652 BBY

- At age 12, Raina Temple finally realizes that the “training drills” that keep having her father come home scarred are actually Imperial Intelligence operations. He is, in fact, a Cipher agent (Cipher Three), as is Raina’s mother.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*

*NOTE: She is 24 in TOR, and this is when she is 12.

- In the days following the Treaty of Coruscant, Senator Dorian Janarus leads efforts in rebuilding and renewing the damaged parts of the Republic capital world. When the time comes for interim Supreme Chancellor Paran Am-Ris to end his temporary stewardship of the Republic, citizens, caught up in a wave of hope from restoration efforts, elect Janarus as the new Supreme Chancellor.
  (conjecture based on Fatal Alliance and The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

- In the days following the Treaty of Coruscant, a group of disillusioned planets that believe the Republic has incompetent leadership joins together to form the Rift Alliance, threatening to secede from the Republic, in order to draw its attention to their needs. The planets involved include the resource-rich worlds of Saleucami, Aeten II, Balmorra, Manaan, Erigorm, and Sarkhai. Sarkhai is represented by Senator Tobias Grell, who brings his secretly Force-sensitive daughter, Nadia Grell, with him as his diplomatic assistant.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

- In the days following the Treaty of Coruscant, Senator Bevera Dodonna’s political career begins to plateau. She is given the title of Undersecretary of the Senate Security Council, but she wants more and is jealous of the rise to prominence of Senator Leontyne Saresh.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
Sixteen months after leading the Jedi Order and joining the Republic Strategic Information Service, Ardun Kothe is granted command of SIS’s Mid-Rim Operations Group. (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

3,651 BBY

- Aric Jorgan (age 19) enters the Academy.* (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*

*NOTE: This is 11 years before TOR (due to being 4 years before he graduates and goes into the field).

- The Jedi Order, without a Temple on Coruscant (because the Senate refuses to allocate funds to rebuild it) and considered by the Senate to have been the root of all of the Republic’s problems, is fortunate when Jedi Knight Satele Shan discovers the ancient Jedi homeworld of Tython, which, despite the events of the Force Wars, is deemed habitable. With such an unfavorable situation on Coruscant, the Jedi Order relocates its headquarters to Tython, where they will attempt to reconnect with the Force and reinvent their role in the galaxy. Satele herself is promoted to the rank of Jedi Master and placed on the Jedi Council. She will be instrumental in making plans for a new Jedi Temple on Tython. Jedi Master Gnost-Dural writes in his journal of his excitement to move to Tython. (The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural)*

*NOTE: Another source (noted in the Force and Destiny Core Rulebook, suggests that it was Jedi Pa’lowick scout Ley Neetels that actually found Tython by following the “song” of the Force in the Wandering Diva. One wonders if this information was provided to Satele, and Satele was given credit for some reason.

- Historians who disagree with official Jedi histories will argue that Satele Shan did not actually find Tython but simply discovered a world with mysterious ruins and named it “Tython” to rally the Jedi. (conjecture based on Nexus of Power)

- When the Jedi Order relocates to Tython, Jedi Masters Ryen and Ocera, who have looked after Ashara Zavros after the deaths of her parents, also Jedi, during the Great Galactic War when she was very young, relocate to Tython as part of this exodus, taking Ashara with them to be a true Jedi Padawan. (conjecture based on The Old Republic)

- Around the time that the Jedi Order relocates to Tython, a group of Twi'leks, led by Matriarch Kolovish, settles on Tython as well, seeking to escape persecution for their own spiritual believes. They request official permission to create a settlement from the Republic, but permission is denied. Despite this setback, they create a settlement anyway, which comes to be known as Kalikori Village. (conjecture based on The Old Republic)

- When the Jedi Order relocates to Tython, they find the ruins of Kaleth from millennia earlier, and some suggest that it should be the site of the new Jedi Temple. However, upon entering the ruins, violent war droids awaken to defend Kaleth’s secrets, forcing the Jedi to look elsewhere for a building site. (conjecture based on The Old Republic)

- The hunt for Mandalorian traitor Jicoln Cadera is so difficult for the Grand Champions of the Great Hunt (the group with access to his bounty on the Blacklist) that the bounty hunters begin to consider going after Jicoln to be a new tradition. Each new inductee into the Grand Champions (the only ones who can access the Blacklist) is given this bounty, but only after putting in an ante. Whomever eventually nails Jicoln will receive the accumulated stakes from years and years of Champions trying and failing to get to him. By a little over a decade from now, the only Grand Champions to have survived are Bloodworthy, Jewl’a Nightbringer, and the Defenestrator, with Bloodworthy being the last to attempt to go after Jicoln and live to fight another day.* (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*

*NOTE: This is “a little over a decade” before TOR, which I have interpreted as 11 years.

- Injaye becomes a spy for Darth Baras within the Jedi Order, eventually becoming a Jedi Master.* (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*

*NOTE: This is “over a decade” before TOR, which I have interpreted as 11 years.
The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)

Events After the Treaty of Coruscant [continued]

21392.38.748 Entry

3,651 – 3,642 BBY

- Sometime in this era, a group of Twi'leks attempt to settle on Tython in violation of Republic law, creating a new threat to the Jedi Order who have resettled there after the Great Galactic War.

(conjecture based on information found on StarWarsTheOldRepublic.com)

3,650 BBY

- When the current head of the Republic Strategic Information Service (SIS) finds himself in ill health and resigns his position, Bureau Chief Marcus Trant is recalled from his post on Nar Shaddaa to become the new SIS Director.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

- Theron Shan, who has already carved out a reputation on the minor-league swoop circuits of Manaan, joins the Republic’s Strategic Information Service.

(conjecture based on Annihilation)

- Doctor Lorrick, a member of the Thirty-seven Families, is branded a traitor to the Tion Hegemony. He flees and goes into hiding on Ord Mantell, spending the next decade working on a plot to take control of the Tion Hegemony (and then the galaxy) for himself, using a plague of rakghouls.*

(conjecture based on The Old Republic)*

*NOTE: This is 10 years before TOR.

*NOTE: We have no real indication of when this takes place, other than that it is sometime prior to The Old Republic, during which the Empire is now allied with the Hutt Cartel to attack the Republic and Three Families on Quesh. (Yes, I know some sites claim that this happens early in the game and the attack by the Empire happens right afterward in the game, but that doesn’t make sense with information in the TOR Encyclopedia and Explorer’s Guide. Then again, those same sites still refuse to acknowledge the actual starting date of the game from The Old Republic that Leland Chee has since confirmed.) For what it’s worth, since this is important information, I have simply estimated a decade to have passed by the time of the game, though this is pure conjecture until we have a real, set date for this event. Either way, it isn’t during the game.

- Gangster Nok Drayen, the man who wiped out a settlement on Mandellia and also defeated the Rath Cartel and the Vandelhelm Combine in the Syndicate Wars, apparently dies, leaving behind a vast treasure, which he has hidden. In celebration, his old rival Diago Hixan raids one of Drayen’s storehouses, stealing, among other things, a Gree sensor computer. In truth, he has not died. One of his lieutenants has infected him with a disease that is incurable. Doctor Chelah and Risha Drayen (Nok’s daughter, age 11) have had him frozen in carbonite at a secret medical facility in a restricted area of Nar Shaddaa for hibernation treatment. His treasure is indeed lost, and Risha will spend the next decade seeking out a list of things he told her to find, so that they can get to his abandoned starship near a black hole and recover that treasure one day. Risha makes her first solo hyperspace jump to Dantooine in order to lay low (with him in carbonite) at one of Nok’s old hideouts. Nok has left many recordings to help teach Risha the ways of his criminal business. She will continue studying these while living on Dantooine until she is 14. Meanwhile, with Nok Drayen’s plan to put himself into stasis enacted, Vette cannot continue with his organization, nor be a companion to Risha. She joins a group of Twi’lek artifact hunters (thieves) on Nar Shaddaa, which consists of herself, Taunt, Plasmajack, and Flash. Their first mark is the Duros Cada Bliss. For a while, things go well."

NOTE: This is 10 years before TOR.

- At age 12, Corso Riggs saves his cousin Rona Riggs from her father’s wrath by starting a fight as cover to distract him from seeing her dating an Agamarian pirate. She still ends up in the city jail, and the ship is locked down."

NOTE: He is 22 in TOR, and this is when he is 12.

- At age 10, Kira Carsen has seen enough of her fellow Sith children being brainwashed by the Emperor into being Children of the Emperor and experienced enough of his brainwashing sessions herself to want to escape. She stows away on a ship of slaves and escapes the planet."

NOTE: This is 10 years prior to TOR.

- Tarro Blood is crippled by his fellow Mandalorians during this year’s Great Hunt."

NOTE: This is 10 years prior to TOR.

- Around this time, Aric Jorgan begins basically living off of field rations.

NOTE: This is 10 years prior to TOR.

- Malavai Quinn is tracking a Republic Strategic Information Service agent named Voloren. He nearly has the spy in his clutches when he is torn away from the assignment by orders from Moff Bryosc, so that he can join in the Battle of Druckenwell. (He provides enough information to Bryosc that someone else could catch the SIS agent, but Bryosc ignores his information.) While serving under Bryosc at Druckenwell, Quinn singlehandedly saves the day for the Empire by ignoring an order from Bryosc that was a major oversight and could have cost them the battle. In the wake of the Imperial victory, however, Bryosc court-marshals Quinn, taking credit for Quinn’s actions during the battle. Quinn is falsely disgraced, assigned to Balmorra, and blocked from future promotion by Bryosc until the arrival of Darth Baras’ Apprentice a decade later."

NOTE: This is 10 years prior to TOR.

3,649 BBY

- Juru Ostrogoth arrives on Odacer-Faustin to join its Sith Academy. During his first week there, another apprentice, Mannock T’sank, tries to bully him. When Juru resists, he finds himself tied up naked on his bunk. He is “saved” by the Zabrak Sith apprentice Scopique, but only because Scopique records a vid of his predicament to use as blackmail throughout their time at the academy.

NOTE: This is “nearly a decade” before TOR, which I have interpreted as 9 years.

3,648 BBY

- Wim Nickter arrives on Odacer-Faustin to join its Sith Academy.

*NOTE: He is a “fifth year” student as of Red Harvest, but that does not mean that he arrived five years earlier, as he is in his fifth year, not finished with his fifth year. (If the fifth year is still ongoing as of 3,645 BBY, then his first year is this year.)

- Charity worker Daegin Strell of Nar Shaddaa dies. His memory lives on, as he is thought of as a local hero to the poor and downtrodden, who continue to visit his Strell House.

NOTE: This is “nearly a decade” before TOR, which I have interpreted as 9 years.

- Corso Riggs joined the Peace Brigade relief organization when he was 14. His cousin Rona Riggs has also left Ord Mantell with him, but she jumps ship at the first possible port."

NOTE: This is 10 years prior to TOR.
*NOTE: He is 22 in TOR, and this is when he is 14.

- Jedi Master Gnost-Dural is now working with Jedi Masters Yuon and Kiwiiks to study an ancient Tythonian civilization on Tython that existed more than 22,000 years earlier.

  (The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural)

- Operation Starbender is nearly a disaster for the Empire when a pirate fleet attempts to destroy an Imperial base. Before they can do so, however, the pirate flagship is destroyed by some form of sabotage on the inside, which will later be linked via other “lucky” incidents to a group known as the Star Cabal.*

  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*

*NOTE: This is 8 years prior to TOR.

- On Alderaan, nobles from the various Houses finally convince Crown Prince Gaul Panteer to recant the planet’s secession from the Republic and to rejoin the Republic. Shortly after making this decision, however, Gaul is killed. Just days later, when Queen Silara Panteer dies under suspicious circumstances (without a Panteer heir by Gaul), the leader of Alderaan’s proudest military dynasty, Bouris Ulgo of House Ulgo comes to the fore, but House Thul also returns from exile (backed by the Sith Empire) with claims to the throne. To keep House Thul from taking power, Bouris Ulgo declares himself King of Alderaan during a Peacemaker’s Day speech, expecting great public support. Instead, House Ulgo comes under attack, and Alderaanian society fragments. The members of House Panteer, who believe themselves the rightful heirs to the throne, are virtually wiped out, sending the surviving members of the family into hiding with the Queensguard. Duke Organa reveals an army that he had created in case of a power grab by House Ulgo, and the planet essentially divides into three camps: House Organa and its allies (with Republic backing), House Thul and its allies (with Imperial backing), and House Ulgo and its allies in a sort of proxy war within the remnants of the Great Galactic War. Amid this chaos, House Cortess, an ally of House Thul, backs Thul in order to try to impress the Empire and gain favor. Suspicions for the deaths of the Crown Prince and Queen begins to fall on House Rist, known for its assassins and a lineage going back to members of the Exchange.*

  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*

*NOTE: This event is sometime between the Treaty of Coruscant and TOR, but without any more specific timing, it is hard to place. I simply waited five years after the Treaty of Coruscant to place this item. It is important to have included, but take its placement with a grain of salt.

The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)

  The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural [continued] (novel: Rob Chestney)
  Events After the Treaty of Coruscant [continued]
  21395.71.917 Entry

3,647 BBY

- Wim Nickter begins building a reputation for himself (such as it is) at the Sith Academy on Odacer-Faustin.

  (conjecture based on Red Harvest)

- Mnah Ra’at begins two years of training at the Sith Academy on Odacer-Faustin to better his fighting until he can be the equal or better of fellow apprentice Rance Lussk.

  (conjecture based on Red Harvest)

- Aric Jorgan graduates from the Academy and enters the Republic military in the field. He will eventually be assigned to the Deadeye sniper squad, under Lieutenant Vorne, then command the unit himself. Two years after that, he will be assigned as an Infantry Command officer on Ord Mantell, and leadership of the Deadeyes will fall to Jorgan’s XO, Torve.*

  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*

*NOTE: This is 7 years prior to TOR.

- Risha Drayen, age 14, is tired of just learning about criminal activities like those of her father, Nok Drayen, so she buries his carbonite chamber somewhere safe and hits the hyperlanes herself, beginning her life of crime under a new identity.*

  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*

*NOTE: She is 21 in TOR, and she is 14 at this time.

3,646 BBY
At age 16, Corso Riggs is given his first blaster by a mercenary who has been fighting for the Republic for 20 years. After learning a bit about the need to get one’s hands dirty at times to protect others, Corso returns home and locks up “Torchy” (the blaster) at his parents’ behest.

*NOTE: He is 22 in TOR, and this is when he is 16.

Elara Dorne (age 20) begins serving in the Imperial military. Her brother, Aleksei Dorne, finishes his training on the same day.

*NOTE: This is “five or six” years before TOR.

Kaliyo Djannis, a freelance assassin, enforcer, and anarchist, begins a string of twelve employers over the next six years. The last of the employers in this dozen is Suudaa Nem’ro the Hutt (AKA Nem’ro the Tenacious) on Hutta. (According to the story she tells to Cipher Nine six years from now, she will arrive on Hutta with the help of her old friend Anspi’shel, who gets her out of trouble on Ord Mantell. Anspi’shel will not know that she is going to work for Nem’ro, however, until after she has already left his employment six years from now to work with Imperial Intelligence. Her means of sending Kaliyo offworld — in a box to work with a chem-farmer for 12 weeks — will annoy her enough that she will also want payback when encountering Anspi’shel again.)*

*NOTE: This is 6 years before TOR, if true.

3,645 BBY

Larin Moxla of Republic Special Forces Blackstar Squad is on Hutta for a mission.

*NOTE: This assumes that Fatal Alliance is set in 3,643 BBY. This was two years prior to the novel.

“Jet Nebula” (Jeke Kerron) discovers a J80 soldier class droid on a scrap heap. The droid, which he names Clunker, has a dead vocodor that breaks once again right after he fixes it, seemingly indicating that the droid disables it on purpose so as not to be able to acknowledge orders verbally.

*NOTE: This assumes that Fatal Alliance is set in 3,643 BBY. This was two years prior to the novel.

Based on false information (about reneging on a contract) provided by Mandalorian Tayari Rook, Imperial Major Stanwu issues an order for the arrest and execution of Akaavi Spar’s Mandalorian clan (Clan Spar). The order is sent for Moff Tyrak to sign, and he simply signs it because his assistant put it in front of him. The order leads to the executions of most of Akaavi Spar’s Mandalorian clan, who are deemed traitors to the Empire. The Empire utilizes a traitor in the clan to administer a poison to the clan, which causes them to fall unconscious, making them easy for the Empire to detain prior to their executions. Only a few, including Akaavi, escape. She only survives because she had taken a lover from another clan and left Clan Spar’s home to stay with his clan. Her lover and his clan, however, are unwilling to come to Clan Spar’s aid during the Empire’s actions against them, causing her to stay away from men and relationships in general for the next five years. She will also spend the next five years seeking revenge upon Tyrak, who is the only person she initially knows was at all responsible for the attack.

*NOTE: This is 5 years prior to TOR.

Synchet Industries, a manufacturer of droids, medical supplies, and food supplements, declares bankruptcy. The company ceases to exist. Jordel Tlan, a former executive for Synchet, hires Netula Pahn, who is currently in debt, to maintain his droids as he goes into quasi-seclusion in his own lounge on Nar Shaddaa, “manned” by mostly droids.

*NOTE: This is 5 years prior to TOR.

An Imperial agent is surgically altered and takes the place of Bas-Ton, a Voss native, in order to infiltrate the Voss’ closed society.

*NOTE: This is 5 years prior to TOR.
• When SpecForces covert team Havoc Squad, under its founder Jek Kardan, is sent against Imperial forces on Ando Prime, they find that the Imperial presence is much greater than expected. When reinforcements are requested, the Senate cuts off any assistance and essentially abandons Havoc Squad as lost on Ando Prime. Kardan, however, leads them to escape the planet. After this event, Kardan learns the truth about the Senate pulling their support and resigns from SpecForces. His protégé, Harron Tavus, is promoted to leader of Havoc Squad, but the bitterness about what happened on Ando Prime will remain with the squad until their eventual defection to the Sith Empire under Tavus. Kardan will eventually found the Justicars’ Brigade on Coruscant.*

*NOTE: There is no date for this event, but it is sometime during the “cold war” stage of the Great Galactic War. I have placed it here, 5 years before the game, to allow Tavus time to grow bitter and plan his eventual defection.

• On the frozen Sith world of Odacer-Faustin, site of a Sith Academy founded over 1,000 years ago by Darth Drear, Sith acolyte Wim Nickter is defeated in a duel by advanced student Rance Lussk, witnessed by Blademaster Lord Shak’Weth and fellow students. Shortly thereafter, Nickter goes missing. Fellow Sith apprentice Juru Ostrogoth knows that this makes him an easy mark if Nickter’s defeat causes others to target him to improve their own standing, but it is Zabrak Sith apprentice Scopique that is his biggest concern. Scopique uses blackmail from his earliest days at the academy to convince Juru to investigate the disappearance of Nickter and other students, even if it puts him in danger. Nickter awakens in the academy’s huge tower, where he is held as a test subject by Darth Scabrous. Scabrous has him hooked up to tubes that infuse him with a concoction that appears to be part drug, part natural plant products. Scabrous puts a black flower into the machine that mixes the substance, but he appears frustrated when it does not cause the reaction he suspects. Soon, bounty hunters Dranok and Skarl arrive in their starship and are met by hangar maintenance man Pergus Frode and Scabrous “valet,” an HK droid that is held back by a restraining bolt. Dranok brings a new black flower to the Sith Lord, believing it to be a Murakami orchid, but Scabrous knows that it is not the right flower. Scabrous tries to force him to eat the boiled head of Skarl (whom he was going to betray anyway), but Dranok tries to attack Scabrous instead, leading him to be killed. (Frode is then given permission by the HK droid to take the flight computer from Dranok’s ship, since he’ll never be needing it again.) Meanwhile, another Sith student, Mnah Ra’at, completes arduous training exercises with Sith Combat Master Xat Hracken, seeking to make himself the superior of Rance Lussk. Far away, at the Jedi Agricultural Corps facility on Marfa, Jedi botanist Hestizo “Zo” Trace tends to plants, including an unusually sentient, Force-telepathic black flower that is a true Murakami orchid. It needs an incubator or Zo’s Force presence to survive, as it is a special species. A Whiphid bounty hunter named Tulkh breaks into the facility, wounds Zo’s colleague (Wall Bennis), then steals the orchid, taking Zo with him when he learns that she is necessary to its survival. At the same time, Zo’s brother, Jedi Knight Rojo Trace, is investigating a downed Sith fighter on Geonosis when he senses her distress and races off to begin hunting for his sister, starting on Marfa, then tracing unusual residue on a recording of Tulkh’s ship (the Mirocaw) to Kwenn Space Station, then toward Odacer-Faustin. Zo awakens in the disgusting trophy room of the Mirocaw, and is then taken to Scabrous in the tower. Tulkh leaves her inside, but Juru Ostrogoth sneaks in when he leaves. Thus, Juru is present when Scabrous puts the Murakami orchid into the machine to infuse it into Nickter, who is quite obviously dead, yet somehow still living (or . . . undead . . . yep, he’s a Sith zombie now, thanks to the substance). The orchid infusion works, and Nickter grows in strength until he instinctively Force blasts the cage open, then leaps upon Scabrous, biting him. Zo runs for the exit, but Juru is caught in Nickter’s path when Scabrous Force pushes him across the room. Nickter and Juru crash through the tower window and plummet toward the snow below . . . At that same moment, Mnah Ra’at has decided to challenge Rance Lussk in the shadow of the tower, so both are present when Nickter and Juru crash to the ground. The impact kills Juru, but Nickter begins eating him, turning Juru into a Sith zombie as well. Lussk leaves, throwing Ra’at to Juru to cover him, even as Zo escapes the tower, still communicating with the orchid through the Force, as if the parts of it that have now spread into the infected is still self-aware but in pain. She is nearly captured by a Sith apprentice, but Tulkh saves her, intending for her
The Star Wars Timeline Gold: Legends Timeline, Vol. 1

Sith acolytes whose bodies she “burst” with the same tactic earlier. Vines are grown, the consciousness cannot stop them from attacking, as they are within allowing her to force it to grow with Zo is only able to escape when the positive consciousness of the orchid emerges again, overcome by the Sickness, battles Rojo, then deactivates the Jedi’s lightsaber and kills him.

Down below, just as Zo is able to free herself from infected Dail’Liss, she is forced to battle the infected Dail’Liss, finally cutting away its roots and dropping fresh midichlorians into his system. As he prepares for the ritual, Rojo battles his way into the heart of a high library and is forced to battle the infected Dail’Liss, finally cutting away its roots and dropping down below, just as Zo is able to free herself from her bonds. Scabrous, who is now being overcome by the Sickness, battles Rojo, then deactivates the Jedi’s lightsaber and kills him. Zo is only able to escape when the positive consciousness of the orchid emerges again, allowing her to force it to grow within Scabrous and destroy him. Unfortunately, once the vines are grown, the consciousness cannot stop them from attacking, as they are within the Sith acolytes whose bodies she “burst” with the same tactic earlier. She is able to escape... from the room by climbing the walls that contain carved Sith symbols, but zombies begin to crawl down toward her, ready to finish her off. Fortunately, the Mirocaw arrives just in time and blasts away the roof, then saves her with a tow cable. Once aboard, they run into the problem of the defense cannons, but they are able to drop the HK droid down onto the tower. Rather than simply deactivating them, the droid sacrifices itself by turning the cannons on the tower itself, destroying its upper levels and many zombies with it. Once in space, they face a new problem. While running to the ship, Tulkh was spat upon by an infected tauntaun, and the infected saliva got into his eye. He straps himself into his own trophy chamber to make sure he cannot turn and harm the others. When Zo discovers him like this, he tells her to activate the airlock, blasting him out into space and protecting Zo and Frode. She initially refuses, but a stowaway zombie attacks, forcing her hand. She blasts Tulkh (now becoming a zombie) and the Sith zombie into space. Only she and Frode escape Odacer-Faustin alive. In the aftermath, she returns to Marfa to check on things. Wall Bennis has recovered from Tulkh’s attack, and a brand new Murakami orchid is growing in the incubator. As for Zo, she says her goodbyes to the planet, intending to return to the Jedi Temple for further studies (perhaps the one on Tython, as the one on Coruscant has been devastated). She has seen much, and she wishes to understand more about the galaxy around her.

(\textit{Red Harvest})

- Jedi Master Gnost-Dural makes the last entry in his journal. He has now been asked to rebuild the Jedi Archives in the new Jedi Temple on Tython.

(\textit{The Journal of Master Gnost-Dural})

\textbf{Red Harvest (novel: Joe Schreiber)}

Red Harvest (novel: Joe Schreiber)

Ring Crack
Deep-down Trauma Hounds
Dranok
Pain Pipe
Hot Ships
Marfa
Polyskin
Mirocaw
Strapping on Ghosts
Mind Eraser, No Chaser
Ingredient
Dragon Teeth
Dropouts
Triage
Convocation
Neti
Just Another Day in Paradise
Header
Lockdown
Headstone City
Practicum
Lowboy
Seed
Positive ID
Subzero
Paddock
What the Sickness Said
1174-AA
Taste
Flesh Blizzard
Flametown
Redwall
3,644 BBY

- Larin Moxla of Republic Special Forces Blackstar Squad reports her commanding officer, Sergeant Donbar, to his superiors for misdeeds. Donbar is punished, but Larin becomes "Toxic Moxla," the object of ire among her comrades for ratting him out. She puts up with it for a while, but it finally becomes too distasteful, and she leaves Republic service. She purchases her own set of used armor (once worn by a sniper who took out a local Exchange boss on Tatooine) and wanders Coruscant, helping those who cannot help themselves, seeking a greater calling somehow, somewhere. During her wandering on Coruscant, she meets Kixi, who teaches her enough about slicing to become an expert.*

  *(conjecture based on Fatal Alliance)*

  NOTE: This assumes that Fatal Alliance is set in 3,643 BBY. There is no set date for this event, but it seems fairly recent, especially since she was on Hutta with the squad two years before the novel, and Larin seems fairly young, so I am placing it a year before the events of the novel.

- Padawan Shigar Konshi (apprentice to Satele Shan), makes some politically incorrect comments to Neimoidian Senator Vuub, basically stating that the Republic's Resource Management Council is a corrupt mess. This is true, but so politically incorrect that it suggests to Jedi Master Nikil Nobil and others on the Jedi High Council that Shigar is not yet ready for his Jedi Trials. He lacks self-control, they believe.*

  *(conjecture based on Fatal Alliance)*

  NOTE: This assumes that Fatal Alliance is set in 3,643 BBY. There is no set date for this event, but it seems fairly recent, so I am placing it a year before the events of the novel.

- The events of Operation Morning Crest take place, during which a recording is found by the Empire that includes a Star Cabal agent confirming that he has infiltrated the Republic's Strategic Information Service (as "Hunter").*

  *(conjecture based on The Old Republic)

  NOTE: This is 4 years prior to TOR.

- After two years in the Imperial military, Elara Dorne, having grown disillusioned with the Imperial military due to it often giving up duty and honor when the Sith asked them to do something that compromised their supposed moral backbone, defects from the Sith Empire to the Republic. Given her skills and knowledge of Imperial military and cultural elements, she is allowed to serve in the Republic. She is given a position in the Republic military under Service Code 37-R.*

  *(conjecture based on The Old Republic)

  NOTE: This is 4 (“over 3”) years prior to TOR.

3,643 BBY

- Imperial Intelligence agent Shara (if that is her real name), the product of generational eugenics within the Sith Empire, becomes "Watcher Two."*
NOTE: This is "no more than three years" before the events of TOR.

- Lema Xandret, seeking revenge against the Sith Empire that took away her child (Cinzia Xandret, now known as Sith Apprentice Eldon Ax), makes arrangements with the Mandalorian Dao Stryver to negotiate for the sale of the hexes (quickly-adapting, partially-biological droids) that Lema has developed on Sebaddon. She sends the Cinzia to meet with Dao, piloted by Kenev and Marg Sar. When the hexes aboard realize that being spread away from Sebaddon may bring danger back there to the Cinzia clone they were designed to protect, the hexes kill Kenev and Marg Sar. When found, they will also destroy the Cinzia itself to keep themselves out of the hands of potential threatening parties. Back on Sebaddon, the hexes rise up and kill Lema to keep her from sending out any more ships that could compromise the clone Cinzia’s safety. When the other colonists attempt to stop the murder, the hexes designate them as threats as well and wipe out all of the colonists. This leaves only the clone Cinzia (with her mother’s “will” in the amnioid fluid vat she floats within) and the hexes on Sebaddon.

*NOTE: This is "no more than three years" before the events of TOR.

- Imperial Major Sanos begins serving at the Trench.

*NOTE: This is 3 years prior to TOR.

- In an area of space under Hutt influence, privateer Jet Nebula has just put down a potential mutiny aboard his ship, the Auriga Fire, led by the Rodian Shinqo, but he is able to get it under control when they discover the Cinzia.

- Aboard the Auriga Fire, Jet Nebula briefly deals with a mutiny, led by the Rodian Shinqo, but he is able to get it under control when they discover the Cinzia.

*NOTE: This is 3 years prior to TOR.
Santors as part of his cover duties, while also informing the Empire through Shullis Khamarr, Minister of Logistics for the Empire. During that conversation, Ula reveals a bit of his true leanings: he supports the order of the Empire, but he does not like the idea of the Sith as a ruling class. Those are dangerous ideas to have, so he keeps them close to the chest. The Republic sends Ula as its envoy to the auction on Hutta (Nal Hutta), along with a group of Republic troopers led by Robann Potannin and including the younger trooper Hetchkee. The Jedi, trying to cover all bases, unofficially sends Shigar to check on things, and he quickly enlists the aid of Larin, who has been dealing with snarky comments from current Republic troopers (like Ses Jopp), who consider her disloyal for reporting her former commanding officer, Sergeant Donbar, for misdeeds (which led to her being scorned so much that she eventually resigned from Special Forces). The Sith send Ax and envoy Ia Nirvin, along with some Imperial troopers. (Unfortunately for Ula, he has no way of letting the Sith know that he is on their side.) The three groups converge on Bareesh’s estate, where Jet Nebula and his old military droid Clunker are also present, “guests” of Bareesh for the moment. The auction is revealed (by Bareesh’s representative, Yeama) to be for the combination to a safe, which holds two items recovered from the remains of the Cinzia: a navicomp that would contain its destination and origin point (the potential new planet) and a strange tubular item that no one can identify (though the best guess is that its biological readings might indicate a plague weapon of some kind). Soon, Ula is invited for a drink by Jet, who reveals that he knows that Ula basically serves two masters. They are still drinking when Dao blasts into the bar, taking both of them prisoner. Shigar and Larin make their way into the estate through tunnels, where they notice strange, thin wires of some kind dangling around a hole in the ceiling. They eventually emerge into the compound, only to find the bar with Ula’s security detail unconscious. Lain joins Potannin in the search for Ula, while Shigar goes to check out the vault, even as Ax decides to break into the vault and steal its contents. With the help of Clunker, Potannin’s team (now with Larin almost back in Special Forces mode) saves Ula and Jet, but not before Dao is able to learn what little they know about the auction items and the location of the vault. (Ula also finds himself utterly infatuated with Larin the moment he sees her.) At the vault, Shigar and Ax come face to face and engage with lightsabers, but Dao arrives and changes the situation, forcing them to somewhat help each other against him. The Republic team, with Yeama, reaches the vault to the sounds of commotion, and the Sith team joins them. Things get out of control when the tubular item from the Cinzia opens, revealing itself to be a miniaturized droid factory, which begins to release strange, hexagonal droids with some biological (“amnioid”) fluid inside. The “hexes” engage everyone present, spouting off phrases like those heard before the Cinzia was destroyed. In the battle that follows, more emerge, and it becomes clear that these droids adapt quickly and are extremely difficult to kill. They also seem to focus on the Sith as targets before anyone else, when possible. The droids are finally defeated, but Dao escapes with the navicomp and Nirvin, Yeama, and Potannin are killed. Larin also loses some fingers to Ax, forcing her to later use a series of prosthetics throughout the mission. Ula attempts to escape Hutta by getting to the Sith shuttle, but they turn him away because he isn’t human, despite being a Sith informant. In the aftermath, Shigar strikes a deal with Bareesh, which allows Shigar, Larin, Hetchkee, Ula, Clunker, and Jet to take the Auriga Fire to find the mystery world, ostensibly for the Hutt, before Dao can get to it. Shortly thereafter, Shigar masters his psychometric abilities to learn the location of the planet from part of a dead hex, while Ax has Imperial scientists break into the memory of one of the hexes, which uses a kind of Imperial code, and discovers the location as well. The Republic and Empire both send groups of ships (led by Satele and Chratis, respectively) to the mysterious planet: Sebaddon, located above the disc of the galaxy, orbiting a black hole. Each seeks to gain control (through negotiation or force, respectively) of the resources on the world, knowing that the colony there, formed by Lema Xandret and her allies, is quite dangerous, thanks to their hex droid technology. Dao is also present, though he is mostly hiding out and observing. When the colony (run by hexes without any of the original colonists still alive, it seems at first) responds with force, launching hexes into space and to board Republic and Imperial ships, all of those present are forced to join together to defeat the hexes, which are developing and spreading (as a threat response) so quickly that they could easily take over the galaxy and destroy all biological life if not stopped, making them a threat to the Republic, the Empire, and the Mandalorians. They agree to an assault coordinated by Ula aboard the Auriga Fire with Jet and Clunker, while Dao gathers intelligence in the First Blood. Three teams will strike at three identified targets on the planet, led by Larin and Hetchkee, Satele and Ax, and Chratis and Shigar. The various teams launch down to the surface, while ships battle hexes above. The fighting is furious, but the hexes finally decide to escape from Sebaddon. As a result, three structures begin to emerge: the old Imperial ship that had borne Lema and the colonists to Sebaddon fifteen years ago; a command center (brain); and a skyhook. Each seems to be planning to merge with the others (since the latter two are made of hexes), then link with drives being created on Sebaddon’s moon. While Larin, Hetchkee, and even Ses Jopp (the trooper who had mocked her on Coruscant but whose life she has now saved) try to stop the skyhook and the unlikely duo of Chratis and Shigar (the latter of whom has attacked the former and found himself capable of Dark Side Force lightning before coming back to his senses) deal with the “brain” section, Satele and Ax enter the Imperial ship. There, they discover another Cinzia Xandret! Lema had cloned her lost daughter from genetic samples, then put the clone Cinzia into a large bacta vat full of the same amnioid fluid that is inside the hexes, which carries biological components from Lema, along with her “will” programmed into it. Cinzia explains to “herself” that when her mother sent the Cinzia out to make a deal (apparently with the Mandalorians via Dao Stryver) to get revenge upon the Empire for taking the original Cinzia (Ax), the hexes, which were created to protect the clone Cinzia, killed Lema to stop her from sending more ships. When the other colonists tried to save Lema, they were terminated as well, leaving only Cinzia, the hexes, and the “will” of Lema that speaks to Cinzia within the vat (which also hides her Force sensitivity from anyone else who might take a such a child away). This was also why the hexes aboard the Cinzia killed its crew, then destroyed the ship before it could be captured by Jet and his crew. When the fluid tries to keep the clone Cinzia from telling more to Satele and the real Cinzia, they believe she is about to be killed and attack the vat, freeing her. Unable to breathe outside the vat on her own, though, the clone dies, but not before revealing the commands necessary for Ax, who is genetically identical to the clone, to take control of the hexes. As Satele and Ax emerge to the surface, Ax brings the hexes under control, stopping their escape. She then uses a tide of them to kill the abusive, overbearing Darth Chratis, before sending the hexes to destroy themselves. Meanwhile, Ula has seen Jet take charge of coordinating the fleet briefly by having Clunker, who now has access to Republic and Imperial codes from their computers, take over all of the ships above for a moment. With Ula no longer necessary, he launched Ula to the surface (where he reunites with Larin, who has started to be fond of him as well, after having kissed Shigar, who shares no such romantic affection). Now, Jet and Dao have each escaped the scene, leaving everyone else behind to clean up the mess. In the aftermath of the Battle of Sebaddon, records of the incident are gone, due to a pulse of some kind from the planet that wiped ships’ memory systems. Larin Moxla retains her field promotion to lieutenant and is back with Special Forces, setting up her own new squad with Hetchkee and Ses Jopp. Shigar is finally deemed to be ready for his Jedi Trials and will journey with Satele to Tython to complete them. Ula has been reassigned to data collection, where he will be of little use to his Imperial superiors. He has, however, come to understand the evil of the Sith a bit more, though he pretends that the mission has caused him to change his mind about them. He and Larin will also catch up with each other for a drink soon. Ax returns to Imperial space, where Darth Howl of the Dark Council takes her on as his new apprentice, now that Chratis is dead. Sebaddon, meanwhile, is useless and will soon fall into the black hole, destroyed forever.

Soon thereafter, Dao Stryver and Jet Nebula meet (through what Dao thinks is a trap set for Jet, but is really a trap set for Dao by Jet). During that meeting, it is revealed that Dao Stryver, assumed by everyone to be an oversized male, is actually a female Getkl (reptilian sentient). Dao hadn’t really been after the hexes, but had been testing the relative strengths and actions of the Republic and Sith Empire to a major threat like the hexes. That was why Dao had scheduled to meet the Cinzia in an area where it was likely to be captured by a privateer and taken to the Hutts for resale, which would bring both sides running. Jet, meanwhile, is actually not “Jet Nebula.” He is, in fact, Jeke Kerron, a captain who had gotten on the wrong side of several cartels, then disappeared, having switched his identity with that of his former first mate, the real Jet Nebula. Jet has gained profitable information from observing throughout the situation as well. In the end, neither side in the cold war has gained, but every survivor has gained something for themselves.*

(Fatal Alliance)

NOTE: The Essential Reader’s Companion gives this story a date of “circa” 3,643 BBY, which was originally meant to be just before The Old Republic but now turns out to be three years prior to the game, thanks to the game’s official dating of 3,640 BBY in The Old Republic Encyclopedia. I emailed Leland Chee about the placement of this novel, and he confirmed that it is indeed still in 3,643 BBY, despite the game’s now-finalized starting point in 3,640 BBY.

The Old Republic [continued] (novel series/comic series/video game: Sean Williams & Paul S. Kemp & Drew Karpyshyn & Alexander Freed & Rob Chestney)

The Old Republic [continued] (novel series: Sean Williams & Paul S. Kemp & Drew Karpyshyn)

Fatal Alliance (novel: Sean Williams)

Wild Space
Vested Interests
    Chapters 1 – 6
Hutta
    Chapters 7 – 18
The Chase
    Chapters 19 – 26
Sebaddin
    Chapters 27 – 30
Fatal Alliance
    Chapters 31 – 45
Preparations for War
    Chapters 46 – 49
Tatooine

3,642 BBY

• At age 18, escaped Child of the Emperor Kira Carsen is found by Jedi Master Kiwiiks when she tries to steal a hyperdrive. Kiwiiks takes Kira back to the Jedi Temple on Tython, unaware of her past. Kira becomes Kiwiiks’ Padawan for the next two years.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)

NOTE: This is 2 years prior to TOR.

• Around this time, fighting on Ord Mantell between the corrupt loyalist government and the Mantellian Separatist Movement intensifies greatly, devastating parts of the planet. When the separatists manage to destroy many of Ord Mantell’s landing pads, those that survive in close proximity are protected by the newly-created Fort Garnik, which will become the last safe haven for the loyalist government leaders.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Explorer’s Guide)

NOTE: This is 2 years prior to TOR.

• Akaavi Spar leaves her mother to begin training as a Mandalorian warrior with her father.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)

NOTE: This is 2 years before TOR.

• Mila Escalus’ father, part of the line of Lord Escalus that was entrusted with Lord Aloysius Kallig’s lightsaber when Tulak Hord turned against him, decides to put all of his family’s wealth, including the lightsaber, on the line in a high-stakes sabacc game, which he loses to Gyl Rosen, a known cheater. He loses it all, and the lightsaber leaves the Escalus family’s protection. He will die within the next two years, leaving Mila to work to pay off his debts and face Lord Kallig’s heir (Lord Zash’s Apprentice) two years from now.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)

NOTE: This is 2 years prior to TOR.

• Corso Riggs’ family is killed by separatists on Ord Mantell.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)

NOTE: This is 2 years prior to TOR.

3,641 BBY
• Dri’kill Ba’al, an apprentice to Darth Baras, goes undercover in the compound of Darth Grathan, seeking a weakness in the rogue Sith Lord.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: This is 1 year prior to TOR.
• Jordel Tlan sees the last sentient visitor to his lounge until the arrival of Imperial agent Cipher Nine a year from now. His only non-droid contact for the next year is his assistant, Netula Pahn.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: This is 1 year prior to TOR.
• A Jedi vessel carrying Sith artifacts “confiscated” from a Sith tomb crashes on Hoth.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: This is 1 year prior to TOR.
• Vemrin arrives at the Sith Academy on Korriban.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: This is 1 year prior to TOR.
• Mandalore the Vindicated calls a Great Hunt, seeking a Mandalorian who might take the reins of running the Great Hunt as its reigning Grand Champion in the future, since Mandalore the Vindicated is trying to run the Mandalorians and having to handle his responsibilities as the current Mandalorian Grand Champion. In this year’s Great Hunt, Mandalorian (from Alderaan) Tarro Blood is defeated and nearly killed, sparking a desire for vengeance and success in the next Great Hunt at any cost.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
  *NOTE: This is one year prior to TOR.
• Mia Hawkins is part of Cobalt Flag, an anti-Empire resistance group on Sullust, when the group is virtually wiped out by the Empire. Mia survives and is offered a chance to join the “ghost cell” of the Eagle’s anti-Empire terrorist network. She is brought to Tatooine to train under the Old Man, the ghost cell’s leader. Her months-long training will include the use of a fake town for bomb training and such. However, when the ghost cell begins kidnapping Tatooine citizens to “practice” their methods, Mia leaves the ghost cell and eventually gets into contact with Imperial Intelligence to bring down the ghost cell. Unbeknownst to Hawkins, the Old Man has let her leave, specifically because she is his best bet to lure an Imperial Intelligence Cipher agent into his clutches on Tatooine.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: This is 1 year prior to TOR.
• When it is proven that he is behind a protection racket on Talay, Tanno Vik is dishonorably discharged from the Republic military. He then goes to Balmorra to join a mercenary group fighting against the Imperials there.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic and The Old Republic Encyclopedia)*
  *NOTE: Garza says it has been a little over a year since the discharge by the time of TOR, but later Tanno says it is a little less than a year.
• Imperial Intelligence becomes aware of the Republic prison on the planet Belsavis.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: This is nearly a year before TOR.
• Within the year prior to joining Imperial Intelligence, Kaliyo Djannis works with Anspi’shel for six months. They lose track of each other after Kaliyo begins working for Suudaa Nem’ro the Hutt on Hutta.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: This likely begins nearly a year before TOR.
• No more than six months prior to joining Imperial Intelligence, Kaliyo Djannis begins serving her twelfth employer in six years: Suudaa Nem’ro the Hutt on Hutta.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: This is likely mid-to-late in the year prior to TOR, since This has to be less than 6 months before the game due to Anspi not knowing about it, yet them working together for 6 months within the last year before the game.
• Eskella, daughter of Sith Overseer Tremel, arrives on Korriban at the Academy for training.*
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic)*
  *NOTE: This about six months before TOR.
• Imperial Intelligence begins planting information about a potential Imperial Cipher agent who might want to defect to the Republic Strategic Information Service, specifically to Ardun Kothe. This background will later be used by Cipher Nine to infiltrate Kothe’s group four months from now.*

(conjecture based on The Old Republic)

*NOTE: This about four months before the second act of TOR’s Imperial Agent storyline, making it likely late in the previous year.

- On Hoth, Imperial Admiral Layek Davos begins bringing in his own officers, those loyal only to him, and covering up those reassignments with bribes. He has his own plans for Hoth’s starship graveyard. He is unaware, however, that Chiss Expansionary Defense Force member Aristocra Saganu is keeping tabs on his activities from Zero Station below the surface.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic)

- On Hoth, new Republic allies, the Ortolans, set up a camp in underground caverns but soon come under attack by Imperials and White Maw pirates.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic Explorer’s Guide)

- The Sith Empire begins striking at the Jedi Order’s lightsaber crystal caves on Ilum, having discovered that some of these crystals will work in the creation of stealth vessels. In response, the Republic also sets up a presence outside of the Jedi Order.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic Explorer’s Guide)

- Bowdaar’s owner has him fight for the first time, then seems to mostly forget about him and his usefulness for months. (This is a shock to Bowdaar because he had been owned by an Imperial slaver, but he had made himself too costly to keep for the Imperial so that he could go with the new owner, who promise to treat him honorably.)

(conjecture based on The Old Republic)

- Morant comes to Ord Mantell, where he ends up with the separatists under Dareg.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic)

- Construction slaves just outside of Kaas City on Dromund Kaas begin a slave rebellion. Imperial Intelligence analyst Lodenth Kashar is assigned to keep tabs on this rebellious activity.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic)

- The Dark Council on Dromund Kaas orders the Dark Temple, which was sealed centuries earlier during the building of Kaas City, to be opened. Upon doing so, the Sith Empire discovers strange Force-driven phenomena, and workers begin to disappear, seemingly controlled by unknown entities.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic)

- Republic scouts discover the planet Denova, noting its high level of baradium deposits.*

(conjecture based on The Old Republic)

*NOTE: This is 1 year prior to the “endgame” stages of TOR.

3,640 BBY

- The Sith Empire discovers the Republic operation to harvest Quesh Venom for adrenals on Quesh, aided by the Three Families, who broke away from the Hutt Cartel. The Empire forces the Hutts, in order to keep their business standing (and avoid making an enemy of the Empire) to join them in striking at Quesh. Broga Masrii, the leader of the Three Families, escapes from Quesh into Republic space, to avoid possible capture.*

(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia and The Old Republic Explorer’s Guide)

*NOTE: This seems to be relatively soon before TOR, but enough before the game to allow for this situation to have entered a sort of status quo. Otherwise, there is no set date for this event.

- Around this time, Xivhkalrainik (AKA Xalek) has spent his life hunting alongside his father and brothers on Kalee. When Imperial slavers come to Kalee, however, he is found to have Force potential and is taken away to be sent to Korriban to immediately face the Sith Trials to gain entry into the Academy.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

- Around this time, the new Striker-class starfighter begins to be integrated into the Republic fleet to replace older (but still highly useful) Liberator-class starfighters.
- Duke Corwin (the "Durasteel Duke") visits House Organa in an attempt to organize House Organa and rebellious vassals from House Thul and House Ulgo to oppose House Ulgo (led by King Bouris Ulgo). When Corwin “dies” (brain death, presumably) while visiting House Organa, his sister, Lady Muriel Corwin, takes his place, impersonating the Duke, so that negotiations can continue. Corwin’s body is put into kolto suspension, but even that does not revive him, merely postponing his bodily death. (This will be unknown to House Girard and its allies when Baron Zacar Girard hires a bounty hunter to kill “Duke Corwin” during the Great Hunt.)

- Ardun Kothe’s Republic Strategic Information Service division is given a classified sanction by the Republic Senate, giving Kothe and his division complete autonomy and zero restrictions on their activities.

- Vette and her fellow Twi'lek artifact hunters (i.e. thieves) are given information on Naga Sadow’s tomb on Korriban, where there is a forbidden, hidden chamber with an ancient lightsaber inside. Unbeknownst to Vette, the person providing the information is the vengeful Cada Bliss, the first mark that the thieves ever targeted. He has led them into a trap. The others (Taunt, Plasmajack, and Flash) escape, but Vette is captured by Imperial authorities to become a slave again. With the others on the run, Cada Bliss sends mercenaries after them, but they manage to elude them. They begin tracking Bliss’ movements to enact their own revenge against him.

- Eskella, daughter of Overseer Tremel and a Sith Acolyte herself, receives her first warblade after being at the Sith Academy on Korriban for six months.

- As preparations are made for a new Great Hunt, called by Mandalore the Vindicated, Tarro Blood, nearly killed in last year’s Great Hunt, decides to win at any cost, including setting up numerous schemes to cheat to win.

- Admiral Brionelle of the Chandrilan Security Force orbital defense station dies during a raid by the Sith Empire. He will later have the Brionelle Memorial Military Academy named in his honor.*

- When “weak” Sith Lords trespass in the Dark Temple on Korriban, the spirit of Lord Aloysius Kallig, who was killed by Tulak Hord and laid to rest in a crypt in the temple, is awakened, seeking to return glory to his family name. Lord Zash, however, has a dream (a vision) that tells her that if she can find an apprentice of low origin, perhaps a slave, then this apprentice can humble himself before the Kallig apparition and thereby pacify it, granting access to the Dark Temple’s darkest depths. She goes to Korriban to seek just such an apprentice, little knowing that the apprentice she will seek (and find) will not be able to pacify Lord Kallig’s spirit by low birth alone, but by being one of his descendants.

- One week prior to Theron Shan’s reunion with Ngani Zho, the Sith Empire shuts down a Republic Strategic Information Systems (SIS) operation on Nar Shadda.

- Fia is found to be Force-sensitive by Jedi Master Till’in, whom she nearly shoots when she first sees his Kel Dor appearance. He brings her back to Tython for Jedi training.

- A Padawan who was stronger in the Force at four years old than Jedi Master Yuon Par was at fifteen is brought to Tython to train as a Jedi. Jedi Master Syo Bakarn introduces the Padawan to her new master: Yuon Par herself. Her first task is to seek out four recently-discovered Holocrons from the early days of the Jedi Order, which are endangered by native Flesh Raiders. The Jedi gathers all but one, which has been stolen and contains the knowledge of ancient rebel Jedi Rajivari, one of the first to ever turn to the Dark Side. In seeking out the stolen Holocron, the Jedi visits the illegal Twi'lek settlement of Kalikori Village, where local leader Bashenn points her to Nalen Raloch, a dueling champ, who is said to have stolen the Holocron to use it to learn how to better protect the village from Flesh Raiders. She tracks down Nalen, recovering the Holocron. She also visits the ruins of Kaleth for clues about the Fount of Rajivari, said to be a source of power from Rajivari’s teachings. At Kaleth, she proves herself worthy to the ancient Tythonian guard droids there and receives the First Blade, said to be the hilt of the first lightsaber ever created by the Forge, Tython’s ancient device for crafting lightsabers. Inscriptions on the hilt help the Jedi seek out the Fount. With the help of Yuon’s Trandoshan ally, Qyzen Fess, they intend to triangulate the position of the Fount and get there before Nalen. Qyzen, though, gets captured during a scouting mission, erasing his records of kills with the Scorekeeper that the Trandoshans worship. The Jedi saves him, but now Nalen has the information on the Fount that was given to Qyzen, thanks to some Dark Side illusions used on Qyzen. Together, the Jedi and Qyzen head for a location marked by an ancient device that reacts to the First Blade in the cave in which Qyzen was held. They get to a set of ruins where they find the spirit of Rajivari, the “Fount” itself. The spirit reveals that Nalen was his chosen successor but could not handle its power. Now Nalen wants its power to destroy the Jedi, whereas Rajivari had wanted to change the Order from within. Even Rajivari wants Nalen stopped. The Jedi also convinces the spirit to finally move on into the Force. He tells the Jedi of crystals in a nearby cave to allow the Jedi to create a lightsaber. The Jedi is able to use the Forge to craft the First Blade back into a true lightsaber with a crystal from the cave. Nalen arrives, forcing a confrontation, but Nalen is defeated by the Jedi and turned over to the Jedi Order, whom she hopes might redeem Nalen and help train him as a Jedi, which would also heal the rift between the Jedi Order and Kalikori Village. The Padawan is promoted to Jedi Knight at the agreement of the Jedi Council (led by Grand Master Satele Shan), while Qyzen also considers her the Scorekeeper’s Herald, an individual who can help him regain his honor. Upon promoting her to Jedi Knight, however, Yuon falls gravely ill, from something that had been ailing her that she had told Qyzen about, yet kept secret otherwise. She had sensed something special in her new Padawan and intended for her to be the last Jedi she trained if she were to die of whatever is ailing her. (To be continued below . . . )*

(The Old Republic: Jedi Consular)*

*NOTE: Due to how insanely long this game is, plus how many classes exist with their own storylines, I have divided the game into multiple summaries, based on each character starting class. I have generally left out the little side quests to focus on the rather long main storylines and companion storylines. I am, for now, considering this Jedi Consular to be female. (I did that to keep myself sane, as I managed the summaries by watching recordings of the entire storyline, wherein the player recording was using a female Jedi Consular.) Bear in mind that I have tried to shorten the companion storylines and fit them in where there’s a break in the broader tale, so they may not directly coincide with exactly when they pop up as available in game progression. You will see those in parentheses.

- A Padawan strong in the Force returns to Tython for his final Jedi Trials. Before he can do so, he is sent by Jedi Master Derrin Weller to help several Padawans that are being attacked by Flesh Raiders. He finds that the Flesh Raiders, armed with modern weapons, are being led by a Dark Side Force-user named Callef, who claims to be intending to destroy and replace the Jedi Order with a new one. The Padawan takes him down, saving the other Padawans. He is joined just after victory by Jedi Master Orgus Din, a member of the Jedi Council, who asks him to report to them. He does so, meeting Jedi Master Bela Kiwiiks and Grand Master Satele Shan. She is pleasantly surprised to find that Orgus, impressed with him, has requested to take the Padawan on as his own apprentice, something he has not done since the Sacking of Coruscant. The Council senses a growing darkness, and they think the Force-user might have been Sith-trained. They need to find answers as to what is going on with the Flesh Raiders. Orgus sends the Padawan to Kalikori Village, the illegal Twi'lek settlement nearby, so that he can set up a base of operations there and gather information from the village matriarch, Sumari, about the Flesh Raiders. He presents himself as seeking to help the village, but Sumari is dubious, given that he did not want to help until Jedi were attacked. He agrees to help protect the village, as the Flesh Raiders are a common threat. He is assisted by Sumari’s daughter, Ranna Tao’ven, and Scout Chief Moorint. He strikes at a
Flesh Raider weapon cache, recovering the weapons and removing them from Flesh Raider use. In doing so, he also meets T7-O1, a Jedi scout droid that had been commandeered by the Flesh Raiders (or their supplier). (T7-O1 was once the droid partner of Jedi Master Ven Zallow, who was killed by Darth Malgus in the Sacking of Coruscant.) The droid has a recording of a mysterious figure (Bengel Moor) giving orders to Callef and Flesh Raiders. When he returns to the village, there has been another attack, in which villager Saylew’s wife has been killed. Orgus is there trying to calm things down, but pressure is growing for genocide of the Flesh Raiders. Orgus had earlier recognized the lightsaber used by Callef. Now, he recognizes the voice of the man in the recording, but he is reluctant to share details with his new Padawan at this point. Upon learning from Moorint that the Flesh Raiders are taking control of the ancient temple of Kaleth, the Padawan is sent there to clear them out. He finds Flesh Raiders who are armed and armored, and, more surprisingly, speaking in Basic. He is joined by Master Kiwiiks and her Padawan, Kira Carsen. Kiwiiks discovers that the Flesh Raider was carrying a Holocron. Unfortunately for the Padawan, Kiwiiks and Kira must leave on a mission to Coruscant. The Padawan rejoins Orgus at the village, and Orgus reveals that the hooded figure was Bengel Morr, Orgus’ former Padawan, but one who never completed his training. Bengel was supposedly killed when the Jedi Temple on Coruscant was attacked, yet he appears to be alive and now serving the Dark Side. While taking out a power generator to a Flesh Raider base Orgus targets, the Padawan is contacted by Bengel, who confirms that Callef was his own apprentice. Bengel also claims to be a Jedi (in his own mind) and needing to do what he is doing to destroy the Sith. (So, uhm, good news! He’s not Sith, just a Dark Jedi.) While they are on their mission, Sumari dies of an illness she had been fighting. Ranna is now the new matriarch of Kalikori Village. Flesh Raiders drop plague-releasing devices into the village to poison their crops, but the Padawan takes them out, earning Ranna’s appreciation. The Padawan then engages Force-using Flesh Raiders nearby in a cave strong in the Dark Side. He takes out their base, but Bengel has now been spotted at Kalikori Village. The Padawan and T7-O1 race back to the village, only to find that there was no distress call, and Orgus is not there. It turns out that the village has made a deal with Bengel. They turned Orgus over to them, but Ranna said she would keep the Padawan in the village. That was unacceptable, it seems, so Moorint tries to turn him over to Bengel also. He incapacitates Moorint and his men, and Ranna tells him that Orgus was taken to the Forge, where the first Jedi lightsabers were constructed. The Padawan confronts Bengel at the Forge and defeats him. Bengel sees this as a victory, though, as he views the Padawan as the weapon that is meant to defeat the Sith, and he sees his own duty as being to prepare his way. The Padawan refuses his “help” and takes him prisoner. Orgus is now free, but there is nothing more he can teach the Padawan after these events. The Padawan is sent to the Forge itself to create a lightsaber from components that Orgus provides to speed up the process, since he is obviously already ready for it. He creates a lightsaber as instructed, battles the Forge’s guardian creature, and returns to the Jedi Temple. He is promoted to Jedi Knight, then he and Orgus are sent to Coruscant to aid Master Kiwiiks in investigating a dark presence they have sensed from there. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Old Republic: Jedi Knight)*

*NOTE: Due to how insanely long this game is, plus how many classes exist with their own storylines, I have divided the game into multiple summaries, based on each character starting class. I have generally left out the little side quests to focus on the rather long main storylines and companion storylines. I am, for now, considering this Jedi Knight to be male. (I did that to keep myself sane, as I managed the summaries by watching recordings of the entire storyline, wherein the player recording was using a male Jedi Knight most of the time.) Bear in mind that I have tried to shorten the companion storylines and fit them in where there’s a break in the broader tale, so they may not directly coincide with exactly when they pop up as available in game progression. You will see those in parentheses.

- A Republic trooper (ranked as a sergeant) arrives on Ord Mantell to join the Republic’s battle against the local separatists that have been engaging in a civil war over the planet’s government. Upon arrival, he meets Lieutenant Bex “Gearbox” Kolos, a fellow member of Havoc Squad (squad 326). They are on their way to Fort Garnik to begin a mission to find a Republic ZR-57 orbital strike bomb that the separatists have salvaged from a downed Republic ship, when their gunship is shot down. After taking out some separatist missile launchers, the sergeant goes to Fort Garnik, where he meets Commander Harron Tavus, commanding officer of Havoc Squad, along with XO Captain Zora (AKA “Wraith”), Lieutenant Vanto “Fuse” Bazren, Lieutenant Ryler “Needles” Dorant, and Republic Ord Mantell Infantry Command agent Lieutenant Aric Jorgan. The sergeant is to rendezvous with Republic spy Bells behind enemy lines in the town of Talloran. Unfortunately, Bells is dead by the time the sergeant arrives, so he must go to his home to recover a field box from Bells’ wife instead. When an informant named Mirru briefly comes to the fort babbling about an upcoming Separatist bombing, the sergeant is sent to speak with Mirru at the nearby refugee camp. He knows not about the ZR-57 but about bombs that have been planted in a roadway to take out a Republic convoy. After foiling the ambush, they find that Bells’ information had located the ZR-57 on Mannett Point, an island controlled by the separatists. The sergeant heads there to join with Wraith. They infiltrate the separatist outpost, but they find that the bomb has been moved. However, three separatist leaders (Saphro, Vyr, and Bol) are at the base to confer on coordinating their individual cells. The sergeant is ordered to kill all three and take their data, which he does. He then tracks down a menial laborer named Zak in Oradam village, who has radiation sickness, probably from being around the ZR-57. The sergeant offers him (and lover Jaller) medical treatment in return for information. Once Zak knows how they were poisoned, he betrays the separatists, even though Jaller refuses. He points the sergeant to the separatists’ main stronghold, where they sent the bomb. (During these early days, the sergeant also turns in Lieutenant Virk for criminal activities.) The rest of Havoc Squad goes after the bomb, but when the sergeant arrives back at Fort Garnik, Jorgan notes that he was ordered not to let the sergeant join the rest of the squad on this mission. When all contact is lost from Havoc Squad, Jorgan has no choice but to send the sergeant into the stronghold to complete the mission to stop the bomb. He breaks in, uses a comm terminal to shut down the bomb, then is informed by Jorgan that not all of the separatists he encountered were separatists. Some were actual Imperials, who have infiltrated their movement. His next task is to continue deeper into the stronghold to find the rest of Havoc Squad and, if possible, retrieve the bomb. Upon finding the others, they hold the sergeant at gunpoint. Tavus and the others are betraying the Republic, which they think has abandoned respecting their warriors. Tavus thinks the Republic does not believe they can win against the Empire, so Havoc Squad and others who bring hope with victories are a threat to their machinations. After the Republic left them to die on a mission to Ando Prime, the squad chose to defect to the Empire, taking the ZR-57 (which they have now recovered from the separatists) as a gift to the Empire to prove their worth. The sergeant survives the encounter, but Tavus and the others escape. General Vander (Republic Chief of Operations for Ord Mantell) commends the sergeant, promoting him to lieutenant and putting him in charge of rebuilding Havoc Squad, with him as commanding officer. Jorgan is knocked from his position into being a sergeant and the first member of the new Havoc Squad, all because the Republic has to punish someone for Tavus’ betrayal, and Jorgan is the only one left to punish. The new Havoc Squad is tasked to Coruscant, but they will also one day be expected to take down the traitorous Havoc Squad. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Old Republic: Republic Trooper)

NOTE: Due to how insanely long this game is, plus how many classes exist with their own storylines, I have divided the game into multiple summaries, based on each character starting class. I have generally left out the little side quests to focus on the rather long main storylines and companion storylines. I am, for now, considering this trooper to be male. Bear in mind that I have tried to shorten the companion storylines and fit them in where there’s a break in the broader tale, so they may not directly coincide with exactly when they pop up as available in game progression. You will see those in parentheses. (One wonders, though, how Tanno Vik’s companion storyline makes sense with a Light Side Havoc Leader...)

- A smuggler brings a cargo of weapons to the Republic defenders on Ord Mantell, who need the weapons to fight local separatists that are trying to break away from the Republic and potentially join the Sith Empire. The smuggler meets his contact, Skavak, who then keeps him busy fighting off separatists that have commandeered local cannons to use against Republic ships. By the time he returns to the base, something is wrong. Another local loyalist, Corso Riggs, is injured, and Skavak has revealed his true colors. He is a separatist traitor, and he not only steals the weapons the smuggler delivered – he steals the smuggler’s ship and Corso’s favorite blaster (“Torchy”) as well! Corso tells the smuggler to see Viidu (the “King of Cargo”) at Fort Garnik. He was Corso’s employer (and Skavak’s, technically) and could help get the smuggler’s ship back. A Rodian, Tweeta, also suggests that he see Wentell in Fort Garnik to learn more tricks of the trade on Ord Mantell. Upon meeting with Viidu, the smuggler learns that the blasters that Skavak stole in the weapon shipment belonged to Rogun Matt’rik (AKA Rogun the Butcher), not the most forgiving of individuals. He will blame Viidu and the smuggler for this loss. Their best bet is to get to a man named Reki in Talloran village, which the Republic is blockading to keep separatists contained. Reki might have a lead on how to find Skavak. Reki points the smuggler to Mannett Point, an island for which he has warehouse schematics in his home, which is locked up tight. He returns to Viidu. Upon return, he meets Syreena, a lovely woman who works with Viidu. Corso gets a slicer kit to work on the data when the smuggler returns, while the smuggler swims onto the island, gets into Reki’s home, gets the schematics, and decodes them. He then uses those warehouse schematics to seek out the encrypted separatist files to return to Viidu. Upon returning, he helps Syreena by getting between her and Bracco, a slimeball that wants to steal her from Viidu, whether she likes it or not. He turns the files over to Viidu, who has them decrypted. To keep Rogan the Butcher happy by making him a lot of money and helping him blow up some separatists, Viidu pays the smuggler on the “Big Boom Run” to get volatile chemicals from Trymbo in Oradam village. Corso gives him a new blaster, “Flashy,” before the run. Instead of Trymbo, the smuggler finds his wife, Loonda, who sends him to where Trymbo (kinda nuts) is fishing. He gets the chemicals and carefully gets past Ugnaught assassins and separatists to deliver them to Viidu. While he was gone, Viidu cracked the separatist files. They know where Skavak is delivering the weapons (on the stolen ship) to a separatist nutjob named Dareg at a separatist base upon a volcano. The smuggler and Corso head for the base, take out various separatists, and then confront Dareg, who declares them guilty of crimes against the people of Ord Mantell. (Yeah, yeah, yeah . . . ) In the firefight that breaks out, the separatists are defeated, and Dareg is killed. Another separatist, Morant, reveals that Skavak actually left hours ago. He pretended to be on the separatists’ side, then stole an ancient droid from Dareg that was in his family for years. He kept the weapons and left in the smuggler’s ship. Morant reveals that Syreena is working with Skavak. They have been scamming Viidu, and it was Syreena who warned Dareg that the smuggler and Corso were coming. They return to(108,872),(920,904) Viidu’s base, only to find that Viidu caught Syreena on the holocomm with the separatists. She has killed him and contacted Skavak. She intends to be with him, but he blows her off. They catch her in mid-call. Betrayed by Skavak, she reveals that he is on his way to Coruscant. Thanks to the smuggler defeating Dareg, the Republic is pulling out from the area and allowing the shuttle port to reopen. Syreena gives the smuggler a shuttle pass, in return for letting her disappear. The smuggler and Corso get to the port, only to run right into Rogan’s bounty hunters, Xo’ru and Kindin. The quasi-heroic duo shoots the bounty hunters down when negotiating doesn’t work. Once in space with the Republic fleet, another target of Rogan, Sammo Kob, points the smuggler to the Arcona “Lefty” Grandarak for specialized training (as a Scoundrel or Gunslinger – this is the class specialization point in the tale) that might help keep them alive. Upon arrival on Coruscant, they fake their way through customs, then seek out Darmas Pollaran, a gambler (and information broker), an old contact of Viidu who can help in their search. Darmas reveals that Skavak has Imperial connections and plenty of death marks on his head. He points them to a slicer, Kixi, in the Migrant Merchants’ Guild that Skavak hired lately. They sneak and beat their way in, find Kixi, and learn that she is being held by the Guild and forced to work for them. Skavak had paid the Guild to get into the Republic’s database and erase his personal history. In return for helping her escape the Guild, she does the opposite to his identity: she makes it “ugly,” and she also makes it look like he is an undercover Republic agent, so that no criminal group will trust him (and some will want to off him). Upon returning to Darmas, he has learned that Skavak is working with Black Sun. They get Black Sun recordings that show Skavak speaking with Urbax of Black Sun. He claims to have a lawman on his trail that he needs Urbax to kill. The smuggler and Corso head for the spaceport to witness (and interrupt) the confrontation between Urbax and Sullustan Constable Brigade officer Miel Muwn. Miel deputizes the smuggler for extra help, a battle ensues, and the quasi-good guys win. Miel is hunting Skavak because he stole the Murustavan Ruby, a priceless relic of Sullust. They continue their search for Skavak separately, but they will share information when either Miel or the Ord Mantell duo find a lead. They run into (and defeat) a trio of bounty hunters (Scorch, Riloh, and Egara), then return to Darmas, who plays the smuggler in sabacc (and loses). Darmas is informed by informants Jiik and Juul that Skavak was just seen in a fight, then fleeing into Justicar territory. By the time the smuggler and Corso arrive, though, the Justicars have captured Jiik. They find Juul rather annoyed. With only Jiik knowing where Skavak went, the smuggler and Corso must break Jiik out of Justiciar detention for her. When they get into the detention center, they find Miel also a prisoner, having been ambushed by Skavak and locked up when he tried to cooperate with the Justicars, whom Miel thought were lawful authorities. The smuggler frees Miel, who goes on his way, then finds free Jiik. Jiik reveals to Juul (via comm) that the Justicars are trading supplies with the Empire. He saw that, earning him being locked up. Skavak went with the Imperials into the Works. Jiik returns to Juul, while the smuggler and Corso go into the Works. They find Skavak turning over the Murustavan Ruby to Imperial Commander Kasstroff, who intends to turn it over as part of a gift to a Grand Moff. Skavak’s ally Fabizan at the spaceport will take possession of Skavak’s payment, which Kasstroff describes as a “grotesque trophy.” They interrupt Skavak’s meeting. Skavak flees, and Miel emerges from hiding, intending to arrest Kasstroff for being in possession of the Ruby. A firefight ensues, during which Miel is killed, as are the Imperials. The smuggler and Corso confront Fabizan, who sets goons against them. They win the firefight, and Fabizan (a starship seller and/or thief) gives back the smuggler’s ship, which Skavak had been planning to have him sell. The cargo is still aboard (though it will turn out to be Skavak’s cargo, not the weapons for Rogan). He even throws in upgrades and such, along with C2-N2, a droid bought by Skavak for the ship, which now follows the smuggler’s orders, since he is the captain of the ship. They let Fabizan go and leave Coruscant. While in space, they discover a woman in the cargo hold: Risha, who had been traveling with Skavak to deliver various cargo, including a being encased in carbonite. She now offers to be the smuggler’s partner. Skavak contacts her via holocomm, learning that the smuggler has his ship back, along with his cargo and Risha. Risha, the smuggler, and Corso are going to use the various items Skavak loaded aboard as a “key” to unlock the treasure of Nok Drayen. Drayen is said to have been the greatest gangster who ever lived, the man who took down the Rath Cartel and the Vandelhelm Combine during the Syndicate Wars. (As for Skavak, he sold off the weapons from Ord Mantell, which means they won’t have them for Rogan the Butcher.) (To be continued below . . .)*

(The Old Republic: Smuggler)*

*NOTE: Due to how insanely long this game is, plus how many classes exist with their own storylines, I have divided the game into multiple summaries, based on each character starting class. I have generally left out the little side quests to focus on the rather long main storylines and companion storylines. I am, for now, considering this smuggler to be male. (I did that to keep myself sane, as I managed the summaries by watching recordings of the entire storyline, wherein the player recording was using a male smuggler.) Bear in mind that I have condensed the companion storylines to fit in at the end of the main summary, so they may not directly coincide with exactly when they pop up as available in game progression. You will see those in parentheses at the end of the summary.

A promising Force sensitive acolyte of the Dark Side is called to the Sith Academy on Korriban to face Sith trials earlier than is the norm. He reports to Overseer Tremel, who has been overseeing the trials for who may enter the Sith Order for decades. (Those who survive become Sith. Those who die . . . well, don’t.) Tremel insists that another acolyte, Vemrin, is this student’s mortal enemy. To prepare, he is first sent to replace his training saber with a strong Sith warblade from an armory within the tomb of Ajunta Pall. After doing so, Assistant Overseer Loun directs him to check out specialized training from Vemrin and Dolgis, who threaten him immediately, becoming the new Acolyte’s first enemies on the world. This is doubly worrisome when Tremel reveals that Vemrin is being groomed to become Darth Baras’ new apprentice. The Acolyte’s next trial is to visit the nearby prison to see the jailer, Knash, who gives him access to several prisoners to dispense Sith justice, based on the Acolyte’s read on their situations. The prisoners include Solentz (a hired gun sent to kill an Imperial spy in the Yavin system, who will not reveal her employers), Devotek (a Sith champion who screwed up a mission that led to the deaths of 1,000 Imperials), Brehg (accused of supplying forged documents to the Republic, though he maintains his innocence), and Vette (a Twi’lek woman that he is not shown as part of dispensing justice, though she is present in another cell). After dealing with Solentz, Devotek, and Brehg, Tremel is critical of his choices (but might have been, no matter the outcome), but uses them as "teachable moments." His next test is to visit the tomb of Marka Ragnos to slay the beast that guards it. He does so, but upon returning, he is confronted by Dolgis, working for Vemrin. The Acolyte kills Dolgis and returns to Tremel, learning that the death of the beast caused a ripple in the Force due to it being a source of Dark Side energy. That ripple has gotten the attention of Darth Baras. Tremel worries that the Acolyte might not be strong enough to defeat Vemrin to gain Baras' favor. After being summoned by Baras, he meets Phyne and Teeno along the way, who offer to kill Vemrin for him, since Acolytes are not allowed to openly kill each other. He allows them to begin their plotting against Vemrin. Baras is not immediately impressed by the Acolyte, since Tremel was taking shortcuts to speed up his training and put him in Vemrin's way. He takes the Acolyte under his leadership, however, so that he can send him to kill Tremel as a traitor (for being lax in training new Acolytes). Thus, Tremel will either ruin his own plan to stop Vemrin's rise by killing the Acolyte, or he himself will die. In the end, it is the latter, and the Acolyte is deemed ready to challenge Vemrin directly soon. Baras continues to test the Acolyte by sending him to the tomb of Tulak Hord to bring back shards of various inscriptions that now lie in ruins, which is where other Acolytes have also been sent. He does so and returns, clashing with and killing rival Acolytes who try to steal the shards he gathers. He reports back to Baras, and Vemrin is already there (annoyed at the attempt on his life by the individuals the Acolyte met earlier). Both the Acolyte and Vemrin now vie for Baras' favor. The Acolyte is sent to claim a special lightsaber in a forbidden part of Naga Sadow's tomb (where he is not buried, just memorialized). There, other Acolytes may be present, and the laws are waived there, so they can kill each other. Baras directs the Acolyte to Vette, back in the holding cells, since she can show him the way into the forbidden area, as she was caught trying to get inside herself. Inside the tomb, Vemrin attacks the Acolyte, who defeats and kills him. Vette then opens the secret chamber, and he claims the lightsaber from a corpse (that must have been put there in Naga Sadow's place as a trap, since Sadow went to Yavin IV). Spirits emerge from the corpse and inhabit guardian statues, which then attack. After defeating them, they return to meet with Baras, running into a vengeful Eskella on the way. He kills Eskella and her companions, then reports to Baras. Having proven himself the strongest of the contenders, the Acolyte now becomes Baras' apprentice. Vette is given to him as a slave. Before leaving for Dromund Kaas, he is given some special training by Lord Lokar and Lord Krimyn. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Old Republic: Sith Warrior)*

*NOTE: Due to how insanely long this game is, plus how many classes exist with their own storylines, I have divided the game into multiple summaries, based on each character starting class. I have generally left out the little side quests to focus on the rather long main storylines and companion storylines. I am, for now, considering this Sith Warrior to be male. I have also followed a version that makes mostly Dark Side choices, given that this is a Sith character. Bear in mind that I have condensed the companion storylines to fit in at the end of the main summary, so they may not directly coincide with exactly when they pop up as available in game progression. You will see those in parentheses at the end of the summary.

- A slave of the Sith Empire, now released from slavery because of Force aptitude, has been forced into training at the Sith Academy on Korriban, with death the penalty if he refuses or fails. He arrives and is under the authority of Overseer Harkun, who answers to Lord Zash. For his first trial before becoming an official Sith apprentice, the acolyte is to visit the hermit Spindrell, who lives in the tomb of Ajunta Pall in the Valley of the Dark Lords and is considered by Lord Zash to be a kind of prophet. Before Spindrell will teach him, he must prove himself by defeating Spindrell's former acolytes, who are trying to earn a second chance to gain his favor by killing the newcomer. With that done, he is taught the Sith Code, then sent back the Academy, where he meets with Assistant Overseer Markan, who sends him back to Harkun, who is already meeting with other acolytes. One acolyte, a woman named Kory, failed to impress Spindrell, so Harkun kills her with Force lightning. Ffon Althe, another candidate, is treated with special respect due to being of pure Sith blood. Harkun believes that Ffon, next to visit Spindrell, will be Lord Zash's next apprentice. When the others leave, Harkun threatens the new arrival again, based on his prejudice toward slaves. His second trial requires him to visit the nearby jail to meet with Inquisitor Zyn, who tells him he must learn to control others and cast off remnants of having been a slave. He is instructed to use any means necessary to get a fellow student, Alif, to reveal the name of a student who murdered another (without approval) recently, which violates Academy rules (technically). He reveals the murderer to be Esorr Kayin, whose Master is a Dark Council member, which means he may be unouchable for Inquisitor Zyn. Upon returning to Harkun, he finds that another acolyte (Niloc) is gone (having disappeared), and Ffon has completed his first trial with Spindrall. The next trial stage is for both the former slave and Ffon. They face separate trials of intellect. Ffon is sent to translate texts for Lord Zash, an easy task. The former slave is given a seemingly impossible task: to recover a holocron in the monster-infested tomb of Marka Ragnos, even though the holocron has been held by stone for over a millennium. He must bring it back or die, which Harkun believes will end the former slave’s ascent. A bit of frustration and Force lightning does the trick, though, and he returns with it as ordered. Of five remaining acolytes, Gerr is killed by Ffon on orders from Harkun in front of the others to prove a point, narrowing the field to four. The next trial for the acolyte is to visit the tomb of Tulak Hord and bring back the text he kept there, so that it can be given to Lord Zash. He again does so, and when he returns, he runs directly into Lord Zash, who compliments him on getting the holocron and the text. Harkun, of course, just gripes that the text is “damaged,” rather than acknowledging his success. With no combat training, the acolyte is sent to a combat trainer. On his way, though, he is confronted by two of the other acolytes, the brothers Balek and Wydr. They have been promised by Harkun that if they kill him, they can go home. (If they were to stay, they believe they’d die at the hands of Ffon, so this is their way out.) He kills both of them in self-defense. This leaves only the acolyte and Ffon. His final trial is to travel to Naga Sadow’s tomb, awaken a Dashade assassin there, and gain access to a map Zash wants, which is in a special chamber in the tomb that has not been opened in millennia. Ffon is also on the same mission, and he has a head start. Zash arrives before he leaves, though, and she reveals that the only way to reach the map is to use information she found in the text that the acolyte retrieved from Tulak Hord’s tomb. With Harkun giving Ffon an unfair head start, he has actually placed him at a disadvantage. (Harkun is ordered to stop trying to rig the trials.) He follows instructions from the text to gather and use rods to drive electricity into his own body, which is then able to harness to open the Dashade’s chamber and awaken him. The Dashade is Khem Val, who appears to have been awaiting Tulak Hord’s return. He fought alongside Tulak Hord in bringing the entire Dromund system under Sith control. Khem Val attacks the acolyte, who defeats the assassin (due to him having been slumbering for so long). He is now bound to serve the acolyte. Together, they retrieve the ancient map, then return to Harkun, who is meeting with Ffon, who claims that getting the map was “impossible.” Harkun takes the map, then attempts to send Ffon to Zash with it to claim he was the one who retrieved it, and the acolyte nearly has Khem kill Harkun and Ffon both, but Zash arrives. She accepts the map from Ffon, but Ffon is too afraid of Zash to lie to her. To punish Harkun, Zash kills Ffon. Harkun promises revenge against the acolyte one day. The acolyte becomes the new Apprentice of Lord Zash. Zash gives him the lightsaber she once wielded when she was an apprentice. She instructs him to meet her in her chambers in the Citadel in Kaas City on Dromund Kaas. (To be continued below . . . )*

(The Old Republic: Sith Inquisitor)

*NOTE: Due to how insanely long this game is, plus how many classes exist with their own storylines, I have divided the game into multiple summaries, based on each character starting class. I have generally left out the little side quests to focus on the rather long main storylines and companion storylines. I am, for now, considering this Sith Inquisitor to be male. I have also followed a version that makes mostly Dark Side choices, given that this is a Sith character. (About midway through the story, the character also takes on the name “Lord Kallig,” which is based on him being dubbed as such by the spirit of the ancient Lord Aloysius Kallig. This is not a character name, per se, but a title. Without a real name to use for him, though, this works as well as any for now.) One should also note that the character’s actions determine whether he is dubbed Darth Nox, Darth Occlius, or Darth Imperius. The Dark Side path taken here caused it to be Nox. Bear in mind that I have condensed the companion storylines to fit in at the end of the main summary, so they may not directly coincide with exactly when they pop up as available in game progression. You will see those in parentheses at the end of the summary.

- The Knight and Qyzen travel to Coruscant, where Yuon is sent to hopefully be helped by researchers that have been studying materials from the original Coruscant Jedi Temple. (She receives a ship and a droid, C2-N2, to manage it.) On Coruscant, they meet with Attros Finn, who is watching over Yuon, who keeps babbling about two boys, one named Parkanas, the other whose name she is unable to remember, along with comments about a dark individual who will bring doom. Attros believes that information that could cure her may be in the Jedi Archives in the ruins of the Jedi Temple from the Sacking of Coruscant. They need three special index/guide Holocrons called Noetikons to seek out that information. The Knight and Qyzen take up the mission to find them. One was seen being taken by a Gand from the Migrant Merchant’s Guild. They visit a Republic outpost, where Alec Efran is holding a Gand prisoner with information on the Noetikon. After questioning the Gand, they learn that a man named Lars Baddeg gave the Noetikon to Gand leader Aulus G’luun for safekeeping – to keep it from the Jedi Order. They follow a signaling system the Gand points them toward and use it to find G’luun. The Jedi “convinces” (i.e. mind tricks) G’luun to turn over the Noetikon of Science. Three guardian hologram Jedi Masters (Arca Jeth, Vandar Tokare, and Tharis Orne) greet the Knight, but they are only able to narrow down that Yuon’s condition is not medical. They suggest finding the Noetikon of Light. Attros points them to Black Sun territory for the second Noetikon. Attros’ aide, Pharen, directs them to the Silent Sun, where her sister, who works there, saw the Noetikon going into Black Sun hands to end up in their warehouse. At the warehouse, they find a doctor who reveals that Black Sun is smuggling Jedi artifacts off Coruscant inside people’s bodies. They learn that a Justicar, Lars Baddeg (who gave a Noetikon to the Gand), is the one behind the smuggling. At the Silent Sun, they hunt down the man into whose body the Noetikon has been inserted. The Jedi removes it, and accesses its Jedi Masters and their knowledge of mystic arts. Unfortunately, Masters Noab Hulis, Nomi Da’Boda, and Wole Vahn cannot save Yuon directly, but they can confirm that she is under some kind of mental influence from afar (Yuon’s so-called “Man in the Shadows”). For the necessary information to counteract this, they must find the Noetikon of Secrets, which holds Dark Side knowledge. Attros calls them back to the embassy first, though, as Yuon is getting worse. Yuon attacks her former apprentice and Trandoshan friend, forcing them to incapacitate her. Following clues on Lars Baddeg from Attros, Black Sun, and G’luun, they go after the Justicar for the final Noetikon. Upon finding him, they learn that he was getting them for a third party, who had promised him leadership of the Justicars. Supposedly knowing that losing the first two Noetikons means he is already a dead man, he turns over the Noetikon of Secrets (a fake) to the Jedi Knight, who accesses its knowledge. In a strange holographic or spiritual world, the Knight meets the Master of Questions, who requires the Knight to play a game with her. Win, and the Knight goes free. Lose, and the Knight remains in this strange place forever. They are able to get “out,” only to find Baddeg communicating with his Sith employer via holocomm, to whom he is claiming he trapped the Jedi. The mysterious Sith reveals that Yuon’s mind is being attacked by his Sith Master. They must then battle Baddeg, recovering the real Noetikon of Secrets this time. From the Noetikon, they contact Jesper Altax, Bastila Shan, and Chamma, who reveal that the keepers of this Noetikon are Jedi who fell to the Dark side, then returned to the Light. The Knight learns that Yuon is being attacked by a Sith technique from an ancient Sith named Terrak Morrhage, who had used the ability to turn Jedi to the Dark side and make his own army. A Jedi was able to create a sort of Force shield to cut the Jedi off from Morrhage, finally defeating him, though the healer was weakened with each act, leading to his own death. An ancient terminal (part holocron, part computer terminal) in the Jedi Temple has the secret to this technique to save Yuon. The Knight travels through the Works and visits the Temple ruin with all three Noetikons, where she activates them with the terminal to learn what must be known, even as Yuon’s condition begins drawing her near to death. The Knight learns the technique, but the mysterious Sith arrives, having followed them, and he destroys the terminal. The Jedi battles the Sith and a pair of acolytes, with Qyzen at her side. After defeating the Sith, the Knight uses the shielding method to protect Yuon from the Dark Side plague. Yuon is revived, but the Knight is weakened in the process. The Knight reports back to the Jedi Council, who report other Jedi being affected by the same Dark Side affliction. The only way to truly stop it is to defeat the Sith behind it. A plan is formed so that the Knight will find the others who are affected, shield them from the dark power, and use clues from them to, hopefully, find the Sith and defeat him. They soon travel to Taris to seek Jedi Maser Cin Tykan, who is working with Captain Nelex of the Republic Expeditionary Forces and Tykan’s Padawan, Aris Vauranelle. They seek Tykan in the swamps, where they find T8-C3, Tykan’s droid. They then help techs who were with Tykan but were betrayed and left to die. Tykan appears to be planning to harm other Republic citizens at the Junction, a gas processing facility. There, they confront Tykan, who begins releasing the poisonous gasses collected there, along with letting in rakghouls. They save the facility, but Tykan escapes. Using records Tykan was studying, Nelex is nearly able to point them to Tykan’s next location, but they must delay to save Nelex and the base from a rakghoul attack, orchestrated by Tykan. Tykan has also now kidnapped Aris. They next race for a super-reactor in reclaimed territory that Tykan appears ready to blow up, taking out the Republic’s entire contingent on Taris. Once at the reactor, they confront Tykan again, along with Aris, who has been convinced to join his mad plan. They convince Aris of the madness of Tykan’s cause, but then Tykan attacks. Upon finally defeating him, he stabs him from the affliction. He has mentioned a “Lord Vivicar,” but now he remembers nothing. The Knight and Qyzen then travel to Nar Shaddaa, where the Hutt Cartel is contending with a group called the Guiding Hand, whom Bakarn believes is led by Duras Fain, one of the missing Jedi Masters, who hated the spice trade that the Guiding Hand is attacking. The Knight and Qyzen go to meet Doctor Theron Cedrax, but his sentient hologram, Holiday, indicates that he is missing in the Nikto sector of Nar Shaddaa. They find him reneging on a weapon deal with the local Nikto boss, who works for the Guiding Hand, seemingly under Force suggestion. Using the prototype weapon as an “in” with the Red Light Lancers, they meet with Klage of the Lancers, getting into the slicer gang, which is also working for the master of the Guiding Hand. For their first mission with the Lancers, the Knight and Qyzen take out Hutt Cartel facilities (allied with the Sith Empire) with their own internal security measures (or at least make it look like that). This earns the Knight a chance to meet the “Master” of the Guiding Hand in person. As expected, the master is Duras Fain, who recognizes the Knight for what she is and needs the Knight destroyed before she can harm Durus’ operations. He sets Morgukai Nikto against the Knight and Qyzen, but they persevere. Tharan and Holiday help the Jedi track Duras to Shadow Town. As the Hutt Cartel closes in on Duras Fain, the Jedi, Holiday, and Tharan make their way to Shadow Town, where they confront Duras. Duras was on a mission with Yuon to Malachor III, where they became romantically involved. He refers to Parkanas Tark, whom Yuon was babbling about. Using exo-tech (tech from outside the galaxy that Tharan studies) to block his influence, they take down Duras, who then reveals the name of the man behind the “plague” – Lord Vivicar. Vorlo Stragen of the Hutt Cartel nearly takes Duras into custody, but he will return to Tython, now that the Jedi is able to shield him from Vivicar’s influence (again at the expense of the Jedi’s own health). Henceforth, Tharan and Holiday join the Jedi and Qyzen in their quest on their ship. Syo Bakarn sends the Jedi to meet with the starship Carida, where Laranna Fain, Duras’ daughter, seems to be affected by the same “plague.” According to Lt. Bela Whinn, they were attacked by Imperials, and Laranna drove them off, but when she was healed by a visiting, scarred Jedi Master (actually Sith Lord Vivicar), she changed and became darker, then began slaughtering the crew before they trapped her in the aft section. As Laranna tries to slice into the ship and kill more of the crew, the Jedi and Tharan go after her. They defeat her briefly, but she escapes into an airlock, threatening to space herself. Fortunately, they talk her down by noting how they have already helped her father. The Jedi shields Laranna, again at personal cost. Having done so, they speak with Vivicar in hologram form. He was once a Jedi, but he fell under the influence of Morrhaige’s spirit. He spreads the “plague” by touch. With Laranna now in custody on the ship, they head for their next destination: Tatooine. There, they seek Master Eriz Vossan. Following a lead from the ill Rowan Delk, a desert guide, they seek him amongst the Jawas. Jawa Tteek Tlek reports that Eriz had them dismantle sandcrawlers to make war machines to retake Anchorhead and fight Sandpeople. The Jedi helps the Jawas reclaim property from Geonosians nearby and are given a message from Eriz for Rowan Delk. (The Jedi also becomes an honorary Jawa.) They deliver the message to Delk, who directs them to where Eriz had seen a carving of Tatooine’s past that had sent Eriz off to work with the Tusken Raiders to prevent the coming darkness. They meet Delk at Malcolm’s Dunes. There, they find people killed and raided by Sandpeople sent by Eriz. The Jedi, Tharan, and Delk go out and defeat the Sandpeople, reaching Eriz, who has been “upgrading” the Sandpeople into even greater warriors. Of course, he also wants to cull the weak from society to strengthen the Republic into an Army of Light against the darkness. (Yeah, he too is a tad nuts.) The Jedi defeats Eriz, who claims to have failed Vivicar, just as he failed Parkanas Tark during their ill-fated mission to Malachor III (the same mission Yuon and Duras were on). Apparently, they were all afflict ed by the Dark Side on the mission, and while they were escaping, Eriz fell behind, and Parkanas went back to save him. Eriz lived, but Parkanas was lost. The Jedi shields Eriz from Vivicar, losing some of her own strength again. Saved from madness, Eriz destroys his records on how to build the Sandpeople into an unstoppable army. Eriz reports back to the Council, and the Jedi travels with Tharan to their next target: Alderaan. (But not before the Jedi helps Qyzen make a pilgrimage to find his father's bones in the desert and helps young hunter Lek Svaal defeat the Dusk Shadow creature. Qyzen will soon begin shko-yagu, a maturing phase, which the Jedi also helps.) Alderaan has seceded from the Republic, and the queen and heir to the throne have been assassinated. Now, it is overseen by Bouris Ulgo, but a civil war rages. They are seeking Jedi Master Sidonie Garen, diplomat and strategist, who was to be brokering a peace between the two sides on Alderaan. They meet with Hallam Organa, head of House Organa's Diplomatic Corps, and his brother, Lew Organa. Sidonie refuses to allow another Jedi to be involved with the peace summit she is attending, forcing the Jedi to travel to House Teral to be their representative at the summit, allowing the Jedi to reach Sidonie. They protect House Teral from Killiks being controlled ("wrangled") by Ulgo. They help Captain Theress of Teral's security force to protect from even more Ulgo-Killik attacks, earning the Jedi a chance to meet with Lord Teral. Unfortunately, he notes that the entire House must approve of a representative, so the Jedi helps to forge an alliance between House Teral and House Organa, which was to be done through a marriage between Fasha Teral and Lew Organa. To show that Teral could be a valid ally to the Organas, they need to stop the siege against House Teral. The Jedi meets with Ulgo's mercenary commander, Astar Vox, whom Teral thinks can be convinced to leave Ulgo's employ. After proving herself against several challenges, the Jedi is to negotiate with Vox, but he just keeps challenging her, eventually fighting the Jedi in single combat. Vox is killed, ending the siege, which then allows for the marriage alliance between Teral and Organa . . . but Lew Organa is kidnapped by members of Ulgo's ally, House Rist. Before House Organa can defeat House Rist, the Jedi saves Lew. Interestingly, Lew notes that his kidnappers never mentioned Ulgo, but did mention Master Sidonie as the one giving their orders. They slice a comm, confirming that it was Sidonie, though she denies the charge when contacted. Teral and Organa are able to become allies against Ulgo, and Teral unanimously approves the Jedi as their new delegate. The Jedi follows coordinates for the previous representative that had been killed by Ulgo. There, the Jedi and Tharan find a shuttle, which takes them to the summit. At the summit, they find Sidonie accusing House Alde of conspiring against House Organa (its ally), House Thul of killing the heir of House Panteer, and House Ulgo of being a puppet of House Rist. She is purposely sowing confusion. She believes that galactic peace depends on war on Alderaan. The Jedi convinces the delegates to calm down, using the Force. Sidonie attacks the Jedi, but Sidonie is defeated. In defeat, she too mutters about Parkanas, whom she has failed. The Jedi shields Sidonie. Urging the Alderaanians to have a truce and then a new peace summit, the Jedi concludes her mission on Alderaan. (While on Alderaan, they save Lek Svaal from Wookiees who caught him during his own hunt of the Wookiees and a Trandoshan traitor, Veneb Drassk, who has been selling Trandoshan names to Wookiees for killing in order to eliminate rivals. They get in touch with Mako, daughter of former bounty hunter Braden, who owes Qyzen a favor, who can look for info on Veneb for Qyzen.) The Jedi returns to the Jedi Council, bringing Qyzen back with her. The Jedi believes that the Jedi Masters are being targeted as revenge for the "death" of Parkanas Tark on Malachor III, since they were all present. The Jedi believes that Lord Vivicar is Parkanas Tark, alive but fallen to the Dark Side. Yuon confirms that the spirit of Terrak Morrhave had tried to turn them all to the Dark Side, but they were able to escape by leaving the weakest and most affected of them, Parkanas, behind. Now, they must finally find and defeat Vivicar. Using a Jedi ritual, along with the shield ability of the Jedi Knight, they use Yuon's connection to Vivicar to locate him, though at the cost of removing the shield from Yuon. Vivicar takes over Yuon, mocking the Jedi Knight, who confronts "Vivicar" with his true identity. Under Vivicar's control, Yuon again attacks her former student. The Knight wins, helping Yuon free her mind... long enough to give her the coordinates to where to find Vivicar. After once again shielding Yuon, our heroes head for Vivicar’s Sith warship. They battle through his brainwashed troops and guardian droids, finally meeting him face-to-face. He has drawn power from those he has afflicted, making himself even stronger. However, Vivicar reveals that his body may be that of Parkanas Tark, but Parkanas is actually possessed by Terrak Morrhage’s Sith spirit. Vivicar and the Jedi do battle, and the Jedi defeats Vivicar in combat, though he claims to have spread his plague farther than imagined. He claims that if he dies, anyone bound to him by this plague will also die, yet the Jedi has little choice. The Jedi chooses to shield the body of Parkanas (or Vivicar) from Morrhage, which forces his spirit out of the long-lost Jedi. The affected Jedi will be okay now, as will Parkanas, though he only returns to Tython to live in the wilderness, rather than to rejoin the Jedi Order. The Jedi Knight returns to Tython and is granted the prestigious title of Barsen’thor, Warden of the Jedi Order, only the third ever to bear the title. Her adventure is not over yet, though. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Old Republic: Jedi Consular)*

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Jedi Consular summary above.

- A bounty hunter arrives on Hutta, intending to join the Great Hunt, meeting Braden (mentor), Mako (a tech with a HoloNet receiver implant in her head and adopted daughter of Braden), and Jory (muscle), who will form part of the hunter’s Great Hunt team. The Great Hunt involves two groups: elite Mandalorians and non-Mandalorian bounty hunters with major financial sponsorship. This team will be the latter, thanks to support from Suudaa Nem’ro the Hutt (AKA Nem’ro the Tenacious, ruler of the city of Jiguuna), with whom Braden can get the bounty hunter an introduction if the hunter can take down a major local target, earning his reputation that Mako is cleverly concocting. They target Vexx, a Corellian quick-draw artist who has been robbing Imperial military pay stations. The bounty hunter raids Vexx’s safehouse, where he finds a datapad, which Mako uses to reveal that he bought a shuttle ticket for that day. The hunter assaults Vexx at the shuttleport, killing him and taking his ID tags as proof. By the time the hunter returns to his base, though, Braden and Jory are dead, leaving Mako distraught. They use security recordings to determine that they were killed by Tarro Blood (and Sedyn Kyne, his partner), a Mandalorian bounty hunter (originally from Alderaan) aiming to win the Great Hunt. He intends to kill all of the non-Mandalorians first, and since they are not allowed to kill other Great Hunt competitors prior to the time specified by the Hunt, Blood had Sedyn kill Braden and Jory to eliminate the bounty hunter’s support structure without killing anyone himself. Now, the hunter is even more determined to win the Great Hunt . . . and take down Blood. Without credits, though, they are stuck on Hutta. Thanks to groundwork laid by Braden, Mako is able to gain the hunter an audience with Nem’ro. He visits Nem’ro after killing a few more of the Hutt’s enemies to score some points with him. To prove himself, Nem’ro sends the hunter after the Evocii leader who is harassing Hutt interests, known by the name “Huttsbane.” The hunter destroys Huttsbane’s village, then confronts him. Huttsbane is frustrated when his Baratatta Spirit-Leader suggests sending the hunter back with the head of another Evocii warrior as a substitute for the real Huttsbane, who can go into hiding. Mako then provides details on Blood, who is said to be buying off other Mandalorians, rather than competing against them for entry into the Great Hunt. She was also being tracked, which the hunter notes. Back at Nem’ro’s headquarters, Nem’ro is impressed and sends the hunter against agents of Voontara Fa’a’thra, who is trying to claim a chunk of Jiguuna. One target is Yalt, Nem’ro’s ex-accountant, who is hiding in the Rust Yards. He finds Yalt, who claims to have been offered money by Fa’a’thra, but then Fa’a’thra locked him up instead and forced him to work. The hunter allows Yalt to live, once he uses his knowledge to crash Fa’a’thra’s accounts, thereby helping Nem’ro more than his death would have. Upon leaving, he runs into Nails, a Rodian bounty hunter who is working for Blood in return for entrance into the Great Hunt. The hunter kills her in self-defense, then returns to Nem’ro. Nem’ro is impressed and sends him on another mission: to kill Nem’ro’s beastmaster, who is plotting against him. It is a test, of course, and the beastmaster sets creatures against the hunter. He defeats them all (and the Beastmaster), though, proving his skills. Unfortunately, Nem’ro never expected him to survive, and he has already given his sponsorship token to someone else, forcing the hunter to seek that other bounty hunter and kill them for it. Mako has found this information as well, along with the identity of that hunter.
She trades that information to the hunter in return for becoming his full companion on his hunts. The hunter is Rarsk, a Trandoshan, whom she has connected to the person in a bone mask that was following her. They go after various bounties, along with a Republic scientist (Albea) that Fa’athra’s men are holding. Rarsk has been sent to capture her for the Empire. Rarsk arrives and is killed in the firefight that follows. The hunter now has the sponsorship token, and Albea can escape. They return to Nem’ro to find him talking with the masked follower, Grataa, who is a representative of the Great Hunt who has been investigating Blood’s manipulation of the Hunt. Grataa sends the hunter to Dromund Kaas, the Imperial capital, to meet with the Huntermaster in the Mandalorian enclave there. With the Imperial fleet en route to Dromund Kaas, they meet with Rally Master Merrk Kelborn, who sends them to Gen Vizla and Braum “Zakkeg” Bourne for advice and training. Their recommendations to Kelborn allow the hunter to get geared up for the Great Hunt. They arrive on Dromund Kaas and meet with their contact and handler, Crysta Markon, only to find that there is only one slot open in the Great Hunt at this point, whereas there are over three dozen bounty hunters who have shown up with sponsorships. They attend a meeting with the Wookiee Huntmaster and his assistant, Lek. To earn the last spot in the Hunt, they are to take down three assigned bounties on Dromund Kaas, under the nose of the Imperials. Those who nail all three will fight against each other for the slot. The first target is a Republic noble named Altaca, who was captured by the Empire and then sold into slavery due to lack of identification, rather than being held for ransom. He is part of a slave rebellion and surrounded by followers. Crysta gives the hunter a carbonite weapon to freeze a target for transport, and he heads out after Altaca. They find love letters to him from Lady Dak-Ah, an Imperial noble who has fallen for him. She had made plans to get him to her, posing as her brother, during the slave rebellion. They head for Dak-Ah at the Nexus Room, but they are briefly intercepted by Imperial Sergeant Wallax and his men. Wallax has been paid by Blood to take out the hunter. A firefight begins, ending with Wallax and his men dead. Inside the Nexus Room, the hunter confronts Lady Dak-Ah and “Lord Dak-Ah” (Altaca). Altaca actually wants to leave, and the bounty hunter freezes him to send back to the family for significant credits. Their next mission is to meet with Imperial Admiral Fraabaal, who sends the hunter after his own daughter, Vereta Fraabaal, who is a Sith apprentice to Lord Grathan, who is said to be a madman that has been disgraced by the Dark Council. The only hope for Fraabaal’s family is to get to his daughter and capture or kill her from within Grathan’s compound, so as to keep her from being captured by rivals. That would cause the rest of her family to suffer the consequences of her poor choice of allegiance. The hunter finds and captures the rather arrogant Vereta, bringing her back to Fraabaal, who had actually decided it would be best to have her back alive, as the only remaining remnant of her deceased mother. The final bounty is for Imperial Intelligence Captain Medle, who sends the hunter after an Intel team that Medle sent into an ancient Sith Temple that has become a focal point for Sith sorcery and deemed off limits. He needs the IDs from the missing team, led by Commander Gargun, to fake more acceptable deaths for them before he can replace them in his roster. Upon finding Gargun, though, he is very much alive, claiming to be “Lord Barel-Slathborn, Lord of the Sith, standing at the Altar of Horror.” The lunatic provides his ID card to the hunter as a reminder of the hunter’s visit with the glorious Lord Barel-Slathborn. Upon collecting the other ID cards, the hunter returns to Medle, who then intends to kill him because he cannot let there be proof of him sending anyone into the temple. A firefight ensues, in which Medle is gravely wounded. The hunter lets him live in return for top-of-the-line weaponry. The hunter arrives to find that Blood has claimed that he was already dead, so the hunter is only barely able to get into the melee before it begins. He battles the other hunters, surviving to be the last one standing. Blood arrives to taunt, but the hunter cannot kill him prior to the Great Hunt. (To be continued below . . .)

(The Old Republic: Bounty Hunter)*

*NOTE: Due to how insanely long this game is, plus how many classes exist with their own storylines, I have divided the game into multiple summaries, based on each character starting class. I have generally left out the little side quests to focus on the rather long main storylines and companion storylines. I am, for now, considering this bounty hunter to be male. (I did that to keep myself sane, as I managed the summaries by watching recordings of the entire storyline, wherein the player recording was using a male bounty hunter.) Bear in mind that I have condensed the companion storylines to fit in at the end of the main summary, so they may not An Imperial Intelligence agent comes to Hutta, where he contacts his handler, the Keeper, via comm from Dromund Kaas. His mission this time is to convince Suudaa Nem’ro the Hutt (AKA Nem’ro the Tenacious), who runs the town of Jiguuna, to supply the Empire. He gets a cover identity as a pirate and trader “Red Blade” (a real pirate who is in the Outer Rim right now) from a contact named Jheeg. Unfortunately, the tribute meant for Nem’ro was stolen by Voontara Fa’athra the Hutt’s thieves. The agent takes them all out, reclaiming the tribute. At Nem’ro’s palace, he meets Kaliyo Djannis and Karrels Javis, who bring him in to see Nem’ro. The Hutt is impressed by the tribute and welcoming. He introduces the agent to another of his right hand men, Toth’lazhen. The agent soon learns that Darth Jadus of the Dark Council has taken an interest in this mission. He also runs into Dheno Rey, an old associate of the real Red Blade, who extorts money from him to keep his deception a secret. With Karrels seemingly losing status to Toth’lazhen, but with Karrels being the “weak link” the agent can use in Nem’ro’s organization, it is up to him to boost Karrels’ status. He learns that Karrels has sons that are free traders in the Sullust system, dealing with the Empire for the first time. He also learns that Karrels is on the outs because a shipment of rare ores was lost in Evocii territory. He asks the agent to recover it for him, placating Nem’ro. He has tried Evocii chief Odeph, leader of the Voam tribe, for help, but it has yielded no results because the other tribes will not agree to return the ore. The agent visits Odeph, finding him “softened up” by some work camp goons. Odeph sends him into the swamps, where he recovers the ore from the renegade Evocii. Upon returning, he is met by Kaliyo Djannis, who makes thinly veiled threats in case the “Red Blade” causes trouble. Then again, Kaliyo has no true loyalty to the Hutt, so she may be of use later. As for Nem’ro, the Empire wants access to Nem’ro’s shvash gas mine on Hutta. However, Fa’athra is tapping into the same gas pocket, harming Nem’ro’s operation. The Keeper sends the agent to Fa’athra’s operation in the Rust Yards to put an end to this. He does so in explosive fashion, then passes along information about the strike to Karrels. He returns to his quarters, finding Targen and Luunti planting listening devices. When he catches them in the act and they try to kill him, he kills them both. He contacts the Keeper, who has bad news. Three days ago, Karrels’ two sons ran afoul of a Sith Lord. In the ensuing confrontation, one son (Serjil Javis) was killed and the other (Vargai Javis) was crippled. Karrels will cease to be a potentially Imperial ally once he learns of this. The Keeper orders the agent to kill Karrels, using Republic technology to black out his security in the process. This will allow them to say that Fa’athra allied with the Republic to get revenge for the destruction at his mine, while allowing the agent, as a friend of Karrels, to convince Toth’lazhen that he should be the one hunting down Karrels’ killer, earning more trust. The agent is a bit more ethical than that, though. He convinces Karrels to leave without a word and never return, so that he can eventually get to his crippled son. He grudgingly agrees (and will eventually attack a hospital ship to reclaim Vargai from the Empire), and Nem’ro assumes he was killed when it is reported. (The body could easily have been disintegrated, hence not needing one.) Fa’athra allows “Red Blade” to spearhead the investigation, as expected. Kaliyo confronts him, claiming to know what was done to Karrels. She wants in on whatever the agent is planning. The agent lets Keeper answer, and he is willing to offer her a place within Imperial Intelligence, based on her prior actions on Rattatak, Brentaal IV, and other worlds. (The agent now has his first companion, and Kaliyo asks Intel, as her price for joining, to help her find her old friend Anspi’shel.) Their first mission together is to break into Fa’athra’s archives to steal a holodisc of all of the paranoid Hutt’s dealings. They will then use a computer spike to insert faked footage of Fa’athra dealing with the Republic. They do so, but they face Fa’athra’s guards, led by one of his lieutenant’s, Nohn Veyaiko. They are able to talk him out of attacking, suggesting that Fa’athra had Karrels killed and intended to put the blame on Nohn, so that Nem’ro would kill him in revenge. They hand over the data to Nem’ro, but only after removing a lot of the other material that would have shown other allies of Fa’athra that would have sent Nem’ro on a revenge killing spree for all kinds of offenses of the past. (The removed data is blamed on damage to the holodisc.) With Fa’athra seemingly allied with the Republic, Nem’ro becomes willing to ally himself with the Sith Empire. With the mission done, the Keeper orders the agent and Kaliyo back to the Imperial Citadel on Dromund Kaas. Jheege contacts the agent to let him know that the real Red Blade is arriving at the spaceport soon, requiring the agent to kill Red Blade to keep his cover (and the results of all of his work on Hutta) intact. (It was Red Blade that sent the two goons to bug the agent’s quarters.) The agent and Kaliyo head for Dromund Kaas, where they meet with Darth Jadus at Imperial Intelligence Headquarters in the Citadel. Jadus seems to be annoyed with the Keeper and Imperial Intel for some reason, though he is complimentary about the agent’s work on Hutta. (To be continued below . . .)

(The Old Republic: Imperial Agent)*

*NOTE: Due to how insanely long this game is, plus how many classes exist with their own storylines, I have divided the game into multiple summaries, based on each character starting class. I have generally left out the little side quests to focus on the rather long main storylines and companion storylines. I am, for now, considering this agent to be male. (I nearly drove myself nuts doing this, as I managed the summaries by watching recordings of the entire storyline, wherein the player recording was using a female agent. However, the fact that the agent is introduced impersonating “Red Blade,” and the real Red Blade is a man, makes it seem far more likely that the agent is expected to be male.) Thanks to how the original player recorded his or her videos, I was able to integrate the companion storylines into the main summary, so you will find them more closely tied into where they occur in playing the game. Moreover, I have followed a Light Side path through the story, despite this being an imperial character class, allowing the player character to be a hero, despite not being a Republic agent of any kind.

- With the peace between the Republic and the Sith Empire quite fragile, a group of agents of the Sith Empire travel from Korriban to Dromund Kaas aboard the Imperial starship Black Talon (under Captain Orzik). Aboard, they meet Imperial Lieutenant Sylas, who claims that a droid is waiting for them. They meet and speak with the droid, NR-02, who is actually a messenger sent by Grand Moff Rycus Kilran (AKA “Butcher of Coruscant”) of the Fifth Fleet, who is also second to the Minister of War. He informs the agents that, hours earlier, there was a skirmish between Imperials and Republic forces on their border, and that a Republic vessel, the Brentaal Star, has escaped with a vital prisoner (codename: “the General”) in custody. The Black Talon is to intercept the Brentaal Star to rescue that prisoner. To do this, they must take over the Black Talon by bringing down Orzik, who is reluctant to get involved in a frontal assault with his mere transport ship. They take over the ship, kill Captain Orzik, then place Sylas in charge as the new captain. They face off with sabotage droids sent by the Brentaal Star in their first skirmish. Jedi Grand Master Satele Shan then contacts the Black Talon, informing the Imperials that she is on the way with four more Republic ships, all from a convoy that was attacked (which was when Satele sent the Brentaal Star ahead of them). The Imperials board the Brentaal Star, prompting the Republic forces to attempt to evacuate the General from the ship in a pod. They finally reach the escape pods and face Padawan Yadira Ban, who has been sent to guard the General. As the General heads into the escape pod, they battle Yadira, killing the Padawan. The General is captured and revealed to be a former member of the Imperial military (now a defector to the Republic), who has learned that both sides of the war have been developing doomsday weapons. He has been trying to find a way to keep the peace and avoid an outbreak of hostilities that would bring these weapons to bear on worlds caught in the crossfire. For his betrayal of the Empire, the General is punished, fulfilling Kilran’s orders. By the time the team returns to NR-02 on the bridge, though, a firefight has broken out between Sylas and her loyal officers and those who refused to go along with the mission, who now believe the team will kill them for disobeying. Many are killed, including Sylas. The Imperials continue on to their original destination, Dromund Kaas.*

(The Old Republic: The Black Talon)*

*NOTE: This is a “flashpoint” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters for the Sith Empire (Bounty Hunter, Sith Inquisitor, Sith Warrior, and Imperial Agent, with their respective companions) around Level 10 in character progression. Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (aside from being from any of those aforementioned four), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations.

- En route from Tython to Coruscant, a group of Republic heroes are aboard the Esseles when it is attacked by an Imperial ship (the Emperor’s Glory) that was following it. The attack kills the captain, leaving the ill-suited First Officer Haken in command. They are contacted by the Imperial vessel. It is Imperial Grand Moff Rycus Kilran, who wants an anti-Imperial terrorist known as the “Ambassador” (Vyn Asara), who is aboard the Esseles. (For his part, Hakan denies knowing anything about Asara being aboard the ship at all.) The heroes help face the Imperials, alongside a security team under Commander Narlock. However, while they are busy with an Imperial boarding team, another group, led by the Mandalorian known as “Ironfist,” takes over the bridge, which is now under lockdown. The Republic team meets Asara, who reveals that she is truly an ambassador, traveling to Imperial and neutral worlds for the Republic to convince their leaders to align themselves with the Republic. With the help of Chief Engineer Salen, they break through the lockdown and confront Ironfist. They are able to kill him, but they are still in the grip of Kilran’s tractor beam. The heroes, Asara, and Narlock’s team board Kilran’s ship (after a tense conversation in which Hakan suggests that they leave Asara behind on Kilran’s ship after taking out the tractor beam, so Kilran has no more reason to chase them down again). They take out the tractor beam generators (and a lot of Imperials), then escape back to the docking bay, only to be confronted by Kilran’s Sith ally, Vokk, who very nearly kills Asara. The Republic agents take down Vokk and return to the Esseles, which then jumps to hyperspace and safety. Unfortunately, Kilran was not aboard the Emperor’s Glory, so he remains out there to plot revenge.*

(The Old Republic: The Esseles)*

*NOTE: This is a “flashpoint” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters for the Republic (Smuggler, Jedi Consular, Jedi Knight, and Republic Trooper, with their respective companions) around Level 10 in character progression. Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (aside from being from any of those aforementioned four), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations.

- When the Advozse Hegemony takes over the previously-decommissioned Hammer Station, a Republic space station that acts as an armored fortress with a gravity cannon that can send asteroids into planets, both the Republic and the Sith Empire move to gain control of the station and its weapon from the Advozsec contingent aboard, then destroy it. A team manages to infiltrate Section Zero aboard Hammer Station and defeats Battlelord Kreshan, then blows up the station.

(The Old Republic: Hammer Station)*

*NOTE: This is a “flashpoint” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters of any class or affiliation (Smuggler, Jedi Consular, Jedi Knight, Republic Trooper, Imperial Agent, Sith Warrior, Sith Inquisitor, and Bounty Hunter, with their respective companions) around Level 17 in character progression. Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (not even from a particular affiliation), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations.

- When a Republic survey team discovers the sanctuary of Vodal Kressh on Athiss, they unknowingly awaken something left from a millennium ago, when Vodal conducted experiments on the planet that led the Emperor to declare the planet a forbidden zone. His sanctuary has been sealed since then, but now it has been disturbed, leaving it up to a Republic team sent in after the surveyors and an unrelated team from the Sith Empire (sent by Darth Malgus) to put an end to the threat left behind by the long-death Sith alchemist. They find most of the Republic survey team dead, and an excavated tomb opened and full of yozsuk spitters. They find Professor Leyfarsha and a group of survivors who have “embraced his word” and attack. Upon discovering the Tomb of Vodal Kressh, those sent to end his legacy’s threat discover the massive Beast of Vodal Kressh (which is very much like a gigantic yozsuk spitter) and kill it to proceed. They discover disciples and guardians within Vodal’s temple, the remnants of the slave race he created to serve him over a thousand years earlier. In Vodal’s burial chamber, they face the Prophet of Vodal Kressh, taking him down as well. After collecting artifacts relating to Vodal’s activities, they escape, having eliminated the threat posed by what remained of Vodal’s followers, and, with them, the spirit of Vodal Kressh himself (which seemed to have inhabited the Prophet).

(The Old Republic: Athiss)*

*NOTE: This is a “flashpoint” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters of any class or affiliation (Smuggler, Jedi Consular, Jedi Knight, Republic Trooper, Imperial Agent, Sith Warrior, Sith Inquisitor, and Bounty Hunter, with their respective companions) around Level 21 in character progression. Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (not even from a particular affiliation), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations.

- When the Republic warship Allusis, in dock to be upgraded at Fondor, is captured by Mandalorians from the militant Clan Varad, the clan begins using the ship in their current wave of attacks against Republic and Imperial worlds in the Outer Rim. With the stability of the entire Outer Rim at stake, both sides in the current cold war send forth agents to bring down the Allusis and its new Mandalorian crew. (The Empire will not be breaking with the Mandalorian leadership in going after them, since Darth Malgus has convinced Mandalore to sanction Varad’s destruction and has even provided their location to the Imperial team – the Tamarin Sector.) With Satele Shan sending the Republic agents into action to recapture the Allusis and Imperial Intelligence intercepting her message, both sides recognize that the rogue group is aboard the ship, making it their target. The teams intercept the Allusis and board. In the control room, one side’s agents battles Braxx the Bloodhound, a Mandalorian beastmaster. After battling through countless members of Clan Varad, their beasts, and their droids, they finally confront the leader of the clan, Mavrix Varad. In the ensuing confrontation, Mavrix is killed, vowing to see his killers in hell. With so many of their clan dead, along with their clan leader, Clan Varad is no longer a threat to the Republic or the Empire. Those who survive are brought back into other Mandalorian clans in their lowest ranks.

(The Old Republic: Mandalorian Raiders)*

*NOTE: This is a “flashpoint” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters of any class or affiliation (Smuggler, Jedi Consular, Jedi Knight, Republic Trooper, Imperial Agent, Sith Warrior, Sith Inquisitor, and Bounty Hunter, with their respective companions) around Level 25 in character progression. Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (not even from a particular affiliation), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations.

- The planet Cademimu V is in chaos. The local Republic governor, Choranov, has been under investigation for crimes against his own citizens, and now he has declared independence from the Republic entirely. Amid civil unrest and an outright uprising, he has imposed martial law and is sending his own private army against the public. His forces also manage to take over a Republic missile array on the planet (which is known as the “war chest of the Outer Rim”) that puts the entire Celanon Spur trade route in jeopardy. To salvage the situation, the Republic sends in a team, while the Sith Empire also sends in a team, seeking to take advantage of the chaos to gain control of the planet. After getting through many of Choranov’s agents (such as Officer Xander, Captain Grimyk, General Ortol, and EN-4C), one of the teams manages to take down Choranov and destroys the missile array, ending its threat to the trade route (and further use in any Republic or Imperial military actions).

(The Old Republic: Cademimu)*

*NOTE: This is a “flashpoint” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters of any class or affiliation (Smuggler, Jedi Consular, Jedi Knight, Republic Trooper, Imperial Agent, Sith Warrior, Sith Inquisitor, and Bounty Hunter, with their respective companions) around Level 29 in character progression. Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (not even from a particular affiliation), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations.

- Years after the Treaty of Coruscant, Theron Shan, secret son of Jedi Grand Master Satele Shan, is a spy for the Republic Strategic Information Service. On Coruscant, he (with the help of his droid, M-6) breaks up a meeting of goons working for a Black Sun slaving ring, capturing a Twi'lek agent named Teff'ith. He then reports to the SIS director, Marcus Trant, who informs him that he is being sent to find Ngani Zho, a Jedi Master who trained many members of the Jedi Council in combat, including Satele. He has reappeared after going missing right after the war, and has shown up on an outpost world on the border between Imperial and Republic space, claiming to have just returned from the Vesla system, a “Black Sector” that is under Imperial control. Information he has from Sith space could help turn the tide in future confrontations between the Republic and the Empire. (It just so happens that Zho also basically raised Theron for Satele, so he has a personal stake in this.) He takes Teff'ith with him as a resource on his mission. Meanwhile, Darth Mekhis still lives. She is working for Darth Marr of the Dark Council, and she is using a new Javelin Dreadnought that she calls the Ror’jhan (“she whose leaves sweat poison”) to destroy planets. She knows that Zho has surfaced and has information on her plans. She sends her Sith Knights to track him down. On Taris, Theron catches up with Zho, but they are attacked by Sith Knights (droid Sith creations). They escape aboard Theron's ship, thanks to careful cover fire from Teff'ith. (In the escape, Zho pretends his lightsaber is broken so that he can test Theron's skills.) With the mentally-unstable Jedi Master aboard, they head for Port Nowhere. There, they bargain and steal clearances needed to get into Sith space and chart a course for Vesla. They land on an outlying world and set up a spy ray to check out the inner system. What they find is that Vesla II has been utterly devastated by the Empire somehow, even as Zho begins ranting about Mekhis having gravity weapons. They find that the Sith have some kind of monstrous vessel that Zho claims is "eating stars." They leave, only to be forced into going aboard the Imperial starship Valor Prevalis. Aboard the ship as a prisoner, while Zho is tortured for information, Theron is introduced to the superweapon known as the Sun Razer, a vessel that leeches power from stars. Using the power from the Sun Razer, the Sith have also created more superweapons, such as Darth Malgus' Emperor's Shadow (with third-generation cloaking technology), the Ascendant Spear (a long-range battle cruiser), the "fleet killer megalaser" known as the Silencer, a light-speed cannon called the Gauntlet, and an unknown construct called the Undying. He is shown all of this as a prelude to the Sith offering him a job with the Sith Empire under a Sith Lord. He refuses, but his time has allowed his cybernetics to link with the ship's own computers, which allows him to free himself and Zho when brought back in to be confined with Zho. As for Teff'ith, the computer on our heroes' ship begins acknowledging her commands at a predetermined time, allowing her to aid in the escape. Together, they plan to strike back against the Empire by destroying the Sun Razer. Teff'ith and Zho create a distraction by engaging Sith troopers, only for Zho to sacrifice himself by taking blaster bolts meant to kill Teff'ith. Meanwhile, Theron enters Darth Mekhis' control room and tries to take her on, but her guards capture him. Before they can kill him, he taunts her with his identity as the son of the woman who "broke" Mehkis on Rhen Var. When she gets close, he fires a poison dart from his gauntlet, disabling her long enough for him to reach her control panel and lower the facility's shields, which begins a chain reaction. Theron barely escapes to the ship, where he finds Teff'ith. They escape as the facility and its superweapons are apparently destroyed. A grateful Theron drops Teff'ith off to her freedom, then returns to Coruscant. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Lost Suns)*

*NOTE: This story takes place at the same time that players can play their class-specific stories in the video game. However, Annihilation (set in 3,640 BBY, according to The Essential Reader's Companion) refers to these events as two years prior to that novel. Those references in Annihilation are in error, according to Leland Chee, as they were based on previously-assumed dates for The Old Republic, before the entire game turned out to be set in 3,640 BBY. (This segment mentions the Essesles incident in its first issue.)

- After the death of Darth Mekhis, Darth Hadra is (briefly) placed in charge of the Sphere of Technology for the Dark Council, (conjecture based on Annihilation)

- The new Havoc Squad reports to General Elin Garza on Coruscant, who informs them that there are massive desertions of SpecForces soldiers to the Empire. This is a crisis. To stop Tavus and his fellow defectors, who follow him, they first go after shipments from the Migrant Merchants' Guild and Black Sun that are supplying the defectors. Their first target within the Migrant Merchants' Guild is a cyborg inventor, Krel. They find Krel and destroy his war droids, but he has also created powerful cyborgs as sleeper agents, who don't even know their own part in Krel's scheme. They will be sent to their own lives until hidden programming triggers. Once Krel is dead, Garza sends Havoc Leader (for lack of a better term) and Jorgan after the cyborgs, who are held nearby prior to being released. Oddly, they don't appear to be cyborgs, since their new parts are all beneath the surface. Rather than killing them, they acquire their ID numbers to be able to track them down later if it becomes necessary. (Garza is not happy about this refusal to follow orders.) Havoc Squad is then sent after Black Sun, who is selling a nerve gas (Trivoris) to Tavus. They join with SpecForce Sergeant Ava Jaxo, who is already investigating. They are to neutralize the Trivoris by introducing another compound into the canisters, while also keeping an eye out for a red case brought into the base by Black Sun under guard. They neutralize the Trivoris and find the case, retrieving a special blaster from inside to bring back for analysis. When the Senate Defense Committee begins looking into Tavus' Havoc Squad desertion, Garza sends the new Havoc Leader to testify to the committee. She testifies before Senators Arnus, Voralla, and Krasul, but they shut down questions when they would have to reveal the truth about the Ando Prime mission to the lieutenant. Havoc Leader is then informed that Jek Kardan, Havoc Squad’s founder (at least as a SpecForce unit, since he had been Jace Malcom’s XO before Malcom left to help form the SpecForce division) and Tavus’ former mentor, has been on Coruscant, leading a group of vigilantes, the Justicars’ Brigade. Havoc Leader and Jorgan infiltrate the base, confronting Kardan as he confers with Imperial allies for support, so that he can continue supporting Tavus’ own efforts. In the firefight that ensues, Kardan escapes. They then get access to Justicar records, which point them to a Republic comm relay that Kardan has taken and is reprogramming down in the Works region. Upon going there, Havoc Leader compromises the relay, then confronts Kardan, trying to argue the case for Kardan coming in peacefully, bringing the deserters with him if he can convince them to do so. They kill the Imperials working with Kardan, then Kardan turns himself in. After actually destroying the relay, Havoc Leader and Jorgan return to Garza, who notes that Kardan is now in custody and under guard. The information acquired in the mission will allow them to hopefully track down Havoc’s traitors. However, Wraith has already made her move, kidnapping Senator Krasul. Havoc Squad is assigned a Rendili Hyperworks BT-7 Thunderclap starship (and steward droid C2-N2). They head for Port Raga space station, which Wraith has managed to take over secretly, according to Sergeant Jaxo, who has been sent to assist them. Havoc Leader and Jorgan get to Krasul in the hanger where he is being kept (with explosives to kill him if he tries to escape). Wraith intends to force Krasul to publicly reveal the Senate’s decisions about Ando Prime, which could throw faith in Republic military decisions into doubt. They deactivate the explosives, saving Krasul. Jaxo and her SpecForces allies ferry Krasul back to Coruscant, while Garza directs Havoc Squad to Taris and Nar Shaddaa based on information from the captured data on Coruscant. They head for Taris, where they are assisted by Colonel Gaff (but he’s reluctant and griping, given that he has the entire planet to run, technically) and his staff, including Sergeant Elara Dorne (a defector from the Sith Empire who is now part of the Republic). Elara notes missing Republic teams that seem not to have been attacked by rakghouls, which suggests suspicious activity. Havoc Squad checks it out, finding abandoned power converters and hostile scavengers. Havoc Squad and Elara’s team both strike the scavenger base, saving Republic prisoners, who were going to be shipped off to Needles of the defected squad, who is working with Imperials at a base in the swamps. Havoc Squad seeks out Needles’ base, finding only Imperial Colonel Thorus, who offers to trade information about Needles for his freedom. Elara warns Havoc Leader via comm not to trust Thorus, who is guilty of atrocities in the war, even disobeying Imperial orders to kill civilians. When threatened with death, he reveals that Needles is in the sewer system getting samples, intending to turn the rakghoul plague into a biological weapon. Thorus is spared in exchange for this information, though Elara is none too happy about that. Using his information and data at the swamp base, they are able to track down Needles at an abandoned transport station in the region suggested by the data. Needles is turning individual soldiers into rakghouls and working with an intelligent rakghoul (a “Nekghoul”), Vorzoth. Havoc Leader and Jorgan confront Needles and Vorzoth. Battle erupts, leaving Needles and Vorzoth dead. The pathogen research is destroyed as well. One Havoc Squad deserter down, four to go. After speaking with Garza, they agree to have Elara transferred from Gaff’s command to Havoc Squad. Their next mission is to Nar Shaddaa to deal with a Republic war droid that has gone rogue (M1-4X), a prototype that was meant to join Havoc Squad. When development was canceled, Tavus apparently had the Empire continue the project. They are joined by a Strategic Information Service (SIS) agent, Jonas Balkar. When the droid enters a nearby mercenary vault, they spring their assault, finding M1-4X working with Captain Andrik, who is working for Tavus. Unfortunately for Andrik, M1-4X will not fire on Republic officers. Andrik overrides the droid’s programming with a special code, making him obey orders from Tavus or his operatives. In the firefight that ensues, the human members of the droid’s crew (SpecForce defectors) are defeated and driven off, and the droid escapes. In conversation with Jonas, Havoc Leader reveals the SpecForce defections that Garza had wanted kept secret. Havoc Squad goes to the Red Light Sector with Jonas. Havoc Squad destroys a local arms factory, forcing those inside to call for help from their Imperial contacts. The signal goes to a casino penthouse at Club Vertica. With the help of slicer Niall Piv and some creative slicing in mercenary-controlled territory, they get into Club Vertica as approved visitors. In the penthouse, which is actually an Imperial control center, they confront Major Zardres. During that confrontation, Andrik contacts him via comm, spotting Havoc Squad. Andrik leaves Zardres and his men to die, but his betrayal leads Zardres to point Havoc Leader to the Shadow Town district to find M1-4X, which is being upgraded as they speak. They reach the Shadow Town facility, but when M1-4X overhears Andrik’s comments to Havoc Leader, the droid’s loyalties switch, but its programming leaves it unable to avoid following Andrik’s orders, even if those make the droid a traitor as well. Battle begins, and Andrik is killed. M1-4X is disabled. They return to Jonas, who is arguing with Garza via comm about the need for SIS to know about the SpecForces defections. (Garza is again annoyed with Havoc Leader for revealing that information.) M1-4X is fixed, reprogrammed, and given over to Havoc Squad as its newest member. Garza then informs Havoc Squad that Tavus and his men have raided a Republic research facility on Cularin and stolen a prototype cloaking device. Fortunately, it has a tracking device in it, which allows them to track Tavus’ ship and intercept it, reclaiming the cloaking device. As it turns out, Tavus contacts Havoc Leader via holocomm when he gets aboard the ship. He again argues his case, comparing the new Havoc Squad to the Imperial Shadow Fist team, who is aboard the ship. The trap is sprung, but Havoc Squad prevails. Tavus is not present, but at least they got the cloaking device. The next two targets are Tatooine and Alderaan. They travel first to Tatooine, where they meet up with Anchorhead’s mayor, Oleg Klerren. He is in the midst of what appears to be a series of random terrorist bombings in Anchorhead that are killing civilians. Havoc Squad investigates a bombing just as they arrive, managing to stop subsequent bombings in the same area. They find that the bombs are being hidden inside droids that simply walk into the area and explode. Klerren is contacted by Fuse, who claims to have information on the bombs. He recognizes Havoc Leader during the call and claims that he is the only one who can stop the bombings. He claims that the Empire brought him to Tatooine to build bombs for Colonel Gorik, who has ordered them tested in Anchorhead against the locals. When Fuse refused to continue his work under those circumstances, Gorik locked Fuse up, rather than killing him and risking Tavus’ anger. Fuse points Havoc Squad to an abandoned town where Geonosians (led by Kyvax) are building the bombs for Gorik. Havoc Squad takes them down, then goes after Gorik and the Imperials. They take out most of the Imperials, but Gorik sets a self-destruct and tries to escape, leaving Fuse in his cell. Havoc Squad stops the destruct sequence and saves Fuse, though Gorik escapes with Fuse’s bomb designs. Fuse surrenders to the Republic and is taken back by Lieutenant Tasser of the 43rd, to whom Havoc Leader describes Fuse as a valued ally, not a traitor, due to his recent help. Fuse seems to have truly had a change of heart. Their next target is Alderaan, where the ruling families are in a civil war for leadership of the planet. Havoc Squad is to support House Organa, and the Empire is backing House Thul. Apparently, Gearbox is now working with Thul and the Imperials, according to a Thul prisoner (Markus Andarius Thul) that Organa is holding. Havoc Leader meets with Organa detention center head Captain Balic Cormac. Markus is willing to help the Republic with information in return for the protection of his wife and daughter back among House Thul. He gives a bit of intel that claims Gearbox is helping to create a missile system for House Thul. Once Havoc Squad checks it out, they return to meet Pallos Thessius Organa, first nephew of Duke Organa, who refuses to allow any kind of pardon for Markus for his help. Their next move is to protect Markus’ family (wife Altana and daughter Valyn), getting them out from behind House Thul lines. Altana and Valyn are then reunited with Markus at the detention center. Markus sends them to a facility in the mountains, where Gearbox is said to be working on his so-called “Project B.” They get inside, only to find that Project B is a huge weaponized walker. Havoc Squad defeats it, as per usual, allowing them to defeat Gearbox as well. Pallos is not particularly happy about the arrangement with Markus, but Havoc Leader pushes for him to be freed to be with his family. Again, Garza is happy with Havoc Leader’s results, if not his methods. Havoc Squad returns to SpecForces HQ on Coruscant, where Garza notes that Tavus has sent out a transmission to Nar Shaddaa, Tatooine, Alderaan, and Taris, seeking to draw any remaining SpecForces deserters to his cause. Havoc Leader is sent to infiltrate this meeting of traitors aboard Tavus’ ship, the Justice. Aboard the ship, Havoc Leader first encounters Wraith again, whom he kills.
Other Imperials are dealt with, then they face Tavus himself. In a vicious firefight, Tavus is defeated and taken into custody, where he can provide important intelligence about the Empire’s operations. (To be continued below . . . )*

(The Old Republic: Republic Trooper)*

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Republic Trooper summary above.

- Upon arrival on Dromund Kaas, the Apprentice and Vette soon meet with Lord Baras in his own offices to begin the Apprentice’s tenure as Baras’ enforcer. He is first sent to meet with Commander Lanklyn to join in escorting a prisoner in carbonite to Lord Baras. They are immediately confronted by a human named Slesstack, who claims the carbonite block belongs to his master, and then another group led by TuMarr, whose master is also seeking the man in carbonite. Slesstack and TuMarr’s teams agree to a temporary truce to join forces against the Apprentice and Lanklyn’s men, but the Apprentice kills all of the aggressors and delivers the carbonite prisoner to Baras as instructed. Baras reveals that the frozen man is a top Republic agent who was investigating one of Baras’ “invisibles,” a major spy on Nar Shaddaa. He had found the spy right after Baras had a strong Force vision of doom for his own efforts. As Baras begins thawing the agent to torture for information, the Apprentice and Vette are sent outside the Kaas City to Commander Pritch, who has a seek-and-destroy mission for him. There is a slave revolt in progress, secretly instigated by Baras himself to distract and weaken a rival, but now the slaves are threatening to reveal Baras’ involvement if not given stronger weapons. He takes down the captains, cowing the rest of the slaves’ demands. Under torture by Darth Baras, Grik Sonosan, the man from the carbonite block, refuses to give up information. While the interrogation continues, the Apprentice is sent to meet with another of Baras’ apprentices, Dri’kill Ba’al, a covert operative in the compound of one of Baras’ rivals, the rogue Sith Lord Grathan. Baras wants Grathan’s operations crippled but Grathan left alive due to his usefulness. Upon breaking into Grathan’s compound, the Apprentice learns from Ba’al that Grathan has a secret son, whom he has been training in the Dark Side, named Beelzlit. The Apprentice heads off to kill Beelzlit, encountering both him and his mother, Celiwanta Grathan (a full rank Sith). After defeating both in combat, Celiwanta tries to bargain for their lives by offering to lead the Apprentice to Grathan himself, but since those are not the Apprentice’s orders, he kills Celiwanta (not in his orders, actually) and Beelzlit (as ordered). Upon returning to Ba’al, the spy draws his own lightsaber and calls down Grathan’s security forces to kill the Apprentice and Vette as a means of solidifying Ba’al’s cover. Unfortunately for Ba’al, he and “his” men are no match for the Apprentice and his Twi’lek “slave.” They return to Baras, who is even more frustrated than before at being unable to break Grik Sonosan. In order to break Sonosan, he sends the Apprentice after the Emperor’s ancient weapon, the Ravager, which draws the life essence and knowledge of those it is used upon, which reveals all of their secrets. It is located in a secret chamber within the Dark Temple, crawling with creatures. In the Dark Temple, he finds most of the Ravager, but some pieces have been claimed by pawns of Lord Vacuus. He hunts them down and kills them, reclaiming the pieces, before facing Vacuus himself (who has been gathering them to exact revenge on Lord Pharshol). The skilled Apprentice (with Vette’s blasters assisting, of course) defeats Vacuus, returning to Baras with the complete Ravager. Baras places the Ravager device onto Sonosan’s head, and the Republic spy reveals that he belongs (as expected) to the Republic Strategic Information Service (SIS), and he was sent to seek out an Imperial spy on Nar Shaddaa, based on the Jedi Council’s recommendation and the suspicions of Jedi Master Nomen Karr. (Nomen Karr was once undercover as a Sith Lord, Lord Retrost, and he nearly brought down Baras, making him Baras’ nemesis these days. Now, Nomen Karr is seeking out Sith and Imperial spies within the Jedi Order and Republic ranks.) Apparently, Nomen Karr was alerted to the possible spy by his new Padawan, who has the ability to sense an individual’s true nature. The Jedi Council is skeptical, but Karr believes her visions are foolproof, so this mission was meant to be proof of her abilities. Sonosan dies before he can reveal the Padawan’s name, if he ever knew it. Knowing that the mission was to Nar Shaddaa, that the Padawan was from Alderaan, that the Padawan’s abilities were first discovered on Tatooine, and that she had also picked out a possible spy on Balmorra, these four locations become the first set that the Apprentice must investigate in his hunt for the as-yet-unnamed Padawan. With a new starship (a Fury-class Interceptor) given to him for his mission (along with its attendant droid, 2V-R8), the Apprentice sets out first for Balmorra, having to kill an assassin from Lord Grathan, Ralesk, in the docking bay before leaving Dromund Kaas. (Balmorra and Nar Shaddaa are the first targets, since there are spies for Darth Baras that are in danger of being discovered, thanks to the Padawan’s insights.) On Balmorra, his contact is Lieutenant Malavai Quinn in Sobrik. Their mission includes killing Baras’ spy, Commander Rylon of the Balmorran (Republic) Resistance, after destroying evidence of his activities for the Empire. This will protect Baras’ larger operations, since a Jedi is tracking down Rylon and such evidence. The Apprentice takes out a satellite control tower to cover evidence of Rylon’s activities during the war. He is then sent to kill Ensign Durmat, Rylon’s son that knows his true identity, at a Republic brig, where he is being held for questioning about his father. He reveals the truth about his father to his jailer, Zixx, just before the Apprentice emerges and kills both Zixx and Durmat, along with Zixx’s Republic trooper backup. With this done, Baras gives him the go-ahead to take down Rylon, as long as he does so with a bit of overkill to make sure it does not look like it was a targeted assassination. Quinn provides information on the Balmorran Arms Factory, the Resistance headquarters where Rylon can be found. He fights his way to Rylon, who then must fight the Sith to keep his cover intact, even in death, though he dies with what the Empire would consider honor. The deed done, the Apprentice is contacted by Quinn, who informs him that both Quinn and the Jedi hunting Rylon heard their conversation via a video feed. As Quinn’s men delay the Jedi’s retreat to her ship, the Apprentice races to kill her before she can leave Balmorra with what she knows. He confronts the Jedi, who is identified as Jedi Knight Mashallon. However, she has already sent the recorded conversation to Jedi Master Nomen Karr. Fortunately, Quinn has already blocked the transmission, so it never reached Nomen Karr. After a fierce duel and the revelation that she has failed, the Apprentice kills Mashallon. Due to his excellent work, Malavai Quinn is promoted to the rank of Captain and given the choice of his next assignment. He chooses to pledge himself to the Apprentice and joins the crew, alongside Vette. The trio next heads to Nar Shaddaa to wipe out another spy, Agent Dellocon, who has gained the favor of a young Sith Lord named Rathari, whom the Apprentice is also to kill. His contact on Nar Shaddaa is Halidrell Setsyn, who runs Baras’ slaving operation on the moon. He introduces himself to her by killing Exchange thugs that are trying to muscle in on the slaving operation. She informs the Apprentice that Lord Rathari and his apprentice, Girik, are meeting with Qiltakka the Hutt and Ybann the Hutt of the Hutt Cartel to strong-arm some territory from them. The Apprentice breaks up the meeting and threatens the Hutts, who say they will delay working with Rathari if he can defeat Rathari in combat. When the threats continue, the Hutts let their guards join in. The Apprentice kills the guards, both Hutts, and Girik. Without any evidence of who killed the Hutts, though, the alliance between the Hutt Cartel and the Sith Empire remains intact. He next confronts Imperial General Klington at a Republic outpost, where Rathari’s men are assaulting the Republic. He kills Klington and his men, then the Republic forces standing against him. While he is gone, however, Lord Rathari strikes the slaving operation, killing Halidrell and her comrades. Rathari, in a recording left behind, challenges the Apprentice to a duel on the roof of the Network Access satellite platform, an obvious trap. The Apprentice and his companion face Rathari and Dellocon on the platform. Dellocon, knowing he is about to be killed, has joined Rathari. Rathari will not actually lower himself to fight the Apprentice himself, so he sets his guards upon him. The Apprentice kills them, then defeats Rathari, who kills Dellocon and bows to the Apprentice, knowing that he, not Rathari, will one day bring down Darth Baras. The Apprentice allows him to live, needing future support from other Sith. Upon returning to the ship and contacting Baras, the Apprentice learns that all of his movements are being tracked, presumably by agents of Nomen Karr. He is sent to the space station where the signal originates to kill whomever is tracking him. Upon arrival, he cuts his way through personnel until finding Hirosho, the man working directly for Nomen Karr, even as he is in contact with Karr via holocomm. Karr tries to reason with the Apprentice, but that is a lost cause. The Apprentice Force chokes Hirosho, killing him, his guards, and Republic Troopers that follow. Now, the Apprentice is sent to both Tatooine and Alderaan, where Baras already has agents seeking information on Karr’s Padawan. He heads to Tatooine, where Baras has learned that the Padawan once trained with a Jedi Master named Yonlach, who has been in hiding on Tatooine since Baras tried to have the Dark Council order his death but failed to convince them to do so. The Apprentice meets with his Tatooine contact, Sharack Breev, who points him along the path taken by Yonlach and the unknown Padawan, starting with meeting an old soothsayer named Izzeebowe Jeef. The Apprentice tears through Exchange thugs to reach Jeef, who explains that the Padawan entered the lair of a sand demon creature to engage in an ancient Jedi ritual known as the Demon’s Blood. (A Jedi covers himself in sand demon blood, then enters the lair of the “savage ones” – the Sandpeople – who bow before him and show him his path.) He strikes down the sand demon, covers himself in blood, and then kills a Tusken Shaman, taking a parchm

Fortunately, the Apprentice’s very presence is enough to convince Kendoh’s Sith guards to ally themselves with him, out of loyalty to the Empire. The best that Kendoh has been able to find about Jaesa’s past is that she resembles an old handmaiden of House Aldé’s Lady Renata Aldé. Renata is protected by Aldé’s greatest champion, Windredd, within the grounds owned by House Organa, the larger house that Aldé has sided with. He breaks in, kills Windredd, and confronts Renata, who thought he was there to force her to marry Kendoh. Knowing what he is really after, she reveals that she has heard of Jaesa, but the girl was never her handmaiden. When Kendoh’s other Sith guards arrive to drag her away to him, she tries to bargain with the Apprentice by revealing that Jaesa had been the handmaiden of Gesselle Organa, who was once an aristocrat but now leads House Organa’s troops against House Ulgo. He lets Fimm Ress and the other Sith loyal to Kendoh to take her to him. Kendoh identifies Gesselle’s headquarters, which is surrounded by a forcefield. The Apprentice hits the planetary power generator, causing failsafes to initiate, which cut off power to the headquarters, while leaving crucial systems online. He fights his way through the headquarters, until coming face-to-face with the general, Gesselle. He Force chokes a fellow soldier, her lover (Blenks) to get her to reveal that Jaesa’s parents are servants at the central tower of House Organa. She even provides a key to grant him entry. He kills Blenks, then Gesselle and the other soldiers, before heading for House Organa. There, he meets Gregor and Parvin Willsaam (Jaesa’s parents) and a Jedi Master named Volryder. Upon learning that they know nothing, he Force pushes Volryder away and kills both parents with the Force, before then killing Volryder. Again, Baras believe that the death of her parents will be felt by Jaesa and help throw her off. After learning that Kendoh has given false information to paint the Apprentice in a bad light to Baras, he returns to Kendoh and kills the backstabber. Surprisingly, the Apprentice is contacted by Jaesa Willsaam herself, who notes that this is really a personal conflict between Nomen Karr and Darth Baras. She claims to be contacting him without Karr’s knowledge, so that they can meet, face-to-face, and avoid further bloodshed. Upon arriving at the coordinates, he is confronted by Ulldin and Zylixx, who say that Karr discovered Jaesa’s plan and talked her out of it. Now, it really is a trap. He kills them both and contacts Baras, who has been challenged by Karr to a duel to the death. Baras feels that he is above a personal contest of skills and sends the Apprentice to confront him on Hutta instead. He is not to kill Karr. Instead, he is to wound him enough that his torment draws Jaesa out to him. Sith and Jedi meet, and a fierce duel begins. The Apprentice pushes Karr to the point where the Jedi who once impersonated a Sith draws on the Dark Side. It does not save him from defeat. Imperial soldiers arrive and stabilize him, as he is taken into custody for torture. The plan succeeds, as Jaesa soon arrives to rescue or bargain for Karr. With Yonlach and her parents dead, and with Karr twisted by his own anger and the Dark Side, Jaesa decides to put an end to the Apprentice. They duel, and he breaks her faith in the Light Side (which is helped by Karr’s twisted nature). She believes that the Apprentice’s methods bring a kind of fear that forces truth to the surface, and the partially-trained Padawan chooses to switch affiliations, becoming the Apprentice’s own apprentice. Her first orders are to kill Karr herself, which she does. In respect for his success, Darth Baras dubs the Apprentice a true “Sith Lord,” though not yet a “Darth.” (To be continued below . . . )* (The Old Republic: Sith Warrior)*

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Jedi Consular summary above.

- As Darth Zash’s new Apprentice tries to leave the Sith Academy to join her on Dromund Kaas, he is stopped by Apprentice Ortosin on behalf of Darth Skotia, who has been instructed to kill him, so that he cannot go to Dromund Kaas. (It seems that Skotia “knows what Zash is up to” and cannot allow it, whatever it might be.) The Apprentice kills Ortosin and his accomplices, then heads for Dromund Kaas, where he meets Lord Krillos and Overseer Kryos, who provide him with a bit more specialized training. Before reporting to Zash, he is again accosted, this time by Darth Skotia himself, who gives him a message for Zash. (He knows what she is up to, and only he “has the key.”) Upon informing Zash, she tasks him with taking down Darth Skotia for her. She needs more pieces in place for this to happen, however, so she tasks him with visiting a group of slaves who have recently revolted and stopped working on a large statue. She believes Skotia is hiding something important near that site, so the Apprentice first gains archaeological plans from some of the slaves, which Zash analyzes, revealing a hidden chamber under the colossus itself. The Apprentice is sent into that underground base to recover a Trandoshan tablet that is said to have been a gift from the Trandoshan deity, the Scorekeeper. It is with this tablet that Skotia is able to maintain control over his Trandoshan bodyguards. By recovering it, the Apprentice will deprive him of his Trandoshan muscle. He and Khem Val fight their way through Skotia’s apprentices, recovering the relic and bringing it back to Lord Zash. Next, she needs him to recover cybernetics expert Dorotsech, who is being held by the rogue Sith Lord Grathan. The Apprentice is to find him, learn the whereabouts of a neutralizer that he created for Zash to use to destroy Skotia’s cybernetic parts, and then kill Dorotsech to keep him quiet. He breaks into Grathan’s jungle facility, finding Dorotsech, who claims that the cyber neutralizer prototype would only do any good against a cyborg that is at least half-mechanical. He also notes that the power cells have not been gathered from Grathan’s droids just yet, so the Apprentice kills Dorotsech, recovers the neutralizer from where the tech indicated it could be found, and then recovers the power cells necessary to bring a readied neutralizer to Lord Zash. As Zash attends a party at the Nexus Room cantina, the Apprentice goes after Skotia himself. Upon entering Skotia’s personal chamber, Skotia tries to set his Trandoshans, led by Skeesk, against the Apprentice. When the Apprentice reveals the tablet, though, the Trandoshans turn on their former master. Skotia, however, simply kills the Trandoshans. (The bodyguards were basically just for show.) Skotia attacks the Apprentice, but the combined efforts of the Apprentice, the neutralizer, and Khem Val overwhelm Darth Skotia. With a final warning that Zash will one day kill the Apprentice himself, Skotia dies. The Apprentice reports back to Zash, who is at the Nexus Room, listening to gossip from Lord Reyzek and Lord Goss. After learning of Skotia’s death, Zash is contacted by Darth Thanaton (who was a master of Skotia and sits just below the Dark Council in authority), who berates her for having Skotia killed, though she feigns ignorance. She is ordered to report to him in person immediately. As she does as ordered, the Apprentice heads for Darth Skotia’s quarters, which will soon belong to Zash. There, Lords Kirnon and Calaverous refuse to believe that the Apprentice killed Skotia, rather than Zash herself. Zash arrives, revealing that she has been promoted and is now a full Darth, “Darth Zash.” Now, Zash has Skotia’s holdings, including the key to the Dark Temple that he had kept from her. The first piece of the artifact that will give them the power of Tulak Hord is, according to the map that the Apprentice recovered, found within the Dark Temple, where a vision has told Zash that the dark power that has awakened within may be pacified if the Apprentice, being of low (slave) origin, humbles himself before it. He uses the glyph (key) to enter the Dark Temple, then travels to its depths, where the spirit of Lord Aloysius Kallig (the apparition) emerges from his crypt, claiming to be an ancestor of the Apprentice, many generations past. He awoke when weak “trespassers” entered the crypt, but upon seeing the Apprentice, he now knows that it is the Apprentice, not Kallig’s spirit itself, which will bring glory back to their family. Khem Val mocks the spirit, given that Tulak Hord was Kallig’s killer, but the Apprentice keeps him in line. Kallig gives his descendant Tulak Hord’s artifact, warning him that betrayal follows it. The Apprentice takes the artifact from Kallig’s sarcophagus and returns to Zash, who has been looking through Skotia’s research, which now belongs to her. She reveals that the artifact is one of five that Tulak Hord used for a ritual that then allowed him to conquer the entire Dromund system. She has foreseen that the Apprentice will be the one to wield this power. At present, she knows only that the trails of two of the artifacts point to Balmorra and Nar Shaddaa. Zash provides her Apprentice with a new starship to carry out his missions for her – a Fury-class Imperial Interceptor with attendant droid 2V-R8. The artifact on Balmorra is said to be in an ancient hazard vault, but that vault has become a storage area for toxic waste, thanks to the last war. At present, a “local militia” (actually backed by the Republic) is battling Imperial interest on Balmorra. The Apprentice makes contact with Zash’s suggested contact, Major Bessiker. The biggest issue is that they cannot find a way to survive the waste or get through it, but Captain Ilun suggests that the Colicoids, who have been experimented upon by the Balmorrans, have a resistance to the toxic waste now. In fact, they feed on it. The Apprentice travels to the research facility where the Colicoids were altered, recovering records about the experiments. The Colicoids were being altered specifically to clean up the waste, but they will need their chief scientist, Iannos Tyrek, who recently defected to the opposition, if they are to replicate the mutagen that was used on the Colicoids. He is being held in a Republic research base out by the toxic lakes. (Meanwhile, Bessiker’s own son, Hiran, has passed his Sith Trials on Korriban and is on his way to Balmorra as the Apprentice to Lord Esdras.) The Apprentice breaks into the research base, confronting Iannos, who refuses to go with him. The Sith simply tortures him to the point of near-death with Force lightning and has him carried bodily back to Bessiker with Captain Rollo and his Imperial backup team. He is contacted by Bessiker, whose son has arrived. His son immediately left to find a holocron, but now Bessiker has received a distress call from his son. He uses the production of the serum as a bargaining chip to convince the Apprentice to save Hiran. Upon finding him in Republic lockup, the Apprentice learns that Hiran recovered the holocron from the Republic, which found it themselves only recently. It supposedly contains a map to point to a weapon. The Apprentice frees Hiran, then battles and kills him to claim the holocron for himself. Bessiker is distraught and threatens the Apprentice with never getting the serum, so the Apprentice kills him too, then obtains the serum from Iannos, whom he also kills. With only a few doses to use, the Apprentice goes through the wastes and enraged Colicoids to obtain the Tulak Hord artifact, completing this portion of his mission for Zash. With three artifacts remaining, the Apprentice is sent to Nar Shaddaa, where he is to obtain the Eye of Tulak (the third artifact) from Lord Paladius, who has forged a cult (the Screaming Blades) out of poverty-stricken Nar Shaddaa natives. Zash has been in contact with two of his former cult members (Destris Veran and Rylee Dray), who want to draw out Paladius, take him down, then take over the cult for themselves. Paladius has sent killers from his cult after Destris and Rylee, but the Apprentice arrives just in time to kill the cultists and save the pair of former cultists. They advise the Apprentice that if he can take down the Krayts (a powerful local gang) and the Krayts’ leader, Saben, it would gain support from the poor and possibly draw cult members away from Paladius, just as Paladius had crushed an earlier gang to gain his own following. He can also gain a following by curing the so-called “Rot” plague. Rylee sets him up with a base of operations, the Strell House, named for Daegin Strell, a local charity worker who died nearly a decade earlier. After taking down Paladius’ right hand man, Gar-Nok, along with Saben of the Krayts, members of the Screaming Blade gang begin joining the Apprentice’s anti-Paladius cause. The Apprentice also begins being called the “Great Dragon” by the locals. In response, Paladius holds a meeting at Meridian Hall to rally his cultists. He does not show himself in person (preferring holo instead), but Rylee suggests a plan to let the Apprentice show up Paladius by causing a groundquake for the assembled crowd (by blowing up gas pipes under the streets). With the help of Gord Madel of the Nar
The Apprentice leans on Gord Madel, torturing him into agreeing to help. Thus, during Paladius' address to his followers, the Apprentice (the “false messenger”) interrupts, then signals Gord for his groundquake. The Screaming Blade members, awed by this display of power, switch allegiance to the Apprentice. After seeing his power base threatened, Paladius contacts the Apprentice, seeking to simply trade the artifact (which he considers “silly”) in return for basically leaving his cult alone. They are to meet in person, both Sith intending on using it as a trap for the other. Upon meeting in Network Access, Paladius drugs the Apprentice, drawing away some of his life essence and temporarily harming his connection to the Force. Even weakened, though, the Apprentice is able to defeat Paladius in lightsaber combat. He claims the Eye of Tulok, but he does not follow through on Zash’s “promise” (which even she considers fluid based on circumstances) to hand over the cult to Destris and Rylee. Instead, he leaves Paladius alive, running the cult under the Apprentice’s authority on penalty of gruesome death if he disobeys. Zash is pleased, but the spirit of Lord Kallig visits the Apprentice as he sleeps, informing him that Zash is planning something that will be bad in some way for the Apprentice. Zash has taken two new apprentices, Kaal and Corrin, and has been sending them into the Dark Temple to be certain Kallig’s spirit has left it. These apprentices may be meant to replace the “Great Dragon” Apprentice. Kallig informs his descendant that a Sith Lord on Korriban (Lord Khreusis) has found Kallig’s old mask, which will help protect him from a ritual that Zash is preparing. (For his part, Kallig will continue to observe at the Temple.) Upon being caught trying to break into Khreusis’ chambers to steal the mask, the Apprentice kills him and claims the mask. Soon, Zash contacts the Apprentice, claiming that Kaal and Corrin were forced upon her as punishment for her role in Skotia’s death. (Yeah, right.) She also claims to have had a new vision, in which she saw the Apprentice gaining power from the ritual that the artifacts allow (something that only some individuals are attuned to), then slaughtering Jedi. She has also determined that the final two artifacts are on Tatooine and Alderaan. Arriving on Tatooine, the Apprentice must make contact with the pirate Andronikos Revel. Apparently, he stole the fourth Tulak Hord artifact from a Sith, but then his crew mutinied and took it from him. Zash had sent a cruiser to recover it, but all they found was Andronikos in an escape pod, half-mad. He was kept in an Imperial prison for a bit, then released, since Zash expects that his trail of revenge will eventually reveal the mutiny’s leader, who still has the artifact. After speaking with Ka’van Aip at the port, the Apprentice is pointed to Regg’s cantina in Mos Ilia. Regg points him to a room above the cantina, where he is hiding out. Andronikos is there. He does not have the artifact (as expected), but he believes the head mutineer, Sylas Wilkes, does. He will work with the Sith to go after Sylas. Sylas, though, now works for the Exchange. Fortunately, Andronikos has a contact, Casey Rix, within the Exchange base. Casey sets Sylas up, making sure he stays at an Exchange base that she points out to Andronikos. Khem Val is annoyed when the Apprentice needs to take Andronikos with him to the Exchange base (in a set of caves), instead of Khem himself, but he will get over it. Upon reaching the base, they confront Sylas. The Apprentice kills Sylas’ goons (formerly Andronikos’ goons, of course), defeats Sylas, and then learns that others have already taken the artifact and other valuables from Sylas and taken them across the desert. The Apprentice claims the artifact from the last of them, and Andronikos decides to join the Apprentice’s own crew, alongside Khem Val. They head for the site of the final artifact, Alderaan. There, the artifact was discovered years ago by the Jedi and given to a noble house, but Zash does not know which one. The Apprentice is sent to speak with a leader of House Thul, Elana Thul, who awaits with her personal Sith guard, Urtel Moren. Urtel has done some research (i.e. torture) in anticipation of the Apprentice’s arrival and has discovered that the artifact is kept by House Organa in a private vault in the Elysium, the key to which is held by Jedi Master Nomar Organa (who is currently offworld). To find information on those Nomar is close to so that he can be drawn out, the Apprentice sneaks into House Alde and recovers an old recording of Nomar canceling what was supposed to be his formal announcement of engagement to Rehanna Rist on his family’s orders to instead continue Force training with the Jedi Order.
offworld. In the recording, Lord Rist, Rehanna’s father, threatens House Organa for this insult. Since then, the two have retained some feelings for each other that have not been acted upon. The Apprentice breaks through Lady Rist’s assassins and confronts her, defeating her in combat and forcing her to call Nomar to Alderaan. He then kills Rehanna and goes to where Nomar will be arriving to supposedly meet her. Nomar refuses to give the Apprentice the key to the Elysium vault. The Apprentice kills him in combat, obtaining the key. However, new problems arise, as House Organa prepares an attack on House Thul for the Apprentice’s raid on House Alde, Organa’s ally. Urtel and his fellow Sith guards have gone to investigate with no word since. The Apprentice doesn’t really care about House Thul’s problems, so he mostly ignores assisting in the situation, instead retrieving the final artifact. His inaction causes Lady Elana Thul to die in the struggle, and Imperial Colonel Nyzes is certain to let the Empire know of his inaction if the Empire loses its stance on Alderaan. Darth Zash is not happy about this either. The apprentice should now be returning to Dromund Kaas with the four artifacts to join with the first, but he is contacted by Darth Thanaton, who seeks to warn him against Zash and expects Zash to fall from her own actions. The spirit of Kallig again speaks to him, pointing him to Kallig’s own lightsaber, which he has been able to find through the Force. It was entrusted Lord Escalus, the only servant of Kallig to remain on his side when Tulak Hord betrayed Kallig. It supposedly remains with Escalus’ descendant (and heir), Mila Escalus, on Nar Shaddaa. However, upon finding Mila, he learns that Mila’s father lost the lightsaber in a sabacc game to cheater Gyl Rosen two years earlier. The Apprentice does not kill her, since he needs her to open the lightsaber’s case that has a genetic lock coded to her family. He seeks out Rosen in an industrial area. Rosen tries to trade the lightsaber for 3,000,000 credits or for the Apprentice becoming his personal Sith guard. Instead, the Apprentice kills Rosen and his somewhat reluctant guards. He returns to Mila, who opens the lightsaber case. He then finally returns to Dromund Kaas as Darth Zash desires, mindful of warnings from Kallig that he must take down Zash before she does the same to him. She urges him to meet her in the chamber of the Dark Temple where the Apprentice first encountered Kallig, and he is to bring Khem Val. He meets with Zash, who announces that he has been granted the title of Lord of the Sith, making him a step below the Darths, then Thanaton, then the Dark Council, then the Emperor. She also reveals that she is dying. Her body has been getting worse and worse, but she has used Force rituals to temporarily give her the appearance of youth. The ritual she intends with Tulak Hord’s artifacts will transfer her spirit from her body into the powerful body of her Apprentice, whom she has been grooming for this very purpose. He attacks her, but as she is nearly defeated, she initiates the ritual. While it is in progress, though, Khem Val leaps in and attacks her. In a flash, Zash’s body lies dead, the new Lord is safe, and Zash’s spirit is inside Khem Val, berating the Lord. Fortunately, Khem Val’s own spirit is strong enough to hold Zash at bay, trapped within himself. The spirit of Kallig commends his descendant and can now rest in peace, with Tulak Hord’s ritual having been turned on Khem Val, servant of Tulak Hord. He dubs the new Lord as the new “Lord Kallig” and departs. Kaal and Corrin, Zash’s newest apprentices, arrive to see what has transpired, and they bow before the new Lord Kallig, as do their comrades. They claim that Zash had a vision that her strongest apprentice would destroy her but then lead a resurgent Sith Empire, so she was truly doing this for the good of the Apprentice, while he knows that, in truth, she was only in it for herself. (To be continued below . . . )

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Sith Inquisitor summary above.

- The Imperial Intelligence agent is given an important mission (based on Jadus’ request that he handle it). The agent, Kaliyo, and Watcher Two (as his liaison to headquarters) are on the trail of local dissidents on Dromund Kaas. They first check out the site of slave revolts just outside of Kaas City, supported with information from Duros Imperial analyst Lodenth Kashar. The agent is there for a slave named Jurithus, who used to be owned by an anti-Imperial dissident, who used the slave to deliver coded messages to other dissidents. By capturing Jurithus, the Empire can acquire the copies of those messages that Jurithus kept. (They cannot question the slave’s former master, as he was killed by Minder Four, who was subsequently executed for that action.) The agent finds and interrogates another slave leader, discovering that Jurithus is dead. However, the agent is able to reach his body, acquiring a datapad and transmitting all of the desired information back to base. The agent is then quickly recalled to the Citadel by the Keeper for a personal meeting with Darth Jadus. The Sith Lord gives the agent the job of hunting down and destroying dissidents on Dromund Kaas, while he goes aboard the Dominator to show hundreds of dignitaries and others what his vision is of the Sith Empire. He claims (though the agent seems reluctant to believe) to have made him into a vessel for Jadus’ own power. Watcher Two sends the agent to the Nexus Room in Kaas City, where she reveals that the slaves’ information gave them a new lead – Theovor Mindak, an inventor and entrepreneur that is working with the radicals and being sheltered by Darth Grathan in return for weapon designs. The agent is to co-opt Theovor’s daughter, Samara Mindak, who is at the cantina. She is willing to help Intel against her father, as long as all of his designs and wealth goes to her. The agent uses her codes to get into Theovor’s compound, killing him when he tries to get revenge for whatever was done with his daughter (not realizing that she was not captured and forced to help, but simply betrayed him). The agent access his computer, which indicates something huge happening soon, a strike at the ancient power conduits beneath Kaas City. They want to overload the power grid, causing explosions at power relay stations that would kill many citizens and leave them without power. With all but one conduit (the one in the Dark Temple) under military protection, it makes the Dark Temple the terrorists’ access point. The Dark Temple is unknown territory, opened only months earlier after centuries of being sealed. It seems to be inhabited by a strange Force-driven phenomenon that has left some workers under the control of unknown entities. The terrorists intend to strike there, pushing past the phenomena on a suicide mission. The agents must go alone, per Jadus’ instructions, because the Temple is considered sacred ground. The agent and Kaliyo get into the temple and take down the terrorists, but this is only one cell, and the threat remains for the future. Upon returning to the Citadel, they find that the Dominator has been destroyed above Dromund Kaas. Darth Jadus is believed dead. This puts the planet on lockdown, and when a dissident ship prepares for launch, Keeper knows that the military will simply destroy it. They need the terrorists alive for questioning, so he sends in the agent and Kaliyo, along with a SEC-M (a mouse droid), to the spaceport. They put the droid aboard the ship to download its computer contents and disable its hyperdrive, keeping it in the system for capture with a tractor beam. It works, but the terrorist leader known as “the Eagle” broadcasts across the Empire shortly thereafter, claiming that the Empire’s promise has been unfulfilled due to the Treaty of Coruscant, and those who dare speak out are crushed by Imperial Intelligence. He takes credit publicly for the destruction of the Dominator and Darth Jadus. With Jadus dead, it shows that the Dark Council is now invulnerable. (They had to do something huge that Intel could not cover up.) The agent is put in charge of the hunt for the Eagle, and he is given a new designation (Cipher Nine) and a new ship (an X-70B Phantom). With Jadus dead, Darth Zhorrid, his only apprentice (and daughter), takes his place on the Dark Council. Cipher Nine must meet with Zhorrid at the Sith Academy on Korriban. As a test, Zhorrid sets her guards on the agent, but he survives. Zhorrid hated Jadus, who instilled his belief in rule by fear into her, and she intends not to share his fate. Watcher Two designates Eagle cells on Balmorra and Nar Shaddaa as Cipher Nine and Kaliyo’s first targets. The Eagle’s terrorists use Balmorra as a training ground, hiding amongst the warfare already going on between rebels and the Empire. Cipher Nine meets with Station Chief Lekern Renald in Sobrik, who believes that if they can take out the local cell leader, Gray Star, then the Balmoran cell will fall apart. Cipher Nine and Kaliyo are sent to meet with Renald’s operative, Sanju Pyne, at the Troida Military Workshop, where he is undercover with terrorists under Chemish Or. Cipher Nine presents himself as a new recruit, brought in by Sanju. Cipher Nine and Kaliyo are tested by getting droid parts that can be turned into bombs from the Okara Droid Facility. In order to save lives, Cipher Nine follows a suggestion from Sanju that disables the parts without making it appear that their case was ever opened, so that the test is passed, but the terrorists don’t get weapons to use against the Empire. His next job is to get into a training outpost that was hit by a Republic toxin that has left the inhabitants crazed. He gets in, gathers data from computers left there, and escapes. The data includes a list of Imperial collaborators, which Chemish likely intends to make public to incite reprisals against them. The data is given to Chemish, but Cipher Nine makes sure the Empire gets the information so that the collaborators can be protected from such reprisals. Chemish quickly recognizes a leak in her organization, but she cannot prove anything against anyone. She sends Cipher Nine to make a drop within the local Republic base to an ally. The truth, as Sanju reports, is that the ally is Gray Star, and the real goal is to extract him from the Republic base to a safe house. Sanju suggests that Cipher Nine take Gray Star into custody instead, so that they can control the terrorist cell by pretending to send orders in Gray Star’s name. The agent reveals his identity to Gray Star, who eventually agrees to turn himself in to the Imperials, as long as there are no reprisals against the people of Balmorra. The Eagle’s terrorist network now lacks its training center on Balmorra. With chatter increasing about a new attack coming soon via so-called “Eradicators,” Cipher Nine is next sent to Nar Shaddaa, where the local cell gathers and smuggles technology for the Eagle’s network. Cipher Nine and Kaliyo are sent to meet with “Watcher X,” a former Imperial Intel agent who became so paranoid that he was “retired” to Shadow Town on Nar Shaddaa. He informs Cipher Nine that the terrorists want “Cyclone,” a genetic-alteration serum that turns a person into an ideal assassin (though only for a time, as it is lethal to the user in the long run). Cipher Nine tries to buy Cyclone from Ekayn and Sabaya Liistot, but they are unwilling or unable to sell, instead pointing Cipher Nine to the last customer to spend all she had to get her hands on Cyclone, an Evocii who intends to strike against the slaver gangs in a suicide mission. Cipher Nine reaches the Evocii’s body, taking a blood sample for Watcher X. Cipher Nine then uses gear from an abandoned medical lab in the Duros Sector on Nar Shaddaa to analyze the sample for Cyclone information. Watcher X is able to identify the source of Cyclone as Synchet Industries, which is only partially helpful, since Synchet went bankrupt five years ago and is no longer in existence. Cipher Nine goes after Jordel Tlan, a former Synchet executive. They encounter Natula Pahn, Jordel’s assistant, who allows Cipher Nine and Kaliyo to see Jordel, who reveals that VergeGen (the medical modification subsidiary of Synchet) was purchased and likely remains with its buyers, having no longer been part of Synchet. It appears that the terrorists purchased VergeGen from Synchet to create Cyclone. Cipher Nine gets access to a VergeGen meeting (disguised as a droid), thereby coming face to face with the terrorist cell’s leaders. He witnesses Haythen Predot, VergeGen CEO, and Chorto Riin, local cell leader, talking with the Eagle via holocomm. Another terrorist, Aphel Jaarn spots the unusual “droid,” revealing Cipher Nine. (By then, the Eagle had cut of the communication, though.) Cipher Nine kills all of the terrorists in a firefight, but Aphel, a cyborg, is still alive, and Watcher X intends to access his brain via his implants. Cipher Nine instead interrogates him to get the information they need. Their data hub is in Network Access, based on Aphel’s information. Cipher Nine takes it out, thereby dissolving the local terror cell due to lack of coordination via that hub. In doing this, however, Cipher Nine also unknowingly knocks out security for Shadow Town, thereby letting Watcher X escape. Cipher Nine tracks him down at the spaceport and kills him when he refuses to return to his incarceration. Darth Zhorrid then contacts Cipher Nine, sending him after Vyord Yanol, an advisor to Darth Jadus who was not on the Dominator when it was destroyed. She wants Janus’ secrets, and she believes Yanol is the way to get them. Cipher Nine reaches Yanol in his Nar Shaddaa hideout, where they learn that Jadus has contingency plans set up in case of his death, which will likely soon begin. They also find information dated sixteen months earlier that points to a secret project for Janus. Upon returning to Dromund Kaas to meet with Zhorrid at her Dark Council quarters, the agent finds the Keeper being tortured by Zhorrid (who seems quite insane) due to something that annoyed Zhorrid in her last conversation with Cipher Nine. The Keeper is sent away free, while Yanol is brought in to be Zhorrid’s new “advisor” (i.e. to be tortured for information). Watcher Two notes that the next targets for Cipher Nine are on Tatooine and Alderaan. They first head to Mos Ila on Tatooine to seek the so-called “ghost cell,” the elite of the Eagle’s network. After taking out holocom droids to keep the terrorists from spotting the Empire’s anonymous source on the ghost cell, they trade the holocams to Datto Wys, a local droid shop owner that is affiliated with the informant, who gives them a mouse droid to lead them to the informant. It does so, and Cipher Nine is able to meet with the former ghost cell member (now informant), Mia Hawkins. She had abandoned the ghost cell and its leader, the Old Man, a few months ago when they began “practicing” their methods on local citizens. Now,
The Star Wars Timeline Gold: Legends Timeline, Vol. 1

268

she wants the cell stopped. She sends Cipher Nine after “Dragon Eyes,” a ghost cell member. A ghost cell contact in a cantina inadvertently leads Cipher Nine to members of the cell. He kills them all, including one who tries to impersonate Hawkins and nearly gets the drop on the Imperial agent. That still leaves Dragon Eyes and others, though. They find that the Dragon Eyes trail leads to the ghost cell’s supplier, Milosh Varta, who is part of the Exchange crime syndicate. Going after Milosh, Cipher Nine runs into his wife, Isbet Varta, then confronts Milosh. A blaster wound and the promise of more convinces Milosh to reveal where to find the rest of the ghost cell. As Cipher Nine goes after them, Hawkins contacts him, noting that the end is near for the ghost cell, so she is escaping Tatooine before Cipher Nine can turn Hawkins herself in for her actions against the Empire. Kaliyo and Cipher Nine hide in a crate being supplied by Milosh to the ghost cell and use it to get to the ghost cell base camp, only to find that Hawkins has been captured from the spaceport and is being held by the Old Man. The Old Man reveals that he let Hawkins defect, rather than killing her when she wanted to leave, so that she could be bait to lure an Imperial Intelligence Cipher agent to the planet eventually. They want to learn what they can from Cipher Nine, then to replace him in the Empire to harm it from the inside. Needless to say, Cipher Nine wipes them out (all of them). With the Old Man and the ghost cell dead, Cipher Nine shows mercy and allows Hawkins to simply leave. Upon returning to his ship, Cipher Nine learns from Watcher Two that the Empire has tried to capture the Eagle on Tholatin, but he had already abandoned that location. They have learned, however, that the Eradicator devices are satellites that can be used at orbital strike weapons to wipe out entire cities. However, they are not being built; they are being grown – a form of organic technology. Cipher Nine heads for Alderaan, where it is believed that one of the noble houses is financing the Eagle’s network. They meet with Imperial diplomat (and Killik Joiner) Vector Hyllus. Vector explains that info on the financier reveals that he or she has visited Houses Organa, Serrus, Panteer, and Cortess, the latter of whom is a vassal of House Thul, the Empire’s proxy on Alderaan. Thus, House Cortess and its baron (Peyar Cortess) might be the most able to help. They visit House Cortess, where they meet Baroness Chay Cortess. Unfortunately, they can’t get access to the baron, who is busy with preparations for possible attack. Pretending to be a countess from House Thul, Cipher Nine tracks down a missing group of battle droids, whose disappearance had caused Cortess to believe an attack was coming. This frees him to meet with the agent. Baron Cortess indicates that the dates in the financial data would suggest the financier to be Master Denni Ayl. Unfortunately, this frequent mediator and former vassal house lord has gone missing recently. Vector provides more information, pointing to House Alde as where Ayl had his residence (and thus, his records). Cipher Nine penetrates House Alde, hacks his records, and it reveals that Ayl helped to fund the destruction of the Dominator and the death of Darth Jadus. With help from Vector and Cortess, they learn that Ayl is currently meeting with House Rist, the house of assassins and poisoners that Baron Cortess fears but Baroness Cortess wants dead for having killed much of her family when she was a child. Cipher Nine finds Ayl at House Rist, killing him and Rist assassins that try to kill Cipher Nine and Kaliyo. After Ayl is dead, a message arrives from Baroness Cortess, in which she tries to warn him about Cipher Nine, revealing that she is in league with the terrorists to at least that degree. Upon returning to House Cortess, Cipher Nine finds it under lockdown. When unable to get into the Cortess compound on their own, the agents join with Vector and his Killik allies to overwhelm Cortess defenses. Cipher Nine reaches the baroness, who has confessed her deeds to the baron during the attack. To protect House Cortess, the baron has his guard captain execute her on the spot. Now, however, Vector intends to overwhelm House Cortess and turn it into a Killik hive with plenty of new Joiners (willingly or not). When Cipher Nine refuses to allow this, Vector (the Killiks’ “Dawn Herald”) turns on the hive and keeps his loyalty to the Empire as his top priority. The Killiks attack anyway, which forces the agent to join with Cortess’ remaining forces (and Vector) to stop a new Killik offensive. Once House Cortess is safe (or relatively so), the mission is over. The Eagle’s network will need to seek new funding. As for Vector, he is officially transferred into Imperial Intelligence and placed under Cipher Nine’s command, per orders received from Keeper. With information gathered by Cipher Nine, Watcher Two contacts the agent with orders for a strike directly at the Eagle’s Nest, the terrorist headquarters in a refinery beneath a riverbed on Hutta. Cipher Nine blasts his way through the facility, confronting the Eagle, who claims that revolutionary cells have formed and become active on Nar Shaddaa, Tholatin, Molavar, Alderaan, and Balmorra. He also claims that Eradicators are made from technology from Dromund Kaas and Balmorra, with six dozen already in place to attack cities randomly from orbit to sow chaos and devastation on the Empire. Cipher Nine defeats the Eagle in combat, but he claims that the person who taught him to organize the terrorist cells and create the Eradicators is a traitor within the Sith Empire. The Eagle then commits suicide by thermal detonator, and Cipher Nine is found injured and assisted by Watcher Three, who has been sent by the Keeper for information retrieval. They need the codes from the Eagle’s own computers and from his mysterious ally in order to stop the Eradicators, however, which sends Cipher Nine back to Dromund Kaas to seek out this traitor. Watcher Two and Keeper note that the Eagle had been sending transmissions to Artus, which suggests that may be where his patron is hiding. Before leaving for Artus, Cipher Nine is instructed to meet with Darth Zhorrid. He finds Zhorrid tortured by the Dark Council. It seems that after she broke Vyord Yanol (Darth Jadus’ advisor that was not on the Dominator), she contacted the Dark Council, demanding due respect. She was then tortured to put her in her place. She now blames Jadus for her unreadiness for her position. She wants vengeance via Cipher Nine’s search for the traitor whose terrorist network killed Jadus. Watcher Two and Cipher Nine’s crew head separately to Artus with their ships cloaked. There, they discover a modified Sith dreadnaught, which they board. They fight through crazed Imperial citizens to a terminal, where they find a recording from Tenus Paato, suggesting that someone is trying to break and control these individuals, who were “saved from the fire.” Another from Ri Farrona speaks of them being transformed into their master’s image through experiences of terror. Another from Ibellan refers to this being a project where the individuals were invited to leave for a year and not die with others left behind somewhere. Upon reaching the bridge, all becomes clear. Darth Jadus is not dead but in fact alive and well, commanding this vessel. Those “left behind” were aboard the Dominator. The others were taken here with Jadus as part of this experiment in terror. He used the Eagle to create the Eradicators without the Dark Council knowing that he was creating them. By taking his death, he escaped the eyes of the Dark Council and Imperial Intelligence in order to work without worrying about Imperial and Dark Council politics and power plays. By leaving, he has set the Dark Council against each other over his former resources, and Darth Zhorrid, his own daughter, is a distraction for them and doomed in the process. The fear created by the Eagle’s terrorist network was meant to push the Empire to battle readiness again. The Eradicators will now terrorize the Empire and kill the apprentices of his rivals. He will then lead the Empire into a new Epoch of Terror, claiming the Emperor is too distracted to care to stop him. However, he needs the codes from the Eagle, so he tries to recruit Cipher Nine (while Watcher Two helps by slicing computers to work against him). He gives Cipher Nine a short time to think (as if he has any choice with him knowing the other half of the codes), but Watcher Two sees few options. He could enact a suicide action to destroy the ship and the Eradicators, dying in the process, but Jadus might escape to strike again. He could also give Jadus the codes, let him begin his attack, gain his confidence, then take him down by sabotaging the hyperdrive, shields, and jamming field of the ship before hopefully escaping alive while reinforcements arrive and force Jadus to surrender, deactivating the Eradicators. The latter option means thousands dying, but letting Jadus escape would be worse down the line. Unwilling to allow innocents to die when it can be prevented, the agent inputs his half of the codes, shutting down the Eradicators. Cipher Nine and Watcher Two work together to hold off Jadus until they can trap him in a force field. They then set the reactor to explode. Just as they escape, the ship explodes, but Jadus has managed to escape the force field and escaped as well. The Eradicators are shut down, and this part of his plot is over, but he could be back one day. In the wake of these events, Cipher Nine is allowed some leave time, during which he learns that, given the situation for House Cortess on Alderaan, Baron Peyar Cortess is recalling his son, Pashon Cortess, to Alderaan to take the place of Baroness Chay Cortess as his advisor, so that they can work on strengthening their partnership with the Empire. Kaliyo asks Cipher Nine to help her save her old friend Anspi’shell, who has apparently (based on info provided by Intel) crossed the Exchange on Nar Shadda and is in need of rescue. They save her, but Kaliyo intends to pay her back for how she shipped Kaliyo from Ord Mantell to Hutta in a chem-farmer's box by collecting the bounty on Anspi'shel's head. Anspi'shel claims that the whole story of her past with Kaliyo is a lie. They only knew each other for six months, long after Kaliyo was already on her own. With this in mind (true or not), Cipher Nine lets her go, which annoys Kaliyo, but she gets over it. She also tells Cipher Nine about her time with Rholl, a pirate on the Rimma Trade Route that she once partnered with. She plays a recording of Yjal, an arms dealer she says has been obsessed with her since they split up on Farstine. Now that she has shown her face, he is looking for revenge on her again. They soon learn that he has even contacted Nem'ro and other past associates of Kaliyo, which has brought out of the woodwork to get their own revenge on her before Yjal can do so. They keep an eye out for others like agents of card shark Ta Tigal. With this all happening, a bounty hunter named the Menace starts seeking her as well. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Old Republic: Imperial Agent)*

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Bounty Hunter summary above.

- Whether he intended it or not, the smuggler has a new partner, Risha. She has deals waiting on Taris and Nar Shaddaa. They head for Taris first. There, they are to find an astrogation chart inside a vault that was designed to survive a major catastrophe (like the devastation of Taris decades ago). Unfortunately for the smuggler, Skavak knows about the vault, and Risha cannot have direct contact with their contact, Beryl Thorne (who seems to dislike her). Immediately upon leaving the ship, the smuggler runs into Taris’ Agent Soganti. He then meets Beryl and her droid, AR-GO. He makes two deliveries for Beryl, one of bio-alarm stations for Doctor Vernan in rakghoul territory (where he is trying to find a way to contain the rakghouls to help the Republic reclamation project). Vernan hires the smuggler to set those alarms at survey stations, which lets them track the rakghouls. He then recovers supplies at a Republic outpost (where they were taken when the Republic found Beryl’s old partner Tyrodall’s dead body after he was killed by rakghouls) and gets them delivered. He also runs an errand for Republic Sergeant Klewer, who provides the smuggler with temporary diplomatic immunity to leave the planet with the vault’s contents without being searched, then gathers up core samples for Beryl from scavengers who stole them. The path leads to Tyrodall, who turns out not to be dead. He was helping Beryl smuggle artifacts off the planet, but when he learned that she was giving them to Taris refugees for a finder’s fee, rather than getting paid a lot more to sell to the Empire, he faked his death and began his own more lucrative business. When Tyrodall attacks the smuggler for not intending to keep his secret, he ends up having to kill Tyrodall, this time for real. He delivers the “core samples” (relics in core sample packages) to Beryl, just as her contract is completed with the Republic. She uses their sensor array to check for the vault, which is in Zone Zero, which is said to be overrun with worse than rakghouls. With Skavak searching Zone Zero too, Risha sends the smuggler to use a Geonosian device to get into the vault. On the way, he again runs into Soganti, who tries to get the smuggler to turn Beryl in for smuggling. Corso and the smuggler warn Beryl to escape. In thanks, Beryl shares a drink with the smuggler (and then apparently boffs him), before she heads out and the smuggling duo heads for Zone Zero. At the vault, they run into Skavak’s mercenaries, led by Roksur. On Skavak’s orders, the mercenaries attack . . . and are defeated. They enter the vault, recover the astrogation chart, and get back to the ship. She reveals that the astrogation info came from Davik Kang of the Exchange (who once owned the Ebon Hawk before Revan stole it). They head for Nar Shaddaa, where they need to get Drooga the Hutt’s prototype ship engine. They plan to trade the last male shanjaru in the galaxy for it aboard his pleasure barge, currently docked at the Promenade. There is a problem: Zank Helrott, Rogan’s personal bounty hunter, is on Nar Shaddaa, possibly for the smuggler, possibly not. Aboard the pleasure barge, Corso and the smuggler help the Wookiee Bowdaar to defeat several Kaleesh there to kill him for murders in Drooga’s name. Unfortunately, this was a one-on-several fight meant for Drooga’s entertainment, and they just blew it. Drooga says that the deal is off because thieves stole his female shanjaru. They only way to get Drooga interested again is to find and recover the female shanjaru, which was stolen by mercenaries hired by Momi Andrell, an extreme animal rights advocate and daughter of a Republic senator. They run into Tyrka, one of Momi’s followers, whom they convince that they have arrived to take away the shanjaru. Momi took it to Lazhae to be taken
The Star Wars Timeline Gold: Legends Timeline, Vol. 1

The smuggler, Bowdaar, is offworld. Lazhae is not an animal rights advocate, but someone who experiments on them. He has tricked Momi. They head for Shadow Town to recover it, only to run into Zank, but Bowdaar intervenes to help the smuggler and Corso incapacitate him. They fight through Lazhae's creatures, and they find that Lazhae has not only taken the shanjaru, he has also captured and run experiments on Momi herself. They drive off Lazhae, even as Momi is sent back to her father for treatments to save her from the diseases Lazhae injected her with. They have genetic samples Lazhae took of the shanjaru, which can be taken to Coruscant to be used to clone and repopulate the species. They return the female shanjaru to Drooga, and Risha sends along the male one. (Drooga plans to eat them.) They get the prototype sublight engine (optimized for extreme gravitational environments) from Drooga in return. Drooga then plans to have Bowdaar fight a gundark and be killed, now that he is no longer collateral for a gambler's debt, but the smuggler and Corso help Bowdaar kill the gundark. Entertained but tired of paying for Bowdaar's food and such, Drooga lets him go, and Bowdaar joins the smuggler's crew. They get the samples to scientist Daru'da on Coruscant, finishing Momi's wishes. They are then contacted by a woman named Feylara Raed, who claims that her ship has been incapacitated. Upon trying to help her, the smuggler finds that it is a trap. She is an ex-girlfriend of Skavak (another one), who intends to kill the smuggler to get in Skavak's favor again. Her plan fails when her droids are defeated and her ray shield runs out of power. They just leave her in her idiocy. Next, they travel to Tatooine to get a Gree sensor computer from Nok Drayen's old rival, Diago Hixan, who acquired it when he celebrated Nok's death by raiding one of his storehouses. Diago hides out and works only through lieutenants now. They visit his lieutenant Tookreek for assistance. At Diago's palace (maned by Tookreek), they encounter Nariel Pridence, a Jedi Knight there to track down Sith Empire agent Vaverone Zare. After killing some thugs that try to accost her, she goes on her way. The smuggler heads off to reclaim a krayt dragon tooth that Tookreek says any lieutenant must have to contact Diago, only to find, once they reach the old spice warehouse where it was stored (that Geonosians attacked and took over a while earlier), that the Geonosians were sent by Vaverone, who is there to greet them. She is trying to draw out Diago because she needs a box in his possession, but he will not meet with her. She requests that the smuggler get her an audience with Diago. (She basically offers herself for sex in return, then uses the Force to disarm the smuggler when he refuses and tries to blast her to save himself from her lightsaber). They get the fang to Tookreek, but Imperials attack the palace (to force the issue with the smuggler). While Tookreek heads out for the Lightspring, where Diago is living now, the smuggler and his allies help ward off the Imperials before joining him there. Again, the smuggler refuses Vaverone's "offer." They are aided by Nariel, whom they tell about the red box that Vaverone wants, along with the fact that she is seeking Diago, whose location they also provide. Tookreek and Nariel arrive just before the smuggler. Unfortunately, Vaverone has followed them to Diago. Amid the growing tension as they all meet, Risha contacts them via holocomm, earning Diago's infatuation. He wants Risha as his plaything. As Jedi, Sith, and smuggler are about to battle, Diago orders his droids to kill everyone present. Fortunately, they take out the droids, then Nariel and the smuggler take down Diago and Vaverone. Nariel recovers the "red box," which turns out to be Darth Nihilus' Sith Holocron, which she will hide from the Sith. They play a holorecord made by Diago about his rivalry with Drayen, then bring Risha the Gree computer from the Lightspring. One more item on their list has been acquired. Next, they head for Alderaan for their next acquisition. The smuggler must deliver an ancient power droid to the castle of House Organa, where he is to give it to its owners: Lenn Teraan and Cedonia Teraan (siblings), Warden of the Eternal Flame and Herald of the Gold Aurora, respectively. They are the last of House Teraan, which has been otherwise wiped out by House Baliss. The power droid holds something of value to them, hidden inside by an ancestor centuries ago, but it was stolen by pirates generations ago. They hire the smuggler to go steal a datapad of Teraan family history, which includes the necessary codes to safely open up the droid to retrieve the item. It is in their old estate, now in Baliss control. He does so, and they then follow the instructions to get to the hidden holochip within. It proves that House Teraan is owed a lot of credits from other houses, which would help rebuild their house in light of its recent downfall. They payment he receives is schematics for a sophisticated anti-radiation shield that was developed by House Teraan.
Risha then sends him (still on Alderaan) to deliver a head in a jar (yes, a head in a jar) to Peema Ahuff at the House Alde estate. The head is that of Darth Bandon, former apprentice to Darth Malak, but when they get to Ahuff, he claims that the head is a fake because they already have the real one, authenticated by a Royal Museum agent named Neva, who has conveniently disappeared. Kaddreth, another scientist, is able to prove that the new head is that of Bandon and that Neva was lying about the previous one. Unfortunately, they have already paid the deliverer of the previous head – Skavak! – with the custom-built Arkanian hyperdrive that Risha and the smuggler need. (Neva ran off with him, of course.) Fortunately, Skavak has not installed it on his ship yet, which means it is still with his ship at the spaceport. The smuggler heads there after Skavak, but Skavak has taken off, leaving goons behind. The smuggler takes them out, and Risha informs him that Skavak has gone to House Thul to finish installing the hyperdrive at their spaceport. Since the museum wants Bandon’s real head (due to him having killed the heroic Trask Ulgo on the Endar Spire when Ulgo gave up his life to let the mind-wiped Revan escape to fight another day), he pays the smuggler what he can. The smuggler then meets with Baron Venar, Risha’s contact that can get him into House Thul’s spaceport. There, they find kidnapped mechanic Vonddado Briimyo working on Skavak’s ship, while Skavak is off in a shuttle getting supplies. The smuggler frees him, helps him escape, and then takes the hyperdrive with Briimyo’s blessing. Unfortunately, the Teraans contact the smuggler with notice that Duke Baliss is claiming that the smuggler’s infiltration of the old House Teraan estate was an act against House Baliss, and House Organa will not back up the Teraans because it will disrupt the peace process. Now, Xin Baliss, their best marksman, has challenged Lenn Teraan. They convince the smuggler to be a champion in Lenn’s place to face Xin. He takes down Xin, saving Lenn. He is given a reward, but the Teraans must flee House Organa before House Baliss strikes back at them and hits Organa in the crossfire. With the hyperdrive and a nice pile of credits, they are ready to leave. Risha is contacted by Juran Reb, an old friend, whose wife, Audila has been taken. She will die if Risha does not go to an old Czerka mining complex in the Cheenee Rift on Tatooine. Risha and the smuggler head in by different paths, so that Risha can distract the kidnappers, while the smuggler emerges from behind them. The assassins, who work for someone they refer to as “my liege” and “master,” would kill them all, but they save Audila, reuniting the married couple. They give the couple some credits to leave Tatooine and set up somewhere better. They now head for Nar Shaddaa. The last delivery is a man frozen in carbonite. Risha and the smuggler visit Doctor Chelah in a secret medical facility, where they free the man from carbonite to reveal that it is, in fact, Nok Drayen himself. A decade ago, he had been poisoned by one of his lieutenants. To stave off death, he had Chelah put him into a hibernation treatment, but it has only slowed the disease, rather than curing it. He had given Risha, who is his daughter, instructions on items to find so that they could get to an abandoned ship near a black hole. If they could do so, there is one item inside that he and Risha need. Whomever helps her find the ship can keep the rest of his “lost treasure,” as long as they get the single item. It has taken Risha a decade to gather the items, but now, with the smuggler’s help, they are ready to get to Nok’s ship. Nok provides the coordinates, and they use their ship, with all of the acquired upgrades, to reach Nok’s old ship. The smuggler finds the ship, and there is a message aboard from King Arak Drayen III of Dubrillion, who seems to have taken his world’s fortune with him to keep it from the hands of traitors. That is the treasure, and his royal executioner droid has sabotaged the ship and killed its crew to keep the treasure from the king’s enemies. Unfortunately, after defeating the droid, the smuggler encounters Skavak, who stowed away on the smuggler’s ship back on Nar Shaddaa. In a brief firefight, the smuggler finally kills Skavak, face-to-face. He is even able to get “Torchy” back for Corso. They return to Nok and Risha. Nok wanted to see the treasure before he died, as King Arak Drayen III was his own grandfather, who lost his throne to an usurper. The single item they needed from it was the actual crown of Dubrillion, which can help Risha take the throne and re-establish the Drayen Dynasty. When the smuggler offers to be her king, Nok objects to the idea of Risha with anyone but a nobleman. Even as Nok is dying from his disease, he uses his last moments to rage against Risha’s refusal to kill the smuggler to remove him from the situation. Nok dies, and Chelah is released from family service. Risha has the crown, but she does not have the army or other resources necessary to take back Dubrillion. She does have the smuggler, though, who has the full lost Drayen treasure at his disposal now. (To be continued below . . . )*

(The Old Republic: Smuggler)*

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Smuggler summary above.

- The Great Hunt begins, in which everyone will hunt their own bounties, while also fighting each other to be the winner of the Great Hunt, who will be able to work with Mandalore himself. Two bounty hunters are each assigned the same target, with the intention that they go after the target and each other. They must also steal their own ships in order to get off of Dromund Kaas and receive their target information. The bounty hunter and Mako fight Imperial security personnel, tipped off by Blood, and steal a ship (a Kuat Drive Yards D5-Mantis), along with 2V-R8, its attendant droid. The first targets are on Balmorra and Nar Shaddaa. They head for Balmorra first, where they are to hunt Admiral Ivernus AKA “Admiral Untouchable,” whom they must lure from his flying fortress down to Balmorra’s surface. They visit Lieutenant Major Pirrell, an underling of Ivernus, who is looking to hire a bounty hunter. On the way, they run into Vorr and Vye, siblings of Vexx, sent by Blood to get revenge for Vexx’s death and take the hunter out of the way. The hunter and Mako kill them easily, then go on to meet with Pirrell, who is there with Murghir, his Cathar slave and apparent sex toy. Pirrell sends the hunter to harass Colonel Satrius, his incompetent superior who has the faith of Ivernus for now. The goal is to bring him down, thereby not only allowing Pirrell to rise but also bringing Ivernus to Balmorra’s surface to promote him. Pirrell sends him to the Okara Droid Factory. Before the Empire invaded, they had sabotaged the droids there, causing them to run wild. Sartius is almost done deciphering their codes, which would bring them under Imperial control and be a major victory for Sartius. He had sent in a slicer, Zalia, to input a virus to make it tougher for Sartius, but she was trapped inside and refuses to input the virus until rescued. The hunter is sent into the factory, where he finds Zalia, who inputs the virus. They then fight their way through the “mad” droids and out of the factory. Pirrell intended for the hunter to kill Zalia, but he allows her to just disappear. The next mission for Pirrell is to deal with Colicoids that were mutated and released into the wilderness to harass the locals when the Empire invaded. The hunter is sent to kill a Colicoid queen. He does so, driving the other Colicoids mad to continue attacking the populace, despite Sartius’ claims that the Colicoids were under control. The hunter is then sent to the area near the Balmorran Arms Factory, where he is to help resistance leaders escape Sartius’ men by recovering a homing beacon on a resistance vehicle and putting it into a garbage transport instead. Admiral Ivernus arrives at the spaceport, and the hunter is allowed to attend the meeting as a reward for his assistance. Even Murghir is allowed to go (after begging). Ivernus, however, blames Pirrell for Sartius’ failures because Pirrell is in charge of intelligence on Balmorra. Ivernus plans to execute Pirrell, and it turns out that Murghir is the other bounty hunter who is after Ivernus. In the firefight that begins, the hunter kills Ivernus and Murghir, then spares Pirrell in return for a massive amount of credits. The next target is on Nar Shaddaa (Braden and Mako’s homeworld), where their target is the assassin known as Eidolon. He contacts Gele’ren, a Twi’lek slaver with the Hutt Cartel. Apparently, Eidolon had worked for the Hutt Cartel but, when he reached the peak of his career, he retired and started Eidolon Security, causing half of the major companies on Nar Shaddaa to turn to him for security, rather than the Hutt Cartel. One of Gele’ren’s employees is Anuli, an old friend of Mako (whom she says is like a little brother) who thought Mako was dead. (Two Rodians did grab her years ago, but Braden saved and basically adopted her, taking her to Hutta.) Eidolon is currently supplying the Republic from a facility in the Corellian Sector of Nar Shaddaa (out of a desire for profit, not idealism). They blow up the factory, causing Eidolon to owe a great deal of money to the Republic. They then head for the Duros Sector, where unusual Eidolon arms shipments are being sent to empty buildings. Mako believes it is the Zargnor Plan, a group of Ugnaughts who once entered the Grand Hunt by building a large war droid that they would ride inside. This is likely another attempt to do so, and the Ugnaughts are the rival this time. After some threats, the Ugnaughts leave, giving up the hunt. Mako makes a deal: if the Eidolon is taken down, giving Gele’ren a chance to be a Cartel boss with his own clan, then Anuli will be able to leave with the hunter and Mako. They are then sent to find Zee K’lin, a Bith slicer working with Nebula Communications, but Zee is on his way to Mechis III. Fortunately, they find him before he leaves and secure the security codes for Eidolon Security. With Anuli’s help and Zee’s codes, they now have the codes to access Eidolon’s secure files, which are to then be revealed to the public on the HoloNet, driving clients away from Eidolon Security. The hunter and Mako break into an Eidolon facility, download the data, and then send it off to Gele’ren and Anuli to be uploaded to the HoloNet. Unfortunately, Zee reported the hunter to Eidolon. They fight their way through Eidolon security agents, but they are late in warning Gele’ren and Anuli. Anuli is killed in an Eidolon attack, and Gele’ren is taken and killed. A message is left by Eidolon for the hunter, challenging him. After a fierce battle to reach him, they come face-to-face with Eidolon, their bounty target. Mako is contacted by another Hutt Cartel lieutenant, Solash, who wants Eidolon alive. The bounty hunter and Mako defeat Eidolon and his assassins, winning this portion of the hunt. Next, they briefly return to meet with Huntmaster Assistant Lek on Dromund Kaas at his request (apparently against Great Hunt protocol). Lek reveals that the Great Hunt’s target list has been sliced and will be auctioned to the highest bidder and potentially made public. The hunter and Mako are sent to Nem’ro’s paymaster, Juda, who has information on the auction. The auction is in Jiguuna. They attend, identifying the auctioneer as Bilikin Drell, who is attacked by the very killers who came to buy the list to make sure they were not on it. The hunter kills the killers, then questions Drell, whose information suggests that it was Blood or a backer of Blood who stole and provided the information for auction. Once again, Blood is trying to rig the hunt. Lek cannot act on that light information alone, however. Their next targets are on Tatooine and Alderaan, so they head first to Tatooine, where their target is Tyresius Lokai (a Devaronian), one of the galaxy’s most wanted. Two days earlier, their rival hunter shot down Tyresius’ ship, but then lost him in the desert. They are to visit Mos Ilia, where the traffic droid points out Gellar Roing, the only other Devaronian at the spaceport, who is actually Tyresius. He escapes their first confrontation. It appears that he paid off Veeboo Lunx, the rival bounty hunter, and bought his ship, just as Tyresius has been buying himself out of trouble for years, since cheating the Hutt Cartel, Black Sun, and the Exchange out of a fortune. They find and question Veeboo, who is out of the Great Hunt, in theory, but still must be eliminated. The hunter does so amid a firefight, then follows Veeboo’s comments to the so-called Lady of Pain (a member of the Exchange), to whom Veeboo sent Tyresius for another ship. Tyresius is now in the Lady’s hands, and she offers to give Tyresius to the hunter if he will be her champion in an upcoming gladiatorial contest. The hunter fights Borga, the Gamorrean champion of Fell Dargun, killing him. Unfortunately, Tyresius escapes from the Lady of Pain’s minions, stealing a hyperdrive regulator (to fix his old ship) and a swoop. Unfortunately for him, all of the Lady’s swoops have tracking devices. The hunter tracks him to the now-repaired ship, where the hunter then destroys Tyresius’ droid, NK-33, and takes Tyresius into custody. Tyresius offers the Star of Alderaan gem, worth a fortune to the royal family of Alderaan, but it is just a ruse. The gem explodes, giving Tyresius a chance to escape again, but he is tracked (yet again). Finally, Tyresius offers to join the hunter’s crew, using a biological duplicate of himself that is already dead in carbonite on Nar Shaddaa as proof that “Tyresius Lokai” is dead and allowing him to start a new life, working for the bounty hunter and Mako. They get the duplicate, fake his death, and the deal is done. (He takes the name “Gault Rennow.”) Their next target is on Alderaan, the so-called “Durasteel Duke,” a member of House Girard, a guest of House Thul. He meets Vicebaron Heitor, Lady Aitalla (Heitor’s daughter), Lord Raffid, and Baron Zacar Girard (Heitor’s nephew and superior in the House). Apparently, the Durasteel Duke and his sister left House Girard recently, and Girard wants them dead now. The bounty hunter is sent on Girard’s behalf (as his official proxy) to meet with a minor noble, Lord Savorin Malfa VII, who claims to have a lead on the Durasteel Duke. Malfus is insulted by the hunter being sent, so he requires the hunter to deliver messages (like a page) to a few nobles (Lord Norn Girard, Lord Dugan Cortess, and Lord Paulus Thul) at different outposts to earn Malfus’ attention. They do so, then get Malfus’ half of the code to unlock the information on their lead. Moreover, they learn that Girard already hired a bounty hunter to go after the Durasteel Duke, who was promptly killed, which was their rival (Iri-Do Sahn, killed in his sleep by House Rist). The information from Malfus claims that Duke Corwin (the Durasteel Duke) is negotiating with their enemy, House Organa, through secret messages hidden among relics at House Alde’s Royal Museum. (They must be careful because Alde has Organa's support and thereby the Republic's, and the museum is full of priceless relics.) To protect his collection, the curator scans various artifacts to find the one that was placed as a phony to carry the message, and the bounty hunter holds off security guards, who have come for him. It turns out that the phony is the First Founding Memorial Vase. Upon returning to House Girard, the hunter tosses out a Thul suitor that Lady Aitalla does not wish to see, but who was sent by her father and brother to woo her. Girard then translates the message on the fake vase, which indicates that Corwin is trying to organize vassals from Houses Thul and Ulgo, alongside House Organa, to stand against House Thul. They also now know that Corwin (who is Girard's cousin) is being protected by House Rist, a family of assassins. The hunter heads for House Rist to go after Corwin, both for himself and to stop his negotiations for Girard. By the time the hunter and his companion (Mako or “Gault”) arrive, Lord Maddor Rist reports that Corwin just left on a shuttle. However, he was in such a hurry that he did not pay Rist. Rist then offers to hire the bounty hunter to kill Zacar Girard and the rest of House Girard's leadership. The hunter refuses, requiring them to fight their way out, which they do. Zacar is confronted by son Raffid’s affair with a Thul nobleman’s wife, which forces him to give over his grandfather’s estate (half of Girard’s land) to the nobleman when the hunter refuses to kill the “extortionist” outright like a common thug. According to Girard, Thul scouts have spotted Corwin landing at House Organa, obviously seeking asylum. They break into House Organa and track down the Duke, but Duchess Vala Organa arrives and the “Durasteel Duke” they have captured is revealed to be Lady Muriel Corwin, Duke Corwin’s sister, who has been impersonating him. The real Duke Corwin is dead and in a sort of preservation chamber (kolto suspension), having “died” (brain death, presumably) a month earlier while visiting House Organa to negotiate a treaty. Muriel has been impersonating him in order to keep his negotiations for an alliance against House Ulgo going. On condition that he keeps Corwin’s death and Muriel’s deception secret to those on Alderaan, the hunter accepts extra payment from Heitor of killing his own father. Either way, Heitor pays the hunter, and then Raffid and Heitor bicker over who will run House Girard (and Aitalla also weighs in). With Zacar having given proxy authority to the hunter, though, it is his call. He chooses Aitalla (the only one not an utter hothead), who then demotes her own father, Heitor, to a lord in waiting. Raffid is banished from House Girard. As they leave for the spaceport, they are met by an agent of House Rist who wishes to make sure there is no ill will between House Rist and the hunter, revealing that Tarro Blood actually paid House Rist to get in the way of his competition. They are now in the final round of the Great Hunt. They expect contact from Crysta Markon, their handler, but they are contacted by Hedarr Soongh, who reveals that Tarro Blood is drawing Mandalorian allies to him on Nar Shaddaa to try to take down the hunter. Hedarr considers Tarro and these Mandalorians (who did not join the Great Hunt specifically so that Tarro would have a leg up on the competition) to be dishonorable and in need of punishment, so he intends to rob Tarro of his non-Hunt allies. They head for Nar Shaddaa, where they find Braden’s killer, Sedyn Kyne, Hedarr’s own student. Tarro is not there, though the other Mandalorians promised are. This was set up by Hedarr so that Sedyn can face the hunter in combat to settle the matter of honor between them over Braden’s death. The hunter, of course wins, and the rest of the Mandalorians refuse to consider the matter settled. They kill Hedarr instead, keeping their pledge to Tarro . . . which just gets them all killed by the hunter in the ensuing firefight. A dying Hedarr asks the hunter to keep the honorable warrior tradition of the bounty hunter alive, perhaps showing the Mandalorians how they should be again. They contact Crysta, who reveals that their last target is Jedi Master Kellian Jarro, the so-called “Mandalorian Killer.” They head for the Republic cruiser Aurora to find Jarro. Rather than killing Jarro directly, though, Crysta suggests getting aboard the ship, damaging its hyperdrive regulator, then sending it into hyperspace, causing it to explode. Unfortunately, Tarro Blood is already on Jarro’s trail as well, the last other hunter in the Great Hunt. The hunter, Mako, and Gault reach the Aurora, discovering that the Republic has captured Tarro, claiming that he is an Imperial assassin. The Aurora brings the hunter’s ship aboard for questioning. Captain Ofaree intends to arrest them, since Tarro has “confessed” to Jarro that the hunter and his crew are his co-conspirators. The hunter takes down Ofaree and his security team, then reaches the hyperdrive regulator, sabotaging it. Upon coming face to face with Tarro in the detention area, Tarro challenges the hunter to combat, claiming that is what Hedarr and Braden would have wanted. Rather than doing so, they leave him in the cell to die when the ship goes to hyperspace. They reach the bridge, intending on activating the hyperdrive, but Master Jarro is there waiting for them, along with his Padawan, Thendys Noori. The hunter sticks to his own code of honor (the contract) and faces them with his companions, bringing down Jarro but refusing to kill Noori because she was not part of the contract. She is allowed to board an escape pod and launch, as the hunter sets the hyperdrive, as Crysta instructed him. (This kills Blood, as part of the Great Hunt.) The hunter and his crew return to Dromund Kaas, where Huntmaster Assistant Lek informs them that Mandalore wants to see him on his flagship once the ceremony is over. The Huntmaster declares the hunter to be the Grand Champion of the Great Hunt. (Henceforth, referred to as the Champion in this summary.) (To be continued below . . . )*

(The Old Republic: Bounty Hunter)*

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Bounty Hunter summary above.

- Once on Coruscant, the Knight is introduced to General Var Suthra and Doctor Eli Tarnis, who are there with Orgus, Kiwiiks, and Kira. Tarnis has been working on a secret weapon for the Republic (without Jedi knowledge), known as the Planet Prison, a device that would ionize a planet’s atmosphere, making it the equivalent to an ion cannon energy shield, knocking out any ships that try to pass through it. However, the plans have been stolen. According to Strategic Information Services Agent Galen, the thieves stole quite a bit, including this data. The ring leader was Vistis Garn, who is with the Migrant Merchants’ Guild. While the Masters speak with the Supreme Chancellor, the Knight confronts Vistis. By the time Vistis is caught, though, he reveals that the data has already been decrypted by the Guild’s slicers and sent to his employer, the Guild’s rival, Black Sun. The Knight gets the data files but the information is already out there. They rejoin Galen at the Senate Tower, where Galen informs the Knight that Tarnis has been kidnapped. Kira has given chase, but she is in need of backup. They get into the spaceport where Tarnis is held, with Kira using an SIS stealth unit. (She also reveals that she has passed all of her trials, but Kiwiiks does not believe she is serious enough to move from Padawan to Knight.) The kidnappers are from Black Sun. The Knight takes down their team leader, Veer, who reveals that they were just the decoys. Kira bluffs getting into his mind, and the thug blurts out that Tarnis is at the Black Sun headquarters. Regrouping again, the Knight learns that the stolen datafiles had the locations and prototype specs for all of the Republic’s weapons projects. Orgus, Kiwiiks, and Galen each head for one of the research facilities to protect them. Kira will remain to work with the Knight in going after Tarnis at the Black Sun facility. Fortunately, Galen turns over control of Sergeant Nidaljo’s SIS unit to the Knight, due to their anti-Black Sun expertise. They raid the Black Sun base, but it turns out that Tarnis is a Sith Lord, and he hired Black Sun to fake his kidnapping so he could go back to his Sith activities. Local Black Sun leader Salarr does not give up without a fight, but he is captured all the same. Kira, back at the lab, lets him know that the Planet Prison prototype at the base is a fake. Lord Tarnis has escaped with the real prototype and, apparently, his entire development team. Their greatest fear is that the Planet Prison could be used against Coruscant. They head for Sector 439, independent Justicar territory, where they find the scientists dead, except one, who says Lord Tarnis has escaped with the weapon. They track its signature to the ruins of the Jedi Temple. The Knight arrives just in time to overhear Tarnis talking to his father, Darth Angral, via comm, along with other Sith Lords. The Jedi Knight defeats Tarnis in single combat, killing him while Sith Lords Nefarid, Sadic, Praven, and Angral watch via the transmission. Now, Angral swears to destroy the Knight and his people in retaliation. As for the Planet Prison, they are able to destroy the prototype, but Tarnis has already transmitted the plans to his father. Now, Angral is declaring his own war on the Knight and the Republic, and the Sith Empire is denouncing his actions as unsanctioned, despite their likely approval of his actions if he can get away with it. Tracing Angral’s transmissions to Ord Mantell, the Knight and Kira head for the planet (with Kira as the Knight’s temporary Padawan) aboard a ship given to the Knight for the mission. The Knight also receives C2-N2, a droid assistant. Once at Ord Mantell, the Knight and T7-O1 meet with SIS Agent Ottau. With the planet in civil war, it is a dangerous place. They have tracked the transmission to an island. They learn that Angral is working on building the Desolator, a superweapon from the various designs that were stolen that combines many of those designs into one vessel. Upon returning to the ship, the Knight finds Kira held at saberpoint by Imperial Inquisitor Ferav. Kira has been interrogated by Angral himself, but did not give him up. The Jedi Knight kills Ferav and his men, saving Kira. (Angral had already left to return to the warship being retooled as the Desolator weapon.) They need to secure other superweapon plans from facilities on Nar Shaddaa and Taris. On Taris, Nasan Godera is hiding out after having abandoned the Republic after the Treaty of Coruscant. Godera created the original weapon concepts that Tarnis was working on. Godera has several outposts on Taris, mostly manned by droids. The Knight defeats Imperials at one outpost and is contacted by Imperial agent Watcher One. He is also after Godera. One of Godera’s surveillance droids, RE-M0, reveals that Watcher One already has Godera’s location. After some repairs, the Knight is able to follow the same trail. Upon arrival, the Knight finds Watcher One there (actually an Imperial Shadow Captain using a holographic disguise), and Godera apparently having committed suicide rather than being captured. It is just a lie, however, as RE-M0 reveals. The droid is heavily damaged, but he saves its processor. He is contacted by Watcher One, who buys himself time to interrogate Godera, who has been captured, by sending the Jedi to save a nearby settlement from another Sith (assassin Rora Seake). With Seake defeated, they continue on, tracking down Watcher One and Godera. Watcher One has reported to Angral that his interrogation is completed, but Angral is furious that Watcher One was willing to strike a deal with the Jedi Knight. Angral orders Watcher One to kill the Knight, but the Knight defeats him. Rather than be captured, Watcher One kills himself. The Jedi frees Godera, who feels that all-out war will resume very soon. He is willing to return to the Republic if it means eventually finishing the Empire for good. Godera (with RE-M0’s memory core) is sent back to Coruscant with another SIS agent, while the Jedi Knight heads to Nar Shaddaa, where the Republic was using the neutral Hutt territory to craft sentient beings into enhanced soldiers called the Power Guard. He is to meet with SIS Chief Rieekan on Nar Shaddaa. Rieekan has the Jedi hit all of Galen’s dead drops, since he has apparently gone missing during his mission. A recording that is recovered confirms that Galen found the facility with all of the Power Guard data stolen. The Power Guard subjects are also revealed to be refugees that volunteered to battle the Empire. Galen had gone to the recruitment center, but he was attacked and kidnapped to the Power Guard lab. A refugee points the Knight in the right direction, allowing him to find the lab. At the lab, the Knight is confronted by Imperial soldiers under Commander Graul, a hologram transmission from Lord Sadic, and Mark I Power Guards that have been brainwashed by the Sith. The Jedi defeats his adversaries, gaining an encrypted datapad. They return to Rieekan to have it decrypted, but the base has been attacked by other Power Guards. Rieekan is dead. Special Agent Tander, who has been intending to evacuate and retreat, is now in charge, but he is convinced to finish the job for now. The datapad points them to a factory controlled by Imperials. The Jedi finds Agent Galen, but he has been turned into a Power Guard and is at least partially under the control of Lord Sadic. Galen is forced to attack the Jedi, but the Knight disables him. Galen reveals that Sadic is building an army of Power Guards in Shadow Town. Galen wants to be killed, but the Jedi refuses. Galen instead races off to Shadow Town to attack the other Power Guards, which wounds him enough that he dies as the Jedi arrives. There, however, the Jedi can finally confront Lord Sadic, who has converted himself with Power Guard technology. The Jedi battles and kills Sadic, despite his upgrades. The Power Guard project is destroyed so that the Empire cannot utilize its technology. (While on Nar Shaddaa, the Jedi helps Kira give aid to her old friends from her days on the run. Darshyn, a local leader, claims that the Ur’kossags, a gang that was oppressing them, were destroyed by Kira when she was with them, but now Kira’s friends are feared and unable to get help from others who are fearful of them. Now, they are able to help her old friends by providing supplies they cannot get elsewhere.) The Jedi is then informed by Suthra that Imperial Admiral Hacklin, who had been with Angral when he interrogated Kira, has contacted the Republic with an offer to defect. He has apparently earned a death mark from the Empire for unknown reasons. The Jedi and Kira are to meet him at an abandoned Czerka facility in the Unknown Regions. Upon arriving, though, they find that Hacklin has not really earned a death mark or defected. Instead, they are met by Valis, a Child of the Emperor, who claims that Kira is actually another Child of the Emperor. Valis wants Kira to come with him. He claims that the Emperor now knows that Kira is alive, thanks to Angral interrogating her. They defeat Valis, but after the fact, Kira reveals the truth. Her parents were Sith, and she was taken away to train as a child. She and other children were taken to the Emperor to be transformed into Children of the Emperor. Kira resisted being anyone’s puppet, so she stowed away on a ship and escaped. She was found by Jedi Master Kiwiiks and taken for Jedi training. She has hidden the truth from everyone, even Kiwiiks, until now. Kira wants to tell the Jedi Council the truth now, but her master is missing. They at least tell Suthra, since the Knight has not heard of Children of the Emperor before. Suthra has, however, and he suggest getting rid of Kira, but they go to the Jedi Council on Tython instead. They explain the situation to Jedi Masters Satele Shan, Jaric Kaedan, Tol Braga, and Syo Bakarn. Bakarn (ironically) notes that this is the first confirmation they have received that the Children of the Emperor are real. They worry about Kira, but if she has truly redeemed herself from her brief time with the Sith, then she will be allowed to stay with the Jedi Knight, despite Kaedan’s dissent. They head for Tatooine to find Master Kiwiiks, who has been out of contact. The facility on Tatooine has developed the Shock Drum, a device to damage enemy fortifications through vibrations fired into the ground. It can actually destroy a planet’s core, wiping out the planet. They arrive at the facility and learn that Kiwiiks was taken away by a Sith Lord that attacked the base. (The Sith let them live, as if they were beneath his notice.) The Sith Lord also has the Shock Drum. They track its location, finding that it has been activated. In a short while, Tatooine will be destroyed. They are contacted by Lord Praven, who has the Shock Drum. He sees no need for Tatooine to be destroyed, if he can instead kill the Jedi Knight to get revenge for Lord Angral. He sets up a challenge. If the Jedi wins, he gets the code to deactivate the weapon. If he loses, Angral has his revenge. (Interestingly, Praven is a pureblood Sith, and he believes the Jedi must die because they, he believes, want the genocide of the Sith species.) They duel, and Praven is defeated. Tatooine is saved. The Jedi will not kill Praven, though. His sense of honor impresses the Jedi. He reveals that Kiwiiks was left with the Shock Drum and may already be dead from its vibrations. The Jedi Knight convinces Praven to abandon the Sith Empire, surrender himself to the Jedi Order, and turn to the Light Side as a Jedi (which might not be too hard, given that he is a Sith by race and honor, not seeped in the Dark Side by a life choice, per se). The Jedi then saves a family of Jawas from a Sand Demon before reaching the Shock Drum (with the Jawas), which he shuts down, saving Kiwiiks. To keep the Shock Drum out of Imperial hands, Kiwiiks destroys it. The Jedi reports back, then heads for Alderaan to look for Orgus. (For his part, Praven surrenders to the Republic, is sent to the Jedi Council on Tython, and is accepted as a Padawan.) On Alderaan, the Republic was working on the Death Mark weapon, which uses microscopic target marking, which then allows a laser from an orbital platform to kill the target anywhere on the planet. The Jedi meets with Count Alde at Organa Palace. He is with Aleyna Hark, who was with the Death Mark project until they were attacked by Lord Nefarid, who was driven off by Orgus, until the Sith called in Killiks to overwhelm him, allowing Nefarid to kill him (it seems). Aleyna escaped, she says. During the conversation, the Death Mark activates and kills the tagged Alde. With no proof that they did not kill him, the Jedi and Aleyna are suspects. Aleyna allows herself to be taken into custody by Guard Captain Yils so that the Jedi can go after the Death Mark weapon. The Jedi heads for the facility and finds Orgus alive, along with Doctor Parvux of the Death Mark project. They had sealed themselves off from the Killiks, which are now drawn back to them. After defeating the Killiks, Orgus and Parvux reveal that Aleyna is a spy. She helped the Sith steal the Death Mark, and it was she who was able to get close enough to Alde to have him tagged. The Jedi takes out power stations for the laser platform, then they meet with Wynne Organa at Wardpost Duval. He notes that Aleyna never got into custody. She made it to House Thul, an Imperial ally. (There is a chance at peace, though, as Horis Thul, duke of House Thul, supports peace talks.) The Jedi Knight reaches Thul, but Aleyna is there, trained in Sith arts. The Knight defeats her in combat, freeing Thul from her manipulations. Aleyna, however, has marked Thul and the Knight with the Death Mark tag. Thul gives the Knight coordinates for the mountain base where Nefarid is located. On the plus side, the targeting device was destroyed by Aleyna to keep the Knight from recovering it. But the laser platform remains with its targeting locks and is about to be back online. He contacts Orgus, who was not really hunting Nefarid during the Knight’s absence. He has found Angral and intends to get to Angral’s ship to take him down for good, while the Knight confronts Nefarid at the mountain base. The Knight reaches Nefarid, but Nefarid shows him a transmission from Angral, who has captured Orgus during his one-man strike at Angral. Before the Knight’s eyes, Angral kills Orgus Din. The Knight then battles Nefarid amid blasts from the now-operational Death Mark platform. He defeats Nefarid, the last of the apprentices who had appeared with Angral in hologram form to witness Tarnis’ death. The Knight then manually targets the Death Mark with a control console so that it destroys the console itself, making the Death Mark dormant. Another superweapon is down. The Knight reports back to Suthra, who reports that Orgus’ body has been recovered. Orgus had been able to plant a tracking device on Angral’s starship, however. The Jedi Knight heads for the Oppressor’s current location, Uphrades. Upon arrival, they find that the planet has been devastated by the Desolator weapon. They receive a distress call from the Daybreaker, a Republic medical ship, the only vessel to escape Uphrades. When the Daybreaker finds survivors on the surface during a scan, ship’s doctor Senessa wants to go down to help, even if they would be trapped, while Captain Dal refuses to do so. He abandons his duty and launches in an escape pod. The Jedi Knight is given sensor logs of the Desolator, then leaves to hunt Angral. It would appear that the Desolator needs long charging periods before firing, much like the Planet Prison that is part of its design. It has extra generators to accommodate this. They receive a distress call from Satele Shan on Tython, Angral’s next target. With only the Jedi Knight available to save Tython, the Knight, Kira, and T1-O1 race for the Oppressor and board it. Kira and the Knight take down its reactors, halting the Desolator’s power-up. They then confront Angral on the bridge. Suddenly, Kira steps up to Angral, taken over by the Emperor’s mind, and orders Angral to finish the Knight. Kira fights the Emperor’s control, while the Knight and Kira (while in control of herself) battle Angral. Just as the Knight kills Angral, the Emperor takes over Kira and attacks the Jedi Knight. He is forced to duel his Padawan, until Kira is able to resist the Emperor and drive his mind from her own. This “Child of the Emperor” is finally free. They escape the Oppressor as it explodes. The Knight and Kira are called before the Jedi Council, which promotes Kira Carsen to the rank of Jedi Knight. The Jedi Knight is now referred to as the “Hero of Tython.” (To be continued below . . . )*

(The Old Republic: Jedi Knight)*

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Jedi Knight summary above.

- The Sith Empire discovers the location of the planet Denova, which is rich in baradium. The Empire invades, seeking to make use of those deposits. The Republic cannot spare forces to protect Denova, so they hire a private Trandoshan mercenary force, the Warstalkers (led by Kephess), to do so in their stead.*

(conjecture based on The Old Republic)*

*NOTE: This is three months prior to the end of the main storylines, so I have put it here to be approximately early enough to make sense in that context.

- Darth Baras soon contacts the Sith Lord again, informing him that Baras’ own Master on the Dark Council, Darth Vengean, wants actual open war to resume. Vengean wants Baras to work toward forcing the rest of the Dark Council to abandon the Treaty of Coruscant. Apparently, most of the Sith leadership believes that it was the Sith Empire’s inability to find and defeat Republic general Karastace Gonn that kept them from true victory before and necessitated a negotiated peace with the Treaty of Coruscant. Baras has learned that he is meeting on Nar Shaddaa with Imperial traitors, and he sends the newly-dubbed Sith Lord to kill him. He travels to Nar Shaddaa, crashing the meeting, blaming a Chiss agent working with the Republic (Fawste), which briefly turns the Republic and Imperial guns in the room upon each other. The Sith Lord kills everyone in the room, Republic and Imperial alike. Darth Vengean is pleased, and he sends his forces to the fringe systems to conquer them for the Empire, an act that should force the Dark Council toward all-out war again. Baras is to now enact “Plan Zero,” the systematic assassination of the Republic’s top military leaders to cripple any retaliation that the Republic might mount. The Sith Lord will carry out the assassinations, beginning with four of the six targets (since Admiral Monk of the Republic fleet and Jedi Knight Xerender, leader of an elite commando squad, are not yet located). The other four, the entire Republic Strategic High Command (or “War Trust”) are all currently on Taris. The Lord travels there before this rare opportunity passes. The targets are Generals Faraire, Minst, Durant, and Elaxis Frelka. He coordinates with the planetary Imperial force leader, Moff Hurdenn, who provides his top black ops agent, Lieutenant Pierce, for the mission. Pierce has interrogated a now-dead scout, who has provided enough information to let them attack some caravans and use their movements to triangulate where General Frelka is operating. This leads to a mine, but Foreman Varl notes that Frelka hasn’t been present in weeks. To save his men, Varl sends an emergency call to draw Frelka to the mine. Frelka arrives with his men, and the Sith Lord slaughters them. Afterward, he checks the mine computer, learning that Frelka was mining materials for “Project Siantide,” and the materials were being received by General Minst. This points him to the old sewer region, where Minst is working. He goes there, where he finds an underling posing as Minst, who explains that the reactor building they are in will soon self-destruct to cover up Project Siantide, and Minst is in the fallout vault area that will survive its destruction. The Sith Lord infiltrates the vault just as the rest of the place explodes. Inside, he faces the real Minst and his aide, both of whom he kills. Meanwhile, Pierce and his black ops allies have located Durant’s base, though they are now under fire. By the time the Sith Lord arrives, Pierce is the last one left, but Durant’s battalion has been wiped out. Durant himself is with his high-level officers inside his compound. The Sith Lord breaks in, then confronts Durant, who reveals that Siantide is a new form of power cell, which will give the Republic the advantage in the struggle with the Empire. The Sith Lord kills Durant’s men, then Durant himself. This leaves only General Faraire, who has called together the rest of the Republic forces on Taris to protect his base. Baras, however, puts all of Hurdenn’s forces under the command of the Sith Lord and his crew. The crew (Quinn, Vette, Jaesa, Pierce, and the Sith Lord) breaks up to lead multiple aspects of the assault, while Quinn coordinates from the local Imperial base. They sabotage the spaceport, power station, and the like, crippling elements of the Republic base. Once inside the base, the Sith Lord fights his way to Faraire, but by the time he arrives, the general’s men have managed to figure out how to stabilize Siantide cells, and he pits a droid under Siantide power against the Sith Lord. He destroys the droid in an extremely fierce battle (since the droid is powered by Siantide, which makes it about ten times more powerful than if it had regular power cells, as Siantide will do to anything it powers). Faraire tries to escape, but he is stopped by Quinn and Pierce. The Sith Lord then kills him, eliminating the last of the War Trust. Hurdenn transfers Pierce to the Sith Lord’s command, rounding out his crew. By the time the Sith Lord contacts Darth Baras, Admiral Monk has been located. Unfortunately, he is located because he somehow learned of Darth Vengean’s assault in the fringe systems and has staged an attack on Vengean’s destroyer (which is under the command of Moff Masken). The Sith Lord is now to head for the battle, get aboard Monk’s ship, and take him out, ending the siege of Vengean’s vessel in the process. Upon arriving and boarding the ship, however, Moff Masken informs him that Admiral Monk and his men have evacuated his ship down to the surface of Quesh. Masken also believes that this was a setup, as Monk had Vengean’s vessel’s codes and location to set a trap for the ship. In fact, Masken believes that Darth Baras himself set Vengean up. Upon finding Monk on the surface of Quesh, he learns that Monk and his men are actually infiltrators and spies for the Sith Empire. Baras set them upon Vengean as part of his own power grab. By wiping them out, per his orders from Baras, the Sith Lord has now killed those who could have revealed his betrayal of his Master. With this move, Baras has broken the Treaty of Coruscant. After contacting Baras, who confirms his orchestration of events, the Sith Lord is sent after the final target of Plan Zero, Jedi Knight Xerender, who is located on Hoth, where he and his special ops team are seeking out a secret superweapon that is among the wrecked ships on the planet. On the surface, Imperial Commander Lanklyn has been tracking Xerender, but contact has been lost with his team. Ensign Slinte provides details about his location, deep in pirate territory. He fights his way through the pirates and rescues Lanklyn, who points him to the local Talz forces that would be able to point him toward Xerender. At the Talz camp, he finds Padawan Sewlor, abandoned by Xerender, it seems. Unbalanced, Sewlor attacks the Sith Lord. He defeats Sewlor, questioning him about Xerender. Apparently, the camp is that of the Talz who follow Fetzellen (who is off with Xerender), and they have been being killed one by one by a savage outcast Talz, Broonmark. Sewlor was left behind in this camp when Xerender went off on a dangerous mission alone, but now Sewlor is growing paranoid and nerve-wracked because of Broonmark’s attacks. Even as the Sith Lord watches, Broonmark emerges from a cloaking field and kills Sewlor. With the Sith tracking Xerender and Broonmark tracking Fetzellen for casting him out, they might be rivals, but the Sith Lord humbles Broonmark in combat, and he reveals that Xerender is not after a superweapon. Instead, he is seeking Jedi Master Wyellett. While contacting Baras about this development, Xerender breaks in on the communication feed, taunting Baras. Baras then uses a Force choke across the stars to kill Lanklyn for being unable to block Xerender from the holocomm, and Ensign Slinte is promoted in his place. Baras then reveals that Wyellett was a powerful Jedi Master, who was captured during the war and supposedly killed when the ship transporting him to Baras was destroyed in battle over Hoth. This is even more personal for Baras because Xerender was Wyellett’s Padawan at one time. During that time, Xerender battled Baras in a lightsaber duel, in which he defeated Baras (for the moment) and took Baras’ lightsaber as his own. Due to his connection to the lightsaber, Baras is able to focus on it in the Force and provide its location (and presumably Xerender’s location) to the Sith Lord, who heads there. Rather than finding Xerender, though, he finds a pirate black marketeer selling the lightsaber, recently recovered from the ice of the surface, to some elite Talz commandos. He kills the pirate and the Talz, only for Broonmark to arrive and claim that it was his duty to kill those Talz as part of cleansing the clan. To get the Sith out of his way, he provides the location of the crash site where Wyellett is likely buried, which is where Xerender should be heading. The Sith Lord fights his way to the downed ship, facing Fetzellen, who guards it. Broonmark emerges from his cloak and pledges to join and follow the Sith Lord if he will be allowed to kill Fetzellen now without interference. The Sith Lord agrees. Broonmark kills Fetzellen, then joins the Sith Lord. Upon entering the ship, the team finds that Jedi Master Wyellett is alive, having lived in the ruined ship and its surroundings for years, feeding off the Force to survive. Now, Xerender has found his old Master, drawn by his calls through the Force. The reunion is short-lived, though. The Sith Lord kills Xerender, but the battle makes the icy cavern where they battle unstable. He then battles Wyellett, who has no desire to return to the war. He slays the Jedi Master, fulfilling Darth Baras’ command. Plan Zero is complete. The Sith Lord returns to Darth Baras on Dromund Kaas. His Master reveals that Plan Zero was always an idea that Baras had pushed with Vengean, so that they could reignite the war and put Vengean himself in a position where Baras could take him down and ascend to his seat on the Dark Council. With Vengean seen as re-instigating the war on his particular front, Baras can now strike at Vengean with the support of the Dark Council (after the fact). Now, to prove his superior power, Baras is ready to send the Sith Lord as his agent to bring down Vengean (because if Baras’ apprentice can defeat Vengean, how powerful must Baras himself be?). Unfortunately, there is a complication: Darth Vengean’s apprentice, Lord Draagh, has been working for Baras, but he has been discovered. The Sith Lord is to free Draagh, so that the two of them can then take down Vengean for Baras. He frees Draagh where he is held on Dromund Kaas. The Sith Lord breaks through the outer rings of Vengean’s inner sanctum security, while Draagh retrieves a duplicate of Vengean’s inner sanctum key that he made and hid earlier. They enter Vengean’s sanctum and confront him directly. In fierce combat, Vengean is killed. Darth Baras is elevated into Vengean’s former position on the Dark Council. Baras returns to Korriban, where he guides the war effort, even as he makes Draagh and the Sith Lord his primary agents in crucial confrontations. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Old Republic: Sith Warrior)

NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Jedi Consular summary above.

- After a week in kolto treatment, Theron Shan learns that Mekhis has not reappeared, which may mean that she is dead, and without her, the Republic believes the Sith Empire cannot complete (or recreate) her superweapon work. However, the weapons are still out there, and Theron is concerned about one called the Gauntlet. Moreover, he may have restarted the war with his actions aboard the Sun Razer. He plans to investigate, but first he takes a trip to Tython, where he delivers news of the death of Zho to Satele Shan, Grand Master of the Jedi Order and, even though she may not recognize him (and he does not reveal his identity to her), his long lost mother.

(The Lost Suns)

*NOTE: This segment is set 10 years after the main The Lost Suns story. During this segment, Theron mentions the need to keep an eye out for the Gauntlet, which puts it before the third segment of TOR’s Republic Trooper storyline, while mentioning the SpecForces incident (from early in the same TOR storyline) and Darth Angral (a situation wrapped up in the second Jedi Knight TOR segment).*

- A Republic team is called upon by Jedi Master Oteg. They meditate together and have a vision of a Jedi spirit. They do not recognize her, but she speaks of the Emperor destroying the galaxy in darkness when “the prisoner” that has been fighting the Emperor for centuries becomes too weak to hold back the Emperor. The prisoner is imprisoned within the Maelstrom Nebula. To free the prisoner, they need a Gree computer on Taral V that can help them make their way through the nebula. They use a captured Imperial shuttle to get to the surface, then reach the computer and acquire it from Doctor Narem, despite interference from Grand Moff Kilran, who is working for Darth Malgus. Moments after the heroes leave, Kilran destroys the base on Taral V.*

(The Old Republic: Taral V)

*NOTE: This is a “flashpoint” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters for the Republic (Smuggler, Jedi Consular, Jedi Knight, and Republic Trooper, with their respective companions) around Level 33 in character progression. Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (aside from being from any of those aforementioned four), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations.

- The Republic heroes that acquired the Gree computer from Taral V returns to Jedi Master Oteg. Oteg’s technicians plug the computer into the hyperdrive of the Telos, and they chart a course into the Maelstrom Nebula, where the Sith Emperor has kept his “prisoner” for three centuries. Upon arriving at the prison, the team battles through Imperial forces and are contacted by Grand Moff Kilran, who is engaging Oteg’s forces on behalf of Darth Malgus. He berates them, intending to kill them personally when he is done with Oteg’s fleet. After further fighting, the team nears the core, but Kilran arrives with his troops, just as he promised. He partially disobeys Malgus’ orders to ignore the team and focus solely on keeping the Emperor’s prisoner in custody. In the battle that follows, Kilran and his men are all killed. They then use the prison’s computer to release the prisoner, who is, in fact, the long-lost Jedi Revan. Revan has spent the last three centuries restraining the Emperor in a battle of wills. The spirit that spoke to Oteg and the heroes emerges and reveals herself to be Revan’s former ally Meetra Surik (the “Exile”), who has watched over Revan. Meetra had sensed Revan’s strength fading. He would have lost to the Emperor soon, so she set the heroes on the path to free him, so that he could actively work against the Emperor. With Revan free, though, the Emperor is now freed of his influence, which allows the Emperor to put his massively genocidal plans into motion. Revan leaves for Tython to tell the Jedi Council all that he learned from the Emperor’s mind in his centuries as a prisoner. He then intends to head for the Foundry, where he believes he might find the key to stopping the Emperor for good.*

(The Old Republic: Maelstrom Prison)

*NOTE: This is a “flashpoint” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters for the Republic (Smuggler, Jedi Consular, Jedi Knight, and Republic Trooper, with their respective companions) around Level 37 in character progression. Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (aside from being from any of those aforementioned four), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations. One should note that even though this flashpoint is for Level 37 (or so) characters, it takes place before the Boarding Party mission for Level 33 (or so) Imperial players.

- With the death of Rycus Kilran while fighting Republic forces sent to free Revan, a memorial statue is commissioned in his honor to be erected on Dromund Kaas once the Ministry of War can agree on a location. (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)

- A group of Sith Empire agents are sent by Darth Malgus to the White Nova to accept new orders from Moff Phennir. The Emperor’s escaped prisoner (Revan) has led them to the Nanth’ri System, where an alien space station known as the Foundry is located, embedded inside an asteroid. The Imperial team is to capture a Republic cruiser that is bringing reinforcements and supplies to Revan’s forces at the Foundry, so that they can use it to infiltrate the Foundry itself. They board the Dorin’s Sky as planned and wipe out Captain Yelto’s Republic defenders. When all appears lost to Captain Yelto, she sabotages the ship so that it will self-destruct, taking the doomed Republic survivors and the Imperial boarding party with it. The Imperials battle their way to the command deck, defeating Storm Squad upon arrival. They shut down the self-destruct and kill the rest of the crew. The path to strike at the Foundry is now open. The threat to the Empire is great. Darth Malgus reveals that he has discovered that the Foundry is a sister station to two others. It is a Star Forge. Whereas one focused primarily on transforming planets, and a second was used to develop fleets of ships, this one specializes more toward creating droids, which means that Revan can now create an army of droids to send against the Empire if he is not stopped.∗

(The Old Republic: Boarding Party)∗

*NOTE: This is a “flashpoint” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters for the Sith Empire (Bounty Hunter, Sith Inquisitor, Sith Warrior, and Imperial Agent, with their respective companions) around Level 33 in character progression. Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (aside from being from any of those aforementioned four), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations. One should note that even though this flashpoint is for Level 33 (or so) characters, it takes place after the Maelstrom Prison mission for Level 37 (or so) Republic players.

• The Imperial team that captured the Dorin’s Sky en route to the Foundry now use the ship in a mission to gain access to the Foundry, seeking to defeat the ancient Jedi Revan and the army of droids he can create with this sister station to the Star Forge that Revan and Malak used during the Jedi Civil War. They pass through the Republic blockade and board the Foundry. They then battle their way through Republic defenders and Foundry-developed guardian droids. While trying to get through a security door, they are contacted by Revan, who attempts to use his own story to convince them that the Dark Side can be resisted and that the Sith Emperor and the Sith Empire must be destroyed. He wants them to surrender and sit out the rest of the war as prisoners. When they refuse, Revan sends his “infinite army” of extermination droids after them. The army is led by HK-47, Revan’s droid companion from three centuries earlier. Revan has programmed the extermination droids with Sith DNA, so that they will hunt down any Sith or Sith descendants, which includes a giant percentage of the Sith Empire’s population and ruling class. The team defeats HK-47 (who is later recovered by Darth Malgus) and continues fighting their way to the Foundry’s inner sanctum, where they face Revan himself. In this final confrontation, Revan dons the mask he wore centuries earlier as Darth Revan and engages the Imperial intruders. In a fierce battle, the Imperial team manages to kill Revan, seizing the Foundry for the Empire. Darth Malgus is pleased.∗

(The Old Republic: The Foundry)∗

*NOTE: This is a “flashpoint” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters for the Sith Empire (Bounty Hunter, Sith Inquisitor, Sith Warrior, and Imperial Agent, with their respective companions) around Level 37 in character progression. Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (aside from being from any of those aforementioned four), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations.

• After briefly recording her journey into the Jedi Archives, the Barsen’thor has a new mission. (The Jedi also joins Qyzen briefly on a trip to Taris to confront Veneb in combat in an official dispute over his ascension to power. In the battle, Veneb is killed, and Qyzen comes to lead Veneb’s clan of younger hunters, though he will do so from afar, continuing to work with the Barsen’thor for as long as needed. Also, as this has all been taking place, Tharan has been attempting to join the exclusive Lumenatus Club by creating a Vandrayk device to prove his intellect. However, when Tharan realizes that its core, which can only be used once, could actually increase Holiday’s sentience, his own love for the hologram girl that loves him causes him to blow off the generator’s presentation and instead use its core to increase Holiday’s own self-awareness.) The Barsen’thor joins in a conference (via hologram) with Supreme Chancellor Dorian Jenarus, who is worried about the Rift Alliance, a group of planets threatening to secede from the Republic, a blow that, given their resources, would mean the end of the Republic itself. The warden is to be the Republic’s ambassador (i.e. problem-solver) to the Rift Alliance and is promoted to the rank of Jedi Master. First, she rendezvous with the Fortitude to meet with Rift Alliance representative Alauni. En route, she learns that the ship has been attacked. A survivor, Nadia Grell (daughter of a senator aboard) reports that the Senators have been held captive on the bridge by Sith boarders. They get aboard and save the diplomats, defeating the Sith leader, Arrax, who is working for Lord Kyrus. The ship, though, is set to crash into the planet Deralia. At Nadia’s suggestion, they steer the ship into orbit instead. After the crisis is averted, Alauni suggests the warden prove herself by working to free Senator Tai Cordan’s world of Balmorra from the Sith Empire. Due to so many officials being killed, and the president being under Sith control, Tai will be Balmorra’s president if it is freed, and then Tai promises to join the Republic. He points the Jedi Master to Balmorran rebel Zenith. He is suspicious, though, and requires that the Jedi go to the Okara Droid Factory to draw off the Sith bodyguard (Lerek Serrus, apprentice to Darth Lachris, Vice President of Balmorra) of the head of Imperial manufacturing on the planet (Trabier), letting Zenith get to him. She takes down Serrus, and Zenith tries to assassinate Trabier with a sniper rifle. The warden, though, takes him prisoner, rather than letting Zenith kill him. Meanwhile, Zenith’s men smuggle Tai to a safehouse. The Master meets with Director Fenn of Troida, a major Balmorran corporation. After some haggling, Fenn joins them, turning over accounts and weapons to Tai’s resistance, though they need slicer Benx to get it. Benx is under Lachris’ thumb, but he helps without giving himself away. Their next step is to get to the ill Sith’s puppet President of Balmorra, Galthe, on whose behalf Lachris is working. Lachris takes many civilians (“rebels” in Lachris’ words only) as prisoners, intending to draw out the Jedi. The Jedi and Zenith’s men save the prisoners, then raid Balmorra Arms to find Galthe so that he can sign over control to Tai when the revolution ends. They find Galthe in carboneite and Lachris really calling the shots. The Barsen’thor kills Lachris, but Galthe, when freed from carbonite at their base, is mentally broken and unable to sign over power to Tai. With Lachris dead, the occupation is ending. Rather than signing over power, the citizens’ council sees Galthe’s condition and promote Tai as senior official into the presidency without his signature. Balmorra is free and joins the Republic. Zenith becomes Tai’s liason to the Rift Alliance. (Over time, the Jedi is able to get Zenith the support of Balmorran official Varram, who has created a militia to protect Tai. This support allows Zenith to be essentially an opposition leader for Balmorra, keeping Tai honest in his leadership, despite the actions of Nalan Fiskin, another candidate for the position who tries to use evidence of an old operation by Zenith’s now-dead revolutionary mentor, Gray Star, to discredit Zenith. They are able to save his reputation by having Zenith go to Nar Shaddaa to get backup journals from one of Gray Star’s other protégés, Kaylan Jase. Information in the journals prove Zenith’s men saved lives, rather than taking them, and that Fiskin himself has taken bribes from the Empire. She even helps him use the meeting location on Alderaan from the peace summit to help bring refugees home to Balmorra, but Zenith is angered when he realizes that Gray Star had kept the truth from him that these refugees had been desperate enough to collaborate with the Empire to survive. Zenith takes them all back to Balmorra as collaborators, which makes him a hero to the people, even if it was not what Gray Star would have wanted.) Back aboard her ship with the other Rift Alliance representatives, Nadia has found an Imperial monitoring device on the ship, now deactivated. Tobas Grell, her father, needs the warden’s help. The Rift Alliance’s Attis Station on Quesh has lost contact, and the Imperials seem to have targeted it. The Jedi must investigate, and Nadia will go along as a Rift Alliance tech expert. They free the station from Sith forces, then speak with Lord Kyrus via holocomm. He appears to be keeping tabs on the warden and Nadia. Upon returning to the ship, Tobas admits that Nadia has Force abilities, which confirms actions the warden saw on Quesh. Tobas asks him to be an example to her in the future. He then sends the Barsen’thor to Hoth to help Rift Alliance coalition forces against a seemingly undefeatable group of pirates (largest in the galaxy), the While Maw, led by Captain Valon (rumored immortal). The warden arrives on Hoth and meets with Lieutenant Felix Iresso, the Rift Alliance commander on Hoth. She fights her way to Valon, whom she apparently kills in combat. She also deactivates a thermal bore device he was threatening the Rift Alliance with. Valon isn’t truly dead, though, and he next threatens to freeze the Republic’s forces in the absence of a heat exchanger he has stolen. She again saves the day, but Imperial commandos are there to freeze her in carbonite to be bait to draw out Valon so that they could take back the armor that he stole from the Empire. It is strange, alien armor that heals any wound, even mortal ones, and the Empire had found it on Hoth and tried to study it before Valon stole it. She defeats the Imperials, but she now has the secret to truly defeating Valon. They raid the Imperial research facility, getting information on the armor to use against Valon. They must mortally injure Valon repeatedly in a short time, overtaxing and shutting down the healing function of his armor. After dealing with the traitorous (and frightened) Private Kree, they head for Valon’s “base,” a dreadnaught wreck he intends to raise as a flagship. Felix and his men keep Valon’s men busy, while the Jedi confronts him, finally defeating him (for good) in combat after knocking out his armor. (Along the way, she has to knock out another Imperial team, this one claiming that the Empire loaned the armor to Valon, rather than him stealing it.) With Valon arrested, Felix joins the warden’s crew. Back on the ship, they focus on seeking out the traitor. Given Augin Blaesus of Erigorm’s frequent communications, they suspect him, but he is away at Waypoint Station to accept a gift (to heal the gap between Rift Alliance and Republic) of troops from Grell’s homeworld for the Republic. With the Jedi on Hoth, Blaesus was sent in her place and must now be with the royal family. On Waypoint Station, they find everyone dead but the king and queen, who are being held by Blaesus and Lord Kyrus, who is subordinate to Blaesus, who reveals himself to be a so-called Child of the Emperor. He was imprinted with the Emperor’s mind as an infant and sent into the Republic as a sleeper agent, while the “First Son” concealed their presence. His intent is for an Imperial fleet to arrive, destroy the royals (or have the royals join them), and bring down the Rift Alliance, thereby bringing down the Republic as well. The Jedi fights and defeats Kyrus, then Blaesus. In return for saving them, the royals make their treasury open to Republic use. They are contacted by Tai, whose warships routed Imperials heading for Waypoint Station, but the ships had odd sabotage-esque problems. They are contacted by Syo Bakam, who reveals that the cold war is over. A Second Great Galactic War has begun. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Old Republic: Jedi Consular)*

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Jedi Consular summary above.

- Hunter initiates a holoconference with other members of the Star Cabal, from somewhere in the Brema Sector. “Present” are Yem Leksende, Nok Drayen (though likely someone using his identity, since he is “dead” at this point), Kolovish, the Creeper, the Prince, and Hunter. They discuss the predictability of Senator Voralla and Representative Shuuru, Hunter’s success on Commenor, Darth Baras, Darth Angral, the awakening of the Children of the Emperor, and the move toward what they call “Armageddon.”*

(conjecture based on The Old Republic)*

*NOTE: This about six months before the third act of TOR’s Imperial Agent storyline, and it makes reference to prior events in other storylines, hence its placement here.

- The spirit of Orgus appears to the Hero of Tython, pointing the Hero to Tatooine, where a crashed ship holds the key to stopping the Emperor. They travel to Tatooine and find a crashed Jedi ship being attacked by Sith. After driving off the Sith, the Hero finds Jedi Jomar Chul injured. Jomar passes along sensor logs that he was to take to Tython. Jedi Master Tol Braga, when contacted, instructs the Hero to bring the logs to Tython, so that Jomar can await medical attention on Tatooine. On Tython, the logs help confirm what the Jedi suspected: that the Emperor has a space station battle fortress in orbit above Dromund Kaas, where he can often be found in person. Unfortunately, it is protected by a cloaking device. A strike team is forming to go after the fortress, but the Hero must first join Warren Sedoru on Balmorra to steal a prototype cloaking device that could then be studied and reverse-engineered to allow them to disable the space station’s own cloak. They’ll need the help of the local resistance, so the Hero and his companions first help Archiban "Doc" Kimble and his group fight off a Colicoid attack, then join with Warren to gather supplies, divert Imperial attention (even saving some wounded Imperials with Doc’s expertise), and finally locate the cloaking prototype. They learn from resistance fighter Nikollan Kord and Republic Colonel Finley that a resistance spy (Madel) was caught, apparently while trying to steal that prototype. If they can get to her, they’ll have the information they need. The Hero infiltrates the Imperial base where the spy is being held, clearing the way for the resistance, Warren, and Republic troopers. Madel is freed, but she had already given up information on the resistance under torture. The only good news is that they know the prototype is at the Balmorran Arms Factory. Nikollan wants to kill her for giving up their secrets, but the Republic takes her in as an asset. The Hero and Doc infiltrate the factory, where they find Doc’s old friend Remmy on waste management duty, pretending to work for the Empire, while secretly harming them every chance he gets. Remmy escapes through the same route they opened to enter, just as Farley informs them that the Empire is working on cloaked weapons, not just the cloaking device itself. They acquire files on the weapon project, but they are confronted by Sith Lord Razik and Imperial troopers. The Hero defeats them, then gets the prototype, but Nikollan betrays him, intending to keep the prototype for Balmorra. Fortunately, the Hero is able to trade the weapon project data for the prototype and avoids bloodshed over it. Doc joins the Hero’s crew. While Warren gets the prototype to Braga on Tython, Braga contacts the Hero about a new mission. His Padawan, Sajar, has gone missing. Sajar was once a Sith Lord (Darth Sajar) on the Dark Council, but after a long duel with Braga on Dantooine, Braga was able to convince Sajar to turn to the Light Side. After that, he became Braga’s apprentice. The Empire has attacked Quesh, where Sajar was guarding a Republic base. The Hero’s team goes to Quesh to find Sajar and help the Republic forces there. Upon arrival, they find Sajar, who has given up arms for the moment because he had tortured and killed Imperial prisoners, which showed him that he was slipping back toward his old ways. Rather than fall back to the Dark Side, he gave up fighting. Now, the Emperor’s Wrath (Lord Scourge, enhanced and long-lived thanks to the Emperor’s ritual after he failed in killing the Emperor with Revan and Meetra Surik) is coming to kill Sajar for his betrayal. They protect the base, but then Scourge arrives. Scourge recognizes the Hero, however. Scourge leaves to contact the Emperor, letting Sajar remain free. Something about seeing the Hero has shaken Scourge, and the Emperor must know of this threat. Sajar turns himself in to the Jedi Council to be questioned about his actions with the Imperial prisoners. The Hero and his crew are sent to Hoth to make contact with Leeha Narezz. A crashed Sith ship on Hoth has a full set of schematics for the Emperor’s fortress over Dromund Kaas. They need to get it, though they will have to face Imperials and White Maw pirates to get those plans. Unfortunately, the Imperials are amid a full-scale invasion as they arrive. The Hero helps Sergeant Fideltin Rusk of the 301st Infantry against Imperials. Rusk hands over Imperial survey data that he acquired. The Jedi then helps Republic General Grayne by taking out Imperial weapon platforms being set up on the surface to knock out arriving Republic ships. Leeha then uses the data to seek out the Imperial shuttle with the plans aboard. They strike at the Imperials by the crash site and get to the ship, but Leeha is injured and nearly surrenders to Imperial Guardsman Lassicar. Fortunately, Rusk’s team arrives and takes out Lassicar’s troopers. They capture an Imperial computer tech, who was there to get the ship’s databanks. He reveals that the White Maw pirates got their hands on the entire computer system first, but they left the decryption files on a different datapad. Our heroes head for White Maw territory, where they seek to recover the computer system and take out munitions for General Grayne (again). They find that the Imperials and White Maw are battling near the White Maw’s dreadnought base. The Hero and his team take down their “competition,” including Lassicar, and finally recover the schematics. They now have all they need to strike the Emperor’s fortress and capture him. The 301st is rotated to Coruscant, and Rusk joins the Hero’s crew at the suggestion of Grayne. Leeha gets the technical readouts to Master Braga. (Amid these various missions, the Jedi allows Doc protect former fiancée and fellow doctor Prudy on Alderaan. He had scammed a group of gangsters two years earlier by taking their money, not giving them the spice they wanted, and using that money to set up a hospital on Alderaan for her. She is saved, though she isn’t too happy to see him after he left her at the altar. Oh, and the gangsters burned down her hospital.) On Tython, the Jedi confer about the plan to capture the Emperor. Each Jedi team leader will enter the fortress from a different point, and they will get to the Emperor and hopefully redeem him to the Light Side, ending the war. Kaedan has worries, though. Jomar has told him of a vision he had of the Hero falling to the Dark Side and becoming a Sith. Since this is not a definite future, the Jedi continue with the mission, once Kiwiiks and Satele speak in favor of the Hero. The strike commences, and each team (led by Braga, Warren, Leeha, and the Hero) converges on the throne room. Kira, formerly connected to the Emperor, believes the Emperor is waiting for them and that he is far too powerful to capture. Inside, the Hero reaches the throne room, where Lord Scourge stands in his way, claiming that the other Jedi are dead. The two duel fiercely, until Scourge is defeated. The other Jedi arrive, not having been killed after all. The Emperor refuses their “invitation” to speak with the Jedi Council on Tython. He holds the Jedi back with Force lightning, pushing his will upon them. All fall to his might and are placed in kolto tanks to heal. Finally, Lord Scourge releases the Hero from his tank and brings him to meet other Sith, to whom he bows. It would appear that Jomar’s vision may have been correct. The Hero engages in exercises to show the various Sith his abilities. Weeks pass. However, Master Orgus Din’s spirit appears to him through the Emperor’s control and helps him to defeat the Emperor’s influence, freeing himself once more. Orgus absolves him of responsibility for anything he may have done while controlled. Still pretending to be a Sith, the Hero is tasked by Overseer Chaskar to interrogate Kira, who, along with the rest of the Hero’s crew, has been captured. He is able to mind-trick Chaskar into leaving the room, allowing him to free Kira. They must free the others, who are held in the docking bay in cages, but they reach the docking bay and find that Scourge has already freed them, and he says he would have saved the Masters too. Over three centuries ago, he saw a vision of the Hero helping to defeat the Emperor (back during his plot with Revan and Meetra Surik to kill the Emperor). Scourge joins the Hero’s crew, based on this vision. He cannot allow the galaxy to be annihilated by the Emperor and his quest for more power and longevity. (Again, the Hero also helps companions deal with issues that arise. Doc helps save Hutt Cartel member Suudaa Nem’ro from a deadly disease no one has ever cured. It works, and Doc earns himself a place in medical history. Of course, he also did it to get the attention of an old Rattataki “friend,” Kaliyo Djannis, who takes his place on the ship briefly until Doc can return from Hutta. She completely turns Doc down when he is done; she must know him well. The Journal of Xenomedicine is to examine Nem’ro for proof that it worked, but a bounty hunter kills him before they can do so, frustrating Doc’s chances at recognition. He decides to just create his own HoloNet medical journal. Amusingly, his “way with women” brings him to hit on Kira, who uses the Force to convince him to rethink how he has treated women in the past. T7-O1 has relayed the story of how Jedi Master Ven Zallow had sent the Rodian Shafu on a mission to uncover corruption in the Hutt Council, but he was killed when his ship exploded over Nar Shaddaa. The droids also relate the activities of Imperial spy Eckhorn and his death in a similar explosion. The droid figures out that a bounty hunter might have used similar tactics against both, and tracks payments that suggest that Senator Verre Sydia was a traitor. Given Sydia’s background, though, this seems to be a setup. The SIS clears her name and implicates her husband, based on evidence provided through T7-O1’s research.) The cold war has ended, and the Second Great Galactic War has begun. (To be continued below . . . )*

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Jedi Knight summary above.

- Soon, Cipher Nine’s leave is cut short, and his teams is recalled to Dromund Kaas by Watcher Three. He meets with Keeper, but the person holding that rank is no longer the male officer he first served but Watcher Two after a promotion. The male “Keeper” has become Minister of Intelligence, so Watcher Two became the new Keeper of Operations Division. The new Keeper is concerned about an operation they are beginning that is aimed at the Republic’s Strategic Information Service. They are worried about Ardon Kothe, the Republic’s best spymaster, responsible for 16 covert projects in the Mid Rim. His division has virtually unlimited resources and no restrictions on their classified duties. The Empire has planted information that will lead the Republic to believe that Cipher Nine wishes to possibly defect. The goal is to get him close enough to Kothe to take him out. Thanks to Kaliyo and Vector not having prior Intelligence backgrounds, they are allowed to continue working with Cipher Nine as he begins this covert operation on Nar Shaddaa. He meets with SIS agent “Hunter” (a codename) on the Promenade. To test Cipher Nine’s veracity, he sends him to use his Cipher clearance to get into a new Droid Works set up by Nem’ro to produce droids (such as cortosis-plated Jedi-killers) for the Empire. Cipher Nine follows instructions to gain floor plans and other important intel on the factory during what quickly becomes a firefight. The final instruction is to destroy the factory itself, which he does, passing this test. Hunter then introduces Cipher Nine to other members of the team: sniper Saber (a Twi'lek woman), Chance (a male human slicer), and the droid named Wheel, their technology specialist. Ardun Kothe arrives, believing that Cipher Nine is the individual that Imperial Intelligence has been building a background for over the last four months. This is backed up by alterations made by Intel to Cipher Nine’s personnel file that suggests that he was “traumatized” by learning that Darth Jadus was leading a terrorist network. Cipher Nine is able to use Jadus’ murder of civilians with the Eradicators as a reason for switching sides to the Republic.

Cipher Nine is given a new SIS codename: Legate. As “Legate,” Cipher Nine is to be sent to Taris to meet up with Kothe’s other men in an operation there. Before he tries to send his new double-agent into action, though, Kothe speaks the keyword “onomatophobia” and activates “thresh protocol, phase one.” This seems to confirm some disturbing dreams Cipher Nine has been having, along with comments from Watcher X about “brain damage” and “mind control.” Kothe is able to “shut down” Cipher Nine for half an hour of unconsciousness, followed by a period where Kothe can order the agent to do just about anything (jump around, sit down, draw a weapon, etc.) on command. The agent remains fully aware of this, however, and is shocked to discover this embedded mind control. Kothe reverts him to “phase zero” to let him talk, but his commands have now made certain that “Legate” cannot tell anyone about this programming or Kothe’s SIS team, nor can the agent harm any members of the team. It is a precaution on Kothe’s part, but it severely hinders Cipher Nine’s ability to complete his mission to spy on and take down Kothe. Once on Taris, the team’s mission is to take down a rogue element: the “rotten” Jedi Knight Ki Sazen, Hero of Tas-La. People tend to die on her missions and important items like technology and artifacts seem to always disappear around her. Sazen recently broke into an Imperial laboratory, which they need “Legate” to infiltrate using Imperial clearances. At Imperial Command, he meets Lieutenant Needa, Imperial liaison officer. They need access to one of Nasan Godera’s labs (the one targeted by Sazen). Needa says that another Intel officer went there about a week ago, but they have not heard from the agent since. From the lab (via a secondary channel, with the primary one eerily silent), an Imperial marine contacts Command to report that Doctor Eckard Lokin is safe, but there is a rakghoul infestation at the lab. Despite the danger, “Legate” fights through the creatures to the abandoned laboratory, cleansing it of the rakghouls. He finds Doctor Lokin (AKA Fixer Fifteen, assigned to the lab by Watcher Four for a cleanup operation), who shows him footage of Ki Sazen speaking with an agent in the lab prior to Lokin’s arrival, taking data and one of Godera’s inventions, an Ultrawave Transmitter. Based on Lokin’s suspicions about Sazen’s next likely target (a bioresearch station near a rakghoul colony, where Doctor Dorant was doing research), Cipher Nine heads for the location, only to find Chevuk, her Nikto follower, but no Sazen. (She apparently has gained followers since Tas-La, who are referred to as her Chosen. Now, she has brought them to Taris to serve her.) Chevuk was sent to acquire the Ultrawave Transmitter, as one of three to find components to make it work when Sazen finally arrives on Taris. The machine can apparently control the rakghouls, which will make them into Sazen’s personal army of monsters. The two other Chosen, Bo’kesh and Fhentar, are seeking information on colony movements and Republic scientist Ianna Cel (who can complete the device), respectively. Unfortunately, the proof acquired thus far of Sazen’s intentions will not be enough to prove to the Jedi Council that Ki Sazen has gone rogue. They need more information. With some new kolto-derivative stimulants, Cipher Nine goes after sensor data to foil Bo’kesh’s part of Sazen’s plan. He is successful, but learns that Chance has been attacked by Imperial scouts while trying to meet with Ianna Cel before Fhentar can get to her. He goes to help Chance at Dynamet General (and Chance activates the mind control to make certain this will happen). Chance is too injured to meet with Ianna, so after “Legate” patches him up, the agent goes to meet with Ianna. (Helping Chance also gained his trust, but the activation of the mind control has increased the frequency with which Cipher Nine hears a male voice in his head, as if trying to talk him through somehow beating the mind control.) After speaking with Ianna, “Legate” is surprised to find Lokin following him. Lokin (still posting as Republic-friendly scientist, rather than an Imperial Intelligence Fixer) offers to pretend to be Ianna’s assistant to draw out Sazen, since it means he might be a second rakghoul expert on Taris, now that Sazen has had two others killed, leaving Ianna the only real expert left. As Cipher Nine takes down Republic jamming stations, Lokin is captured and taken to Sazen’s base, transmitting its location (in abandoned tunnels beneath the Republic base compound) to Cipher Nine once jamming is down. With Chance out of play for now, Kothe contacts “Legate” and uses the codeword to order him to recapture the Ultrawave Transmitter. Cipher Nine finally confronts Sazen in person in the lower levels. In a fierce battle, Cipher Nine defeats Ki Sazen, suggesting that the Jedi Order might be merciful to her if she returns to them, but Sazen instead chooses death by drawing her lightsaber on Cipher Nine again, forcing him to kill her. With Sazen gone, the Nikto Chosen clash with rakghouls. Interestingly, one rakghoul transforms (back) into Lokin. Later, at Imperial Command on Taris, Lokin reveals that his scientific work on Taris had been to use his own genetic code to develop the ability to transform from human to rakghoul at will. It has apparently worked, and it could be used with other Imperials’ DNA to allow for the creation of a rakghoul sleeper army. With this known, along with the knowledge that Lokin’s work was not sanctioned, and Lokin knowing that Cipher Nine is not really an SIS agent for Kothe, they work out an agreement, under which Doctor Eckard Lokin (Fixer Fifteen) joins Cipher Nine’s Intelligence team. “Legate” links the Ultrawave Transmitter to the ship’s computer, so that Kothe can remotely download data he needs. During their conversation, though, the voice in his head speaks more urgently, and he begins to have visions of things like the original Keeper killing him, a being on fire, Darth Jadus, etc. Finally, a vision of Watcher X speaks to her through a chip that he implanted in Cipher Nine. A version of Watcher X in the chip explains that Cipher Nine was programmed long before meeting Kothe’s people. “He” will help the agent free himself of the brainwashing, but to do so, the agent will have to get into the Imperial Archives on Dromund Kaas to access his own personnel file. The others find Cipher Nine unconscious and help him recover, without knowledge of what is happening. Cipher Nine and his team return to Dromund Kaas. By temporarily sabotaging security systems, he has a window to gain access to his personnel file. By searching for information on Cipher Nine, Watcher X, Killik joining, and the SLV-16 serum, he accesses a recording of the original Keeper authorizing “Castellan restraints” on Cipher Nine. It was apparently implanted after the mission to stop Darth Jadus, because it was done as a result of him threatening Darth Jadus. Granted, Jadus was the enemy at the time, but no operative should be allowed to threaten a Dark Council member. By installing these command codes in his mind, it would allow anyone with the codes to shut down and reprogram Cipher Nine’s mind at will. He also learns that it is possible that administering the “IX serum” a second time to recondition himself could possibly fix the problem, but it would be potentially dangerous. However, the Empire has been unable to produce more IX serum due to a low supply of dimalium-6, which is found on Quesh. The agent now has a new target: Quesh. There, he contacts Imperial Administrator Kroius, who provides the necessary chemicals to recreate IX serum, except for dimalium-6, which is from a chemical mine that the Republic captured recently. Cipher Nine attacks the chemical mine, obtaining the dimalium for himself. He then creates the serum with instructions from the chip’s Watcher X. He injects the IX serum and returns to the SIS team as it begins its work, slowly freeing him from the brainwashing. Kothe (via Saber) sends “Legate” to Hoth on a new mission. He wants the new recruit to go through contacts in the Imperial Army to find the multi-type shuttle Starbreeze, which he wants recovered from the planet. To do so, he must join an expedition to the starship graveyard (which is targeting several ships, including the Starbreeze) being run by Admiral Layek Davos. They first contact Captain Leo Furth, who reveals that the expedition already left 36 hours earlier. Despite bad weather and Republic commandos in the way, Cipher Nine makes his way to the starting point of Davos’ supply line, finding a second expedition about to set out after the first – an unauthorized expedition, whose discovery results in orders to torture Cipher Nine for information. Needless to say, he kills everyone instead. He is contacted by Chiss Ascendancy Sergeant Thent, who tells him that Furth is gone, while those who are not dead back at the base have been subverted by Davos. He gives coordinates for “answers” behind a nearby frozen lake. There, they find Zero Station and meet Ensign Raina Temple (a human) and Aristocra Saganu (a Chiss) of the Chiss Expansionary Defense Force. They have been watching Davos and want Imperial sanction to stop him, which Cipher Nine gives, even though they don’t know exactly what he is after. To reach the starship graveyard, Cipher Nine must pass through White Maw pirate tire to escape, Kothe is forced back into the missile storage area. Cipher Nine then locks up its force field, turning its security weapons against Kothe, who is blasted to bits. As Cipher Nine reaches Davos, who is with the Starbreeze in the dreadnought’s hangar. Davos reveals that the Starbreeze was the personal shuttle of Republic Colonel Omas, a weapons research officer. It supposedly contains his records and security codes. Davos says he will give Cipher Nine the Starbreeze (which was supposed to be payment for the White Maw) in return for his silence and the location of Zero Station. The agent refuses, instead wiping out Davos’ men, killing him as a traitor, and claiming the Starbreeze. As they prepare to leave, Raina arrives as the last survivor of the EDF team sent as backup. Needing another pilot to help manage the Starbreeze, Raina joins Cipher Nine and his companions in heading off to rendezvous with Hunter (who, oddly, refers to himself as Imperial Intelligence Minder Seventeen, perhaps as cover, since “Legate” is acting in his Cipher Nine persona when dealing with the Chiss). Hunter is to take the Starbreeze back to their ship, then to Kothe, while Cipher Nine takes the ship Hunter used to get there. Raina is to stay with Cipher Nine as part of his crew, but cannot be allowed to know about the SIS and killed if she ever finds out. (Amusingly, this means that Cipher Nine must pretend to be an Imperial agent, which he already is.) “Legate” is next sent by Kothe to Quesh. There, the entire SIS team is tasked with acquiring the “Shadow Arsenal,” powerful missiles capable of being cloaked, which were developed on Colonel Omas’ orders over a decade ago by a team of scientists led by Nason Godera. With Godera’s weapon activation codes from the Ultrawave Transmitter and the location of the Shadow Arsenal (Quesh) found in the memory of the Starbreeze, they are ready to acquire the missiles. (Wheel and Saber have carried out their own mission to Mon Gazza for another important key to the operation.) After “Legate” brings down the facility’s shields, Kothe sets up the pickup of the missiles, telling the agent to return to Imperial Intelligence and shore up his own contacts. Kothe will be in touch in a few months. With Kothe about to escape with the missiles, Cipher Nine has no choice but to take the advice of the phantom Watcher X in his mind (due to the chip) and finish the IX serum’s work of remapping his own brain patterns to remove the original programming. New programming is implemented that will keep outside control away for good. Now, though, Cipher Nine must nail Kothe and figure out how he got his hands on Imperial brainwashing codes in the first place. Upon confronting Kothe, he reveals that he used to be a Jedi Knight, who could not live up to the Jedi Code. He draws a lightsaber, and battle begins. When he is held off and tires to escape, Kothe is forced back into the missile storage area. Cipher Nine then locks up its force field, turning its security weapons against Kothe, who is blasted to bits. As Cipher Nine’s team leaves, Hunter calls down an Imperial bombing run to destroy the Shadow Arsenal, revealing that he is not on the Republic’s side, nor the Empire’s side. There is a third faction in play. Overall, the mission for Imperial Intelligence to take down Kothe and learn of his plans was a success, however. With this mission over, Cipher Nine assists Kaliyo in dealing with those targeting her. First, they face Rholl (who turns out to be a Wookiee, whom they kill), then Yjal the arms dealer (whom they pay off), followed by Ta Tugal (who wants her back romantically, and whose heart must be broken to get him to back off). Finally, they track the Menace (the bounty hunter that is after Kaliyo) to Tatooine, who turns out to be Ona Querit, an old acquaintance of Kaliyo (and daughter of Senator Querit) whom she left on Ylesia. They talk her down from taking down Kaliyo. Later, Kaliyo tells the agent about her time with the Revolutionary Edge Brigade (the REB), an anarchist group on Brentaal.
Afterward, Lokin notes that Kaliyo seems to be acting different, and there have been suspicious transmissions from the ship. Shortly thereafter, Kaliyo intends to leave the team briefly to take care of “personal things.” Before she can leave, Lokin reveals that he has traced the transmissions to Wheezer, the leader of the REB, and Kaliyo is going there to help them escape authorities. Rather than scold Kaliyo, Cipher Nine agrees to go to Hutta with Kaliyo to meet with Wheezer. Wheezer tells Cipher Nine that Kaliyo has been feeding Imperial information to the REB ever since joining Imperial Intelligence. Now, he believes that Cipher Nine is a “gift” from Kaliyo to Wheezer, so that they can harvest her hands and eyes to help them get past biometric scans and such. With little choice, Kaliyo is forced to kill her old allies, including Wheezer, to protect Cipher Nine. Kaliyo claims that the information she sold never compromised their missions, but Cipher Nine is not happy. Despite the temporary distrust, Kaliyo agrees to stay with Cipher Nine’s team, offering to even train future recruits if necessary. Cipher Nine also takes time to train Raina Temple in various Intelligence techniques. While monitoring low-security Chiss transmissions, Raina finds a recording that the Chiss intercepted from Korriban that was left purposely so that Raina could find it. In it,
Lord Darrok notes that the Empire has learned the location of Raina’s father, a Cipher (formerly Cipher Three) who left the Empire after refusing a Sith Lord’s edicts and who hid Raina’s Force sensitivity from the Sith. It would appear that the Empire wants to capture her father to lead them to her, a Force sensitive that they could use for their own purposes.
Rather than trying to rescue her father, Raina intends to kill him to protect herself and due her duty to the Empire. She leaves and does indeed execute him so that the Sith could not get their hands on him. Meanwhile, Vector Hyllus finishes up his paperwork for his transfer from the diplomatic service. He reveals that tiny Killiks would appear to be carried with them inside their bodies as unharmful parasites. What they learn benefits the overall Hive, and they are curious about what happened to the Killiks who left Alderaan millennia ago. Due to species memory, Vector, as the Dawn Herald, can even remember the Great Migration itself. That reemerging memory provides a destination for Vector to seek out an early point in that migration. He goes on a pilgrimage to that location, returning later without finding actual lost Killik colonies. As he tells Cipher Nine about this, the holocomm station activates, bringing contact from Daizanna, an apparent Joiner from the lesei Killik nest. Having noticed Vector during his pilgrimage, Killiks followed him back to share knowledge with him. Cipher Nine joins Vector for a visit to the lesei nest for a celebration of that sharing of knowledge. Later, Vector intends to provide information about the Killiks to the Imperial Diplomatic Service in hopes of making an alliance between the “lost” Killiks and the Empire. His report, however, is ignored, but he receives a request for contact from a former colleague of Vector named Falner Oeth. Oeth sees the wisdom in Vector’s advice about an alliance, but he lacks the authority to press the issue. He needs Vector to help him one-up some of his rivals, so that he can gain influence that would let him push the Killik issue forward. Oeth’s first request for a favor is for whatever information they have on the worlds of the Questal Sector, where Vector was once assigned, which Oeth intends to bring into the Empire. Next, Vector must travel to convince former Republic governor of Ord Mantell Yoganerr Thenoth to cooperate with Oeth by turning Thenoth into a Killik Joiner. Vector convinces him to work with Oeth, but he does not turn Thenoth into a Joiner against his will. Oeth then provides details that suggest that the Empire does want to make an alliance with the Killiks now. Oeth, though, appears utterly disgusted by the Killiks. Vector is then contacted by Anora, his former lover and nearly his fiancée, who wants him to return to Dromund Kaas and find a way to undo his Joiner transformation. He does not wish to do so, content with being a Joiner. Vector goes through the Chrysalis of Tranquility, a Dawn Herald ritual that makes him stronger as a Joiner. Vector influences his contacts and is able to get the Empire’s Diplomatic Service to truly seek a treaty with the Killiks. The diplomats from both sides will meet at House Thul on Alderaan, with Vector as a primary Imperial negotiator. The summit takes place, but Oeth tries to sabotage the negotiations. When an explosion occurs, Daizanna dies while saving an ambassador from the blast. Oeth then speaks against allying themselves with such inhuman aliens. Fortunately, Vector is able to convince the Imperial delegation that the Killiks serving the greater good of the Colony is like the Imperial serving the greater good of its citizens, the Emperor, etc. The treaty is signed. Vector is given the chance to be the Dawn Herald of all Killik nests, but he instead stays with Cipher Nine and his crew. For his part, Doctor Lokin is in semi-retirement, supposedly in the Zetan Wastes studying radiation. He is, in fact, aboard Cipher Nine's ship and helping to refit its equipment into a state-of-the-art lab. He reveals that he has a dozen or so safehouses on various planets, and when one explodes after a series of alarms that he considers just random acts of local children and such, he heads to Balmorra to investigate what's left of the safehouse. Evidence at the scene suggests that someone in the Empire wants Lokin dead. He soon identifies one of the dead assassins as someone working for an officer with ties to the Imperial Science Bureau, Colonel Langor. (Given that he also notes that the price of dianogan tea — and how nasty does that sound? — has gone up since the Empire broke the Treaty of Coruscant, it is safe to say that the Cold War is over and the Great Galactic War has resumed.) Lokin figures out that the people after him are part of Project Protean, an "off the books" group within the Imperial Science Bureau that focuses on trying to gene splice between species to give soldiers enhanced abilities. With Lokin's research on Taris being similar, they might be trying to remove him as competition. He soon gains access to one of their databases and uses information found there to experiment more on himself and his rakghoul virus. He discovers that Project Protean arranged for Vector to be taken as a Joiner with the Killiks so that they could study the process his body went through. For the sake of both Lokin and Vector, Cipher Nine allows them to leave and investigate Project Protean at their secret facility on a planetoid in the Subterrel Sector. There, they learn that Project Protean was based on Lokin's own earlier experiments. Rather than destroying Project Protean, Lokin is given control of the laboratory, and the Killik experiments are stopped. Cipher Nine expects him to reform Project Protean to avoid using human test subjects. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Old Republic: Imperial Agent)*

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Bounty Hunter summary above.

- The Champion travels to the Spirit of Vengeance to speak with Mandalore the Vindicated. Before giving the Champion an important mission, he sends the Champion to a cavern on Dromund Kaas, where Mandalorian warriors intend to test themselves against twisted beasts inside. They go there, meeting Jogo the Carver (who does not want the Champion there), Torian Cadera (who is welcoming), and other Mandalorians. The Champion is to bring back the head of the sire of the creature brood, Akure, the Ghost in the Darkness, a massive bull rancor that seems to have been mutated by the Dark Side. The Champion faces the beast, killing it as requested by Mandalore. Upon returning to Mandalore (this time on Tarus), the Champion is introduced to the other remaining Grand Champions from previous Great Hunts (Bloodworthy, Jew'la Nightbringer, and the Defenestrator), so that he can induct the new Champion into their group, giving him access (which only the winners have) to bounties on the Blacklist. Mandalore must leave their group for the immediate future, and he needs a Mandalorian active in the group to keep the traditions of the Great Hunt and Blacklist alive. After killing Akure, the Champion is now a Mandalorian in spirit, if not in blood, so he can join the Mandalorians' great clan. Mandalore leaves to return to leading Mandalorians in battle for the Empire. The three Champions give the new Champion a "gift" of one of the oldest bounties on the Blacklist as his next target. In truth, this is another tradition. Every new Champion with access to the Blacklist is given this bounty, but only after putting in an ante, as in gambling. Whomever claims the bounty gets the stakes from all previous hunters, but after over a decade, no one has claimed it. (Bloodworthy himself was the last one to try, so he is the one to pass it to the Champion.) The bounty is Mandalorian exile Jicoln Cadera, located somewhere on Taris. To do this, he will need help, so he meets with Commander Vorten Fett at a Mandalorian base camp on Taris. As it turns out, Torian Cadera (the Mandalorian who welcomed him when hunting for Akure) is Jicoln's son, and he has just gone missing. (He was scouting a Republic colony and is presumed dead, but he may have been captured or something else entirely.) He blasts his way into the colony, questioning Captain Riss, who knows nothing about Torian. However, he has been guarding colonists for a few weeks, since Imperial dropships arrived and basically decimated the colony. They have been being harassed by snipers from an old excavation site nearby, which may be Mandalorians. The Champion searches the site, finding Torian. Torian reveals that he is also after Jicoln, so that he can kill his own father and reclaim his family’s honor. Torian aids the Champion and his allies, but instead of finding Jicoln, they find a holotransmitter and are contacted by him. Having made it through his traps, Jicoln claims the Champion is worthy of the Geroya be Haran, the Mandalorian death game. It has four parts: aili’jaate (personal honors), Ya’ime’suum (the homeworld), the Sterebiise (who defends the legacy), and the Naast (the destroyer of the legacy). Basically, Torian will be searching the swamp for personal items left for the “game” by Jicoln, then must find Jicoln’s home. Meanwhile, the Champion will seek out Jicoln for the challenge at the coordinates he provided. When the Champion arrives, Jicoln uses a sniper rifle to try to kill him, as he gathers the items that Torian located for him. The Champion then heads for the wreckage of the Endar Spire, which Torian has determined is Jicoln’s current home. While they hit the last personal item, Torian sets a trap for Jicoln at the Endar Spire. He is able to injure Jicoln, but Torian is injured as well. The Champion saves Torian with kolto, then they head out after Jicoln, whom they expect is now going to be raiding Imperial outposts for supplies (now that the Endar Spire supplies are destroyed). They find a blasted Imperial outpost and a makeshift camp Jicoln used. The Champion finally finds Jicoln and faces off with him. In a fierce battle, the Champion defeats Jicoln, allowing Torian to reclaim some family honor. Jicoln is frozen for transport back to Mandalore. The other Grand Champions are shocked but pay the winnings. Torian requests to join the Champion’s crew, and the Champion accepts. They receive an offer from Adascorp Director of Galactic Relations Peyton Swole on Quesh to negotiate for the Champion to be the new face of their products. It turns out that Swole, though, is actually Agent Dhal of the Republic Strategic Information Service, and he is there with Thendys Noori to arrest the Champion for the murder of Kellian Jarro and the destruction of the Aurora. The Champion escapes, but he must kill Dhal and Noori, while a Jedi Master is watching via holocomm. Their next Blacklist target contact person is Aristocra Shah’adrom’ilithyr (Hadro) of the Chiss Ascendancy. Their target is Trandoshan pirate lord Reneged Vause. Vause has been mostly operating in Chiss territory, but he is now with the White Maw on Hoth, which the Chiss are “allowing” the Empire to use for strategic purposes in exchange for help getting the White Maw off of Hoth, which is their territory at the moment. Upon traveling to Hoth to take Vause alive, they meet Warden Khel (Chiss jailer on the planet) and question his prisoner, a Jawa scavenger named Blizz. They find Vause with his hunting party, but Vause leaves with the party, claiming the Champion is not worth killing for the Scorekeeper. After questioning Blizz again, the Champion decides to take down other White Maw captains, starting with Ayor-v9, to become “worthy” of Vause to get the chance to fight him directly. The Champion gets materials from Slam Streever, an ally of Blizz, to get parts to let Blizz upgrade his blaster to output an ion blast powerful enough to knock out Ayor-v9’s deflector shield, which is starfighter-grade. They take down Ayor-v9, then go after Gradak Ungan, White Maw smelting boss, after acquiring a heat-resistor. He then gives that heat-resistor to one of the several Republic and Imperial prisoners held in the smelting base of Boss Gradak. The Champion is given a thermal shield in return that is strong enough to let him go after Gradak, and, in return, he makes sure the prisoners are freed. He takes down Gradak, who then disables all thermal shielding, but the Champion is able to get everyone out. Blizz then points them to Vause’s biggest rival, Ki-Ta Kren, a target Vause cannot ignore. The Champion finds the Byss native leading the reconstruction of a downed dreadnaught, joins him in the “blooding” (a bonding ritual) as a matter of honor, then defeats Ki-Ta Kren, finally getting Vause’s attention as a worthy opponent. They finally battle, but Vause tries to attack the Champion even after defeat, so the Champion is forced to kill him. Aristocra Hadro accepts this, and he allows for Blizz to be freed for the Champion, for a small portion of his bounty. Blizz joins the Champion’s crew. They are invited by the other Champions to a party on the Promenade on Nar Shaddaa to celebrate his success, but upon arrival, he finds Jewl’a, Bloodworthy, and the Defenestrator dead at the hands of Jedi Adeline Marr, who was hunting for the Champion on orders from the same Jedi Master who witnessed him kill Noori. A battle ensues, and yet another team sent after the Champion is toast. They return to the ship, only to find Supreme Chancellor Dorian Janarus making a broadcast that lays responsibility for various casualties in the last confrontations (and quite a few that had nothing to do with him) at the Champion’s feet. The Grand Champion bounty hunter becomes the galaxy’s most wanted fugitive. A ten million credit bounty also sets other bounty hunters against him. (To be continued below . . .)

(The Old Republic: Bounty Hunter)*

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Bounty Hunter summary above.

- After a brief leave, another mission begins for Havoc Squad. Havoc Leader is given the Bronze Crescent and promoted to the rank of Captain, and either Jorgan or Elara becomes his second-in-command. An SIS agent in the Imperial military has discovered that the Empire is working on a superweapon known as the Gauntlet (previously identified among the Sun Razer’s fellow superweapons by SIS agent Theron Shan), with unknown capabilities. They go to Tatooine to extract the SIS agent, Prellon Garn, with Jonas’ help again. Havoc Squad does so, saving him from among a downed Imperial shuttle crew. The Gauntlet is revealed to be a cannon that can fire upon ships while those ships are in hyperspace. They return with this information to Garza, who introduces Havoc Leader to Fleet Admiral Numinn of the Republic Navy’s 5th Assault Fleet and Supreme Commander Rans, head of the entire Republic Armed Forces. The Empire plans to mass produce Gauntlet superweapons. Havoc Squad will board the Gauntlet to sabotage it from the inside during a massive assault on the superweapon, but they need two more team members with specific traits. Havoc Squad is sent to Balmorra to recruit the first of these individuals, explosives expert Tanno Vik, a Weequay who was dishonorably discharged about a year ago. Upon arriving and looking for Tanno, they find that he has taken his security team and left his post with the mercenaries, claiming to be doing so after being hired for a top secret mission by the Republic. After helping with some damage caused by their desertion, they view an intercepted message from Tanno that puts his people in Sobrik, a city under Imperial control. Havoc Squad goes there and seeks the aid of local Republic officer Major Triam. Apparently, Tanno and his men were asked by Triam to take out Imperial jammers to let Republic probe droids spy on Imperial forces, but he took the explosives and never carried out the job. Havoc Squad completes the job in his place, allowing probe droids to spot an explosive entry into the local Imperial base in Sobrik, which must be Tanno’s work. They enter the facility, take out the last of Tanno’s men left behind, then contact Tanno. Tanno is not sure about their offer of a position in Havoc Squad, but he invites them to help complete his current mission, which involves their recent kidnapping of a local VIP who has sold out to the Imperials, Brel Orus. They help strike an Imperial target that Orus indicated, but when they try to unite with Tanno Vik, he is already gone, apparently betrayed by Orus to the Empire. They rescue him, recruiting him into Havoc Squad. He reveals that the vault he blasted open was full of prototype weapons made by Balmorran companies that Orus had intended to sell for profit. Havoc Leader has them handed over to the Balmorran resistance, given that they were developed by Balmorrans.

They are then sent to Quesh to meet with Major Donovan to help save a group of Republic Safecrackers that are needed for the operation against the Gauntlet. Havoc Squad saves the Safecrackers, then is sent to Hoth to seek their last specialist, technical specialist Sergeant Yuun, a Gand. At the moment, he is on Hoth scouring Imperial wreckage to find parts to rebuild an Umbra encrypter that is used for secure Imperial military transmissions. They meet with Yuun and his team, who need to hit the Crescent Canyon Facility nearby that was built by Ortolan colonists but conquered by the Empire. Havoc Squad breaks in, gathers information that indicates the locations of the most likely crash sites to find Umbra encrypter components, then regroups with Yuun, only to find that Imperial Major Artano, working for Imperial General Rakton, is on to them and placing more security at crash sites. Artano himself is on his way to Hoth as well. Havoc Squad hits other Imperial targets as a distraction for Yuun to get some parts, but then pirates steal an Umbra component from one of the sites, killing some of Yuun’s men under Corporal Sajin in the process. A recovered recording indicates that pirate Zareen has ordered the gathering of the Umbra parts at the Star of Coruscant, a crashed Republic superdreadnaught. Havoc Squad infiltrates the crash site, confronts Zareen, then offers to buy the component. When Major Artano arrives to get the component, Havoc Squad is forced to kill his team before completing their deal with Zareen.
for the final component. Yuun completes the Umbra encrypter, then Havoc Leader takes it to Republic Colonel Fierros, Yuun’s commander. Yuun is then free to join Havoc Squad. They are ready for the major operation against the Gauntlet. They take warships in short hyperspace jumps to stay below the necessary time for the Gauntlet to lock onto approaching vessels in hyperspace. The Safecrackers then take down the shield being generated from the nearest planet that protects the Gauntlet, allowing Havoc Squad to board the superweapon. Yuun helps them bypass security measures, while Tanno Vik provides demolitions expertise, even as two other members of the squad assault the bridge and steal data from the ship’s central computer system. The mission is a success, and the Gauntlet is utterly destroyed. In the aftermath of the assault, Havoc Leader is promoted to the rank of Major and receives the Silver Crescent. Arik Jorgan receives the Mark of Dedication in recognition of wounds received during the battle. Imperial Ministry of War officer and military mastermind General Rakton, however, contacts the Republic with further threats. He claims that the Gauntlet would have kept the peace by making any strikes against the Empire impossible, but now he intends on a full-scale war again to vanquish the Republic. The “cold war” is over. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Old Republic: Republic Trooper)*

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Republic Trooper summary above.

- The smuggler and Risha Drayen are contacted by Darmas Pollaran who wants to meet them at Port Nowhere. Risha is concerned about the “Voidwolf,” Grand Admiral Harridax Kirill, a former slaver and “scourge of the Outer Rim,” who intends to take control of the underworld to hand it over to the Empire. At Port Nowhere, they are met by Quarris, who presents the smuggler with a message from Rogun the Butcher. After beating their way through Quarris and others enticed by a 100,000 credit bounty put on his head by Rogun, the smuggler and his companion(s) meet with Pollaran, who is joined by Senator Bevera Dodonna (once she is freed from having been kidnapped). She is trying to make use of criminal elements to help the Republic, but Rogun has been working with Kirill and the Imperials, hence wanting to stop Dodonna’s efforts. The smuggler could have a commission as a privateer naval captain through the Galactic Senate if he helps bring down Republic enemies, which would also mean having his own criminal acts mostly ignored. They are forced to evacuate Port Nowhere when Imperials attack. Fortunately, they are not captured, and the smuggler then heads for Balmorra. The Empire is now in control of the Republic’s old Project Nebula from the planet, which includes new munitions and ships that the Empire is now sending to the front lines. Dodonna (via Pollaran) wants the smuggler to work with the Balmorran resistance to intercept a shipment from Project Nebula to bring it to the Republic at Palliser Station, near Corellia. They work with Numen Brock and his droid, Sixer, in Bugtown, along with information from an SIS double agent codenamed “Golden.” He hits various dead drops to flush out tails, then hits the Okara Droid Factory, leaving payment for Golden in return for a file left for him. Once there, our heroes are stopped by Imperials, but the Mandalorian Akaavi Spar, supposedly on the Imperials’ side, turns on them and aids the smuggler. She wants help getting access to Imperial Moff Tyrak of the 63rd Armored Infantry Division. In return for getting to him, she will provide the Republic with all she knows about the Empire. She leaves them, and the smuggler returns to Sixer, only to find Numen has been captured by Imperials to be taken to Camp Vigil (a prison camp Numen was planning to break other prisoners out of). The smuggler delivers contraband to a prison guard on Numen’s behalf, then uses the idea that Numen could give up his customers’ names to the Empire as leverage to be allowed into the area. Once inside, he runs into Akaavi Spar again. They work together at two terminals to open the prison doors. Once inside, they try to free Akaavi’s clan brother, but they find that he has already been executed, making Akaavi the last of her clan. They race to free Numen before Akaavi can take her revenge by destroying the entire prison with explosives. They free all of the prisoners and escape just in time. The Empire is so distraught over the fall of Camp Vigil that they begin plans to bring back the Voidwolf. While the Imperials try to take back Sobrik and Camp Vigil, the base where the Nebula materials are being sent is guarded only by war droids. They get to the location, where they find Moff Tyrak, who is a double agent for the Republic. He wants them to get him away from Balmorra, but he doesn’t have the shipment, just information on where it really is. They get to the controls for the droid tugs carrying the weapons and reprogram their destinations, securing the weapons for the Republic. Unfortunately, the Imperials find Tyrak, who then betrays the smuggler to the Imperials. In the firefight that ensues, Akaavi, who has been following them, saves them. She wants Tyrak for having most of her clan executed as traitors five years earlier. It was actually his assistant. He just signed any execution order that crossed his desk. Realizing that he is not the sadist she expected, she allows him to live and then joins the smuggler’s crew. Tyrak will go to the Republic with all of the information he knows. Balmorra remains in Imperial hands, but this mission is over. The smuggler soon travels to Quesh, which is under an Imperial invasion, where he saves Captain Ozzik and his group of privateers from assaults by the Voidwolf. In doing so, they find that Beryl Thorne is now working with Ozzik. To leave Quesh, they take down the sensor processors at a Planetary Sensor Station and confront the Voidwolf via holocomm, but the Grand Admiral has little respect for the smuggler. After the smuggler and Beryl briefly “hook up,” it is off to Hoth, the next target for Dodonna. The Republic needs technology from the fleet that was decimated over Hoth and crashed there, and the Imperials want it too. However, the White Maw organization currently controls Hoth’s airspace with its cloaking technology. On the surface, they meet Mon Calamari Jedi advisor Languss “Guss” Tuno. Their contact, Major Panin, is already dead, as is Padawan Geana. To infiltrate the White Maw, Tuno has the smuggler “steal” components from the Republic that the White Maw wants. When they arrive to steal the components, though, they learn that Tuno isn’t really a Jedi. He is a failed Padawan who was expelled from the Jedi Order. He is now a con man who joined the White Maw under Rogun’s control. Tenna then sent him for the sensors that he got the smuggler to steal for him. Rather than just killing Tuno, the smuggler lets him set up a meet with Shai Tenna. To let the smuggler into the White Maw, which is run by Gen’Dai, Tenna wants the smuggler to help take down his rival, the Devaronian Kandhar. Alilia, Tenna’s slave and consort, reveals to the smuggler that Kandhar was given the cold-weather equipment that has him on the rise by the Empire. Kandhar intends to get the White Maw into working for the Empire in return for the Empire’s help in ousting the Gen’Dai White Maw overlords. At her suggestion, the smuggler eavesdrops on a meeting between Kandhar and the Voidwolf’s emissaries. He crashes the meeting, turning Kandhar’s men against him when they realize Kandhar is about to sell them all out to the Empire. Tenna brings the smuggler into the White Maw, technically, then betrays him, knocking him out and leaving him to wampas. Fortunately, the smuggler defeats the wampas, then reunites with Tuno, who has discovered that Tenna is actually working for Rogun, intending to bring the White Maw under Rogun’s control. Tenna and his men are now attacking other White Maw members. With this distraction, Tuno points the smuggler to the underground base where the White Maw has the cloaker that has been allowing them to foil Republic sensors. There, they clash with goons loyal to Tenna, only to find that Rogun is sending goons specifically to kill the smuggler. After the goons are killed, Tuno reveals that he really works for Rogun. He was sent to Hoth to kill the smuggler, but the smuggler’s actions (including promising asylum to Alilia) have changed the former Padawan’s opinion. Tuno points them to the real location of the cloaker at a crashed Republic ship. They find Alilia with the “cloaker,” a Kitonak named Trick, who seems to be using the Force through his brain-damaged mind to hide the White Maw fleet the way he hides himself when afraid. Alilia has been taking care of him, even though the White Maw has been torturing Trick to make him afraid and cloak their ships. Tenna arrives to confront them, even as she expresses her desire to leave with the smuggler. A battle ignites, during which the smuggler kills Tenna, freeing Alilia and Tenna’s other goons, who claim allegiance to Alilia. She takes Trick to the Republic base, and the others are freed to become freelancers. The smuggler is contacted by Lt. Kollis, to whom Alilia takes Trick, who is taking over for the dead Panin. They intend to send Trick to the Jedi for healing. Tuno joins the smuggler’s crew, giving him potential information on Rogun the Butcher. Dodonna is happy (and flirtatious) about the end of the mission. Pollaran and the smuggler meet again at Port Nowhere, where the smuggler is introduced to starship pirate Vaz Traniff, who has been hitting ships owned by Rogan. However, his partner, Combo, was captured by the Hutt Cartel while planning to strike at the Imperial treasury ship King’s Ransom over Nar Shaddaa. Vaz’s deal: if the smuggler helps free Combo and carries out the heist with them, they can split the profits in half. Rogan wants him too, and has sent Strith to buy him from Raskurro the Hutt. The smuggler and Vaz kill Strith, rescuing Combo and allowing Raskurro to escape. They meet Dodonna at a secret Republic shuttle pad, then use a stolen Imperial shuttle to get aboard the King’s Ransom. Combo cracks their codes, and the team robs the Imperials blind. When the smuggler runs into a trio of Moths, they call for help from the Voidwolf, but he notes that the Empire and Republic have now entered open hostilities again. For his own reasons, the Voidwolf destroys the ship (and its crew), leaving our heroes to escape with some credits but not nearly as much as they had intended to steal. The smuggler returns to Dodonna and must save her from Rogun’s goons that have arrived looking for him. His goons have strange creatures with them, however. Dodonna finally considers Rogun a major threat, especially since he works with the Voidwolf. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Old Republic: Smuggler)*

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Smuggler summary above.

- With the death of Darth Zash, Darth Thanaton contacts the new Lord Kallig, intending for him to continue Zash’s official work. They meet at the tomb of Darth Andru outside of Kaas City, where Lord Kallig is tasked with proving himself by claiming the last writings of Andru, which were buried with him. The spirit of Darth Andru confronts him, believing him (wrongly) to be Andru’s own son, who, along with his daughter, killed him with poison. He is nearly defeated by Andru’s spirit, but the ancient Lord Aloysius Kallig’s spirit returns and stops Andru’s spirit, for now. The ancient Lord Kallig informs the new Lord Kallig that this tomb is where Thanaton sends those he wants to see destroyed, so the living Lord should begin plotting to destroy Thanaton instead. The spirit believes that his descendant has a special affinity for ghosts, which could grant him power. The spirit points him back to the Dark Temple, where he can find the tomb of a Sith named Ergast, who, in ancient times, had learned how to devour ghosts in the way Dashade devour Force users. He goes to Ergast’s burial site in the Dark Temple and encounters Ergast’s ghostly Servant, the gatekeeper of his knowledge. To learn how to bind ghosts to himself and use their power temporarily, Lord Kallig must learn how to bind the forces of both life and death through what is known as a “Force walk.” To begin this ritual, he drinks a non-lethal poison at the Servant’s command. Once unconscious, he is led by the Servant in a sort of dreamscape. He is taught how to pacify a ghost, the first step necessary to tether it, since an angry spirit cannot be tethered. He is then taught how to bind a ghost, which is easier if the ghost is willing but also less powerful by virtue of allowing the ghost to keep a portion of its free will. Finally, the Servant (actually, it seems, the spirit of Ergast himself) requires that Kallig forcibly bind him, so that he can travel with Kallig for a time, seeing the Sith Empire once more. (If he fails in the binding, Kallig will die.) He succeeds, drawing the ghost’s power into himself for a time. With this knowledge and power, Kallig returns to the spirit of Darth Andru and uses his Force walking ability to forcibly bind Andru to himself as well. With this combined power and Andru’s writings, he returns to Thanaton, now able, in theory, to protect himself from Thanaton. Thanaton is glad to have the writings, but he still intends to kill Kallig due to him having been part of Zash’s power base that must be destroyed for her moves against Skotia (whom Thanaton favored). The two do battle, and the ghosts’ power helps Kallig for a time. In the end, though, he falls before Thanaton. When Thanaton leaves, ordering a servant to dispose of Kallig, the servant is himself killed by Kaal, who has arrived with Corrin. The two revive their unconscious Lord and get him away from Thanaton’s quarters, back to his ship. Aboard the ship, Zash (inside Khem Val) is shocked to see him alive, and she (he?) realizes that the bond between Kallig and the spirits inside him were what saved him. Only by destroying both spirits could Thanaton have made Kallig truly vulnerable to final death. They decide that Kallig must bind more spirits in order to grow strong enough to take down Thanaton. They head for Taris, where Zash had sent an agent (Elios Maliss) before her “change” (into part of Khem Val), in hopes of making use of Jedi research there into a ghost on Taris. (By the time they arrive, Khem Val has beaten Zash’s mind back into submission within him.) Once on Taris, Elios suggests that Kallig manipulate a Jedi Padawan, Ashara Zavros, into helping him gain access to the ghost, who is most often seen where he first appeared — the Jedi-guarded former Jedi Enclave. Elios even suggests that Ashara could be drawn into becoming Kallig’s own Sith Apprentice. Kallig visits old Jedi training grounds, now abandoned, to find information in data recorders that include recordings of Ashara with her Jedi Master, Ryen. She definitely has pride and insecurity issues, which makes her a good target. To draw her out, Kallig goes after Lord Anathemos of the assassins’ pyramid, who is on Taris to seek out a holocron. He recovers the holocron first and strikes a deal with Anathemos: in return for the holocron, Anathemos’ assassins will set a trap for Ashara. He does so, and then Kallig leaps in to “save” her. It works, and the assassins are killed (which isn’t quite what Anathemos bargained for). He then hits Ashara a few times with Force lightning, until she relents and agrees to help him get into the Jedi Enclave to seek the ghost. Instead, though, she leads him to Ryen and other Jedi, who attack. Kallig kills them, though, and Ashara must follow through with her agreement to summon the Jedi spirit, her ancestor Kalatosh Zavros. Elios arrives and attacks, having struck a deal with Darth Thanaton: he is made a Lord, and he collects the spirit for Thanaton, which means killing Kallig to get it. Kallig kills Elios, but the spirit is enraged. He intends to kill Ashara for summoning him after he told her to never do so again. About to be killed by the spirit, Ashara agrees to become Kallig’s Apprentice, as long as he protects her. Kallig calls upon the power of his own bound spirits, pacifies Kalatosh’s spirit, and then forcibly binds him, as planned. With little hope of returning to the Jedi after having led Kallig to the Jedi Masters he has just killed, Ashara sticks to her word and joins him. Kallig is contacted by Kaal, who, along with Corrin, was approached by Thanaton, who claimed that Kallig was dead (as he believes). Rather than joining him, the two apprentices stole the key to Thanaton’s private meditation chambers from him to help Kallig, then escaped. Now, though, their ship is under attack and must make an emergency landing on Quesh. They are pursued by Lord Cineratus (AKA Jevan). Kallig arrives too late to save them, but he is able to exact revenge by killing Cineratus. Kallig is able to reclaim the key that his apprentices stole, at least. Based on a suggestion from Zash’s spirit inside Khem, Kallig returns to Korriban to replace his dead apprentices by finding a new one from a new group of acolytes that is being trained by Overseer Harkun. The group includes the Twilek Seferiss, the Gran Argog, the human Jaxun, and the Kaleeesh Xivhkalrainik AKA “Kalek” (who has already killed two others from the group). He leaves word to be informed of the acolytes’ progress. Based on rumors Andronikos reports, they head to Hoth to investigate tales of more ghosts. They seek out the smuggling vessel Starrunner, which crashed on Hoth under mysterious circumstances a year earlier, while carrying artifacts from Yavin IV. Imperial Sergeant Loren directs him to Lieutenant Talos Drellik and his reclamation team for assistance. Drellik, who is looking for a Sith Temple on Hoth, suggests that they seek out a distress beacon from the Starrunner. He finds it (with help from Engineer Sorrel, one of Drellik’s men, and Shalora, one of their droids), which reveals a recording from Captain Quellon, who reports that something took control of the ship, and that the ship should be burned if found. Tracks nearby suggest that Ortolans found something with the beacon. He tracks them down, and it appears that the chief Ortolan is possessed by the spirit of Ludo Kressh’s right hand man, Horak-Mul. This was the spirit that brought down the Starrunner. The spirit is willing to join Kallig, but only if he seeks out the Sith Temple on Hoth, which is the burial site of Naga Sadow’s team of assassins the Sadow’een, the very ones who killed Horak-Mul so long ago. He wants the tomb desecrated. With Drellik’s help, Kallig reaches the Sith Temple (or at least the catacombs that are left of it), defeats its traps, and destroys what is left of the tomb. Horak-Mul arrives, inhabiting a droid. He reveals to Kallig that the Starrunner (where his body can be found and the binding can occur) is inside the hold of the Star of Coruscant, hidden there by Horak-Mul’s spirit after its crew was killed. Kallig fights his way through White Maw pirates to reach the Star of Coruscant and Starrunner. Without a promise to be released when Kallig’s enemies are defeated, the spirit is reluctant to be bound to the Sith Lord, forcing a confrontation, in which the spirit is forcibly bound to Kallig. He now holds the spirits of four other Sith Lords within himself. As for Drellik, he resigns from the Imperial Reclamation Service and joins Lord Kallig’s own team, raising the number of his companions to four (or six, if you count his ship’s droid custodian and the spirit of Zash inside Khem). Lord Kallig returns to Dromund Kaas to face Thanaton with his new powers. In a fierce battle between Kallig and Thanaton (with apprentice Rolan), Rolan is killed and Thanaton is injured, but escapes when the spirits bound to Kallig turn against him. It seems that Ergast failed to warn him to never bind more than one spirit to himself at a time. It overloads his body, nearly killing him. His companions find and revive him, but Kallig is definitely dying from what is happening inside his body with so many spirits within. They must find a way to save him. (To be continued below . . . )*

(The Old Republic: Sith Inquisitor)*

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Sith Inquisitor summary above.

- When the Colicoids decide to stop selling to both sides in the resumed Great Galactic War, they set up an advanced war game on a remote asteroid in the Outer Rim, offering the Republic and the Sith Empire the chance to compete to earn exclusive rights to Colicoid sales. Both sides send teams to compete in these war games.

(The Old Republic: Colicoid War Game)*

*NOTE: This is a “flashpoint” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters of any class or affiliation (Smuggler, Jedi Consular, Jedi Knight, Republic Trooper, Imperial Agent, Sith Warrior, Sith Inquisitor, and Bounty Hunter, with their respective companions) around Level 41 in character progression. Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (not even from a particular affiliation), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations.

- Seven years ago, Darth Ikoral left on his quest to find more Sith Purebloods like himself, believing them genetically superior. He had not been heard from since, until now. Darth Ikoral returns to the galaxy with an army of mad Sith on a mission to “purify” the galaxy of any who are not Sith Purebloods. He attacks an Imperial fortress on the galaxy’s edge that is under the command of Darth Senu, then sets his sights on the Republic planet Chandria. The Republic sends an elite force to defeat him, even as the Sith Empire sends its own force to the planet, seeking retribution for Ikoral’s betrayal of the Empire. Both sides go after Ikoral aboard his ship, the Red Reaper. One by one, Ikoral’s lieutenants like Lord Kherus fall, before Ikoral is confronted in his meditation chamber. In a fierce battle (with whom is in question), Darth Ikoral and his Chosen are defeated.

(The Old Republic: The Red Reaper)*

*NOTE: This is a “flashpoint” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters of any class or affiliation (Smuggler, Jedi Consular, Jedi Knight, Republic Trooper, Imperial Agent, Sith Warrior, Sith Inquisitor, and Bounty Hunter, with their respective companions) around Level 45 in character progression. Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (not even from a particular affiliation), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations.

- A group of rebellious droids calling themselves “Directive 7” emerge and begin a quest to exterminate all biological life in the galaxy. They intend to send out a signal to all droids in the galaxy to turn them to their cause. However, a traitor among Directive 7 informs the Republic and Imperial militaries of this plot, and both governments send a force of elite warriors to take down Directive 7 before it can achieve its aims. However, they find that Mentor, the leader of Directive 7, is not just in a droid body (which is destroyed) but within all of the systems of Directive 7’s base on the moon of Zadd. Fortunately, C5-M3, the traitor, informs one of the factions of the location of the core of Mentor’s programming, so that it can be destroyed. After fighting legions of droids, one of the groups reaches the core and destroys Mentor before the liberation signal can be sent. The entire facility is destroyed.

(The Old Republic: Directive 7)*

*NOTE: This is a “flashpoint” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters of any class or affiliation (Smuggler, Jedi Consular, Jedi Knight, Republic Trooper, Imperial Agent, Sith Warrior, Sith Inquisitor, and Bounty Hunter, with their respective companions) around Level 48 in character progression. Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (not even from a particular affiliation), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations.

- With Lord Draahg already deployed, the next task for Darth Baras falls to the Sith Lord. There is a Republic plot on Quesh that might swing the world to its side. The Sith Lord travels back to Quesh, where he meets with Commander Ollien, who informs him that the Republic has found a series of tunnels that reach beneath the Imperial base, into which the Republic has placed explosives, intending to destroy the base and thereby disrupt Imperial operations on Quesh. The Sith Lord investigates the caverns, where Republic Captain Trey-yen and Colonel Anders are ready to blow themselves up if need be. Unfortunately for them, the explosives do not respond to Trey-yen’s detonator, and he simply kills them and their men. The Sith Lord is then contacted by Draahg, who reveals that this was an elaborate trap for him, set by Draahg on Baras’ behalf (to wipe out Baras’ apprentice before he can become a future rival). The explosives had been provided by one of Baras’ agents, and Draahg himself has kept the real detonator control switch. The explosives are set off. The Sith Lord is found, barely conscious, by two Sith, who leave him to fully awaken and come to them. When he finally does so, he is deemed worthy by Servant One and Servant Two (as they are called) to become an agent of the Sith Emperor known as the Emperor’s Wrath. (The position was formerly held by Lord Scourge until recently.) The two Servants identify themselves, collectively, as the Emperor’s Hand. The Emperor himself, it seems, wants Baras stopped in his ascent. The Emperor, though, seems to have withdrawn from the galaxy at large, sending his spirit into a host body known as the Voice of the Emperor, so that he can protect himself from assassination attempts like that carried out by Revan and Meetra Surik. That Voice seems to have been silent for so long that some on the Dark Council are growing nervous.

Now Baras is claiming that he is the Voice of the Emperor. If he can convince the Dark Council to agree to this claim, then he will have the supreme power in the Sith Empire. To dismantle Baras’ plans, the Emperor’s Hands first send the new Emperor’s Wrath to Belsavis. Servant Two discovered the truth behind the Republic’s prison on Belsavis, and that information was leaked. Now, Darth Baras knows that his own sister, Darth Ekkage, is alive and imprisoned on Belsavis. She is a member of the Dark Council and leader of Sith infiltrators. Her return will bolster Baras’ power play, and the Wrath must keep Ekkage from escaping. He arrives and speaks with Imperial Colonel Trill, who explains that Lord Melicoste is on his way to free Ekkage. Captain Oklart further provides information about Melicoste’s men, including Lieutenant Kaid, the leader of the commandos that Melicoste brought with him into the prison. For providing more information than allowed by their orders from Baras and Melicoste, Trill intends to turn Oklart in for treason, but the Wrath kills her before she can do so. The Wrath strikes at Kaid’s command center, interrogating him to determine the location of Lord Melicoste. Melicoste is on his way to where he can salvage records from the invaded Republic prison to determine Ekkage’s location. Jedi Master Somminick Timmns (former Padawan of Jedi Master Nomen Karr) confronts him as he tries to enter a computer room. He reveals that the Jedi Council has been keeping track of the Wrath ever since he killed Karr and took Jaesa with him. Timmns is also seeking the information in the computers that would lead to Ekkage. He has found it, but he is trapped inside the room, thanks to Melicoste’s commandos, and the Wrath is stuck outside its fused door. If the Wrath can take down the power stations for a failsafe force field that would activate if they blasted the door with the Force together to open it, they can then combine their efforts against the door to open it. The Wrath does so, cooperating with the Jedi Master for now. They then strike the door with the Force, opening it. The Wrath then finds, however, that Timmns has destroyed the computers inside, so that only he knows where to find Melicoste and Ekkage. Timmns forces the Wrath into a partnership against Melicoste, since neither of them wants Ekkage freed. While Timmns opens the Deep Prison, the Wrath must take down assassins loyal to Ekkage that are also locked up in the prison. He kills them all, but while Timmns does find a route into the Deep Prison, it collapses behind him. The Wrath takes the long way around, finally reaching their rendezvous point, where he finds only Timmns’ datapad with a message stating that Melicoste’s men were on their way. Timmns has left to head them off, but Melicoste has gotten to Ekkage’s cell already. Timmns also provides the cell number for Ekkage and says he will join the Wrath if able. Finally reaching cell 77-Z, the Wrath arrives as Melicoste frees Ekkage from the field that was holding her. Ekkage senses that her assassins, freed by Melicoste’s men, have been killed, and she vents her frustrations by frying Melicoste with Force lightning. The Wrath emerges to confront her, even as Timmns finally arrives. Together, the Emperor’s Wrath and Jedi Master Timmns battle Darth Ekkage, defeating her. The Wrath kills her by snapping her neck, much to Timmns frustration. The Wrath then turns on Timmns, striking him down as well. Next, the Emperor’s Hand sends the Emperor’s Wrath to stop a plot by Baras against a Dark Council member who opposes naming him “Voice of the Emperor,” Darth Vowrawn. Vowrawn is currently spearheading the Empire’s efforts on Corellia, but Baras is secretly undermining his efforts to cause his failure or death. If Vowrawn is removed from play, others opposing Baras will falter in their unity. They inform the Wrath that the Empire’s Armageddon Battalion was to be sent to assist on Corellia, but Baras had it redirected to Hoth, where its strength is wasted. The Emperor’s Wrath and his team are sent to Hoth (again) to find the Armageddon Battalion’s leader, General Greist (with whom Pierce once served), to convince him to abandon Baras’ orders and go to Corellia as originally planned. Fortunately, Commander (formerly Ensign) Slinte on Hoth might be able to provide Greist’s location. He does so, believing that the Wrath is still working for Darth Baras, and the Wrath finds Armageddon Battalion. When General Geist questions the Wrath’s authority in overriding orders directly from Darth Baras, the Wrath simply kills Geist, and Geist’s second-in-command (now his replacement), Captain Phenter, obeys those orders. While preparing to leave, the Wrath is met by Lord Draahg, who claims that Baras held back in training the Wrath, and that he has not only learned more from Baras but also secrets from Vengean that even Baras does not know. The two duel, and it seems that Draahg simply stands up again every time he is defeated, ready to fight yet again. The Wrath finally sends Draahg falling into flames to either burn to death or simply burn . . . and burn . . . and burn . . . and burn. The Wrath is contacted again by the Emperor’s Hand, who reveal that Baras now knows that the Wrath is alive. However, they can confirm that Armageddon Battalion have gone to Corellia to back up Darth Vorwrawn, as intended. To frustrate Baras’ efforts again, the Emperor’s Wrath is sent to the neutral world of Voss. Upon arriving at the space station above Voss, the Wrath is instructed to contact the Sith Lord who is trying to woo the Voss to the Empire’s side, Darth Serevin, who believes the Wrath is there to assist in his efforts. The Emperor’s Hand also reveals that the original assault on Voss that was turned back years ago was not a simple invasion but the Emperor’s successful attempt to secure a Voss native to be the vessel for his spirit and will – the true Voice of the Emperor, who even now lives on Voss. The true Voice is on a mission to seek the source of a Dark Side presence on Voss, and he has not been heard from in some time. Servant Two can sense that the Voice is alive, but something is muffling the Voice’s ability to reach out in the Force. The Voice’s last known contact was with a Voss hermit named Madaga-Ru. Upon finding the hermit, the Wrath is sent to the Dark Heart Chamber in the Nightmare Lands, where the Voice has gone. The Wrath seeks out Fadith-Ki to complete several Voss trials, then is sent to the Shrine of Healing, where he completes the Blessing of Oneness with the help of Vana-Xo. He can now see the way into the Dark Heart, though he needs the Pendant of Bone from Voss commando Biddeck-Va, who is at war with the Gormak right now, to get inside. Rather than waiting for Biddeck-Va to finish wiping out the Gormak chiefs, so that he will return and meet with the Wrath, he simply takes down the chiefs himself to draw out a grateful Biddeck-Va. He then kills the Gormak warmaster to meet Biddeck-Va’s price for the Pendant of Bone. With the Pendant and Blessing of Oneness, the astral projection of Madaga-Ru requests to enter the Wrath’s body to control him briefly, in return for a future favor. He does so, and the Wrath has no knowledge of how he was used. The Wrath is then told to seek Murbek Gehn (a Sith) in the Nightmare Lands to be pointed to the entrance to the Dark Heart. Finally reaching the Dark Heart’s deepest chamber, he uses the Pendant to open it, but the voice of Sel-Makor, a Dark Side entity at the heart of Voss, threatens death to trespassers. Inside, the Wrath finds the true Voice of the Emperor. It appears that Baras maneuvered the Voice toward Sel-Makor on Voss (with hints of great power there, perhaps), and now Sel-Makor has gained enough control over the Voice that the Voice cannot leave the Dark Heart or reach beyond it in the Force. The Voice could escape if this body were to die, but Sel-Makor will not let him commit suicide. Sel-Makor uses its influence on the Voice’s Voss body to take control of it, forcing the Wrath to battle him, until the Wrath finally delivers a fatal blow, as the Voice has instructed. With the death of the Voice’s body, the spirit of the Emperor is released to seek a new body, and his spirit is able to communicate through the Force to the Emperor’s Hand. Madaga-Ru’s avatar then again appears to the Wrath, stating that he has become this spiritual being in order to battle Sel-Makor, and he hopes to one day aid in the destruction of Sel-Makor itself. He provides a final warning to the Wrath, that one of his own will betray him. The Emperor’s Hand sends the Wrath to stop assassins from killing Vorwrawn on Corellia, where the war effort is shifting in his favor. However, martial law has been declared and an Imperial blockade exists over Corellia, thanks to Darth Baras. They need a signal-emitter with the proper clearances, or they will be unable to reach Corellia. They attack a vessel that Quinn has noted nearby, which has the correct codes. Upon arriving aboard that ship, though, it turns out to be a trap. There is no martial law, blockade, or special codes. Quinn has lured the Wrath to the vessel on orders from Darth Baras, his true master. (Yup, one of the Wrath’s own has betrayed him.) Quinn sets war droids against the Wrath, based on the Wrath’s observed weaknesses. The Wrath destroys the droids, then nearly kills Quinn. By showing mercy that Baras’ would not, the Wrath earns Quinn’s true allegiance against Darth Baras. With this detour dealt with, they arrive on Corellia and head after the first trio of assassins that have been detected going after Vowrawn. While en route, Baras contacts the Wrath to claim that the Emperor’s Hand that he has met are not the real Emperor’s Hand and that Baras is truly the Voice of the Emperor. Whether he truly believes this or not, Baras must be stopped, so the Wrath continues on to Corellia. He takes out a droid assassin, then a Republic Strategic Information Systems assassin (actually a Sith spy). He is then pointed (by a comm from Servant Eleven of the Hand) to Vowrawn’s secret base (a fake corporate headquarters for a Republic-aligned company) behind Republic lines. Lord Haresh, apprentice to Vowrawn, confronts the Wrath inside, believing that the Wrath is still an agent of Baras, sent to kill Vowrawn. He is forced to take down Haresh, then is confronted by three more Sith Lords, led by Lord Qet. Darth Vowrawn emerges, however, and orders them to stand down, knowing that the trio could not stop the Wrath. Even Vowrawn believes that Baras has sent the Wrath to kill him. Even as the Wrath reveals the truth, a bounty hunter (the third assassin) strikes at Vowrawn. The Wrath saves him, earning his trust. Vowrawn reveals that he is on Corellia not just to lead the war effort but also to bring down several pillars of Baras’ power base that are on Corellia. Vowrawn reveals that there are two individuals whom Baras is using to maintain pressure on the rest of the Dark Council in his bid to be named “Voice of the Emperor.” One is a keeper of secrets (i.e. blackmail), while the other leads Jedi Masters against Sith that defy Baras. The blackmail-keeper is posing as Colonel Senks of the Corellian resistance, who resides in a labyrinth of escape tunnels. Fortunately, Vowrawn provides a device to scramble his secret exit codes to keep Senks trapped. Vowrawn goes into brief “hiding” aboard the Wrath’s ship with his team. The Wrath uses the device to gain access to Senks, who is cornered before he can figure out why his escape routes are not working. He kills Senks, then wipes out the computer with the blackmail files. Meanwhile, an operative of Vowrawn, Shadow, has been seeking Baras’ Jedi agent. The Wrath crosses Axial Park to reach a safehouse where Shadow is waiting to provide intel on the agent. After taking out Republic artillery to get across the park, he reaches Shadow, who reveals that Baras’ Jedi agent is leading a team that has secretly come to Corellia, but he does not know which Jedi is the agent. The Wrath catches up with the team, taking down Jedi Master Rubatin’s team, including Baras’ spy, Jedi Master Injaye. In battle, he kills them all, including Baras’ spy, who dies still believing that Baras is the Voice of the Emperor. Before the victory can be savored, however, word arrives from Shadow and Pierce that their ship has been attacked. Pierce and the others are taking Vowrawn to the safety of an Imperial Legislature safe house. Upon reuniting with Vowrawn and the team, the Wrath learns that Baras’ most secret source of power is an ancient Sith spirit that he has bound and imprisoned on Corellia, from whom he draws upon visions of the future to craft his plots. Vowrawn considers the spirit to be an embodiment of the Dark Side itself, so to speak, so he wants it freed, rather than destroyed. They seek out the Entity, who claims to have been bound while waiting for her “love,” the Emperor. Shockingly, they are met in the Entity’s chamber by Lord Draahg, who has survived the previous encounter, albeit with more cybernetics now, saved by Darth Baras. He reaches out to grip Vowrawn in the Force, using a “Death Field” to hold him, powered by his own machinery. His goal is to kill Vowrawn, which will allow him (through a ritual, presumably) to make the binding of the Entity permanent. Unfortunately for Baras, the Emperor’s Wrath gives Draahg a final death, destroying his mechanical elements to shut down the Death Field and save Vowrawn. Vowrawn completes a ritual to set the Entity free. Without her power, Darth Baras will be as weak as possible for someone of such strength. With his power base crippled and the leader of the opposition against him, Darth Vowrawn, still alive, the time to strike at Baras is now. Upon arriving on Korriban, Darth Vowrawn, in his authority as a member of the Dark Council, allows the Emperor’s Wrath entry into the Council chamber, first meeting him in the antechamber with Rathari, whom he once spared, at his side. Vowrawn enters with the Emperor’s Wrath, shocking Darth Baras and the others present (including Darth Ravage, Darth Marr, and When Vowrawn and the Wrath claim that the Wrath knows the Emperor’s will and serves him, while Baras is a pretender to be the Emperor’s Voice, the Dark Council allows them to face each other in direct combat, with the winner’s veracity being determined by victory. The Emperor’s Wrath defeats Darth Baras, and Baras, near a death blow, tries to convince Darth Marr and the others to strike down the Wrath, claiming that it is the Emperor’s command. They are not buying it. Finally, the Wrath delivers a final stab of his lightsaber to his former Master, killing Darth Baras. The Dark Council officially recognizes the Emperor’s Wrath as an agent of the Sith Emperor, answerable only to him. (Among the Sith warrior’s travels, he continues to train Jaesa Willsaa in the Dark Side. As she experiences life as a Darksider, she ends up meeting an Imperial officer in one port, whom she either kills or has sex with – she cannot remember. For now, Jaesa is so faithful to her new Sith Master that she cannot dream of taking on the traditional role of a Sith Apprentice who would one day try to unseat her own Master. Jaesa also begins to reach out in the Force with her special ability. She is sensing “false Sith,” Sith who seem to be leaning toward the Light Side. She is allowed to leave and hunt them all down. She kills them, but only after gaining their confessions – true or coerced. It feeds a lust for killing, though she recognizes that her Master’s crew is off-limits. On her journeys, Jaesa comes upon a dying “false Sith,” who tells her of a Sith whose sole mission is to take out such “false Sith.” Jaesa wishes to meet this Sith and uses an impression from the dying Sith to reach out in the Force to find this “false Sith” hunter. She identifies him as Darth Cendence. She meets him, but she immediately realizes that he is not hunting true “false Sith,” but instead taking out other Sith, claiming they were traitors.

Cendence attempts to recruit her and turn her ability to his use. He also wants her to betray her Master. She refuses and battles Cendence, killing him as he tries to deliver a death blow to her. Cendence’s own contact, a Dark Council emissary named Caliqu, gives her the same mandate to hunt “false Sith” that Cendence had, though she will be able to do it for real with her ability. A bounty is later placed on her head by “false Sith” who are afraid of her activities. Also during their missions, Pierce is contacted by General Rakton, who wants him to get his black ops team back together to go after the Bastion, the Republic’s strategic base on Corellia. He contacts Lieutenant Tanido on Hoth, Captain Lorant on Balmorra, and Sergeant Arlos. With the team in the lead, thanks to disguises acquired during Pierce’s activities, Rakton is able to claim Bastion as his own. Meanwhile, Quinn resumes his search for SIS agent Voloren, whom he had nearly caught a decade earlier just before Moff Broysc recalled Quinn to Druckenwell, where he saved the day by ignoring Broysc’s orders, then was court-marshaled and blackballed for his efforts. Now, he finds and takes down Voloren, closing that unfinished chapter in his career. For her part, Vette uses Broysc’s name to annoy Quinn as much as possible. Quinn is encouraged to get revenge upon Broysc to close out another unfinished part of his career. He investigates one of Broysc’s men, Major Ovech, who is in need of assistance due to more of Broysc’s incompetent decisions. They were sent to Cafo Neimoidia to strike a weapon facility, but they were discovered. Now, Broysc has Ovech’s ship under control of commandos loyal only to him, and they have been ordered not to provide reinforcements for Ovech. Quinn is allowed to infiltrate the ship in orbit, liberate it from the commandos, and let the men who are loyal to the Empire – rather than just Broysc – to provide reinforcements to Ovech, saving him and his team. Over time, Quinn completes Imperial trials and is promoted to Captain, Second Grade. Upon discovering that Quinn is at the helm of his new commander’s ship, Broysc begins sending bizarre, incoherent transmissions to the ship, to the point where it is disrupting normal operations. It would appear that Broysc is a bit deranged with his old age. He even threatens to shoot Quinn in the face . . . while speaking from lightyears away via holocomm. He refers to Quinn as “Admiral Malcontent,” literally believing that is his name and rank, and he blames Quinn for losing the first battle in which Broysc commanded, well before Quinn was even born. He even accuses Quinn of actions at an event on Taris before even Broysc himself was born. Quinn’s new Sith Lord commander can see how far Broysc’s mental state has fallen. Quinn contacts Imperial High Command about Broysc, but no one is willing to confront the long-standing Moff. He will either continue to serve – since he will not step down – or have to be killed. Quinn is allowed to track him down to a pleasure barge. He abducts Broysc and brings him back to the ship, where he commands them all to kill themselves. As a great service to the Empire, Quinn is allowed to kill the deranged, old fool. Among the rank and file Imperials who were under Broysc’s command, there is universal relief with his death. To top off this excellent work, Quinn even uses the money he has earned from his own military pay to purchase advanced alluvial dampers for the ship, which gives its hyperdrive a significant boost. As for Vette, the Sith resists removing her shock collar for a long while, but he eventually does so, considering Vette a part of his team, rather than a slave. She reveals that she was a slave as a little girl, having been grabbed with her mother and sister. They were slaves on Ryloth until split up. Vette was sold to a Rodian, then a Hutt, then a being she describes that sounds like a Gran. She was later freed and joined Nok Drayen’s crew when he defeated her Gran master. When Nok Drayen “died,” she joined a Twi’lek artifact hunter group, consisting of herself, Taunt, Plasmajack, and Flash, but their first target, Cada Bliss, set them up to get revenge upon them, resulting in Vette being captured on Korriban trying to get into Naga Sadow’s tomb. The others were set upon by mercenaries but escaped. Now, they have discovered that Bliss has gotten his hands on the priceless Twi’lek artifact known as the Star of Kala’un. Vette’s new master joins Vette in striking at Bliss and his bodyguard, “the Virus” (a Kaleesh), to retrieve the Star and bring it to her old comrades, so that they can return it to Ryloth. Vette later hires a tracker, Krata, to search for her sister, Tivva, whom she discovers is on Nar Shaddaa. Tivva has been sold to Toobu the Hutt, though it is a woman named Crystal who actually commands her as a slave dancer. They find Crystal, and through her they meet Tivva, who recognizes Vette as “Ce’na,” which was Vette’s name before becoming a slave and being renamed. Tivva’s freedom is bought, and she soon begins dating a sixty-year-old Moff in the Outer Rim. Thanks to that Moff’s Imperial Intelligence contacts, they are able to determine that Vette and Tivva’s mother was sold to a Hutt, Whuddle, on Tatooine years ago. Tivva heads there immediately, and the Sith eventually accompanies Vette to Tatooine as well. By the time either daughter arrives, though, their mother is dead, looked over by fellow Twi’lek Feb’Noota. Her labor as a slave for Whuddle including heavy labor, and she died in the animal pens while feeding them, but Feb’Noota brings her body out of the pens, so that she will not be eaten. They give Feb’Noota enough credits to arrange a funeral for her. With the Sith’s permission, but not his help due to the Hutt being fearful of all Jedi and Sith, Vette joins Tivva in using their beauty to get an audience with Whuddle, then kill the Hutt in revenge for their mother’s death. Vette is unsettled by killing the Hutt, but she settles into the Sith Lord’s crew for the long term.*

(The Old Republic: Sith Warrior)*

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Jedi Consular summary above.

- Scourge explains how the Emperor was able to become so powerful through his Sith ritual. Now, he intends to commit genocide on Belsavis and other worlds as part of another ritual to make himself even more powerful. Upon arrival at Belsavis, they find that the Empire has launched a sneak attack that has let loose prisoners from the Republic prison there. Pureblood Sith Executor Krannus is on Belsavis to carry out the ritual, and Jedi Enna Tabord is already there to seek his location for the Hero’s team. They find Enna dead, and Pak Taldine, her non-Jedi ally that knows the planet well, waiting to help the Hero in her stead. Enna had been killed by the enemy, but she had been able to tell Pak that a Pureblood Sith was near a nearby reactor before she died. The Hero heads for the reactor, only to find that the Pureblood Sith was not Krannus but Imperial Colonel Hareth, who is working for Krannus (and, it seems, his lover). It was just distraction to cover up Krannus’ mission. The Hero kills her, and Krannus thanks him, believing that Hareth now has a glorious place in the Emperor’s plans to give them all eternal life. Pak helps use the prison’s surveillance systems to find Krannus. Doctor Gantrell, a Republic doctor inside the prison, seems to be under attack by Krannus’ men in a high-security wing of the prison. The Hero reaches the site of the battle, but Krannus is already gone. He instead faces Imperial Commander Rayfel, who executes some of the scientists. The Hero kills Rayfel and his fellow Sith cultists, but Krannus took Gantrell, since he is the only one who can open the main research vault. The Hero briefly diverts to stop escaping prisoners from getting their hands on weapons that the scientists made using Republic technology and Rakatan technology from the Vaults under the more modern prison. He then goes after Krannus, whose commandos are planting explosives to cause massive eruptions across the planet’s surface. He saves Gantrell, who has been left to be eaten by an ancient terentatek, then heads for the prison’s power core. Krannus has stolen the key to it from Gantrell. If he blows up the power core, which draws power from hyperspace, it will send out lightspeed shockwaves that will destroy the entire system, killing trillions. After getting Gantrell to a safe vault, the Hero faces Krannus and his men directly. He is joined by Republic Special Forces troops under Sergeant Bedd. They battle, deactivate the explosives to cause the eruptions, and stop Krannus from destroying the power core. Krannus is killed, and Bedd reports that Republic Colonel Bartaph has arrived to get the prison back under control. While Bedd remains to protect the power core, the Hero meets with Bartaph, who reveals that Pak was actually a prisoner, and she has now captured him. Pak seems to have had a change of heart from his criminal ways during his years in the prison. The warden had made him an honorary guard, and he has been trying to make up for his past. The Hero speaks up for him. Pak is restored to his guard status. With Belsavis safe from Krannus, Satele informs them that there are rumors of a high-end Imperial meeting aboard a space station called Korriban’s Flame, and Jomar was sent to infiltrate it. Jomar has not checked in, so the Hero’s crew is sent to Korriban’s Flame, to which Scourge gains them access with Grand Moff Rosh’s clearance code. They board and find Jomar there. He was chasing down the Imperial meeting because he thought he would find proof that the Hero had fallen to the Dark Side. Instead, he fell into a trap set by Leeha, who is still under the Emperor’s Dark Side influence. Jamar does not want Leeha hurt, though, as they shared a secret love affair while on Tython. Leeha is defeated and freed from the Emperor’s influence. She returns to Tython with Jamar, in hopes that Satele and the others can help Leeha. Jamar confesses to their affair, and he is separated from her for the foreseeable future. On the plus side, Jamar overhead Leeha speaking with Lord Fulminiss, who is on a mission to Voss. They head for Voss, then use comm signals from just outside of Voss-Ka (the capital) to discern Fulminiss’ location before he can destroy life on Voss for the Emperor’s ritual. The Hero encounters Tala-Reh, a Voss commando, who is also seeking Fulminiss, who left a short time ago with Valen-Da, a missing Voss Mystic whom Tala-Reh is seeking. They defeat a group of attacking Sith apprentices, who have set up Fulminiss’ plan for Voss. Tala-Reh joins the Hero at the Shrine of Healing, where Fulminiss was said to be in a recording found among the Sith apprentices. The Hero finds the healers inside also deranged like the apprentices and is forced to incapacitate them. The Hero speaks to the spirits of Voss Mystics of old, who have taught the healing ritual of their order to Fulminiss, who has perverted it. He is using it to drive beings insane and make his own Sith activities more powerful. Valen-Da has had a vision of the people of Voss being turned insane and killing each other in a horrible slaughter, which is reported to Tala-Reh via a recording. They must enter Gormak lands to find the cave where Fulminiss and Valen-Da are going. They use a distraction to get to the Gormak king’s vault at Gorma-Koss and take maps to the caves. In doing so, the Hero battles the Gormak Guardian, which corrupts Gormak into servants of Sel-Makor, a strange Dark Side entity within the Dark Heart of Voss. They head for the Dark Heart, the location in Valen-Da’s vision, and encounter Valen-Da and Lord Fulminiss. Sel-Makor, seeking death and destruction to feed on the Dark Side, reveals itself, spurring Fulminiss to action. In the battle that follows, Fulminiss is killed. Valen-Da explains that Fulminiss intended to use his madness plague (from the healing ritual corruption) to destroy life on Voss, but he needed Sel-Makor’s aid to spread it across the planet. Valen-Da knows that Sel-Makor must be destroyed, and only Tala-Reh can destroy it, based on his visions. That was why he went with Fulminiss, so that Tala-Reh would follow. Tala-Reh sacrifices herself by entering the maw of Sel-Makor’s energy, destroying it and instigating what is said to be a millennium of peace between Voss and Gormak, two races that were once one on the planet. Upon contacting Satele, the Hero learns that Warren, under the Emperor’s control, has attacked the Republic flagship Valiant to capture Admiral Debrin, who holds key strategic information for the Republic’s war effort. The Hero boards the ship and confronts his old friend. Debrin has already revealed security codes for the fleet to Warren. Warren is defeated and captured, though he does not return to the Light Side yet. Warren is sent back to Tython, and they now know that Braga is with the Sith forces on Corellia. The Hero becomes the Supreme Commander of the Jedi on Corellia, leading allies that include Unaw Aharo (whom he saved from Bengel Morr), Jedi Master Kiwiiks, the redeemed Bengel Morr and former Sith Lord Praven. With the help of Republic forces under Captain Rikdine and General Var Suthra, they work against the Empire. They retake Labor Valley, liberating Magremme Tharakus’ corporation (and its wealth) from the Empire. Agent Helver of the SIS reports that Braga has been sent to sabotage a chemical factory to turn into a bomb to destroy Labor Valley itself. They retake the chemical factory, while the others free the factories of Labor Valley, but Braga is not captured. They join the fighting in Axial Park that has just broken out, and join in other efforts to protect the people of Corellia. Doctor Godera, working with the Republic on Corellia, has found Braga and his Imperials setting up Firestorm turbolasers at Axial Park to create a kill zone there. They steal an Imperial shuttle at a Corellian museum and take out the turbolasers. After doing so, the Hero returns to base to find Godera killed by the Sith. Fortunately, Godera tracked Braga’s transmissions before being killed. He is on a battle cruiser (the Eclipse) above the capital that is set to overload and destroy much of that sector of Corellia, according to Erris Wyum, a Corellian intelligence agent. The Hero leads a team to board the cruiser. The Hero confronts Braga in person. Braga claims to have broken free of the Emperor’s control, but in doing so, he has fallen to the Dark Side and joined the Emperor’s cause willingly. The Hero defeats Braga in combat and shuts down the reactors so that overload is avoided. Braga, defeated, is fatalistic, but he does reveal where on Dromund Kaas they will find the Emperor. He has been weakened by losing control of so many of his followers and seeing his plans thwarted. Braga is sent back to Tython, while plans are made to strike at the Emperor himself (again). Grand Master Satele Shan leads Jedi and Republic forces in a frontal assault on Dromund Kaas as cover to allow Scourge to help the Hero and his team get to the surface and reach the jungle temple where the Sith Emperor is located. They make their way through Kaas City and reach the Emperor’s shuttle. Scourge then flies them to the temple, where the crew engages and distracts the Emperor’s guards, letting the Hero of Tython reach the Emperor. It is a fierce battle, as the Emperor uses Sith illusions and plenty of Force lightning and other powers against the Hero. The Jedi Knight slays the Emperor, or so it seems. Scourge does not sense it, however. The Emperor uses the last of his strength to send his spirit into another body elsewhere, as he brings the temple down around them. The Hero and his crew escape. The Hero is promoted to the long-overdue rank of Jedi Master, and his entire crew receives the Cross of Glory. The Emperor’s death, even if only temporary, has left the Sith in chaos. The Second Great Galactic War continues, but the advantage now lies with the Republic. For now, Scourge remains with the Jedi (though not becoming a Jedi) to continue the war effort. (Soon thereafter, another Child of the Emperor, Suri, contacts Kira for help. She still hears the voice of the Emperor in her mind, suggesting that the Emperor is not dead. They meet Suri on Voss, where she has conflicting commands about destroying Ord Mantell and Manaan. Other Children of the Emperor, led by Tannac, come to help Suri. Kira makes the tough decision to let Suri go with the Children, since they have the best chance to help her. Tannac has also mentioned hearing the Emperor still, providing even more worries that the Emperor is either somehow still alive or around in spirit form.)*

(The Old Republic: Jedi Knight)*

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Jedi Knight summary above.

- Upon returning to Dromund Kaas, the team is debriefed by minders, and the new Minister of Intelligence (the former Keeper) meets privately with Cipher Nine, who confronts him about brainwashing the agent before the mission to go after Kothe. He claims that he did not know that Kothe would have such codes to control him, but he also notes that if the brainwashing had not been used, then Cipher Nine would have been killed outright as a potential threat. In theory, this means the Minister saved the agent’s life. He does not intend to tell anyone else about how the agent freed himself from the brainwashing. The Minister also informs him that Kothe’s shuttle was found abandoned in space with no data about the Shadow Arsenal aboard, and there is no record at all of an SIS agent named “Hunter” ever existing. (This seems to confirm what Hunter had said about not being Republic or Imperial in affiliation. It would also appear that whomever Hunter is working for gave the codes to control Cipher Nine to Kothe.) They have tracked Hunter to the Isen 4 mining colony, from which Imperial Fleet Command has received a call from Representative Omana Tragg. Without defenses, Tragg requests discussions for surrender of the Republic mining colony to the Empire.
Somehow, Hunter is involved. Cipher Nine’s team goes to Isen 4, discovering that two hours after the surrender, most of the population has been killed by various acts of sabotage and violence. A dying security officer points them to the control center, Hunter’s last known location. He is long gone, but he contacts Cipher Nine by holocomm and admits to slaughtering the surrendered workers as a means of trying to speed along the gears of war between the Republic and the Empire, hoping that other captured sites will rebel to avoid potential future atrocities. Cipher Nine finds where several leaders, including Tragg and Commander Phytus, have hidden. The team helps get the survivors off of the colony before Watcher Three must order the place “cleansed.” Word of the deaths of surrendering colonies, however, has already spread. By the time Cipher Nine reaches Dromund Kaas, Supreme Chancellor Dorian Janarus is delivering a public address on the matter. Fortunately, Fixer Twelve has discovered that the override technology that Hunter used on Isen 4 is from Operation Starbender, eight years earlier. Keeper explains that, at the time, an Imperial base was about to be destroyed by a pirate fleet, but its flagship was sabotaged by unknown parties using the same technology. Other “lucky” events, such as Operation Morning Crest and Operation Vanity, were also investigated, which led Keeper to a recording from Operation Morning Crest four years earlier. An unknown party is speaking with Hunter, who has just infiltrated the SIS. He is ordered to remain undercover for six months, then act. Keeper and her team have searched archives for other relevant incidents, finding 62, some going back centuries, and nine such incidents in the last five years. All can be linked to some kind of massive intelligence organization with no Republic or Imperial ties. Cipher Nine and his team are tasked with hunting down these people.

After the Minister leaves for a meeting with Darth Baras and the Minister of War, Cipher Nine meets the next generation of Watchers, genetically engineered to be better than current Intelligence agents. As Cipher Nine returns to his ship, thirteen leads are narrowed down, and next-generation Watcher Six directs them to Belsavis, where the Republic has a secret prison (that Keeper and Watcher Three note that the Empire has known about for nearly a year now). Apparently, whomever the conspirators are, they were able to pull Republic strings to have a special section created: Megasecurity Ward 23. It was built and sealed when the prison was founded, so that no one gets inside. Cipher Nine’s mission? He is to break into Megasecurity Ward 23 and find out what is hidden inside. Two decades ago, a prison gang tried to break into the ward in hopes of finding something to help them escape. Keeper suggests that Cipher Nine recruit a gang among the prisoners to attempt the same, posing as a fellow inmate. Upon reaching the surface, a recording from infiltration operative Bax Kholer provides a list of potential recruits to Cipher Nine. The list includes: Kanjon Slyke, an assassin and escape artist whose brother died trying to breach the ward and can recreate his brother’s plans; Chaney Barrow, a slicer and computer expert who was once a top saboteur for the Exchange; Ohta, an exiled Mandalorian demolitions expert; and Paarkos, a Gand tracker. After planting detonation charges on the doors to the cells of the “recruits,” Cipher Nine contacts them all via intercom, gives them rendezvous coordinates, then blows their cell doors open. As soon as this happens, a mysterious droid-like voice informs Cipher Nine that the prisoners are unlikely to work together, and that he has made an error in breaking out Barrow, as she is only the third best slicer at the prison, and the speaker has just killed the top two. Upon meeting with the freed prisoners, they need more supplies, some of which took Kanjon’s brother five years to gather. Cipher Nine infiltrates a “medlab” that is actually where prisoners have been experimented on, in order to gain some of what they need. Once the others join him, the voice returns again, stating that Scorpio Sanctions have been activated. SLV-88 gas, designed to heighten aggression, is released into the air. Cipher Nine must subdue the entire “team” and shut off the source of the gas. (Cipher Nine is able to stay focused because the anti-brainwashing controls he put into himself with the IX serum protects him from outside influence.) Barrow believes that the Scorpio Sanctions are part of a computer program from inside Megasecurity Ward 23. They distract the program with other threats like sliced combat droids, and Cipher Nine breaks into the ward, which is located in the deep levels of the prison, in an area that existed before the Republic came to Belsavis. To get inside, Cipher Nine is frozen in a carbonite trap that then thaws him after entry. After battling security droids, Cipher Nine breaches an interior door, but before Barrow can finish triggering enough alarms to distract the Scorpio program long enough to let Cipher Nine past an interior barrier, Kanjon and Ohta hold Barrow at blasterpoint, forcing Cipher Nine to transfer credits to them in a renegotiation of their deal. Once finally inside the ward, they find kolto tanks with people inside, represented by large holograms of their forms. They are also met by a strange droid that emerges (SCORPIO), the embodiment of the Scorpio program, now disconnected from the network. Cipher Nine defeats SCORPIO in combat, and the residents of the kolto tanks explain that this place is a vault for technology that the conspiracy has denied to the galaxy. Those in the tanks are individuals who had information or ideas thought too dangerous or enlightened for their time, preserved for the future. One is a member of the organization Cipher Nine seeks, an organization formed after the Great Hyperspace War to guide the galaxy by manipulating the Jedi and Sith to keep the Republic and the Sith Empire from bringing the galaxy to war again. Now, the individual believes that the organization, known as the “Star Cabal,” is corrupted from its purpose. He directs Cipher Nine to take the SCORPIO droid (now reprogrammed) and let it help them in their quest, as the kolto tank residents re-enter hibernation. Above, they reunite with Barrow and Paarkos (with Ohta and Kanjon having fled with their new cash from Cipher Nine). Barrow and Paarkos are sent to the nearest Imperial command base to accept payment for their help, authorized by Cipher Nine, along with passage off of Belsavis. SCORPIO uploads information on the Star Cabal to Imperial Intelligence. (The droid will eventually “evolve” through phases of self-improvement, going so far as to be uploaded into the Imperial Intelligence mainframe for evolution, then returning to its body as a willing ally of Cipher Nine.) However, at the nearby Imperial command base, Cipher Nine is confronted by Pashon Cortess (heir of Baron Beyar Cortess of House Cortess on Alderaan). Pashon blames Cipher Nine for the fall of House Cortess, even though it was his mother who was a terrorist and his father who killed her, remaining an ally to Cipher Nine in the end. Pashon will not listen and attacks, ending up defeated and shipped back to House Cortess, his life spared to keep House Cortess as an ally. Something he says, however, tips Cipher Nine and Watcher Three off to a new threat: the Star Cabal knows who Cipher Nine is, has his file, and is now recruiting Cipher Nine’s old enemies to go after him. Keeper reports that the next-generation Watchers have discovered traces of a holoconference Hunter was part of six months earlier. Unfortunately, only Hunter’s side was recorded. However, the Tytun Rings, a massive, self-maintaining repository of all galactic communications, would have full records, specifically in an old Imperial transport in orbit of Tytun 4 that was damaged in the Battle of Druckenwell. Cipher Nine boards, gathers four communications, would have full records, specifically in an old Imperial transport in orbit of Tytun 4 that was damaged in the Battle of Druckenwell. Cipher Nine boards, gathers four fragments of the transmission, then returns to Dromund Kaas, where the next-generation Watchers reconstruct the full holoconference. In it, Hunter initiates a holoconference with other members of the Star Cabal, from somewhere in the Brema Sector. “Present” are Yem Leksende, Nok Drayen (though likely someone using his identity, since he is “dead” at this point), Kolovish, the Creeper, the Prince, and Hunter. They discuss the predictability of Senator Voralla and Representative Shuuru, Hunter’s success on Commenor, Darth Baras, Darth Angral, the awakening of the Children of the Emperor, and the move toward what they call “Armageddon.” As the transmission ends, it appears that the Prince reaches out toward Keeper and affects her somehow. Keeper and the next-generation Watchers all collapse. They appear to have been affected by a code built into the transmission that only affects genetically-altered individuals like them. They are now on life support. This disrupts their ability to oversee Intelligence operations, but they have one lead on the Star Cabal in the form of information Keeper was digging up about the planet Voss. Cipher Nine’s team heads there next. Before leaving, Cipher Nine receives a warning from Hunter to stay away from the Star Cabal, or risk losing all of his friends, allies, and even the Empire he serves. With Watcher Three for support on Dromund Kaas, they visit Voss, which Vector, as a former Diplomatic Service diplomat, understands as well as anyone in the Empire. They meet with Bas-Ton, a Voss contact, at his teahouse. (In truth, this Bas-Ton is a surgically altered Imperial agent who was inserted in the real Bas-Ton’s place five years earlier as a means of infiltrating this closed society.) He assists Cipher Nine with a lead on a human who arrived a few years ago, Albathius, also known as the “Shining Man.” He had come to Voss and spent five weeks going through a dozen rituals to be accepted by the Voss as if he was a Voss himself, but he eventually died in his sleep and was buried with Voss honors. Cipher Nine poses as a pilgrim and visits the Shining Man’s tomb. In the sarcophagus, Cipher Nine finds only dust and a scroll, which are brought back to Bas-Ton. The scroll points to the Shrine of Healing as the next spot to investigate and claims that the Voss Mystics prophesied the coming of the Shining Man, hence how readily they accepted him. By undergoing rites of healing, Cipher Nine is helped by Amin-Le to find healing and acceptance of his past, and his healing is stored alongside all others in a vitalicron. The Shining Man’s vitalicron is locked by genetic code, as anyone’s will be, but the genetic info from the dust (from the body having triggers that decayed it to dust rapidly) allows Cipher Nine to access its recordings, viewing the Shining Man speaking with Keyo-So. It indicates that he faked a scroll that was supposedly lost in the Nightmare Lands, hence a prophecy supposedly pointing at himself. Upon returning briefly to the teahouse, Cipher Nine finds a message from a bounty hunter, who has captured Bas-Ton to use against the agent. Upon fighting his way to the bounty hunter, he finds that it is Fa’athra the Hutt from Hutta, angered at how he and the Empire orchestrated his downfall to Nem’ro months ago. After months of wandering the galaxy, he received word from a Republic informant that Cipher Nine would be on Hutta and arranged this situation. Cipher Nine kills Fa’athra’s mercenaries, defeats Fa’athra, and rescues Bas-Ton, who cannot be saved because using human blood on him would give away his cover. He instead urges Cipher Nine to get to the capitol, get maps to the Nightmare Lands, then go to the Chamber of Ashes where the Shining Man supposedly found his scroll. To get help in doing this, Cipher Nine marries one of Bas-Ton’s (the real Bas-Ton’s) children, thereby becoming a member of the Voss family and allowed access to carvings that show maps of the Nightmare Lands. In the Nightmare Lands, he meets Xanar, who tells of how the Shining Man seems to have crashed on Voss and spent time in the Nightmare Lands making his fake prophecy and such. Xanar has done what Intelligence could not: sliced into the records of a Star Cabal agent. He wants to learn the Shining Man’s ways, and when told that he is dead, Xanar attacks, forcing Cipher Nine to subdue him. The agent learns that the Nightmare Lands were being used by the Star Cabal to train to resist the Force. In a recorded message, he also says to give “Hunter” his love, suggesting that Hunter may not be who he says he is. Xanar remains with the ship when it self-destructs per his orders. Therod-Ton, Bas-Ton’s brother, requests that Cipher Nine return to meet with the Three, the rulers of Voss, who claim that there is a prophecy about the agent. Apparently the Shining Man prophecy also fits Cipher Nine. However, the Shining Man had met with the Three and told them not to make any alliance with outsiders for 3,000 days, that he would eliminate the Gormak, and that the Voss system would be free from outsiders and ships intruding into their territory. He also promised that the Republic and Empire would cease to exist, and the Voss accepted these promises and allied themselves with no one. In other words, for 3,000 days, the Voss are allied with the Star Cabal, in a sense, which explain their lack of interest in joining the Republic or Empire. The investigation over, Cipher Nine’s team is recalled to Dromund Kaas. Upon returning to the Citadel, Cipher Nine finds Lord Razer (apprentice of Darth Enraj) present, nearly Force choking Watcher Three to death. He announces that Operations Division has been dissolved, its resources absorbed by other parts of the Empire. Kaliyo, as a known criminal, is taken into custody, though the rest of the team is left intact. Under instructions from the Minister of Intelligence, Cipher Nine’s team is transferred to Lord Razer’s command on the front lines on Corellia. Hunter contacts him, claiming that the Star Cabal has arranged these events. Upon making contact with Captain Trage on Corellia, Cipher Nine is informed that he has been given the rank of Lieutenant in the military. Cipher Nine reports to Major Nedecca (formerly of Taris and Rabaan under Darth Gravus) and Major Sanos (from the Trench). Lord Razer has been engaging in bombing strikes for the last six weeks and is now ready to strike the Republic Army headquarters in his sector, Aegis Base. Cipher Nine is sent to infiltrate Aegis base, mark targets for strategic bombing, and then set of a baradium bomb. He does so, and is contacted by an unknown individual in a helmet, who says he (or she) is a friend in need of access to Republic troop movements from data in the base. He does so, finding a transmission from Supreme Commander Rans of the Republic to the Corellian resistance. Once Aegis Base is destroyed, he returns to Lord Razer’s base, where a secure line is available to speak with the helmeted “friend.” Upon making contact, the “friend” is revealed to be Keeper, seemingly well again. Intelligence was dismantled to stop action against the Star Cabal, but they still managed to get him sent to Corellia because the Star Cabal is active in that conflict, hiding information from both sides, it seems. Currently, Moff Zamar is on Corellia from the Dark Council to secretly account for their actual troop and resource strength. Cipher Nine forces his skyhopper to land and acquires the information before it can be submitted (and subsequently altered by the Star Cabal). He helps get Zamar to safety, receiving the unaltered report in return. After returning to the battle for Corellia, Cipher Nine arrives at Lord Razer’s location to see him confronting a Jedi Knight in lightsaber combat. The Jedi refers to Razer by his pre-Sith name, Shakren san Jukii, suggesting a personal connection. Razer is killed in front of Majors Nedecca and Sanos, then the Jedi is killed by Cipher Nine and his companion. Keeper points Cipher Nine to an airship that has been over the area for a while, guarded by mercenaries. Cipher Nine strikes at it when it lands to resupply, letting himself be captured. Upon boarding the so-called Apocalypse Barge, which is full of influential people who expect the planet to be left in ruins after the war and are thus having one last major party, he speaks with Hunter, who contacts Cipher Nine via holo. After a little chat, he is knocked out and captured, as planned. After painful interrogation, Cipher Nine finally frees himself and takes out the mercenaries, then escapes the airship. Upon contacting Keeper again, information from the barge again helps in tracking the Star Cabal’s activities. Cipher Nine then tries to fake his own death by collapsing a building, so that he can act without the Star Cabal suspecting his movements. Unfortunately, he is attacked by Neyla Hawkins, a former member of the Eagle’s terrorist network who was recruited by SIS, which necessitates a short but violent confrontation. As the building is about to come down, Cipher Nine is contacted by SIS Commander Harson Nild, director of SIS Core World Operations, who offers a chance to survive as a prisoner of war. He does not accept, and the explosions go off as planned, allowing Cipher Nine to be presumed dead and escape via a tunnel. Keeper directs Cipher Nine to the starship Tenebrous (perhaps a source for future Darth Tenebrous’ to take his name?). Upon arrival, he finds that Kaliyo is there and seems to be okay. (The Minister of Intelligence and Keeper managed to arrange for her escape so that she could run operations for them since that time.) Aboard the ship, Cipher Nine meets with the Minister of Intelligence, who is supposedly under house arrest in Kaas City but who has managed to escape with the help of Moffs who owe him favors. Thanks to events on Corellia, they have been able to trace the Star Cabal’s communications to a space station. Cipher Nine’s team spearheads an assault on the station to take down its members and acquire their information. The space station, located in Null Space, is known as the Star Chamber. Upon boarding the space station, Cipher Nine spies on another conference. The Prince is present in person, noting that Dao Stryver is working for them with the Mandalorians. Hunter is there in person. Yem Leksende is there only as a hologram and identified as a Czerka Corporation Special Executive. The Creeper is present, noting that Tol Braga is dead, and is identified as Sir Trilag of the Mecrosa Order of assassins. (Others are present as well, though not all identified.) Cipher Nine strikes, killing those present (except for Hunter, who seems to vanish), even as Keeper sends dossiers on those identified to the Imperial military, Korriban, bounty hunter guilds, and the like, “outing” them, after a fashion. Within the hour, Keeper will also have the Republic and the Hutt Cartel after them as well. (Keeper is giving cover stories to why they are targeted, however, not revealing the true nature of the Star Cabal to the galaxy.) Hunter reappears after activating the Star Chamber’s defenses. He leads Cipher Nine on a chase through the station, until they finally face off against each other. Cipher Nine wins the shootout, and Hunter, badly wounded, reveals that he was trained by some of the galaxy’s “greats,” including the Old Man from the Eagle’s network. “He” also reveals that the male Hunter persona is a façade. Beneath a form of holographic disguise is the real Hunter, a woman. She was taken in by the Star Cabal as a child, had her identity and homeworld information erased, so she created this new persona, which was used within the Star Cabal (with them knowing the truth) and outside of it (with no one the wiser). She had been jealous of Cipher Nine because he had been able to keep his own face when becoming an agent. When facing capture, Hunter uses a command in her gauntlet that electrocutes her, killing herself. Cipher Nine acquires a Black Codex on the Star Cabal’s data, gathering it for future use, just as Lord Charnoq and Lord Ilikith arrive, sent by the Dark Council. Unsure of their motives, he refuses to hand over the Black Codex device with the data, and the team must fight off the two Sith Lords. Finally, the team reports back to the Minister of Intelligence and Keeper. The deaths of Charnoq and Ilikith will be pinned on the Star Cabal. The Minister intends to use the Black Codex to, among other things, erase all records of Cipher Nine so that he can act on conscience to serve the Empire on his own. They do so, and “Cipher Nine” becomes a sort of ghost agent on behalf of the citizens of the Empire. The Minister of Intelligence will now use the Black Codex to protect members of the former Operations Division as much as he can, and protect himself from execution for carrying out the mission against the Star Chamber without the sanction of the Dark Council. As for Cipher Nine’s team, they remain together.

(The Old Republic: Imperial Agent)*

NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Bounty Hunter summary above.

- Seeking a way to save Lord Kallig from the spirits within him, the spirit of Darth Zash (inside Khem Val) notes Darth Vilus discussed the issue briefly in one of his thousands of volumes of work, but they realize that Thanaton has switched out the pertinent volume and duplicated a different volume in its place, presumably to keep Kallig from being able to use that knowledge to help save himself from these ghost-driven overloads. They need to get into Thanaton’s private library beneath the surface of Dromund Kaas to get that volume from Darth Vilus and another by Darth Iratus to deal with the problem. Kallig breaks into the library, kills the guards, and gathers the information. Iratus speaks of draining some of his overloading power into holocrons as a temporary solution, along with a potential permanent solution that requires going to the heart of Belsavis. The words of Vilus point to a cure via a ritual performed by the Mystics on Voss. Having gathered this information, Kallig drops back in on Harkun and the potential apprentices. (Jaxun has died in a trial, but Xalek, Argog, and Seferiss are still around.) While Ashara and Zash (in Khem Val) seek out more information on Voss, they land on Belsavis, where the Republic prison is in the throes of a massive prison break that the Empire arranged recently. The Rakatan device that Iratus seems to have been after is in the Rakatan prison beneath the Republic prison. Kallig needs to make contact with the Nikto expert slicer group within the prison, the Circle, to help get access to the Rakatan systems. Kallig finds the Circle (led by Bolan and Grokan), who agree to help if Kallig helps to protect a relay while they set it up, so that they can send their powerful computer system’s signal off of the planet. He does so, while also scanning the Rakatan device (a sort of technological superhub) so that the Circle could replicate the technology for him. Apparently, the device has the ability to remake an individual on a genetic level and was part of experiments in modular biological adaptation, taking the best traits of one species and giving them to another. After defeating a security system that was set to kill any non-Rakatans that try to use the machine (of which he has found hubs), he meets Warden Gorshaa, one of a handful of Rakatans who still guard his prison. Gorshaa notes that he cannot cure Kallig, but he can use the machine to rebuild him so that he can hold more power than his current body can. In return, though, Gorshaa wants genetic information from Kallig. (The Rakatans had reached a point where their Force sensitivity started to fade, and they had been studying “slave” cultures in order to try to use the machine to bring the necessary genetic traits for Force sensitivity back into their species.) To reach the heart of the machine with a datakey that will allow him to use it, Kallig must go further into the vault area of the prison. He reaches the “mother” machine, which speaks as a Rakatan artificial intelligence known as Ashaa, who claims to have been the creator of the Twi’leks, Zabraks, Esh-Kha, and other species (though it is probably more accurate that they tweaked those species, given that the Twi’leks and Esh-Kha certainly predate the Infinite Empire). In return for helping Kallig, “Ashaa” wants to be free from Rakatan control, since their age has passed. He removes programming restraints from the artificial intelligence, and Ashaa turns the Rakatans’ own machines against them, claiming to have now killed them all. Kallig’s body is then remade to be stronger, so that his growing power can no longer devour him physically. He still hears the voices of the ghosts in his head that could drive him mad, however, so he needs to visit the Voss Mystics. He and his team leave aboard the ship, which has been given a weapons upgrade by Ashaa as well. In space, they are contacted by Moff Valion Pyron, who wants to be on the winning side in the Thanaton-Kallig conflict. He suggests that Kallig gain Imperial support by completing work on the Silencer, a superweapon capable of disabling a fleet, for which Thanaton recently cut funding. If he can gain the necessary CN-12 chip from Nar Shaddaa to complete the weapon, he could test fire it on a Republic fleet to gain a great deal of support from within the Imperial military power structure. This should be fairly easy, as the cult Kallig commands on Nar Shaddaa (via Lord Paladius) is currently the top supplier of CN-12 chips. Unfortunately, Paladius notes that their supply chain is now dead, and their final shipment of CN-12 chips was stolen by another ganglord, known as “the Veil.” The Veil will only meet with Kallig, so he does meet with them, discovering that “the Veil” is not a single individual but a sort of hive mind set up through cybernetics among its followers. He trades control of his cult for the shipment of CN-12 chips, which annoys Paladius, who is very upset until Kallig kills him. Upon contacting Pyron, he learns that Darth Thanaton’s superior on the Dark Council has died, allowing Thanaton to join the Dark Council. Kallig provides the CN-12 chips to Pyron, so that the Silencer can be completed, and awaits word that it is ready. Upon arriving at Voss, Kallig learns from Zash that the Voss ritual that is necessary to help him is forbidden, but he must find a way. To that end, he is to make contact with Athelis Kallis, who has been researching the Voss. He is warned almost immediately by a Voss named Sor-Nak that the Mystic Alor-Wan has foreseen that he will bring destruction to the Voss way of life (as if Kallig really gives a crap). Alor-Wan has also seen that they cannot use force to dissuade Kallig from his path, which means they can work against him, but not violently. Kallig meets with Athelis and Imperial Diplomatic Service agent Rul Jophen. Athelis reveals that there are two types of Voss Force-user, healers and Mystics. Among the Mystics, there is an even rarer subset of outcasts called dream-walkers, who are his best bet. He visits them, speaking with Asa-Ku, who agrees to induct Kallig into their order, so that the ritual, forbidden to outsiders, can be taught to him. He undergoes a ritual, in which he has a mystical experience that includes a run-in with Rylee Dray, Nomar Organa, Zash, wampas, and other beings from his past, which are actually incarnations of the ghosts in his mind, who taunt him. Defeating them in this dream-walking experience and returning alive makes him part of the dreamwalkers. He travels to their shrine to learn the ritual of mind-healing, knowing that they expect him to repay them (as the second part of the initiation) with a boon of their choice at some point in the future. (Rather than being in their debt, he simply kills Asa-Ku.) Once in the shrine, he speaks with the spirit of Mar-Da, the first (and last, as he puts it) dream-walker. When the spirit refuses to help, he zaps him a few times with the same power that lets him bind ghosts, until Mar-Da explains that he must travel to a mystical rock in the Dark Heart of the Nightmare Lands with a dream-walking Gormak (which makes the Gormak a heretic to the Voss), who is a necessary part of the ritual. With this now known, he binds Mar-Da to himself, increasing his power, which has no damaging effect on his body anymore, but which adds yet another voice to try to quiet in his mind. Meanwhile, because Athelis helped Kallig, Voss commandos strike at her research facility, destroying much of her research. He races there to face Lucen-Tok and his commandos. He kills them all, and Athelis destroys the bodies to be sure this will not cause adverse consequences for the Empire. She points him to a “meeting stone” in Gormak territory where he might be able to dream-walk and connect with the dream-walking Gormak shaman of local legend. He does so, contacting Hadrik, the shaman in question, who agrees to help Kallig after the Sith Lord threatens to reveal to other Gormak that Hadrik can use the Force, something that the Gormak see as corruption coming from the Force-using Voss, their societal enemies. Hadrik wants Kallig to help him find a way to get Gormaks off the planet to start a new society elsewhere. (This is against the wishes of the warmongering Gormak chief.) Together, they travel into the Nightmare Lands and find the dream-rock (a strange crystal), at which point they begin dream-walking. When Hadrik touches it, it reacts like a holocron, speaking in the voice of the Voss known as Dal-Rin (“the teacher of the rock”). Visions of Rylee, Ergast, Nomar, Kalatosht, Zash, Darth Andru, Darth Thanaton, and Horak-Mul again appear to Kallig, but now Hadrik uses the Voss holocron dream-rock to make these visions into physical beings, which Kallig then kills. Returning the stone to its resting place causes Kallig to be engulfed in energy, then to collapse. He awakens with the voices of the ghosts gone from his mind, essentially exorcised, except for the power they have bestowed. On the way back to his ship with Hadrik to take him offworld as agreed, Rul Jophen and Sar-Nok meet them, arguing that Kallig cannot take a Gormak off of Voss. Kallig mind-tricks Sar-Nok into not seeing him, then they proceed on their way.
Kallig’s next destination is Korriban, where Overseer Harkun has just wrapped up work with the acolytes. Seferiss and Xalek have survived all of the trials, but only Seferiss has returned from the last one with a necessary carving. Xalek, though, kills Seferiss and takes his carving to present to Harkun. Harkun is enraged by this overt violation of the rules against acolytes killing acolytes, but his boldness and slave background makes Xalek a good fit for Lord Kallig. Upon leaving, Kallig is contacted by Pyron, who has finished work on the Silencer prototype and placed it aboard the Doombriinger. Kallig meets Pyron and other potential ally moffs (Dolus and Graham) aboard the Doombriinger. They take it to test against a Republic fleet but find that Darth Achelon of the Carnage (one of Thanaton’s cronies) is already engaging them and in need of aid. The Silencer would destroy the Republic ships, along with Achelon. It becomes a moot point moments later, when the Carnage, unaided, is destroyed. They then fire the Silencer weapon at the Republic fleet, decimating it. The demonstration gains the two moffs as allies to Kallig. Frustrated by Kallig’s recent actions, Thanaton challenges him to a Kaggath, a traditional battle of power base versus power base, a battle that is (naturally) to the death. Thanaton makes his challenge on an open channel, making it public knowledge in the Empire. The battlefield shall be Corellia. Pyron, hearing the message, orders his ships to Corellia to lend support. Kallig arrives shortly after Pyron, but the sector they have landed in is cut off from the rest of the area, thanks to Thanaton’s machinations. Thanaton has also removed the leader of the Imperial 115th at the island outpost in the area from command and put his own apprentice, Lord Skar, in charge. Kallig goes to confront Skar, battling him in lightsaber and Force combat. He defeats Skar, then tortures him, until he reveals that Thanaton is planning to destroy the fuel refinery (entering via the Selonian tunnels) so that Pyron’s fleet cannot refuel as they aid Kallig. He is able to stop Thanaton’s actions against the fuel refinery, but even though Thanaton is there, taunting him, he is unable to catch him. Fortunately, Pyron locates Thanaton’s local base of operations in the old Republic command center inside the Corellian Museum of Industry, which is protected by energy shields from orbital bombardment. Kallig enlists the services of an Imperial commando group under Major Ilun (yes, from Balmorra) near Coronet Zoo to make their way into the museum. Kallig gets inside, calls in the commandos to take down opposition, but then finds himself facing a DP-6 Guard Droid, activated remotely by Thanaton. He defeats the droid, but Pyron contacts him to report a Republic surprise attack; they need help fast. He helps them, and they help him get further into Thanaton’s base, but Thanaton has already left. Via holocomm, Thanaton taunts him again, declaring the government plaza as the site of a final confrontation. Thanaton again repeats his accusation that Zash was corrupt and that Kallig must be destroyed. Thanaton sets Darth Kallous against Kallig, but Kallig prevails. He then battles through two of Thanaton’s cyborg guardians, also destroying them. Finally, Thanaton faces Kallig on his own. In this battle, Thanaton is “defeated” by the combined might of Lord Kallig and the power within him that he drew from the spirits, but before he can be truly destroyed, Thanaton retreats, intending to return to the Dark Council on Korriban to use their support to turn the tide against Kallig. Kallig goes there to put an end to the situation, but as Thanaton addresses the Dark Council, Darth Enraj and his apprentices, allies of Thanaton, try to stop Kallig from entering the Dark Council’s chamber. He kills all three of them, then enters without further delay. Present in the chamber are Darth Marr, Darth Mortis, Darth Ravage, and another Dark Council member via hologram. They refuse to stand in the way of the final confrontation between Thanaton and Kallig, leaving Kallig’s defeat to Thanaton himself. The two do battle, one on one, and in a massive display of Force prowess, Kallig withstands Thanaton’s assaults and defeats him, drawing on the power of the spirits within. Defeated, Thanaton crawls to where the other Darths have come down from their seats. With a twist of his wrist and an application of the Dark Side, Darth Mortis snaps the fallen Darth’s neck. Mortis commends Lord Kallig, pointing him to his seat. Over the brief objections of Darth Ravage (that a mere Lord cannot sit on the Dark Council), which are overruled by Darth Marr, Kallig is to join the Dark Council.
Moreover, he is given the title of Darth with the new name “Darth Nox.” He is now the head of the pyramid of ancient knowledge, answerable only to the Emperor. With Thanaton dead, the five spirits he imprisoned (Ergast, Nomar, Kalatosh, Darth Andru, and Horak-Mul) emerge to request that he release them, but he refuses. Their power is his, and he will lead his minions in gathering ancient knowledge to increase his power, until no one can stand against him. (Throughout his journeys, Kallig continued on with Ashara Zavros, who refused to give up all of her Jedi ways, instead serving Kallig while using the Light Side, intending to someday help forge a peace between the Jedi and Sith, if Kallig can eventually change the Empire to make it less self-destructive. To this end, Ashara makes a pilgrimage to visit Jedi Master Cyman Walz on Alderaan, the Jedi who brought the Sith Lord Karrus Vayl to the Light Side, leading to his eventual initiation into the Jedi Order. Cyman claims that Ashara is no longer a true Jedi, which leaves her upset and empty-handed. Ashara later goes to meet with a group of rogue Jedi, led by Master Quintus, who disagree with the Jedi Order’s methods in the war. They are skeptical of Ashara, given her current allegiance, but she is able to convince them that they should be willing to work with her and Kallig if it means peace in the galaxy. Khem Val, meanwhile, learns that his old rival and fellow Dashade Shadow Killer, Veshikk Urk, who was once enslaved to Tulak Hord’s apprentice, Ortan Cela, is still alive, having been kept alive in stasis like Khem and found by the Jedi Order. They track him down to Tatooine, confront him, and kill him, ending the rivalry. Khem later has visions of Tulak Hord’s remains on Hoth being disturbed, then taken. They travel to Hoth and find that it was Zash who took the bones to her storehouse before the ritual, intending to use them as a bargaining chip to keep Khem under control. Knowing this causes Khem to allow Zash a bit more leeway in “their” body. Zash, inside Khem, gathers materials while in control of their body to recreate a similar ritual to the one that left them connected. They need a Rakata box that was found on Taris. Upon getting it from the space station above Taris, the ritual commences, as the two spirits in the body clash, both trying to resist the pull of the box. Zash’s spirit eventually loses and is drawn into the box. Khem Val is free of Zash, and he finally admits that Kallig is a worthy successor to his old master, Tulak Hord. For his part, Xalek continues to train with Kallig. He eventually asks a favor: to be allowed to go to Ilum to properly bury his father, so that he can, if he has proven himself a great warrior, ascend to godhood as all great Kaleesh warriors do upon death. Talos Drellik studies Zash’s archives with Kallig’s permission, then becomes concerned when his old mentor, Auselio Gann, drops out of contact while apparently on a dig to Malachor III. While studying a medallion that Gann gave him, Drellik finds that it responds to heat. He finds a datachip inside, which says that Gann was looking for the tomb of Vaius Antinus on Malachor III, which makes little sense because Drellik says everyone knows that the tomb is on Alderaan. Believing this was misdirection, Drellik goes to Malachor III to find him, but he is already gone. He was definitely in Antinus’ tomb, though. The trip is not a total loss, though, since he brings Kallig back a document on Sith Lord lineages, including his own. Drellik later examines the chain that was with the medallion and discovers a holocomm frequency. He calls it and receives a pre-recorded message from Gann. Gann apparently went after Antinus’ apprentice’s tomb on Aduba VI, but the Sith and Jedi were both after the tomb as well. Drellik heads there to help him, but he finds that Gann had defeated the Jedi and Sith who were after the tomb by using the tomb’s traps against them, only to end up trapped and dying himself. Now, Drellik has access to the site and will continue studying Gann’s findings when he is able. When he discovers that ancient non-Sith used to pledge themselves to powerful Sith as vassals, binding their families to serve those Sith for generations to come, he pledges his own family line to Kallig. Andronikos enjoys being part of the crew. He has been an accountant on Moneylend but grew bored with it. He held an InterGalactic Banking Clan official at blasterpoint, got a few million credits in the scheme, and headed out into the galaxy for adventure, coming to own and fly a ship called the Sky Princess. He later learns that the Hutt Cartel on Nar Shaddaa is after his old captain, Carl Norn. Kallig allows him to leave for a bit to help his old comrade. Unfortunately, this gets the Republic’s attention. Andronikos reveals that he was once in the Republic military, but he deserted and became a pirate. Now, the Republic has added treason to piracy and desertion among the charges against him. He briefly has to mysteriously run off to take care of the situation. When he returns, he finally reveals that he had deserted when his troops were seemingly set up by an SIS agent named Harman Rike, who tipped off an Imperial fleet to their location. Rike then disappeared, seemingly confirming Andronikos’ suspicions about him being a double agent. Rike had resurfaced, so Andronikos’ rather secretive mission was to check on Rike’s trail. Later, Andronikos’ old flame Casey lets him know that Rike is moving
Years ago, a member of the Dark Council (Darth Sajar) turned and joined the Jedi, bringing info on the Children of the Emperor, but all the Dark Council knew were rumors. Now, Jedi Masters have been given military authority under an obscure, old Republic law. It is up to the Barsen’thor and the Rift Alliance, as the strongest standing portion of the Republic, to gather more powerful allies to fight the Sith Empire. On Tython, gifted engineers have repaired the Noetikons, which may hold information that can help fight the Empire. The warden consults them, and they refer to a “sleeping army” (the Esh-kha) that was held captive by the Rakatans in a sort of quasi-awake form of stasis beneath a planet’s surface. Rakatan writings point to the location, but they need one more bit of information from a monument on Hoth.

She returns to Hoth and finds the monument. It points her to the Esh-kha, though she has to destroy the monument when its holographic systems begin talking about brainwashing more slave races. The target planet is Belsavis, a planet that happens to host a Republic high-security prison. (Manaan representative Diab Duin is a bit wary of the Esh-kha, since even the Rakatans seemed afraid of them.) They arrive at Belsavis, but there is an extreme prison riot in progress, owing to Rakatan Vault that the Republic was maintaining under the prison now releasing prisoners. After fixing locator towers to help find Commander Geland, they seek him for information on the Vault. However, upon learning that Jedi are coming, Geland is activated as a Child of the Emperor and kills everyone near him. Now, they must get to a computer in the Vault that Geland was studying. Geland sets the Rakatan security system against her, but she is helped by a benefactor through the comm system, who points her to “Hallow Voice,” an Esh-kha that would likely work with other species, rather than trying to kill them all. After going through the facility’s quarantine and psychiatric zones, she meets her benefactor, who turns out to be a Rakatan (not a prisoner of the Rakatans but an honest to goodness Rakatan, alive in this era) named Lhunu. He is apparently in the Vault to try to undo the injustice done by imprisoning Hallow Voice and his non-genocidal followers. They free Hallow Voice’s followers, led by Sharpest Eye, along with others like Hidden Blade and Red Walker. Upon reaching where Hallow Voice is held, Gerald stands in her way, pitting other Esh-kha against her. She defeats them, but Geland damages the console for Hallow Voice’s stasis chamber with his lightsaber. The Barsen’thor defeats Geland, then uses the Force to heal Hallow Voice, who is near death from Geland’s attack on his chamber. Lhunu urges her to destroy any Esh-kha who are not loyal to Hallow Voice, but she refuses. Perhaps Hallow Voice and Lhunu can someday work together to convince the other Esh-kha to work with other species, rather than destroy as both the Esh-kha and Rakatans have done in the past. Hallow Voice and his Esh-kha will follow the Jedi, who takes an Esh-kha name as an honorific as well. Hallow Voice joins the Barsen’thor’s crew. Upon returning to the ship, word comes from Captain Sulle on Belsavis that Tobias Grell has been kidnapped while on the surface. Tharan tracks the kidnapper’s ship, the Euphony, and they board to save Tobias. The kidnapper, Stark (a former Sith who discovered the Children of the Emperor and was brainwashed to become “Stark”), has been interrogating Tobias go gain information for the First Son of the Emperor. Tobias has died in the process. Nadia, now with some basic combat training from the Barsen’thor, joins the warden in taking down Stark. Nadia can do nothing to save her father, as he is already gone. Out of sheer Force instinct, Nadia nearly kills Stark, but the warden talks her down. Stark dies from his injuries anyway. Upon returning to the ship, they speak with Satele Shan and Syo Bakarn, who reveal that it was in Tobias’ will that he wanted Nadia to train as a Padawan to the Barsen’thor. The Jedi Master agrees, and Nadia begins her official Jedi training. They head for Voss to enlist the world’s Force-using Mystics (who seem to have visions that are “always” right) in their fight against the Sith Empire, at the suggestion of the Rift Alliance’s Diab Duin. As it turns out, the Imperials are also trying to recruit the Mystics, whom the Jedi Council think of as Gray Force-users. They visit Republic Ambassador Sophia Farash in the capital, where she is already entertaining...
Imperial diplomats. The situation is complicated. The Voss are threatened by Gormaks, who have made it too dangerous for the few Voss with Mystic potential to actually finish their training by going on a pilgrimage. Sophia suggests they contact Gaden-Ko, a potential Mystic she knows, but he has left the capital of Voss-Ka to a nearby cave that is holy ground. They seek out Gaden-Ko, saving him from local creatures and healing him. They guard him along the pilgrimage path, but when they reach their destination, Lord Shendan sneaks up and stabs Gaden-Ko, intending to kill him while under Jedi guard to turn the Voss toward the Empire over the Republic’s failure to protect him. The warden kills Shendan, but Gaden-Ko was poisoned by the blade. They take him to the Shrine of Healing. As with the shielding technique, the warden gives of herself, giving some of her own life energy to save Gaden-Ko. He then continues his pilgrimage in Gormak territory, which requires them to gather pieces of a broken holy stone. They are met by a group of Voss commandos, led by Jenar-Sei. They are there to stop Gormaks from mining sacred Voss crystals. The Jedi assists, knocking out their mining operation and recovering a crystal for their Tower of Prophecy. Their last destination is the Deep Cradle, deep in the Nightmare Lands. They are also to seek Doctor Kerrian, leader of a missing Republic expedition in the same region. Kerrian and his team have gone mad while seeking the Deep Cradle. She confronts the doctor and defeats him, taking his journal back to the one sane member of the team, Lefry (a Nautilan). Troopers arrive to rescue Lefry, letting them explore the Deep Cradle, where they speak with Gaden-Ko’s grandfather’s spirit, and Gaden-Ko has a vision. The warden follows the vision to meet with the Three, the Voss leaders. Gaden-Klo is ordained a Mystic. He will have an entourage, including Jenar-Sei and his commandos. His vision is interpreted to mean that he must travel with the Barsenthor, so that he can learn away from Voss, neutral in the Force. His visions can be a great asset to the war effort, but Sophia won’t let them leave. She is a Child of the Emperor! The Jedi takes down Sophia and her men, and Sophia reveals that the First Son is a sort of sleeper agent too, and the First Son does not know who he is himself. He awakens as the First Son, does the Emperor’s bidding, and then returns to his normal life, unaware of his own actions while acting as a Child. She hints that he could be someone close. Sophia is taken prisoner, set to be executed, as our heroes (including Gaden-Ko’s entourage) leave Voss. (Meanwhile, with Tobias dead, Nadia is having trouble dealing with the loss, but she intends to be the warden’s Padawan, though the royals of Sarkhai also want her to be their representative in Tobas’ place. In both roles, she grows, especially after visiting Tython.) The Barsenthor’s crew is contacted by Bakarn and the Supreme Chancellor. An Imperial fleet is on its way to Corellia, and they must stop it by capturing the Imperial dreadnought Javelin, allowing the Republic to scatter the rest of the Imperials . . . (To be continued below . . . )*

(The Old Republic: Jedi Consular)*

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Jedi Consular summary above.

- Rakton calls a summit with leaders of various worlds along the Republic’s borders on a neutral space station, then holds them all hostage, using that leverage to allow Imperial forces to pass through those systems. Havoc Squad sneaks onto the station with the help of Helik, a diplomat from Aquella that is bringing his world’s security codes to Rakton. Once aboard, Havoc Squad rescues the hostages and kills the Imperials aboard, but Rakton is elsewhere, only attending via holocomm. Now, Rakton has Havoc Squad as a specific target of his ire. As soon as the hostages are freed, those worlds strike the Imperials in their territory. Upon returning to Coruscant, Supreme Commander Rans and General Garza send Havoc Squad to assist and upgrade other forces for the Republic. Their first mission is to Belsavis, where they are to extract the Republic Navy pilots of Dagger Wing (who are in prison there due to an unauthorized bombing run on Fest that killed so many civilians that the Republic disavowed them; they believed the assault would kill Sith Lord Ondorru). They want Dagger Wing, under their leader, Commander Conrad Gall, returned to active duty. With the help of Guard Captain Zess, who is dealing with the Imperial prison break at the moment, they seek out Dagger Wing. Tobin Harlan (Dagger Wing’s XO, who is fighting the prison break) reports that the Imperials are opening the Vaults. Havoc Squad works with another Dagger, Kal, to save other Dagger pilots Lin, Ty, and Symo. (They were helping Guard Lieutenant Brok keep criminal Gouge in custody.) They help Gall keep his word to help end the prison break, but Dagger member Adan dies, though another member, Myles, survives.
Gall, however, has taken off with other men after the Sith Lord leading the assault, believed to be Lord Ondorrù himself. Havoc Squad joins in pursuing Ondorrù once he escapes the injured Gall. Ondorrù, though, sics an ancient rancor on them, which they defeat in due course. They save Gall, but Ondorrù escapes. Dagger Wing is successfully extracted. They are then sent to A-77, an asteroid-based Imperial prison, to save Republic prisoners of war, including recently-arrived Ava Jaxo. Word of its location came from Jaxo, who has escaped, but when they arrive, they find that Rakton let her escape and has brought in Imperial ships to take out Havoc Squad. While under attack, they are able to save many of the prisoners, but Jaxo dies when the systems level must be vented to be sure the most people are saved as possible, including Major Fel of the 82nd Armored Division. They are next sent to Voss.

There is a problem: Senator Evran thinks that the Empire will invade Voss again, so he is keeping necessary troops in reserve. This is made more difficult because Evran is a friend of Supreme Chancellor Dorian Janarus. Havoc Squad must remove all chances of Imperial invasion to free up those forces, via an ambush that can happen without Voss knowledge. They are up against Imperial agent “Deadfall,” whose specialty is sowing discord before an invasion. Evran sends Havoc Squad to capture Deadfall in his cave base. (Havoc Leader also gathers archaeological items, at Evran’s aide Koru Tama’s behest, from early Voss civilization to turn over to the Voss as a gesture of good will.) They end up killing Deadfall, but at least they are able to get information from Imperial computers in the caves, which indicate that Pol Blex, a weapons smuggler, is smuggling weapons to Imperials on Voss. (Havoc Leader furthers the Republic cause as well by showing respect to the Voss by completing trials at the Shrine of Healing and helping protect Voss from the Gormak.) They confront Blex. After some bribery, he reveals that the Imperials purchased tunneling equipment and have a ZR-57 bomb, possibly the one that was brought by Tavus during his initial defection.)

Soon, Senator Evran and Imperial Lord Torius are to meet with Gon-Sa, a Voss leader. When they learn that Voss commandos are trapped in Gormak territory, Havoc Squad heads in and saves them in order to engender good will, despite Imperial interference. SIS Agent Kellor discovers where the Empire is putting the ZR-57, but he was spotted by Imperials and lost within the Dark Heart of the Nightmare Lands. Havoc Squad races to the rescue, finding him going mad from the energy of the Dark Heart, which has caused his team to turn on each other and kill each other. He then drops dead himself, but he points them in the direction of the bomb before he does so. They strike against Lord Torius’ operation, an attempt to use the ZR-57 under Voss-Ka to hold the planet hostage for Imperial alignment. Havoc Squad prevails, killing Torius and his guards. Gon-Sa arrives in the aftermath of the battle, bringing Ki-Ve, a mystic who foresaw their victory. The Voss want the bomb for study, but Havoc Leader cannot turn over Republic ordinance. The Voss, for reasons of their own, still refuse to take a side in the war. Still, this defeat of the Empire allows the troops to be freed up for battle, as Garza wanted. Unfortunately, more hearings have been called about SpecForces, focusing on Havoc Squad. The truth, however, is that the Senator calling the hearings, Zian, is actually being paid off by the Empire to undermine the war effort, in this case by getting Havoc Squad suspended if he can. Havoc Leader attends the hearing, revealing what they have found about Zian. Zian is detained, and Havoc Squad is cleared of any of Zian’s accusations of misuse of funds and power. By the time they return to Garza’s office, she has been called away to Corellia, where Rakton himself has made landfall to join the Imperials’ campaign there. Havoc Squad joins the efforts there to take the Republic intelligence hub known as the Bastion back from the Empire. They are helped by local resistance leader (and former SpecForces officer under Garza; current CorSec officer) Locke. They are also aided by Captain Phaeris, a member of a loose band of pilots, whom Havoc Squad helps get their ships clear for launch. Soon, operation “Blazing Spear” is ready, and local resistance cells are all organized to assist in a major ambush. Finally, after clearing a museum landing pad of the famous Corellian warship Lucky Lancer, Republic troops arrive, brought by Phaeris and her pilots. They block Imperial communications at Bastion, then breach the base’s gate by taking over an Imperial crawler tank. The final assault begins to retake Bastion. In the massive assault, Havoc Squad finally faces General Rakton, defeating him and taking him prisoner. (To be continued below . . .)*

(The Old Republic: Republic Trooper)*
The Champion of the Great Hunt’s crew receive a “summons” to an Imperial fleet to discuss their recent activities. Upon arriving at the fleet, they are taken to see Sith Lord Tormen. Today, the government of Corellia swore allegiance to the Sith Empire, and the population is rising up against the government in response. Darth Tormen says that the Treaty of Coruscant is no more, and he wants the Champion to go after Supreme Chancellor Janarus. He also reveals that the Jedi Master who has been pursuing him is Jun Seros, the Supreme Chancellor’s closest advisor. They have two targets to take out first. The first target takes them to Belsavis, where the Champion must go after Zale Barrows, a smuggler who helped Hylo Visz break the Mandalorian blockade years ago. While on Belsavis, the Champion takes down a group of bounties wanted dead by the Exchange, then goes after Barrows, only to find him gone and a Houk named Skadge beating on Barrows’ girlfriend, Kayla Perlis. They are trapped in a hangar that is locked down due to lack of power. Barrows has stormed off to find the warden, and he has taken their droid, M3-OB, with him to get the power back online. After learning this, they let Kayla go, despite Skadge’s objections. The Champion finds Barrows and his droid behind a shield. Skadge joins them and is equally annoyed. The Champion destroys the shield generators, but Barrows escapes, leaving Skadge to take out his frustration on M3-OB, which he trashes. Then they have to enter maximum lockup to get access to where the droids are maintained, so that they can get parts to hotwire M3-OB’s remains into telling them where Barrows has gone. They do so, along with kidnapping technicians to work on the droid. It plays a holo of Barrows talking with Warden Playt, which suggests that he is on his way to the tomb to keep the Imperials there from being broken out by other Imperials. Local Imperial contact Lieutenant Horn confirms that the tombs have been overrun after Operations Groups 1 and 2 made it inside, where the Esh-kha have been released. They join with Commander Grang, who is leading the Imperial effort to re-enter the tombs. They are trying to get to the Dread Masters to free them. They find Barrows and other Republic allies fighting against Imperials (Operations Group 1) under Lord Andreaus Thos and interrupt the fight’s endgame, freezing Barrows for transport. In need of help to get off of Belsavis, Skadge offers to join the Champion’s crew in return. Lieutenant Horn takes custody of Barrows and pays the Champion, who returns to the ship to find Torian is gone, having been contacted by a ransomer on Hoth who is holding “the boy.” The crew heads for Hoth to assist their comrade. It turns out that the ransomer bluffed Torian into being captured as bait for the Grand Champion, whom the kidnappers plan to take down to enhance their reputations and such. That does not go well for the ransomers, who end up dead. The crew then leaves for their second target for Tormen. The second target is General Thelonia Redrish, a Kuati noblewoman, who can be found leading attacks on Imperial interests on Voss. They arrive and meet with Imperial Ambassador Yoran, who suggests going after some of her rebel leaders to draw her out. The Champion goes after Colonel Deulo, from whose comm equipment they gain a recording where Redrish is giving orders to the rebels. They turn this over to Yoran, and the Voss bring Redrish up for trial. At the trial, she claims the recording is fabricated, and she plays on having gone to the Shrine of Healing on a pilgrimage to show her good faith. To prove who is telling the truth, the Champion is to undergo “the trials,” as is Redrish. The Champion meets with Dokath-Ra (who had a vision of the bounty hunter’s coming, which seemed to show that Redrish will be the agent of change for Voss) at the Shrine of Healing. The Voss attempt to restrain the Champion by force, requiring him to beat a few up before they reveal that Redrish has already left for Gorma-Koss. They reach Gormak territory, where Voss Commando Ali-Le notes that when the Gormak attacked earlier, Redrish was taken prisoner by the Gormak and taken to their beast pens for gladiatorial-style death. Upon arriving at the Gormak arena, the Champion is set upon by beasts, which he and his companions kill, including a cybernetically-enhanced vorantikus. The Gormak chieftain sees the purity of his fighting and accepts a trade: information on how to fight like the Champion in return for information on where other Gormak have taken Redrish before she could be “judged and punished” by Gormak King Jokull. Redrish has gone into the Nightmare Lands, seeking the Dark heart, followed by her Gormak saviors. The team finds Redrish and defeats her Gormak allies. The Champion allows the Gormak to leave in return for Redrish surrendering. She is insistent that they be The Champion takes Redrish captive in carbonite, ending his mission for Darth Tormen. With Barrows and Redrish out of the way, the Sith Lord’s plan can go forward. As fighting ends on Rabaan, he will direct his forces toward Corellia for a full-scale assault. The Champion rendezvous with Tormen at his flagship, the Tyrant (commanded by Captain Evlen) in the outer reaches of the Rabaan system. Tormen has not been able to send forces to Corellia yet, due to Republic SpecForces troops getting aboard the Tyrant during their troop withdrawal. The Champion gets aboard the Tyrant and takes out the invaders with the brief assistance of Darth Tormen, restoring command to the Imperials, though Evlen has been killed in the fighting. They now head for Corellia, with the Sith ships not far behind. The Champion meets with Imperial General Krau, intending to capture local rebel leaders to force Corellia to submit to Imperial rule and bring Jun Seros out in the battles surrounding these events. Their first target is Chairman Harlon Fane of the Corellian Corporate Council. He and his fellow representatives have locked themselves in the Council Tower in defiance of Imperial rule. They find and capture Fane alive (frozen), as ordered. By then, Tormen’s forces have arrived. He sends the bounty hunter to capture Selonian rebel leader Shrona Bel-Il by capturing Selonian breeders, holding them prisoner, and forcing the Selonians to fight to get them back, falling into a trap. The plan works, and Shrona is captured. Their final target is Corellian police commissioner Jonah Carter. He somehow survived the initial purge of dissenters before Prime Minister Cal Falcone gave Corellia to the Empire. (CorSec, for its part, has been officially disbanded, but many are working with Carter to help lead the rebellion.) They get into CorSec’s old headquarters and face Carter. After an ugly firefight with former CorSec officers, the team captures Carter. With all three targets in Tormen’s custody, they are ready to lock them to fake support for the Empire to stand against any Republic claims on the world. They sign off on a treaty that Falcone then uses to force the Republic to acknowledge Corellia as Sith Empire territory. Having failed in his original promise to bring Corellia to the Empire, Falcone is Force choked to death by Tormen. As expected, Supreme Chancellor Janarus and Jedi Master Jen Seros have arrived aboard the Founder, Janarus’ flagship. The Republic is once again fighting for Corellia. The Champion hunts down and faces Seros, who sends his fellow Jedi away to help lead the fight for Corellia. In a fierce struggle, the Champion brings Seros to his knees. Before falling dead, Seros claims that the bounty hunter’s actions will catch up to him eventually. The Champion then returns to Darth Tormen, who is fighting the other Jedi. He assists in the battle, which ends quickly. They then use security protocols on an encrypted datapad Seros carried to allow the Champion and his companions aboard the Founder to go after Janarus. Once aboard the Founder during an arranged pursuit that makes the Champion’s ship look as if it is a Republic ally in trouble, the team destroys the other ships aboard the Founder to make sure Janarus cannot escape. They then confront Janarus himself. Janarus reveals that he has reviewed Seros’ smear tactics and lies to discredit the bounty hunter. Given Seros’ was doctoring official records and other such immoral acts, Janarus has declassified the mission information for the Senate and the public, so that the bounty hunter’s name is cleared (at least of those things he did not actually do). The fallout of this scandal will be huge, and his career in politics will be finished. However, he offers a chance to have all of the Champion’s true crimes wiped clean, the team given immunity, if they are willing to kill Darth Tormen and show that they are not lackeys of the Sith, just businesspeople. After falsely reporting that Janarus has been killed, the Champion’s team returns to the Tyrant in an escape pod, then kills Darth Tormen. In the wake of these events, the Champion and his team is exonerated, the Champion urges Janarus to retain his honor in retirement, and the death of Tormen will be attributed to the broader naval battle, so as to keep the Empire from learning of the Champion’s betrayal. (During their exploits, the Champion also helps members of his crew. After Mako and the Champion discuss her HoloNet implant, they think that her birth parents might have been Republic SIS agents to have put that into her head as a child. Mako then comes to the conclusion, based on a lack of official birth records for her, that she likely was not born on Nar Shaddaa. However, a man named Carteri on Nar Shaddaa has been asking about her whereabouts, which prompts them to pay him a visit. He is not willing to die for his information, so he turns a datapad over to Mako, whom he addresses as “Coral.” Later, when she searches for intelligence on Carteri, she finds absolutely nothing. She wonders if Coral might be her sister, given how much they look alike in a holo Carteri had. After slicing into SIS databases, she discovers about a dozen different gene-stamped birth certificates that resemble her genes, suggesting that her family was part of something called “Project 32” for SIS. They soon find a way to contact Coral, who reveals that Mako is, in fact, her little sister. She also reveals that an SIS agent named Izak, Carteri’s commanding officer, is after Coral on Dromund Kaas. They answer Coral’s pleas for help, only to find themselves confronted by two other Mako lookalikes with her same implant, who are working for Izak (and no Izak or Coral present). They take out the lookalikes, which freaks Mako out a bit. She soon finds death certificates for all of the other family members she had found birth certificates for, suggesting that only Mako and Coral remain. When she finally cracks Carteri’s datapad, she uses information on it to contact Izak, whom she has connected to Project 32. He reveals that Coral is trying to lure her into a trap, since Coral has killed all of her other “family” involved in Project 32. Izak has traced Coral’s location, though. Mako and the Champion go to confront Coral. She claims that the other “sisters” on Dromund Kaas were in on a conspiracy with Izak to frame Coral for the deaths of everyone else. They don’t believe her, and a fight ensues when Coral refers to herself as the only “real person” among the “sisters.” They defeat her and let Izak take her into custody. Izak says they will talk later . . . The Champion eventually ends up hooking up with Mako romantically as well. As for Gault, he sets up an auction by proxy to sell the remains of his double to any number of individuals who wanted Tyresius Lokai dead. This helps to prove that Tyresius is really dead, letting him live on as Gault more easily. Gault, as “Gellar Roing” sets up a scam on Arcona Tatooine settler Groona Biddle, to sell them what amounts to salt tablets, which Arcona use as an illicit drug. They claim the salt tablets will help lifeforms retain water, which the Arcona need to do because Cona has a water shortage. The Champion blows the job, though, refusing to sink that low. Gault reveals to the Champion that he was with Hylo Visz, romantically and professionally, at the time of the blockade break. After that mission and its payout, though, they went separate ways. Rumors were that Hylo was dead, possibly at Hutt Cartel hands, but they track down Quon, an old associate of Gault and Hylo, who reveals that Hylo was smuggled back into Republic space and then paid Zale Barrows to hide her on Belsavis. After the blockade, Gault had left Hylo with the praise and blame, while he took the money and ran. He needs to make things up to Hylo, so he finds her on Belsavis, where she is in a stasis chamber. He lets her out, but she then runs off. He has saved her from imprisonment, and she later allows for the chance to get back together with Gault. They are able to do so, thanks to the Champion’s assistance in Gault’s misadventures. As for Torian, he goes to see his old Mandalorian comrade, Corridan Ordo, who brings him in on a big hunt with other former members of his unit. They hunt Bomas and Maalraas on the Dxun moon of Onderon. The Champion lets Torian join Corridan on a mission to kill a Republic Senator in Jedi protective custody. He again returns successful. With Mako’s help, the Champion finds Jreely, a Jawa who betrayed Blizz, allowing Blizz to go impersonate Jreely, get his stuff back, and kick Jreely’s butt a bit for good measure. The Champion also lets Skadge head off to handle a personal feud with a Hutt who crossed him years earlier. In return, the Champion is assured Black Sun assistance in the future if needed.) The future awaits . . .

(The Old Republic: Bounty Hunter)*

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Bounty Hunter summary above.

- The Barsen’thor’s crew must stop the Imperial dreadnaught Javelin before it can reach Corellia. Most of the crew board the Javelin at different points, working their way to capture the bridge. On the bridge, a droid announces that destructive charges have been placed to destroy the ship after capture. (“It’s a trap!”) They disable as many explosives as they can to save the nearby Republic ships, though the Javelin is still scuttled. They escape the doomed ship, though Felix stays until the last moment to gather vital data, then heads down to Corellia in an escape pod. They track it to Coronet City’s shipyards and head for the surface. Corellia’s government has made a deal with the Empire, but Jedi Master Syo Bakarn and the local resistance have created Guardian Holds (fortresses with plenty of supplies to retake Coronet City if it falls to the Empire). They heed a distress call from Captain Drizan at the shipyards, since he may be able to help them find Felix. They clear out some Imperial droids, and Drizan and his Selonian ally Quil help find the pod. They find Felix, and he has tactical data from the Javelin. It has info on the First Son, but that part of the info is damaged. They have Holiday fix it. When she does, a recording reveals the First Son speaking with Secretary Nadien of Corellia. The First Son removes his hood in the recording, revealing that Jedi Master Syo Bakarn is the First Son! But he is the man leading Republic forces on Corellia. Satele and Jaric Kaedan contact Bakarn immediately, and he reveals that he has turned over the Guardian Holds to the Children of the Emperor. Coronet City and Corellia are lost, unless the Barsen’thor and Republic General Aves can take Guardian Hold Six and break their hold. Tai is already on the way there, answering a distress call from survivors from the Imperial takeover from within. Jari Orez and the other survivors greet the newcomers, who report that Aelan Kaldar was a Jedi who turned on them (a Child of the Emperor). They enter Guardian Hold Six to stop its walker production line. They confront Aelan and kill him, drawing the attention of Bakarn, who taunts her via comm. It begins to be clear that the First Son’s original personality is buried beneath the mind of the Emperor that speaks through him. They next head for a safehouse to regroup. Their next target is Guardian Hold Four. They enter the heavily-fortified hold in a massive commando effort, then confront its Child of the Emperor, Corporal Daresha, who has turned Guardian Hold Four over to Imperial Generals Grann and Merion. They take down Daresha, and Grann (to Merion’s dismay) reveals that the First Son is likely with the remaining government officials in Guardian Hold One. They track its hidden location through communications points, then enter. Nadien and other Councilors are hiding out inside. They claim to have been buying time to save Corellia for the Republic by negotiating with the Empire, rather than doing so to actually join the Empire. Councilor Saiak reveals himself to be a Child of the Emperor and attacks the Barsen’thor, though she defeats him as she has all the others she has encountered. A sniveling Nadien shows her the way into the caves under the city that lead to their last sanctuary, where the First Son has gone. As the others battle to buy her time to go after him, the warden tracks her former colleague. They confront two other Children of the Emperor (whose identities are not revealed) before finally reaching Syo Bakarn himself. She intends to somehow free him of the Emperor’s control. The First Son now intends to kill the warden, causing the Rift Alliance to collapse, and, with it, the Republic. They duel, and she defeats him. In defeat, the Emperor’s presence in his mind – the essence of the First Son – is suppressed by the true Syo Bakarn, who is able to use the First Son’s power to remove the Force “cloaking” shield that had kept the Jedi from being able to discover the other Children of the Emperor. Bakarn, now “redeemed” but holding the First Son inside himself, will return to Tython to seek peace for himself and a permanent solution to removing the First Son from his mind. The battle for Corellia has turned toward the Republic, which has had a new Supreme Chancellor elected, Supreme Chancellor Leontyne Saresh. The Rift Alliance is rewarded for their service in rather generous fashion. The Esh-kha are supported in their bid for a new colony. Jedi will now be allowed to travel to Voss to learn from the Mystics and their unique view of the Force. As for the Children of the Emperor, they are still a threat, but at least now they cannot hide. As for the Barsen’thor, she replaces Syo Bakarn on the Jedi Council. The Second Great Galactic War rages on, but the tide seems to be turning in the Republic’s favor. The warden will soon rejoin the fight at Carrick Station . . .

(The Old Republic: Jedi Consular)*

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Jedi Consular summary above.

- Upon returning to Coruscant, Havoc Squad and Garza meet with new Supreme Chancellor Leontyne Saresh. Havoc Leader is awarded the Cross of Glory. Saresh, perhaps misguidedly, wants to trade Rakton back to the Empire for thousands of Republic prisoners. Then again, Havoc Squad defeated him before, so perhaps they can do it again if it becomes necessary. Garza is not so sure, but they are duty-bound to follow the Supreme Chancellor’s orders. Havoc Squad is given a brief leave to rest, but the war goes on. (Amidst the squad’s missions, various side issues emerge with the team. Aric Jorgan, for instance, is contacted by General Vander and offered a promotion and return to Ord Mantell, but he refuses in order to stay with Havoc Squad and deal damage to the Empire. His old squad, the Deadeyes, is also captured on Nar Shaddaa by the Empire during an SIS-coordinated mission. With help from Jonas, they look into it. The Republic is apparently distancing themselves from the Deadeyes to avoid an incident that would reignite hostilities, much like Havoc Squad was abandoned under Kardan. They were being held in Shadow Town, but they were split up and sent to offworld labor camps on. Havoc Squad learns that by breaking into the prison, only for SIS Senior Agent Zane to come down on them for ruining any chance that the Imperials will negotiate for their release. They send the labor camps’ coordinates to an ally in Signal Intelligence, but Zane again cuts them off in their search for more information. They turn the issue over to Garza, who could have better luck avoiding SIS interference. She points them to Torve being held on Tatooine, and they find him, only for him to reveal that they were part of an SIS operation, led by Zane, to let themselves get captured while bearing tracking devices in their bodies, which would help the Republic find other Republic POWs. It went somewhat wrong when they were split up, and SIS has not followed through. They track other Deadeyes to Hoth, where they not only find members of the squad but also Zane himself. He reveals that the mission as never really about POWs, though that’s what the Deadeyes believed. SIS was really after Dusk-9, an Imperial prison and black ops base that many consider just to be legend. That was why they were sending out soldiers into the Imperial prison system. When regular soldiers weren’t enticing enough for the Imperials, Zane bugged himself and let himself be captured, since a top SIS agent would likely get sent to Dusk-9, if it exists. Now, the op is blown. Trace and Koplin of the Deadeyes have died of the cold, leaving only Berix and one other survivor. Havoc Leader has to stop Jorgan from blasting Zane’s head off as payback. Elara, meanwhile, must report in to Army Personnel on her activities as part of the condition for her position as an Imperial defector. Captain Kalor, her contact, is not particularly happy that she cannot give classified information and thus must simply let Havoc Leader vouch for her. She is contacted by her brother, Aleksai Dorne, who remains serving the Imperial military. He and his men are trapped on Nar Shaddaa after interfering in Hutt operations, and with the Huttis as Imperial allies, they will be disavowed and left to die. Elara goes after him and brings him back to the Republic as a defector. Kalor still thinks he knows more about the Empire and its operations than she has revealed, and he pushes for an inquiry into her status as a defector, based on testimony from Ridu, an civilian officer on Taris who temporarily commanded her team when they were helping protect a senator who ended up getting killed on Ridu’s watch. She confronts Ridu with the evidence, and he changes his story to the truth, which angers Kalor, who uses a loophole to still open a new inquiry. Elara returns briefly to Coruscant to present the inquiry board with tons of recordings and other details about Kalor’s contacts. She returns with full citizenship and the removal of any form of “person of concern” label. Kalor has been put in his place. Havoc Leader also helps Tanno Vik deal with “Red Hand” Margaran, who was to purchase weapons from Tanno prior to him finding a better buyer. Now, Margaran is threatening Tanno and has put a bounty on his head. Tanno leaves briefly for Nar Shaddaa to deal with Margaran, killing him. He also swipes Margaran’s customer files for good measure, allowing him to collect on Margaran’s old debts, such as from Alderaanian Lord Albrek, who ends up dead as well. Apparently, Tanno’s side job as weapons dealer fits in fine with his Havoc Squad duties. Havoc Leader also supports Yuun in the Zaviir-juna ritual. Yuun considers Havoc Leader his Tarnuur, a sort of Gand guide figure. M1-FX begins taking on extra assignments to kill “impossible to kill” Imperial targets to help boost morale. He kills the propaganda artist known as the Ambassador on Nar Shaddaa. He goes after the Sith marauder Lord Kavos, known for his butchery on Brentaal IV, and kills him on Tatooine during a free-for-all combat situation that was meant to determine who would be Kavos’ next right-hand-man. He also captures Imperial Colonel Rebus, an infamous Sith superweapon designer, who had a hand in the Gauntlet and other such weapons. He is nearly captured in the attempt, however, as it was a trap to acquire the droid and his power core.).*

(The Old Republic: Republic Trooper)

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Republic Trooper summary above.

- Once Bevera Dodonna and the smuggler take some “personal time,” the smuggler again meets with Pollaran at Port Nowhere. Pollaran has figured out that the creatures that attacked Dodonna was an altered creature that was exported from Voss. Dodonna reveals that Ivory, Rogun’s predecessor in his criminal empire, was captured a few years ago by the Republic and secretly incarcerated on Belsavis. The smuggler and his crew head for Belsavis to the top secret prison where Ivory is being held. The planet is now in chaos, though, thanks to an Imperial air strike, coinciding with a massive prison break a few days ago. The only thing Dodonna can offer to Ivory in return for help going after Rogun is a single, monitored holocall. The smuggler meets Dodonna’s prison contact, Marshall Cavarat, who is testy because of the number of prisoners running wild in the prison. She directs the smuggler to Ivory’s location, amid an area controlled by a prison gang. A snitch, Amikab, reveals that the gang is the Scourge, who is using redirected shields to turn their area into a fortress. The smuggler takes out the shield generators, then enters, only to find that Ivory isn’t there anymore. Cavarat then informs him that there is a new breakout of super-max prisoners across the planet, and many of those who were prisoners are former members of Ivory’s gang. He is likely gathering his people back together and heading deeper below the surface into the Vaults. They find a secret passage out of Ivory’s cell and into the caverns. Apparently, Ivory has been running loose in the prison for quite a while. They question another prisoner, Sraja, who is still bound but seems to be going nuts while being “called” by Ivory. They are attacked (and Sraja assassinated) by a corrupt Republic officer (Legat) and a sniper (Dust) that work for Rogun. The smuggler kills them, then uses information from Dust to find the one cell on Ivory’s list that has not yet been opened to free an ally. The smuggler reaches the cell as Ivory’s allies work to free the Gen’Dai maximum security prisoner there. The smuggler offers Ivory (via holocomm) a chance at Republic gratitude if he helps take down Rogun, but he mocks the offer. Ivory reveals that it was he who found ancient transmitters left in the Vaults and used them to alert the Empire to the prison’s existence on Belsavis, causing the Imperial strike. The prisoner is freed before the smuggler can stop it. He must battle the prisoner, Agrular the Mad, and survives. He then seeks to stop Ivory from opening the hidden prison vaults beneath the main prison. Dust appears to have survived his earlier encounter, despite being believed dead. Dust and other goons from Rogun were sent to also kill Ivory. Ivy goes to work with the smuggler in return for help escaping Rogun’s men. The smuggler takes out Dust and his men, and Ivory provides information about Rogun’s secret base network. Ivory is turned over to the Republic (again). The smuggler gets lucky again, this time with Cavarat, then contacts Dodonna and Pollaran. They answer a distress call from Jedi Master Sumalee, who knows of the smuggler’s issues with the Voidwolf. Shariss Kartur, an old friend of Sumalee and Risha (who used to run together) who has become an SIS agent, has followed the Voidwolf to Hoth, but he wiped out her escort, leaving her trapped on Hoth in one of the Grand Admiral’s vaults. The smuggler heads to Hoth and finds her, smuggling her up to the Republic space station over Hoth. With permits from Dodonna, they then head for Voss, where the Empire and Republic are vying for influence. He meets Lokir-Ka, his guide, who say that the creatures were created by the Gormak. He believes that the Exchange settlement is the source of sending the creatures off of the planet. One of Lokir-Ka’s trading contacts, Scratch, helps the smuggler approach Jela Reneke, a woman working with Rogun to sell the creatures. He heads for a meeting deep in Gormak territory. Along the way, they also help Devar Ganna, a Republic diplomat, by reaching his sister (Kindra) at the Shrine of Healing and delivering word about her mother being ill. The smuggler meets Jela and the Gormak beast wrangler “Gormak Zak.” Unfortunately, Jela recognizes the smuggler as Rogun’s enemy and arranges for Voss commandos to find the smuggler at the creature trading location, marking him as illegally selling the beasts. Lokir-Ka buys him time to reach Scratch, who helps him by shipping him (temporarily carbon frozen) to Zak in order to get behind enemy lines. The block of carbonite then automatically thaws on a timer, allowing the smuggler to confront Zak. Zak has gone native and considers the Gormak his people, not Rogun’s gang anymore. He believes Jela has gone too far this time and offers to help the smuggler. They battle corrupted Gormak cyborgs together, then the smuggler goes after Jela, using codes to her base that Zak provides. Zak seeks shelter with the Exchange in the meantime. Lokir-Ka helps the smuggler go to the Nightmare Lands (the “Dark Heart” of Voss) and provides a recorder to get evidence of Jela’s crimes to prove his own innocence. Jela is already meeting with Lord Wretch, her Sith contact, when the smuggler arrives. The smuggler defeats her beasts and Wretch, then goes after Jela, whom he kills. He returns to Lokir-Ka, who insists that the
The smuggler goes to a hearing to present his evidence against Jela and prove his innocence. (On the way, he delivers the message to Kindra Gann.) The tribunal finds the smuggler to be not guilty of trading with the Gormak, but he is convicted of entering forbidden territory and such. His “punishment” is to aid Voss by making deliveries offworld for them. Unfortunately, Dodonna now has to defend her decision to send the smuggler to Voss during such diplomatically difficult times. Rogun is now calling upon his allies to work against the smuggler, apparently drawing them to him at his bolthole on Tatooine. After finishing the deliveries for the Voss, the smuggler arrives on Tatooine and faces off with Rogun in person. Two Sith women (Chane and Desora) arrive to aid Rogun, and present a transmission from the Voidwolf, who reveals that Pollaran and Dodonna have been using the smuggler all along. Pollaran intends to have the smuggler take out Rogun to lock up the underworld under the Voidwolf’s control, and when the Empire wins the Great Galactic War, the Voidwolf will provide Dodonna with her own planet. The Voidwolf will then use his criminal forces for an attack on the Republic within its own borders to aid the Imperial war effort. The smuggler takes out Chane and Desora, saving himself and Rogun, and Rogun forgives him the missing blasters that began his vendetta. Rogun outfits the smuggler to attack the Voidwolf’s flagship at Corellia, where he had helped to push the Corellians to side with the Empire. Pollaran and Dodonna are likely there too. On Corellia, the smuggler meets with Master Sumalee, revealing Dodonna’s duplicity, but without proof, Sumalee will not act outside the law. However, Sumalee knows that Dodonna’s connection to Pollaran is a major scandal on Coruscant. The smuggler gets into Pollaran’s home on Corellia and hacks his holotransmitter, finding a message from former CorSec agent Nevis Kitt about an upcoming Corellian loyalist attempt to strike at the Imperials. They intend to blow open a Selonian tunnel into the Red Light Sector, which would actually help the Imperials, despite what Pollaran is assuring his allies. The smuggler crashes the meeting between the rebels, and Pollaran claims that all of the things the smuggler gained for the Republic were actually for the Voidwolf, and all on a Senator’s payroll. It gets the rebels a bit riled, but Pollaran finally calls in Imperial reinforcements to just kill everyone and end it. Fortunately for Nevis and the rebels, the smuggler defeats the droids that arrive (from Caicos, one of the Council members who supports the Empire), then Sumalee arrives to assist them. Pollaran escapes, but the droids being from Caicos give them an idea. They use hit and run tactics to distract Caicos’ forces, then an agent inside the Caicos factory (Doctor Shi Bata) helps sneak the smuggler inside, so that he can go after Pollaran, who has likely gone. Once inside with Bata, the smuggler finds Pollaran trying to have his face surgically altered to go into hiding. The smuggler confronts him and takes him down. In return for his life, Pollaran provides information on Dodonna, whom he himself had turned with promises of her own world to rule. With him turned over, the smuggler contacts Sumalee and provides her with the evidence against Dodonna. Unfortunately, Dodonna has escaped to the Museum of Alien History on Corellia in an attempt to get to the Imperials and then to Voidwolf. With the help of the Selonina Curske, the smuggler reaches the museum and confronts Dodonna. Her career is in ruins, and it appears that the Voidwolf has also betrayed her, leaving here there to rot. She provides information on Voidwolf’s secret fleet in hopes of mercy. She willingly lets him take her into Republic custody to confess her crimes and seek redemption. He returns to Sumalee, and they know that with the attack on Coruscant, they could not withstand an assault on Republic shipyards by the Voidwolf. The smuggler seeks out Caicos at his estate, then captures him after a brief scuffle, forcing him to get them aboard Voidwolf’s flagship. The smuggler arrives as the Voidwolf is coordinating with three pirate leaders (Trizz’mal the Merciless, Iceheart Carac, and Lunatta) for the upcoming assault. The pirate leaders will be loyal to whomever wins between Voidwolf and the smuggler (i.e. the strongest). After a fierce fight, Voidwolf is seemingly beaten when he pulls out a thermal detonator to kill the smuggler. The smuggler is able to toss it back toward him, killing the Grand Admiral. With the fleet at his command, the smuggler orders them to turn on the Empire, causing them to attack their own Imperial escort. With the ship set on a failsafe to explode and his own shuttle destroyed, the smuggler is able to get aboard an escape pod just in time, escaping down to Corellia to reunite with Sumalee. For his work in bringing down Grand Admiral Harridax Kirill (AKA Voidwolf) and saving their shipyards, the smuggler is congratulated by Senator Clento Rone, Fleet Admiral Helik,
The smuggler also helps his crew. He assists Corso in finding his cousin, Rona, to inform her of their family’s fate. They do so by contacting “Doctor Hope” on Coruscant, who has them smuggle medication past Coruscant security for him in Corso’s own body in return for helping them find Rona. It turns out to be spice, not medicine. It turns out that she is a smuggler and was the one running the spice through “Doctor Hope.” She is the local Black Sun underboss. She isn’t at all affected by the loss of her family, and she refuses to leave with the rather naive Corso. They also find that someone is using accounts from the late Viidu’s organization – their old slicer, Jettison. Knowing Jettison must be desperate to do this, Corso asks the smuggler to check in on him on Tatooine. They trace him down to a small village, where the locals are seemingly going crazy and becoming cannibals. They find Jettison held captive by the cannibal militiamen, whom they defeat to free Jettison from being eventually eaten. He is in need of financial help without Viidu. Corso and the smuggler help him out financially, and he sets up a repair shop in Anchorhead. Corso later finds that Ord Mantell’s governor is calling him their great current hero. They also ask for Corso and the smuggler to get disarm codes for an EMP pulser that was left by the Imperials when they left the planet. They get disarm codes from an Imperial weapons cache on Balmorra. After killing several men who attack them that appear to be Imperials, they discover that they were actually resistance fighters who had stolen Imperial uniforms and planned to steal the Imperial weapons there. Having spoken with Danla Zin, the wife of Magar, one of the dead men, they deliver the weapons to her behind enemy lines in hopes of helping make up for his death. They do so, also meeting Whitat, the jerk running the town she is in. He offers more for the weapons than Danla, but the smuggler sticks to his word and gives them at a fair price – insisted by Danla Zin – to Danla as agreed. They then deliver the disarm codes to Ord Mantell and are heroes once again. By this point, Corso now considers the smuggler to be his family. Bowdaar also considers the smuggler family, even after the smuggler refuses to place Bowdaar back into honor-based slavery through a life debt. The smuggler also helps Risha in her quest to restore the Drayen Dynasty on Dubrillion by joining her in contacting noble Count Merritt Rineld, who is already planning to work toward overthrowing the current king of Dubrillion. Rineld suggests that he and Risha marry as a means of bringing her into Dubrillion politics again to further her claim to the throne. When the king puts a death mark on Rineld’s head, the people rise up, and martial law is declared as the fight for Dubrillion begins. He also helps Akaavi Spar get revenge for Clan Spar when she discovers that the order sent to Tyrak came from Imperial Major Stanwu, the Empire’s liason with bounty hunters. Akaavi pretends to be a bounty hunter on Nar Shaddaa to be “hired” by Stanwu, thereby getting close enough to kill him. However, it turns out that he only gave the order to be signed by Tyrak because of false information he was given by a Mandalorian, Tayari Rook. She allows Stanwu to live and focuses on Rook as her target. Upon discovering that he has set up his own makeshift clan on Hutta, Akaavi travels there and kills Rook, but not before forcing him to confess that he betrayed Clan Spar for a favorable contract. As for his makeshift clan, some survive by escaping, while those who stay to fight are killed. He is also able to talk to Tuno enough that Tuno also feels like the crew is his new family. The smuggler also, depending on which accounts are to be believed, ends up married to either Risha or Akaavi.

(The Old Republic: Smuggler)*

*NOTE: See note with the beginning of the Smuggler summary above.

- Jedi Kana Terrid, sent behind Sith lines years ago to infiltrate the Empire and become the apprentice of Darth Malgus by her own Jedi Master, Gnost-Dural, finally fully submits to the call of the Dark Side when Malgus offers her the chance to become the cybernetically-enhanced, Force-using pilot of the Ascendant Spear. She has provided information about the ship to Gnost-Dural and the Republic in the past, though, so they know enough about this strange union of ship and pilot to recognize the threat the ship – first identified by Theron Shan when defeating the Sun Razer – poses to the Republic.
• Forces under Darth Gravus finally succeed in undermining Republic reclamation efforts on Taris. However, Gravus’ status is soon somewhat harmed by losing control of Leritor, which forces him to fall back to Bothawui to regroup for another strike at Leritor.

• Republic SpecForces Colonel (and former leader of Havoc Squad) Jace Malcom is on Kalandis VII, advising a Republic team led by Sergeant Shanra Immel, as they attack an Imperial spaceport. They set up beacons for a bombing run, but Jace spots a Sith starship and leaves the group to try to capture or destroy it himself. He kills the Sith aboard and captures the ship, but the Imperials have set it to self-destruct. He leaps into the air as it explodes, intending to fall to his death, but he is caught by the wing of a Republic starfighter, surviving after all. He reveals that this is his last mission on the front lines, not because he expected to die, but because he has been recalled to Coruscant by the Supreme Chancellor for a new position.

(The Last Battle of Colonel Jace Malcom)*

*NOTE: I would place this a year earlier to give him a little more time in the Supreme Commander position before Annihilation, but The Old Republic Encyclopedia has put the game beginning in this year as well, so this must be sandwiched in between the game’s main class storylines and Annihilation in this year.

• Newly-elected Supreme Chancellor Leontyne Saresh enacts all thirty-six wartime provisions in the Galactic Constitution within days of being elected. This greatly increases her own power, but her critics are somewhat sated when Republic SpecForces Colonel Jace Malcom is promoted to the role of Supreme Commander of the Republic Military.

(The Old Republic: The Battle of Ilum)*

*NOTE: This is a “flashpoint” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters of any class or affiliation (Smuggler, Jedi Consular, Jedi Knight, Republic Trooper, Imperial Agent, Sith Warrior, Sith Inquisitor, and Bounty Hunter, with their respective companions) around Level 50 in character progression. Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (not even from a particular affiliation), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations.

• With the Battle of Ilum against Darth Malgus’ New Empire ending with Malgus’ defeat and the capture of his stealth vessel(s), the Republic and Sith Empire recognize that the time to strike against this “False Emperor” is now. With the coordinates for his battlestation in-hand, both sides send forces against it. A team from one of the factions manages to defeat Malgus’ Mandalorian allies, including Jindo Krey. Malgus’ allies in the Schism Collective, led by Arkis Wode, however, are blasting away at capital ships with cannons from the base. The Collective designed the battlestation into a great technological marvel. The team faces off with HK-47, who has been rebuilt by the Schism Collective under orders from Darth Malgus after being defeated at the Foundry while protecting Revan. Both HK-47 and the Schism Collective’s team are defeated. The team eventually reaches the throne room, where they face “Emperor” Malgus himself. Malgus sets the station to self-destruct, so that it will destroy the fleets attacking it. He then engages the team in combat, which proves to be his downfall. He is killed in the struggle by their combined skills. The “New Empire” is dead before it ever truly lived.

(The Old Republic: False Emperor)*

*NOTE: This is a “flashpoint” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters of any class or affiliation (Smuggler, Jedi Consular, Jedi Knight, Republic Trooper, Imperial Agent, Sith Warrior, Sith Inquisitor, and Bounty Hunter, with their respective companions) around Level 50 in character progression. Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (not even from a particular affiliation), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations.

• In the Tion Hegemony, massive outbreaks of the Rakghoul plague have ravaged four entire planets. Now, the threat is nearing the planet Kaon. Seeking to end the spread of the plague before it can threaten the Republic or the Sith Empire, both factions send forces to Kaon. (The Imperial faction is guided by Darth Nurin, master of Lord Velnine.) Both factions also hope to gain the Tion Hegemony’s favor in their ongoing conflict with each other. To do so, they must save Tion nobles trapped on Kaon after the Tion leadership chose to quarantine these worlds. One faction’s team arrives as Major Byzal of Kaon Security is investigating a crashed ship that turns out to be full of soldiers infected with the plague. Byzal himself is infected and must be killed. After destroying a ridiculous number of rakghouls, the team discovers a pilot named Melarra, who wants passage off of Kaon in exchange for revealing the source of the rakghouls on Kaon. It turns out that she brought them on her own shuttle under orders from Doctor Lorrick, a member of the Thirty-seven Families (the main rivals to the Tion Hegemony’s royal family). She reveals that Lorrick is on Ord Mantell. For now, Kaon is overrun, but the Tion royal family is able to contain the outbreak from spreading any further, now that they know that the spread was artificial.*

(The Old Republic: Kaon Under Siege)*

*NOTE: This is a “flashpoint” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters of any class or affiliation (Smuggler, Jed Consular, Jedi Knight, Republic Trooper, Imperial Agent, Sith Warrior, Sith Inquisitor, and Bounty Hunter, with their respective companions) around Level 50 in character progression. Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (not even from a particular affiliation), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations.

• With the source of the plague of modified rakghouls in the Tion Hegemony determined to be Doctor Lorrick, a power-mad scientist on Ord Mantell, both the Republic and Sith Empire send agents to take down Lorrick, end his plague and his quest for galactic domination, and potentially capture his rakghoul research (to destroy or save for potential future military application against the other side in the Great Galactic War by less moral leaders). They investigate Lorrick’s base of operations, taking down creatures like Project Sav-Rak, rakghoul cyborgs, and such. They finally take down Lorrick’s assistants (all turned into rakghouls). He has developed a version of the rakghoul virus that becomes more refined and powerful with each iteration. He uses the newest version to transform himself into a sort of super-rakghoul, which the team subsequently destroys, before wiping out his research to keep it from spreading anywhere else in the galaxy.*

(The Old Republic: Lost Island)*

*NOTE: This is a “flashpoint” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters of any class or affiliation (Smuggler, Jed Consular, Jedi Knight, Republic Trooper, Imperial Agent, Sith Warrior, Sith Inquisitor, and Bounty Hunter, with their respective companions) around Level 50 in character progression. Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (not even from a particular affiliation), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations.

• Republic and Sith Empire forces converge on Belsavis, where a new Rakatan prison, separate from the one already embroiled in conflict, has been discovered a polar region. This prison, the Eternity Vault, is where the Rakatans kept the worst of the worst, prisoners they could not afford to ever allow loose in the galaxy again. Now, both sides want the ancient Rakatan technology within, but the activity around the Eternity Vault has awakened Soa, the Infernal One, an over-sized, Force-sensitive Rakatan who was imprisoned millennia earlier by the Rakatans after he became the self-proclaimed ruler of Korriban. Both sides now race to stop Soa before he can free himself and get loose into the galaxy at large. One faction’s team manages to reach the deepest region of the Eternity Vault and faces Soa directly, destroying him in a fierce battle. The Eternity Vault’s threat is ended.

(The Old Republic: The Eternity Vault)

*NOTE: This is an “operation” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters of any class or affiliation (Smuggler, Jedi Consular, Jedi Knight, Republic Trooper, Imperial Agent, Sith Warrior, Sith Inquisitor, and Bounty Hunter, with their respective companions). Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (not even from a particular affiliation), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations.

- Agents of the Republic and the Sith Empire are called into action when Karagga the Unyielding, the Supreme Mogul of the Hutt Cartel, moves forces into the neutral Vyron System. They arrive too late to help the Vyron natives, who are now under Hutt control, so they head for Hutta to find answers as to why Karagga has taken such aggressive action. One faction makes their way to speak with Karagga, but Karagga sic’s a rancor on them. They defeat the rancor, but Karagga escapes. They pursue, tearing through his minions, until confronting him again outside. Unfortunately, Karagga has now taken control of a giant multi-legged walker, so that he can destroy them himself. In the battle that ensues, Karagga’s mech is destroyed, and he is killed. His data key, however, reveals that these new Hutt attacks were meant to gain new territory to replace territory that has recently been captured by a new threat, the Dread Masters (Sith who formerly worked for the Sith Empire that who, now that they have been released from Belsavis, are trying to conquer the galaxy on their own.)*

(The Old Republic: Karagga’s Palace)

*NOTE: This is an “operation” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters of any class or affiliation (Smuggler, Jedi Consular, Jedi Knight, Republic Trooper, Imperial Agent, Sith Warrior, Sith Inquisitor, and Bounty Hunter, with their respective companions). Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (not even from a particular affiliation), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations.

- Supreme Chancellor Saresh creates a new program to integrate the Jedi Order and Republic military more directly. Among those that are part of this integration is Captain Exteen, a Jedi Knight who is given command of the military vessel Vanguard’s Blade.

(conjecture based on The Old Republic)

- The planet Denova, a world rich in baradium deposits that the Republic discovered the previous year, is in crisis. Three months ago, the Empire discovered the world’s location and information on its natural resources and chose to invade. Low on manpower, the Republic hired the Trandoshan mercenary group known as the Warstalkers, led by Kephess, to defend the world for the Republic. Now, Kephess has betrayed the Republic and turned on his employers, while also convincing the Imperial forces on the world to join him as well. With this combined force, he has now declared Denova to be an independent territory, claiming that “his masters” have given him all that is necessary to control the planet. Both the Republic and Sith Empire send forces to liberate the planet from Kephess and his new faction. (The Republic team is assembled by Captain Exteen, Jedi Knight and commanding officer of the starship Vanguard’s Blade.) One of the invading forces manages to defeat Kephess’ minions and then kills Kephess himself, freeing Denova from his grip. It is revealed that Kephess’ “masters” were, in fact, the Dread Masters, Sith who have escaped from Belsavis.*

(The Old Republic: Explosive Conflict)

*NOTE: This is an “operation” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters of any class or affiliation (Smuggler, Jedi Consular, Jedi Knight, Republic Trooper, Imperial Agent, Sith Warrior, Sith Inquisitor, and Bounty Hunter, with their respective companions). Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (not even from a particular affiliation), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations. One should also note that this operation comes before the Terror from Beyond operation, due to Kephess’ storyline.

- It would appear that the galaxy’s two major powers, the Republic and the Sith Empire, have entered a first contact situation. Heroes from both sides are called to duty on behalf of the Gree Enclave, members of an ancient species that predates the Rakatan Infinite Empire. They must head for the planet Asation to deal with an ancient nemesis of the Gree that is coming through an Ancient Hypergate on Asation, which appears to have been opened by the newly-freed Dread Masters (formerly of the prison on Belsavis), led by a servant of the Dread Masters from recent battles on Denova, Kephess. (In the case of the Sith Empire,
Colonel Jadick and Administrator General Lalat’k of the Gree Enclave call the agents into action after a first contact report from General Threnoldt is made to the Dark Council. After landing on Asation, a faction’s team battles their way to the Ancient Hypergate, where they encounter Dread Master Calphayus, who orders their “vessel” (Kephess the Undying, a resurrected and transformed form of Kephess from Denova) to open the Hypergate. Kephess the Undying then attacks, but is defeated. The Terror from Beyond (AKA “Lotek’k”), their ancient nemesis, emerges from the Hypergate, but it is defeated by the team as it emerges, protecting the galaxy from this ancient beast.*

(The Old Republic: Terror from Beyond)

NOTE: This is an “operation” for The Old Republic, which is designed to be played by groups of characters of any class or affiliation (Smuggler, Jedi Consular, Jedi Knight, Republic Trooper, Imperial Agent, Sith Warrior, Sith Inquisitor, and Bounty Hunter, with their respective companions). Since there is no set number of characters involved or character classes required (not even from a particular affiliation), I am treating this as a group mission and referring to the characters in a generic plural form to keep things generic enough to be accurate in most situations. One should also note that this operation comes after the Explosive Conflict operation, due to Kephess’ storyline.

- Darth Hadra, Dark Council member in charge of the Sphere of Technology, dies.
  (conjecture based on Annihilation)
- In the wake of the Emperor’s apparent death (possibly a temporary disembodiment) at the hands of the Hero of Tython and the defeat of Darth Malgus as the “False Emperor,” Darth Marr steps up to lead as the primary voice on the Dark Council, seeking to use some of the more inclusive ideals of Darth Malgus, even though he believes Malgus to have been misguided in his methods.
  (conjecture based on The Old Republic Encyclopedia)
- Shortly before Theron Shan’s encounter with Morbo the Hutt, the Old Tion Brotherhood comes under the leadership of Zedania and begins expanding its operations. One facet of this expansion, however, is smuggling spice in Morbo the Hutt’s territory without giving him a cut of the profits, which prompts Morbo to put a hit out on the Brotherhood.
  (conjecture based on Annihilation)
- In the three days prior to accidentally ruining the Republic’s Operation Transom, Theron Shan begins noticing Strategic Information Service agents checking out Morbo the Hutt’s operations on Nar Shaddaa (as part of Transom).
  (conjecture based on Annihilation)
- It is a period of turmoil, with the Emperor (Darth Vitiate) believed dead and the Imperial coup by Darth Malgus now defeated. The Old Tion Brotherhood on Nar Shaddaa has run afloat of local crime boss Morbo the Hutt, causing Theron Shan of the Republic’s Strategic Information Service to visit Morbo (unofficially) to bargain for the life of Teff’ith, whom he has taken an interest in protecting since their encounter months earlier. He is able to save her without her realizing his involvement when a team sent by Morbo attacks the Brotherhood, including the ship she is loading. On Coruscant, new Supreme Commander of the Republic Military (and former SpecForces soldier) Jace Malcom meets with Theron’s boss, Director of Republic Strategic Information Service (SIS) Marcus Trant. Jace is not happy (nor is Marcus) that Theron managed to derail an SIS operation (“Transom”) by saving some Republic soldiers who were being sold into slavery by Morbo. (The Republic had planned to track them back to others in the operation, but now cannot do so.) Jace has called Marcus to meet in order to plan the Republic’s next moves, including a strike against the Ascendant Spear, the last of the superweapons that Theron discovered (with Teff’ith and the man who raised him, Jedi Master Ngani Zho) a short while ago. It is commanded by the Falleen Sith Lord known as Darth Karrid, apprentice to the late Darth Malgus. Their goal is a joint operation between SIS, the military, and the Jedi Order to bring down this massive, powerful warship. In the absence of Malgus, Karrid is a bit of a wild card. Some members of the Dark Council do not want her to join their ranks and take the late Darth Mekhis’ Technology Sphere role because she is a Falleen (instead of a Sith Pureblood or even a human) and was Malgus’ apprentice. Darth Mortis in particular would prefer Darth Gravus, though he has been pushed back by the Republic after his victory at Taris to regroup at Bothawui. Darth Marr puts her name forward for the position anyway. Marr informs Karrid of their indecision and that Gravus intends to retake Leritor soon, providing her with her rival’s next move. She heads to Leritor, where she “joins” Gravus in battle against the Republic. She goads him into attacking her to protect himself from a suggested betrayal by Karrid herself, which gives her the chance to wipe him out, along with the Republic forces, thereby earning her the place she had wanted on the Dark Council. Meanwhile, Theron arrives back on Coruscant to face punishment for blowing Operation Transom. He is put into the Analytics Department for the time being, where he assists into the development of the plan to strike the Ascendant Spear, Operation End Game. A chance call from Teff’ith (to tell him to stay away from her) provides inspiration for a plan when she mentions Ziost as a place Theron might have also been following her to look after her (when not wanted). Soon, the operation is coming together. The Jedi Order sends Jedi Master Gnost-Dural to be part of their team, given that he was once the Jedi Master of Kantra Tarrid (AKA Darth Karrid herself). Jace insists that Theron be part of End Game’s strike team as well, given that he was the one who discovered Mekhis’ operations and put together much of the mission plan. When Jace asks Marcus if Theron is related at all to Jedi Grand Master Satele Shan, he learns that Theron is her secret (and more or less estranged) son, which shocks the Supreme Commander. On Ziost, Imperial Minister of Logistics Davidge speaks with Darth Marr about anti-Imperial activities in the Boranall system, which he suggests should be abandoned. Marr, however, sends Karrid and the Ascendant Spear to the system to crush any rebellious activity. On Coruscant, Marcus, Jace, Theron, and Gnost-Dural meet about End Game. They need to get a saboteur aboard the Ascendant Spear to take it down. They also know that the ship requires someone powerful in the Force to fully control the ship, which also requires cybernetic implants to bond the individual to the ship. To do this, they need to know when the ship will be in port, which will require a black cipher device to decode high-level Imperial communications so that they can be prepared for wherever the ship might call. This was what Teff’ith’s mention of Ziost had sparked in Theron: there is a black cipher being used by Minister Davidge at the Orbital Defense Command Center on Ziost, which they could potentially steal, replacing it with a burned out one that the Republic already acquired in order to cover up the theft. They will need Teff’ith’s help to get onto Ziost, however. That evening, Jace calls Theron to have him meet at Jace’s private residence. There, Jace drops a bombshell: he has realized that Theron is not just Satele Shan’s son, but Jace’s own son as well, born of a forbidden love affair back during the Great Galactic War. With very little contact with his mother over the years, Theron is not eager to let a parent into his life, but Theron is willing to talk a bit more when he returns from Operation End Game. Soon, with help from Teff’ith to get details about the Orbital Defense Command Center on Ziost, Theron and Gnost-Dural infiltrate the facility. They are able to steal the black cipher, after a bit of help on-planet from the Ziost Liberation Front (ZLF). They are even able to draw Imperials into a brief battle, in which the ruined old cipher is swapped out for the working one, using sabotage as a cover for the device’s damage. (Theron’s leg is injured during the mission, but he is still functional.) The attack, when reported to Darth Marr as a ZLF terrorist attack, convinces Marr to push for more brutal measures in regaining lost ground for the Empire, using the Ascendant Spear to do so. The Republic’s next step is to infiltrate whatever Imperial space station the Spear visits next, which means that they need a stolen Imperial shuttle. To acquire one, Theron and Gnost-Dural will need to approach Teff’ith again. Before they can do so, though, Theron is asked to meet with Satele, who has already been contacted by a very angry Jace about how she hid her pregnancy and Theron from him for so long. When mother and soon meet face-to-face again, she explains that she not only sacrificed raising him for the good of the Republic, which could not afford to lose the Jedi Grand Master to raising a child or scandal, she also kept him from Jace because she saw how far he was willing to go in the war and worried that he could move closer to the Dark Side, possibly dragging her or Theron with him. Flustered but trying to ignore the issues raised, Theron joins Gnost-Dural to travel to Desevro, where they catch up with Teff’ith, using her debt to Ngani Zhao and a boatload of credits to convince her to help them by taking them to Gorvich, a fellow Old Tion Brotherhood smuggler, who is able to get Theron a shuttle and uniform to infiltrate the Imperials’ Reaver Station, where the Ascendant Spear will soon be docking. (Unfortunately for Teff’ith, Gorvich insists that she go with Theron and Gnost-Dural to keep an eye on them to make sure they return to pay him the rest of what they owe him. Moreover, he keeps the Prosperity, the ship the Jedi provided to Gnost-Dural for End Game.) They head for Reaver Station, where Teff’ith gets them through landing challenges, then Theron moves out to infiltrate the ship. Along the way, he sees a newscast that reports that the Empire’s Moff Nezzor has staged a massive assault at Ruan, capturing it from the Republic. He deviates from the mission to contact Jace to find out why the Republic was unable to stop the attack on Ruan. He is shocked to hear Jace and Marcus explain that they let the attack happen, all to protect the black cipher’s codes. If the Republic had moved against Nezzor, their advantage with the cipher in Operation End Game would have been gone, since the Imperials would have changed their codes. He also learns from them that the next target for the Imperials (without the Spear) is Duro, another world they cannot send extra help to protect. Theron decides to change all of that. The team on Reaver Station splits up. Gnost-Dural sneaks aboard the Ascendant Spear (as “Darth Malitiae”) to confront Karrid, intending to taunt her into joining the attack at Duro, which would allow Jace to send forces to protect the world amid the strike against the supervessel. Theron boards the Spear to sabotage it, per their plans, using a faked attack on the station (sliced into the computer system) as cover. He hides out in the engine room. Teff’ith, meanwhile, is sent back to Coruscant with a message to deliver directly to Satele, regarding what they have just learned. Gnost-Dural enters the command chamber of the ship, where Karrid controls the ship with the Force and her cybernetics, while bolstered by two Sith apprentices at her side, anchoring her with the Force. Gnost-Dural battles the three Sith, who believe he is there to cover the imaginary attack that Theron’s slicing has suggested. He is defeated and taken prisoner by his former Padawan. For her part, Teff’ith returns to Deserovo, near Reaver Station, and gets the Prosperity back from an unhappy Gorvich, and uses that faster ship to head for Coruscant. Back on the Ascendant Spear, Gnost-Dural is tortured by Karrid, using a machine from Darth Mekhis that attacks the mind, not the body. Karrid also brings in two new warriors to attend her when piloting the ship: Lords Quux and Ordez. Soon, as Teff’ith finally meets with Satele on Coruscant (after having to face off with the authorities, who do not believe her story at first), Gnost-Dural “breaks” under interrogation and torture. He “reveals” that he was sent to distract her so that the Spear would not join the Imperials in their attack on Duro. He claims that the Republic has a black cipher (which they do), hence knowing about the attack, but also that the Republic is planning an ambush there. This entices Karrid into heading for Duro, just as Gnost-Dural had planned. On Coruscant, Teff’ith informs Satele of Theron and Gnost-Dural’s plans, and they in turn convince Jace to not only send a fleet to Duro, as Theron hoped, but also to lead the mission himself. Satele and Teff’ith will accompany him as well. Soon, Moff Nezzor’s Extempus leads his forces to Duro, only to find Jace’s Aegis and a Republic fleet waiting for him. Battle ensues on a massive scale, made even more devastating as the Ascendant Spear emerges from hyperspace. Unfortunately for Darth Karrid, Theron is able to use a computer virus to constantly tweak the ship’s targeting just a bit off target from where Karrid is aiming. It only works for a moment, however, and alerts her to Theron’s presence on the ship. Theron quickly rescues Gnost-Dural, and the two head for Karrid’s crystal pod from which she commands the vessel. While Gnost-Dural battles Quux, Ordez, and another of Karrid’s apprentices, Theron hacks into the ship’s systems to convince it that it is heavily damaged. This causes it to disconnect from Karrid, who emerges from her pod to stop him. On the bridge, Moff Lorman, the military’s commanding officer on the ship, sees the Republic taking advantage of the situation and gives the order to abandon ship. As the Republic presses its attack, the ship is damaged further (for real this time), causing Karrid to break off from trying to kill Theron, so that she can return to her pod. As it is closing, Theron tosses his damaged, overloading blaster into the pod, where it explodes, killing Darth Karrid and ruining the ship’s controls inside the pod. Theron and Gnost-Dural steal Karrid’s personal escape pod to get off of the ship before it finally explodes, wiping out the last of the known superweapons of Darth Mekhis. Three days later, Theron skips the debriefing on the mission with Jace, Marcus, Gnost-Dural, and Satele. After Satele and Jace confer on Jace’s desire to have a relationship with his son, he finds a message waiting for him. Theron has something he must do, but when he returns, they can get a drink and talk. For his part, Theron visits Teff’ith, gives her the promised pay from the mission, and suggests that she join SIS. She turns down the offer (but not the credits) and leaves, wanting him to stop keeping tabs on her. For his part, he knows that he will continue to do so. After all, in any way that really matters, Teff’ith is family.
(Annihilation)*

*NOTE: This novel is set just after the main storylines of The Old Republic (video game). Its references to the events of The Lost Suns as being nearly two years earlier are in error, due to the game being revealed in The Old Republic Encyclopedia to being in 3,640 BBY, rather than in 3,643 BBY, as was once believed, even behind the scenes. The novel also refers to the resumption of hostilities between the Sith Empire and the Republic as being within the last 18 months, which also assumed that original date and must be considered to be only a matter of a few months, at best, due to the current date for SWTOR.

The Old Republic [continued] (novel series/comic series/video game: Sean Williams & Paul S. Kemp & Drew Karpyshyn & Alexander Freed & Rob Chestney)

The Old Republic (video game: LucasArts)

Class Storylines

- Jedi Consular
- Jedi Knight
- Republic Trooper
- Smuggler
- Sith Warrior
- Sith Inquisitor
- Jedi Consular [continued]
- Bounty Hunter
- Imperial Agent

Flashpoints

- The Black Talon
- The Esseles
- Hammer Station
- Athiss
- Mandalorian Raiders
- Cademimu

The Old Republic [continued] (comic series: Rob Chestney & Alexander Freed)

The Lost Suns [continued] (comic series: Alexander Freed)

- The Lost Suns, Part I [continued] (comic: Alexander Freed)
- The Lost Suns, Part II (comic: Alexander Freed)
- The Lost Suns, Part III (comic: Alexander Freed)
- The Lost Suns, Part IV (comic: Alexander Freed)
- The Lost Suns, Part V (comic: Alexander Freed)

The Old Republic [continued] (video game: LucasArts)

Class Storylines [continued]

- Republic Trooper [continued]
- Sith Warrior [continued]
- Sith Inquisitor [continued]
- Imperial Agent [continued]
- Smuggler [continued]
- Bounty Hunter [continued]
- Jedi Knight [continued]
- Sith Warrior [continued]

The Old Republic [continued] (comic series: Rob Chestney & Alexander Freed)

The Lost Suns [continued] (comic series: Alexander Freed)

- The Lost Suns, Part V [continued] (comic: Alexander Freed)

The Old Republic [continued] (video game: LucasArts)

Flashpoints [continued]

- Taral V
- Maelstrom Prison
- Boarding Party
- The Foundry

Class Storylines [continued]

- Jedi Consular [continued]
- Jedi Knight [continued]
- Imperial Agent [continued]
Bounty Hunter [continued]
Republic Trooper [continued]
Smuggler [continued]
Sith Inquisitor [continued]

Flashpoints [continued]
Colicoid War Game
The Red Reaper
Directive 7

Class Storylines [continued]
Sith Warrior [continued]
Jedi Knight [continued]
Imperial Agent [continued]
Sith Inquisitor [continued]
Jedi Consular [continued]
Republic Trooper [continued]
Bounty Hunter [continued]
Jedi Consular [continued]
Republic Trooper [continued]
Smuggler [continued]

The Last Battle of Colonel Jace Malcom (SWI137/DRS13 short story: Alexander Freed)
The Old Republic [continued] (novel series/comic series/video game: Sean Williams & Paul S. Kemp & Drew Karpyshyn & Alexander Freed & Rob Chestney)

The Old Republic [continued] (novel series/comic series/video game: Sean Williams & Paul S. Kemp & Drew Karpyshyn & Alexander Freed & Rob Chestney)

3,640 – 3,600 BBY
- Sometime after the Second Great Galactic War, a cataclysm strikes Tython, causing the Jedi to evacuate. Hyperspace lanes will soon collapse in the region, making Tython lost to history once more. Many will think of the world as merely legend, though the Jedi will maintain that it is a real planet through at least the end of the Clone Wars.
  (conjecture based on Nexus of Power)

3,600 BBY
- During the “Time of the Rot,” conflict among the Lost Tribe of the Sith continues, but no more Grand Lords or pretenders to that position will live in the palace in Tahv for at least the next six centuries.
  (conjecture based on Pantheon)

3,500 BBY
The planet Echnos is settled by accident, as an Old Republic scout vessel is pulled out of hyperspace due to Tinn VI’s magnetic interference.
(conjecture based on Enemies for Life via TimeTales, abridged)

The Old Republic first contacts Iktotch (Iktotchon) and the native Iktotchi, who use a giant Republic symbol to flag down a Republic vessel. The Iktotchi are found to have natural precognitive abilities. One of the first structures built by offworlders on the planet is a Jedi Academy.*
(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Alien Species)*

*NOTE: The Alien Anthology suggests a date of 3,475 BBY for this event, but that is only because it dates back 3,500 years from a point 25 ABY. The NEGtAS placed it here, which basically discounts the timeframe in which the Alien Anthology was supposedly written, but since this is the newest date, we’ll stick with it.

3,350 BBY

- The Centrality is formed as an independent territory, though it still answers to the Hutt clans.
(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

3,100 BBY

- A former slaves on Kesh founds the Korsinite League, taking the surname of the Lost Tribe of the Sith’s founder as a title. This Korsin patterns his life after Yaru and Nida Korsin and teaches that anyone can aspire to “Korsin-ness.” Unfortunately for him, this leads to many others among the Korsinite League following that example, proclaiming themselves to also deserve the “Korsin” title. The founder objects, only to eventually be killed for his protests. Nearly all future members of the Korsinite League will carry the title “Korsin.”
(conjecture based on Pantheon)

- The Hapes Cluster begins its famous period of isolation.
(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

3,060 BBY

- Varner Hilts is born on Kesh.
(conjecture based on Secrets)

3,052 BBY

- The man who will be the travel supervisor for Alanciar with authority over Quarra Thayn is born on Kesh.
(conjecture based on Pandemonium)

3,040 BBY

- Around this time, Belmer Kattun is born on Kesh.*
(conjecture based on Pandemonium)*

*NOTE: He is in his sixties in the story, so I have rounded to 65.

3,032 BBY

- On Naboo, when Bursa creatures decimate Otoh Sancture, its Gungan ruler Boss Gallo, seeks the aid of Boss Marsune in raising an army to retake his home. Along the way, he discovers that the Bursas were sent by rival Gungan Boss Rogoe. With that army, he strikes against Rogoe’s home base, the underwater city of Spearhead, using the united might of numerous Gungan tribes that he has befriended to defeat Rogue. In the aftermath, Boss Gallo becomes the leader of all Gungans, not just Otoh Sancture, and he takes Spearhead, renamed “Otoh Gunga,” as his new capital. (To be continued below . . . )

(Galactic Battlegrounds)

Galactic Battlegrounds (video game: LucasArts)
Galactic Battlegrounds (video game: LucasArts)
Boss Nass Campaign

3,030 BBY
- Varner Hilts becomes the caretaker of Tahv on Kesh.
  (conjecture based on Pantheon)
- Around this time, Korsin Bentado is born on Kesh.*
  (conjecture based on Pandemonium)*
*NOTE: He is "well into his fifties" in Pandemonium, which I have rounded to 55 years old.

3,025 BBY
- Around this time (a few years before or after), Edell Vrai is born among the Lost Tribe of the Sith on Kesh.*
  (conjecture based on Pandemonium)*
*NOTE: He is "on the near side of fifty," whatever that means.
- Varner Hilts, caretaker of Tahv on Kesh, will dub the era of the Lost Tribe of the Sith’s history following the death of Grand Lord Lillia Venn as “The Time of the Rot.”
  (conjecture based on Pantheon)
- Varner Hilts is barely able to get Yaru Korsin’s holocron working to present his testament on Testament. Although he has been instructed in how to operate it by the former caretaker, it takes him four tries to actually activate the device.
  (conjecture based on Pantheon)

3,024 BBY
- Illiana Merko is born on Kesh.
  (conjecture based on Pandemonium)

3,019 BBY
- Quarra (later Quarra Thayn when married) is born on Kesh.
  (conjecture based on Pandemonium)
- Jogan Halder is born on Kesh.
  (conjecture based on Pandemonium)

3,017 BBY
- After centuries of further Axis militarism after the Sith Wars of six centuries ago, the Republic and Alsakan enter into the Final (Seventeenth) Alsakan Conflict. This time, though, the Republic Navy (under the command of Supreme Chancellor Vedij) and Alsakan are confronted by a third party, a well-armed Corellia that responds by attacking both sides, defeating both to the point where Prince-Admiral Jonash e Solo can dictate a final peace treaty at swordpoint that both sides will continue to adhere to in the future.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

3,309 BBY
- The environmental damage caused by a massive meteor storm on the planet 244Core is finally mended.*
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*
*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn. This takes place 500 years after the damage is incurred.

3,005 BBY
- According to Captain Ruehn of the 108th, Southern Directorate, in the Alanciar society on Kesh, the only real battles he will fight from now until thirty years from now will be arguments with the Shore Guard over who can claim the most skilled warriors for their forces.
  (conjecture based on Pandemonium)

3,000 BBY
- Taymor is born on Kesh.*
  (conjecture based on Pandemonium)*
*NOTE: She is in her twenties in Pandemonium, which I have rounded to 25 years.
• Parlan Spinner is born on Kesh. He is a descendant of one of the earliest humans to be cast out of the Lost Tribe of the Sith.
  (conjecture based on Spiral)
• The Khil join the Old Republic.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 12: Aliens--“Enemies and Allies” via TimeTales, abridged)
• Corellia StarDrive’s senior design staff dies in a shuttle accident, leaving the company in dire circumstances. The company is then bought out by Corellia Engineering Systems, which can be seen as somewhat ironic.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Vehicles and Vessels)
• Pho Ph’eah is first contacted by representatives of the Old Republic.
  (conjecture based on Han Solo and the Corporate Sector Sourcebook)
• The Elrood colony on Derilyn is formed, followed by the discovery of the Coynites, Telitors, Orfites, and Meris.
  (conjecture based on Planets of the Galaxy: Volume Three)
• Corellian Leniel Beal leads the colonization of the planet Socorro.
  (conjecture based on The Black Sands of Socorro via TimeTales, abridged)
• The planet Kowak is discovered. It quickly becomes of interest to botanists, zoologists, and other academics, and universities send expeditions to examine its wildlife, along with seeking to determine if any of its local fauna could be used for pharmaceutical purposes. Over thousands of years, this continues, yet no permanent peaceful settlements are made, due to the activities of the rather disruptive Kowakian monkey-lizards.*
  (conjecture based on Friends Like These)
  *NOTE: This is “a few thousand years” before Friends Like These, which I have rounded to 3,000 years.
• Iann Doaba, a Jedi Knight, is one of the original colonists to settle the planet Socorro. He falls in love with Cjaalysce Beal and actually kills a man who tries to steal her love from him. His conscience, laden with guilt, leads him to exile himself from the rest of the colonists. His self-imposed exile, dooming himself to wander around the open desert, later becomes known as The Long Walk among the Ibhaan’I shamans. When Cjaalysce learns of his exile, she flees into the desert in search of him. She is lost for many weeks, until her desiccated body is found in a rocky outcropping. Beneath her body, searchers find Iann’s robes and his lightsaber. They also find an indelible shadow of his form, and it is generally believed that Iann’s grief was so great that it consumed him. The shadow, the past vestige of Iann’s spirit, is rumored to have attached itself to a portrait of Cjaalysce, and is witnessed wherever the portrait is shown.
  (conjecture based on The Black Sands of Socorro via TimeTales, verbatim)
• The planet Farrfin is contacted by the Old Republic. The Jedi Council sends a force to take out illegal activities in the area, and the ensuing show of force scars the Farghul society’s collective psyche for millennia to come. They become distrustful of outsiders.
  (conjecture based on Alien Anthology)
• On Kesh, Tahv caretaker Varner Hilts and his Keshiri assistant, Jaye Vuhld, work with those among the timekeeping Sandpipes to prepare for the Festival of Nida’s Rise and Testament Day, which are happening at the exact same time for the first time since the holidays were created. With twelve days to go, Hilts is visited by Illiana Merko, leader of the Sisters of Seelah, a group based on the principles of the mostly-despised Seelah Korsin. She tries to threaten Hilts into altering Yaru Korsin’s testament that is presented to the populace in Tahv every twenty-five years on Testament Day. He can’t do so, however, because the testament is not written but recorded in a Sith holocron that only Hilts has been trained to activate. He has no idea how to change the contents. A few days later, with eight days remaining, other factions like the Korsinite League, Force 57, and others arrive at Tahv for the upcoming holidays. When Illiana tries to force Hilts to do the impossible yet again, members of other factions emerge and a lightsaber battle nearly breaks out among the Sandpipes. Knowing that the Pantheon’s Peace (a concept that says that all factions will keep the peace during the reading of the testament) would stop the carnage that will ensue, Hilts has Jaye explain what they have discovered: that the Sandpipes keep time one second off per day than they Varner Hilts and his assistant Jaye Vuhld are traveling to the Temple around the Omen on Kesh. They reach The Blocks, dropped by Nida Korsin to prevent anyone from reaching the crash site on foot, where they use plants growing through the rocks to climb beyond them. They arrive at the Temple site, seeking to find something to reunite the Sith factions, tying back to Yaru Korsin’s words in the Testament: “The true power is behind the throne.” They spot an uvak rider in the sky along the way, and upon arrival at the old city, they find the uvak slain. Jaye gives Varner a lightsaber they pilfered from a dead Sith on their way out of the struggles back near the museum. They realize the rider is in the wardroom, and upon seeing a sculpture of Seelah Korsin, Varner realizes that one of her descendants is the rider: Illiana Merko, whom he had recently encountered when she tried to get him to change the Testament to benefit the Sisters of Seelah for Testament Day. Illiana has found Seelah’s body, where she died after being exiled by Nina Korsin, her daughter. Illiana had worn her hair like Seelah because of a Force vision years earlier, but in that vision, she had seen Seelah washing Ravilan’s feet. She and the Sisters of Seelah are broken now that they know Seelah was a slave. Knowing that Illiana is likely being followed by members of other factions that now want her dead, Varner convinces her to join him and Jaye in visiting the Omen itself. They find the ship’s chrono, one of the only things still working, and it confirms what Jaye figured out about the days for the Festival of Nina’s Rise and Testament Day being eight days earlier than originally believed. They realize that the Omen Temple is not to shelter it for later use but as a tomb. Yaru Korsin had made certain that they left it all behind so that they could build live in Tahv, since they could never escape. They marvel at the ship, but Varner always knew the captain’s chair, the “throne,” would not be aboard, based on historical records of how it was removed as a throne and taken elsewhere. Eight others arrive, forcing them to hide. The newcomers include Korsin Bentado, leader of the Korsinites, and Edell Vrai (of Golden Destiny). They want to destroy the Omen because of how it represents them being brought to Kesh by accident as slaves. Varner, Jaye, and Illiana get out of there before they can be found. They must find what Korsin left behind before everything is destroyed by the others. As more arrive, Varner realizes that they intend to bring the watchtower down to destroy the ship beneath it. They move to the rotunda, which is actually a planetarium, where they cut into the “throne” to find a scroll that is a letter from Takara Korsin, Yaru’s mother. It is a message that says that Takara had a vision of Yaru leading a great people who are free of the Red Sith one day. Varner thinks that this message, delivered secretly right before the Omen left Phaegon, could unite the Lost Tribe again in light of a vision of a strong future, but Illiana believes the others are too far gone. Varner agrees, then Illiana realizes that this was not what Korsin’s comment about “behind the throne” meant. Given when he recorded it.
(while he was dying), they realize that he had not recorded it here. The throne was moved later. They realize that there is a chamber beneath the Omen, through a door that Jaye noticed during their climb up. The room they find is where the throne was often moved, a sort of workplace for Yaru Korsin that was not grandiose, just functional. The room holds a map of Keshtah, their continent. When the others arrive, they kill Jaye, then they intend to kill Varner and Illiana, but before they can, Varner releases supposed chalkboards that are hanging on metal hooks. They are, in fact, more parts to the map of Kesh. They realize that what they had all believed was wrong. They were not on the only continent on Kesh. "Keshtah" is merely Keshtah Minor. The Omen’s cameras had captured images of the other side of the planet during the crash, and Yaru had used the images to create these maps until the power on the viewer had finally died. He had been passing this information to his daughter, Nina, in hopes that one day the Sith could emerge and conquer the other great continent on Kesh, far out of uvak range, known as Keshtah Major to Korsin. There are cities there, likely Keshiri cities, and they could be more advanced than the Keshiri on their own continent. The Sith could conquer that land and add to their power, giving them a goal to reunite their society.
With only Varner knowing the old language used by the Korsins, and with Varner being the one to discover this secret, the others pledge themselves to him. In the efforts to find a way to cross the oceans to Keshtah Major (known to its inhabitants as Alanciar), he will lead them as Grand Lord Varner Hilts.

(Secrets)

- As the Lost Tribe of the Sith enters into the era that will be known as the Hilts Restoration, Grand Lord Varner Hilts tasks inventor Edell Vrai (formerly of Golden Destiny) with coming up with a means of reaching Keshtah Major (Alanciar) from Keshtah Minor (Keshtah). To make sure that he has all of the resources that he needs, Varner makes Edell one of the youngest High Lords ever to serve. The method of travel that Edell creates must not be a one-way trip, and it must be able to be mass-produced for a true invasion of the other continent to take place. Varner Hilts, who comes to be known as the Caretaker Grand Lord, marries Illiana Merko, making her his consort, Illiana Hilts. He begins working on a new history of the Lost Tribe on Kesh, which he calls the True Testament.

(Lost Tribe of the Sith [continued] (ebook series: John Jackson Miller)

Pantheon (ebook: John Jackson Miller)
  Chapters 1 – 4

Secrets (ebook: John Jackson Miller)
  Chapters 1 – 4
  Epilogue

2,998 BBY

- A militaristic Twi'lek clan takes to the dark region of Ryloth, where they will remain in relative seclusion (socially and literally) for the next 3,000 years.
  (conjecture based on Idol Intentions)

2,996 BBY

- Saalo Morn fails his Force adept training and falls to the Dark Side. With dreams of recreating the Sith Empire, Saalo steals his Jedi Master’s Force-imbued helmet and settles on a world controlled by primitive tribes. He lords over them, having them waylay travelers for tribute, but never finds anyone he feels is worthy of being his apprentice. When he finally dies within the next few decades, his spirit will remain to “haunt” his crypt, seeking out someone to act as his apprentice or a vessel for his spirit.
  (conjecture based on The Crypt of Saalo Morn)

2,995 BBY

- On Kesh, Quarra (who may already be married to Brue Thayn and thus be Quarra Thayn) begins a career path that takes her from being a supply clerk to a thoughtcrier to materials supervisor to wardmaster of Uhrar. Brue, meanwhile, will teach glassblowing or work in a glassblowing factory for decades to come.
(conjecture based on Pandemonium)

2,992 BBY
- The collapse of the Paecian Empire begins in earnest.
  (conjecture based on The Courtship of Princess Leia)

2,991 BBY
- A huge asteroid crashes into Delari Prime, shifting its orbit around the system’s sun and causing it to move closer. The great oceans dry into a few rivers, and massive erosion begins. The weather patterns are also thrown into chaos.*
  (conjecture based on Relic)*
*NOTE: I have rounded “thousands of years” into 3,000 years before Relic takes place.

2,990 BBY
- On Kesh, Lost Tribe High Lord Edell Vrai begins his second decade of work in trying to solve the ocean-crossing problem by focusing on local materials, but all seems like it may be lost. The jungle forests of Keshtah (Keshtah Minor in his way of thinking) has no wood that could survive rough waves. Hejarbo plants are plentiful but could not handle pressures on a sailing ship’s hull. Vosso and other woods from further inland are either too dense to float or too rubbery.
  (conjecture based on Pandemonium)

2,989 BBY
- Parlan Spinner commits his first crime against the Lost Tribe of the Sith on Kesh at age 11 when he defaces the statue of Yaru Korsin in Eorm.
  (conjecture based on Spiral)
- 54th Atrisian Emperor Uueg Tching’s Sayings begin being kept in the Rare Books Department of the Atrisian Imperial Historical Library on Kitel Phard.
  (conjecture based on From the Files of Corellia Antilles)
- The volcanic Talecalle chain on Tujiamoog goes dormant.
  (conjecture based on From the Files of Corellia Antilles)

2,988 BBY
- In the twelfth year of the Hilts Restoration of the Lost Tribe of the Sith on Kesh, Parlan Spinner, now trained in combat and Force use by brigands, strikes against Keshiri bearers, killing them.
  (conjecture based on Spiral)

2,986 BBY
- The eldest daughter of Quarra and Brue Thayn is born.
  (conjecture based on Pandemonium)

2,985 BBY
- On Kesh, Lost Tribe High Lord Edell Vrai begins to despair of ever finishing his work to cross the great ocean between Keshtah Minor and Keshtah Major, due to things repeatedly going wrong. As Edell has no success, his allies and aides become rivals, seeking to solve the problem before he can.
  (conjecture based on Pandemonium)
- The various military, industrial, and educational directorates on the Alanciar continent of Kesh come together in the newly-built Vaal Hall (built in honor of Adari Vaal) in the city of Sus-mintri to consolidate their operations. The building will house the War Cabinet.
  (conjecture based on Pandemonium)
2,982 BBY
- Parlan Spinner sets up his own criminal group, Spinner’s Web, on Kesh. Among their upcoming activities against the Lost Tribe of the Sith will be an attempt to kill all cake decorators before the wedding fete of High Lord Nikoll.*
  (conjecture based on Spiral)*
*NOTE: This assumes that Spinner doing this in his late teens can be locked to him doing so when he is 18.

2,981 BBY
- On Kesh, a typhoon off the shore of Alanciar causes Jogan Halder to have to send out a “flash message” that is not encoded and aimed at everyone to simply warn them of the oncoming storm, which subsequently fizzles out. It is the last of these that he will need to send until six years from now.
  (conjecture based on Pandemonium)

2,980 BBY
- Grand Lord Varner Hilts of the Lost Tribe of the Sith on Kesh, along with his consort, Illiana Hilts, suggests the hunchback Keshiri known as Squab as the servant for High Lord Korsin Bentado. It is meant as a sort of joke, since Bentado surrounds himself with perfect specimens among the humans of the Lost Tribe. Unbeknownst to Bentado, Squab also bears specific instructions to kill Bentado if ever a message is delivered that contains the word “regards” as a signal for Squab.
  (conjecture based on Pandemonium)

2,979 BBY
- The planet Jabiim enters the Republic, a status it will retain for three thousand years, until the time of Alto Stratus’ deals with the Confederacy of Independent Systems.
  (conjecture based on The Rainmakers)

2,978 BBY
- While visiting a cousin in Kerebbia on Alanciar on Kesh during a military supply visit, Quarra Thayn learns of tales from the frontier that have been transmitted to the signal station there from Jogan Halder at Point Defiance. Her cousin is reassigned, so Quarra returns to Uhrar and begins to communicate directly with Jogan, whom she considers a great storyteller. This will slowly develop into a long-distance affair of the heart, despite Quarra being married with three children.
  (conjecture based on Pandemonium)
- Lost Tribe High Lord Edell Vrai comes upon a major new idea in terms of crossing the ocean of Kesh. He discovers that hot seams of the Sessal Spire emit gasses that include methane. He and his team trap methane and use a water catalyst to isolate hydron, which can then hold a containment fabric aloft. A ship carried by a hot air balloon could then be a sort of gondola, made of hejarbo, and not need to survive as a ship on the water – just over it. He is, however, stumped as far as how to control the direction of such a small craft in the air.
  (conjecture based on Pandemonium)

2,975 BBY
- Early this year, Lost Tribe High Lord Edell Vrai finally solves the problem of how to control the airships he has designed. He makes the airships much larger and attaches uvak harnesses on either side to allow the animals to steer the ships while airborne. An invasion fleet to take over Keshtah Major (Alanciar) is created, and Edell will have the honor of leading the first three-ship expedition to seek out the other continent.
  (conjecture based on Pandemonium)
- On the continent of Alanciar (Keshtah Major) on Kesh, Force-using Keshiri wardmaster (chief military administrator of Uhrar) Quarra Thayn visits Garrow’s Neck. She is there in secret, stealing away from her husband, Brue Thayn, and their children. She is intending on having an affair with the message-sending Jogan Halder in the lighthouse-esque tower of Point Defiance, with whom she has been secretly conversing but has never met in person. Just as she is about to admit to her purpose and see where things can go, they are startled by the arrival over the ocean of three airships from the Lost Tribe of the Sith from the continent of Keshtah (or, in Sith terms, Keshtah Minor). It has taken a quarter of a century, but the Sith are finally preparing to invade the largest of the two continents of Kesh that Yaru Korsin had noted during the Omen’s crash landing. However, the Alanciari have spent two thousand years preparing for the arrival of the Sith, thanks to a warning from Adari Vaal, who found Alanciar by accident after leaving the Lost Tribe behind. They have learned bits and pieces of Force use (including telepath in the case of Quarra, a “thoughtcrier”) and have developed ways of communicating via lights along a series of structures that then reach a central location, the primary base of the military, who can then relay messages elsewhere. Within a short time, the entire society is alerted to the Sith’s arrival. The airships are held aloft by helium and directed by uvaks that are in harnesses on either side of a gondola beneath the hot air balloon. The three ships are led by High Lord Edell Vrai, who developed the airship technology under the direct orders of Grand Lord Varner Hilts during his unifying movement known as the Hilts Restoration. The three ships (the Candra, Lilia, and Dann Itra) are shot out of the sky by javelins and diamond-firing weapons, wiping out much of the group, which had been sent to test the technology and scout the larger continent. Edell survives, along with a few of his men (and a Keshiri servant), and they stealthily encounter a badly injured Jogan and protective (but freaked out, for various reasons) Quarra. Seeking more information about this strange society that knows of the Sith, speaks their own language, and seems ready for their attack, Edell leaves Jogan with his men on a boat commandeered from a Shore Guard and uses Jogan as leverage to force Quarra to take him inland to check out their capital at Sus'mintri. Along the way, he learns more about Adari Vaal and her warnings (that the Sith are the Destorors or agents of them, and must be destroyed), and they briefly take a detour to make sure her children are safe. (Her husband is already working at the factory that produces glass weapons for their projectile weapons.) Meanwhile, back on Keshtah (Minor), High Lord Korsin Bentado argues his case to Grand Lord Varner Hilts and his consort, Illiana Hilts (formerly Illiana Merko) to go ahead with their full-sized invasion upon receiving the initial “success” message through the Force from Edell’s group. (Of course, they brush aside the feelings of fear and confusion that followed the “success” message when the native Keshiri attacked the airships.) Soon, Bentado’s force reaches Alanciar, where they are attacked just like the original group. All Edell can do is watch it happen. When Edell (a tinkerer and builder, more than a conqueror) and Quarra (now not worried that her near-affair will be revealed, since there is so much confusion) finally reach Sus'mintri, they find Bentado in control of Alanciar’s headquarters! He is now using the communications hub to have any Sith survivors that have been taken prisoner delivered to the headquarters, swelling his ranks and having the Keshiri unwittingly helping him do so. He intends to destroy any more Sith that try to come to Alanciar, so that Bentado himself can rule a new, “perfected” society with the more industrious, science-oriented Keshiri on Alanciar. Upon learning this, they try to leave, but they know they will be discovered and killed for not joining Bentado. When Edell reveals that Jogan is not really being held at the shore but that he instead had given the survivors orders to take Jogan with them on the commandeered ship and return to the Lost Tribe, she likely should just leave Edell to die, but Quarra saves them both by sneaking them inside the secret library of Adari Vaal. With Edell’s lightsaber and the one Adari stole two millennia ago that was kept hidden in the library, they head back to face off with Bentado and stop his madness for the sake of both Alanciar and the Lost Tribe. When they try to attack Bentado (who was bellowing orders to his hunchbacked Keshiri slave, Squab), Bentado holds Quarra, ready to kill her if Edell will not back down. Shockingly, they are interrupted by a message from the coast of the arrival of another large Lost Tribe airship, but this one has been allowed to land. A message from that ship has arrived from Grand Lord Varner Hilts himself. It is only one word: “Regards.” That word tells Squab, who had been a sleeper agent of sorts for Varner Hilts, to kill Bentado, which he does, saving both Edell and Quarra. They emerge to find things changing rapidly. Jogan is back, alongside Grand Lord Hilts, and they tell a tale of Keshiri artists living in freedom without Sith controlling them. The Sith on Keshtah are said to be holed up in their own small community, having once learned that there were those among them who were of the Destructors (the Sith that Adari Vaal would have known), but that they arose on behalf of the Protectors to destroy those Sith, making the current Lost Tribe supposedly peaceful and ready to ally themselves with Alanciar. The truth is that Jogan and the Sith group did arrive on Keshtah, and they sent word ahead of what had transpired on Alanciar and what the Keshtah Chronicles had said about the Sith. They then manipulated what Jogan would see and revamped the large airship that remained for the Grand Lord to be something more ceremonial and regal than threatening and overbearing. Now, the Sith intend to work with Alanciar to forge a new society, secretly taking control of it (and of Alanciar) from within. Jogan is now a primary figure in this new order, as is Edell. Quarra could be. She could become the consort to Edell and be close to the powers that be until she can work against them, just like Adari Vaal, but she has had enough. She knows where she is truly needed: at home to mend her family and raise her girls, all the while hoping that if there really are Protectors out there, they will one day save her people from the Sith.

(Pandemonium)

- Four months before being captured by Takara Hilts, Parlan Spinner criminally commandeers an airship and flies it into the southeastern aqueduct on Kesh.

(conjecture based on Spiral)

Lost Tribe of the Sith [continued] (ebook series: John Jackson Miller)

Pandemonium (short story: John Jackson Miller)

2,974 BBY

- Parlan Spinner attempts to desecrate the ancient Keshiri burial cairn beneath the Circle Eternal on Kesh. Shortly thereafter, Takara Hilts, Prefect of the Tahv Police, turns over a report on him to her father, Grand Lord Varner Hilts.*

(Enemy of the Order)*

*NOTE: This is an article in the back of the second issue of Lost Tribe of the Sith: Spiral. I have made it a separate summary to make it easier to see what comes from the article, rather than the main comic.

- On Kesh (on the Keshtah continent), during the celebration of the Founding (the day the Lost Tribe appeared as the supposed Protectors), lower-class Sith Parlan “Death” Spinner tries to assassinate Grand Lord Varner Hilts, but his target turns out to be Sith officer Takara Hilts, Varner’s daughter. Seeing potential in Spinner, Varner does not kill Spinner when brought before him, despite the comments of Takara and his wife, High Lord Illiana Hilts. Instead, he sends Spinner to a new frontier to explore, using wooden ships procured from Alanciar. After bickering a bit about making their own way and how Takara needs to prove herself in this meritocracy, rather than being given power due to her parents, Takara stows away on the ship bearing Spinner, only to find that their destination is not a new part of Alanciar but the planet’s south pole. Upon reaching land, they both decide (independently) to steal the ship and head for Alanciar, but their plans clash and they end up on their own, chased by the Keshiri captain, until he and the other non-Sith are killed by newcomers of Chagrian, Ithorian, Wookiee, and Skye descent, who claim to be individuals who have shared Kesh all along, out of sight of the Sith. These people are the Doomed. They live in a settlement known as Eshkrene and are led, at the moment, by the Skye woman, Kaliska. They are not descendants of previous Sith slaves from the Omen, as might have been expected. The Doomed reveal their past in the Hall of Regret, explaining that their ancestors were Light and Dark Jedi from the Hundred-Year Darkness. They were trapped on Kesh upon crashing there and eventually came to work together in this new society that shuns the Force’s two sides in favor of balance. Moreover, they are, most likely, the Protectors and Destroyers of Keshiri myth that the Lost Tribe co-opted. They are atoning for their damage to Kesh during the conflict, and they intend not to leave Eshkrene as long as any of them can use the Force. They have also locked away a great weapon from that era, which Spinner now wants for himself to gain personal power. Using local metal weapons (quite a nice thing for someone who has never used them), Spinner frees himself and breaks into the tower that holds the great weapon. Takara, who has been visiting the colony’s livestock with Kaliska, goes with Kaliska in flying after him. He makes it to the Southern Star and sets out with its rescued crew, but Takara and Kaliska reach the ship on the water. Ready to fight, Spinner breaks open the weapon container, only to find that it was a stasis chamber. The being that emerges from it is none other than the great Sith Lord Remulus Dreypa. The oublieette he was in is damaged, and he is joined by Spinner in subduing Takara and Kaliska. They then travel by ship to Spinner’s old home of Eorm, where Dreypa destroys the local “partial” Sith (those now as knowledgeable as him). He offers Spinner’s people the chance to have revenge upon the Lost Tribe. Takara, though, knows that Spinner is just a slave again, this time to Dreypa. Takara steals a pair of lightsabers and frees herself and Kaliska and they use a stable full of uvaks to go get the Doomed. Kaliska is afraid of what Dreypa, who seems to lack some of his memories, might remember . . . Soon, Lost Tribe forces under Illiana battle Dreypa’s minions, but in that battle, Dreypa recalls the facts Kaliska was afraid he would remember. They head for the Sessal Spire, followed by Illiana’s forces and the Doomed, led by Takara. There, Dreypa reveals that he had come to Kesh on purpose to give birth to a resurrected breed of the great Sith Leviathans, which he now sets upon his adversaries. Amid the carnage, Spinner abandons Dreypa and briefly battles Takara, until they are distracted when Illiana is grabbed by a Leviathan. Takara goes to save her, and she is, in turn, saved by Spinner. Illiana, though, has been drained of life energy, making her age quickly. Amid the fighting, Spinner, Takara, and Kaliska talk strategy and it is revealed that the Doomed know the location of a starship (the Last Hope) that can leave Kesh, which is hidden beneath the holiest Keshiri site at the time they hid it — which now lies beneath the Lost Tribe’s palace. That is what Dreypa is now after. Spinner races on uvak back to Tahv with Illiana, while Kaliska heads there to get to the ship first and destroy it. Takara engages Dreypa in combat. Upon arriving at Tahv, Spinner drops off Illiana, then heads below and steals the ship. Dreypa contacts him once he is in space, though, and offers not to destroy the Lost Tribe and the people of Kesh, along with sparing Takara’s life, if Spinner turns over the Last Hope. He has rightly determined that there is something between Spinner and Takara, even if they act like enemies. Spinner heads for Tahv, where he uses the ship to blast and otherwise destroy all of the Leviathans except Dreypa’s, where he holds Takara. Takara uses Force lightning to escape, falling to where she lands on top of the ship, followed by Dreypa, who does the same. As the ship speeds along, Spinner takes the deal with Dreypa, leaping away with Takara. Dreypa boards the ship just in time to learn that it has been locked on a course for the Sessal Spire Caldera. The ship plunges into the volcano, destroying it and Dreypa. In the wake of the battle, Varner reveals that he sent Spinner to unknowingly find the Doomed on purpose: he needed a player outside the Lost Tribe’s political games. Now that it has worked out, Spinner is offered the chance to become the Grand Lord’s new Hand, an agent outside of Lost Tribe politics. He even suggests that Spinner might one day become Grand Lord himself. This shocks Illiana, who expected Takara to rule, but Varner sees the likelihood that she and Spinner will rule together one day as husband and wife.”

(Spiral)

NOTE: There is some confusion as to when this story takes place. The writer, John Jackson Miller, refers to it as “one year or less” after Pandemonium, which would place it in late 2,975 BBY or early 2,974 BBY. The inside cover of each issue refers to it as “approximately 2,942 years” before TPM, which would be 2,974 BBY. The Slaves No More article at the back of the first issue refers to that segment being written by Varner 2,025 years after the Omen arrived on Kesh, which would place at least that writing in 2,975 BBY. Personally, I’m going with 2,974 BBY until given any reason to doubt the interior-printed dating, since it does fit with what JJM has said about the series, though his is somewhat vague. This also allows for Spinner to manage to steal an airship four months prior to Spiral, which would seem to need to be an event after Pandemonium.

Lost Tribe of the Sith (comic series: John Jackson Miller)

- Spiral (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Spiral, Part II (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
  - Enemy of the Order
- Spiral, Part I (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
- Spiral, Part II [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
- Spiral, Part III (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
- Spiral, Part IV (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
- Spiral, Part V (comic series: John Jackson Miller)

2,973 BBY
- A new Galactic Senate building is created on Coruscant. The architect comments that anything powerful enough to destroy the building would have to be powerful enough to crack the planet itself.
  (conjecture based on Traitor)

2,700 BBY
- The Children of Mani, a religious group in the Grumani sector that seeks perfection, experiences a schism. A group known as the Grumani believe that moral conduct is defined by the teachings of Mani, as interpreted by the Hierophants. A second group, the Spumani, believe that Mani actually left secret instructions to test oneself constantly. This results in a religious war that continues for approximately 800 years until the arrival of the Sith during the New Sith Wars.*
  (conjecture based on Knight Errant Gazetteer)*

*NOTE: This is a tricky one. It is 800 years before the Sith take over the Grumani sector, but there is little to indicate when that happens during the 1,000 years between Darth Ruin and the Battle of Ruusan. It could be dated back from the Republic Dark Age (around 1,100 BBY or so), but there is no way to say for sure at this point, so I have dated it back from the beginning of the New Sith Wars.

2,700 BBY
- On Ryloth, the city of Kala’din falls (both figuratively and literally).
  (conjecture based on Platt’s Starport Guide)

2,572 BBY
- Around this time, the Windu clan (ghosh) begins living in the highlands of Haruun Kal. This will continue one-hundred generations, until the last two members of ghosh Windu are Mace Windu and Kar Vastor.*
  (conjecture based on Shatterpoint)*

*NOTE: This assumes that a generation is 25 years.

2,500 BBY
- Within the century leading up to this date, economic strains end the so-called battleship era. (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)
- A meteorite unleashes a skin-eating contagion on Zolan. Many sick Zolanders flee to the Sultur continent, where medical scientists quarantine the colony and, through gene therapy, give the sick Zolanders the ability to control the appearance of their skin. This new form of Zolander comes to be known as Clawdites.*
  (conjecture based on The University of Sanbra Guide to Intelligent Life: The Clawdites)*

*NOTE: This interprets 100 generations as 2,500 years.

2,400 BBY
- By this time, the Clawdites on the Sultur continent of Zolan have their own robust community. When they venture to the other contents to rejoin Zolander society, though, their shape-changing abilities cause them to be ostracized.
  (conjecture based on The University of Sanbra Guide to Intelligent Life: The Clawdites)
- On Zolan, very select Clawdites are allowed to train with the Mabari to become warrior knights.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Alien Species)

2,367 BBY
- The first Priole Danna Festival begins on Lamuir IV.
  (conjecture based on HoloNet News, Volume 531, Number 45)

2,320 BBY
- Taanab is settled as an agricultural outpost.
(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

2,232 BBY
- Around this time, eleven centuries before Operation Influx in Sith space, the planet Alphoresis gains the designation of a “plagueworld” when the so-called “Breath Stealing” plague strikes, killing everyone under the age of eight.
  (conjecture based on Knight Errant Gazetteer)

2,043 BBY
- The Mining Guild claims Ruusan and other ore-rich worlds in the Teraab sector, but they find Ruusan to be a disappointment as a business venture.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

2,043 BBY
- In this era, the best houses of Falleen begin using the language later known as Ancient Hsoosh as their Language of Ceremony.
  (conjecture based on Abyss)

2,033 BBY
- Anakin Skywalker will later come into possession of what appears to be a holocron from this era.
  (conjecture based on The Hunt for Anakin Skywalker)

2,032 BBY
- Rori, a moon of Naboo, is colonized during the brief rule of King Narmle, as an ultimately unsuccessful agricultural colony. Shortly thereafter, the Naboo Royal Advisory Council asks Narmle to step down as king, since his restless wandering makes him better suited to ambassador than monarch. He leaves for the Outer Rim and vanishes.*
  (conjecture based on Galaxies: Jump to Lightspeed: Prima Official Game Guide)
  NOTE: All information from this strategy guide was submitted by Luke Van Horn. I erroneously put this at 20,032 BBY, based on a misreading of information sent in by Luke. My thanks go to Alban Leloup for notifying me of the error.
- The Ithorian historical records that will be gathered by Hodge and his miners (2,000 years from now) begin at this point.
  (conjecture based on Spore)
- Coruscant has its last major earthquake.
  (conjecture based on Shadow Hunter via TimeTales, abridged)
- The Ri’Dar of Dar’Or begin using baloo vines to gather humus for their gardens.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 4: Alien Races)
- The natives of the Kooriva system successfully petition the Republic for sole proprietorship of Kooriva, taking political power from the so-called “Kooriva,” who migrated to the world a few millennia earlier.
  (conjecture based on Galactic Power Brokers)
- Soon before the New Sith Wars (long after initial contact and Mon Calamari becoming members of the Jedi Order), Mon Calamari, Mon Calamari has the opportunity to join the Republic. The Mon Calamari welcome this, but the Quarren are reluctant. Quarren Chieftain Allat Za forces the Mon Calamari king to compromise by making the planet an independent allied state of the Republic, rather than a full member. Quarren resentment of the Mon Calamari will continue until the era of the Clone Wars.
  (conjecture based on Strongholds of Resistance)

2,022 BBY
- TCW DATE: The Jedi code used by the Ones on Mortis to draw in Anakin Skywalker, Obi-Wan Kenobi, and Ahsoka Tano was last used around this time.*
  (conjecture based on Overlords)

NOTE: All information from this strategy guide was submitted by Luke Van Horn. I erroneously put this at 20,022 BBY, based on a misreading of information sent in by Luke. My thanks go to Alban Leloup for notifying me of the error.
*NOTE: This code wasn't used for “over 2,000 years.” I have dated that back to the beginning of the Clone Wars, then back two millennia for a rough estimate.

2,019 BBY
- The Gen'Dai Durge is born.
  (conjecture based on Durge’s entry on the starwars.com databank)

2,000 BBY
- Jedi Master Phanius (an Umbaran) dabbles in Dark Side secrets left from the era of the Great Sith War, eventually turning his back on the Jedi Council and taking his own Master’s ancient Sith Holocron. Phanius travels to various worlds and unites various Sith cults. He soon decides that he has achieved enough power and understanding to become the newest Dark Lord of the Sith, giving himself the name “Darth Ruin.” Over time, he gathers other like-minded Dark Jedi and creates a new order of Dark Lords of the Sith, purposely taking the name of the Dark Lords of old (even though by this time the term has come to just mean a Dark Side sect). The legion grows in number and soon comes to battle the Jedi Knights. These Dark Lords of the Sith use the ancient title “Darth” (possibly standing for Dark Lord of the Sith, a twisting of the Rakatan word “Daritha” that means “emperor,” or a play on the Rakatan phrase “darr tah” that means “triumph over death”). Unfortunately, these “New Sith” soon realize that they matter very little in Darth Ruin’s grand schemes, so many of them conspire together and destroy him. In the power vacuum that follows, the New Sith fight not just the Jedi but amongst themselves for control of the New Sith Order. The conflict that arises comes to be known to some as the “New Sith Wars,” though they are also referred to as “The Light and Dark War,” “The War of the Fittest,” “The Betrayal,” or “The Curse of Qalydon.” The original split of Phanius and his followers from the Jedi Order is later known as the “Fourth Great Schism.”
- With the advent of the New Sith Wars, the Republic enters the Draggulch period (2,000 – 1,000 BBY, coinciding with the New Sith Wars themselves).
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Chronology)
- During the era of the New Sith Wars, Mandalorian Giants will be on the front lines, led by Mandalorian Mercs. The Mandalorians also begin using the Mandalorian battle harness during this era.
  (conjecture based on The History of the Mandalorians)
- During the era of the New Sith Wars, the Mecrosa Order also takes revenge upon the Jedi of House Pelagia.
  (conjecture based on Evil Never Dies: The Sith Dynasties)
- Starting in this era, with the rise of the New Sith, the Sith lanvarok weapon begins to fall out of use.
  (conjecture based on The Dark Side Sourcebook)
- TCW DATE: On Bardotta, the influence of the Frangawl wanes in favor of the Dagoyan mystic tradition. The Dagoyan Masters come to rule the planet.
  (conjecture based on Nexus of Power)
- With the rise of the New Sith, Merr-Sonn Munitions begins producing weapons made of cortosis, one of the few substances able to withstand a Jedi or Sith’s lightsaber.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Weapons and Technology)
- With the rise of the New Sith, a group of family and friends of various Jedi get together and head for the Outer Rim, where they found a colony on the planet Yanibar in order to escape possible attack from Sith forces. Unfortunately, when the Jedi who help found the colony are killed in battle, the colony’s inhabitants, known as the Zeison Sha, will gradually consider their position as abandonment by the Jedi Order, which leads to a Force-using Zeison Sha tradition that generally dislikes the Jedi.
  (conjecture based on Hero’s Guide)
• As the Republic faces off with the New Sith, many systems close their borders and others are all but forgotten by the Republic in the tide of war. Only Jedi Knights remain to protect the helpless in these areas, and the Jedi who do so slowly, unintentionally gain political power and a leadership role. These Jedi Knights come to be known as the “Jedi Lords.”
(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)
• The Shell Hutts leave Nal Hutta and settle Circumtore.
(conjecture based on The Mandalorian Armor)
• Incom Corporation (Torranix Inertial Compensator Corporation) is formed.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Vehicles and Vessels and The Essential Guide to Warfare)
• The Old Republic has first contact with the Cha'wen'he.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 12: Aliens--"Enemies and Allies")
• Merenzane Gold begins to be brewed.
  (conjecture based on Empire Blues: The Devaronian’s Tale)
• The tourist industry on Adner develops.
  (conjecture based on Alien Encounters supplement in The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #11)
• Clan warfare erupts on Ebranite.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 12: Aliens--“Enemies and Allies”)
• A humanoid race adopts the Bimm culture and is integrated into Bimm society.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Alien Species)
• Around this time, Ord Gimmel is rediscovered by the Republic after having been secretly colonized and abandoned during the various Pius Dea Crusades. By now, the royal bloodline of Grand Vicar Sidharra is personified in Queen Welnarra, who pursues a path of rapid reintegration with the rest of the galaxy. The planet becomes one of the Republic's major ship and hyperdrive manufacturing centers.
  (conjecture based on Strongholds of Resistance)
• The Uba system is discovered by the Republic, home to the Ubese, a humanoid alien race whose language has a metallic sound. The Ubese are a relatively isolated race with a highly sophisticated culture. Republic traders begin bringing high-tech devices to the Ubese. They hoard technology and learn to reverse-engineer much of it, developing their own forms of higher technology. The desire to obtain more technology begins to splinter Ubese society, and their drive to have a better technology splits them even further. Delegates of the Republic soon discover that the Ubese are producing technologies which have been outlawed by the Republic, and realize that much of it is military material designed for large-scale devastation. In an effort to curb the Ubese advancement, the Republic launches a preemptive strike to bring a halt to the production. Unfortunately, the Republic's attack explodes Ubese weapons stores on every world in the system, destroying Uba III outright and wreaking radioactive devastation on Uba I, Uba II, and Uba V. Only Uba IV remains marginally viable, and many Ubese are forced to survive there. The semi-toxic atmosphere forces them to wear specialized filtration masks, and alters their physiology in many ways. Those that choose not to live on Uba IV migrate to the Ubertica System. These Ubese will later be shunned by their brethren on Uba IV as being too soft to be "true Ubese." Republic officials refuse to offer aide to the Ubese, fearful for their own careers and order all Ubese-related information purged from databases.
  (conjecture based on Shadows of the Empire Sourcebook via TimeTales, nearly verbatim, and Alien Anthology, through original research)
• The building which would house the Uhl Doaba’i is constructed. “Uhl Doaba’i” means “peaceful place” in the Socorran tongue. It was considered the last vestige of civilization found within the city of Vakeyya before a traveler entered the open desert. The building would be maintained by Shamans for many generations.
  (conjecture based on The Black Sands of Socorro via TimeTales, verbatim)
• Vormest Dep-thesel Digarsarg becomes the first Balinaka artist to incorporate colored pumice and small fragments of gemstones into his ice sculptures. Their unique sculptures soon become known as Garnib Crystals.
• Early in the New Sith Wars, the Jedi and Republic attempt to protect every world possible from Sith incursion, but the Candorian Plague strikes numerous systems, causing them to be quarantined. The Republic is unable to save the quarantined areas from Sith takeovers.
  (conjecture based on Knight Errant Gazetteer)

• During the New Sith Wars, the Republic will eventually call upon Jedi consulars to become Supreme Chancellors of the Republic, including Genarra, who is in office when Kerra Holt goes missing in Sith space.
  (conjecture based on Knight Errant Gazetteer)

• In another drastic measure during the New Sith Wars, the Republic cordons off the Core, the Colonies, and part of the Inner Rim by deactivating hyperspace relays (for both messages and navigation) beyond those areas. Instantaneous communication between the Rimworlds and other planets ends, and hyperspace couriers come back into service in those areas. The purpose is to keep the Sith from using Republic relays against the Republic. Without detailed hyperspace information, a large “firewall” of now-uncharted (at least as far as Sith knowledge) region of space stands between the Sith and the Republic. Many storehouses of knowledge (libraries, archives, etc.) in the abandoned areas are destroyed by Sith eventually, and the cultures on those worlds begin to stagnate.
  (conjecture based on Knight Errant Gazetteer)

• Due to the deactivation of hyperspace relays into Sith space, it becomes easier for powerful Sith warlords in particular regions to claim the title of Sith Lord for themselves, since they have little to no way of knowing about other Sith Lords in other regions.
  (conjecture based on Knight Errant Gazetteer)

• During the New Sith Wars, the Republic encourages companies still operating in Sith space to pull back into Republic space, keeping themselves safe and their technology out of Sith hands.
  (conjecture based on Knight Errant Gazetteer)

1,998 BBY

• Ecclessis Figg is born.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 2: Yavin and Bespin)

1,997 BBY

• Hargeeva is settled, but outside support is soon cut off, and the world reverts from a democracy to a feudal state.
  (conjecture based on Firepower)

1,991 BBY

• A pirate band hides their treasure in an ancient fortress on Yavin IV and leave a guardian droid and Q-7N to watch after it.
  (conjecture based on The Rebel Thief)

• Jomark is colonized.
  (conjecture based on The Thrawn Trilogy Sourcebook)

1,989 BBY

• Coruscant's lower levels are taken over by the criminal elements of the population.
  (conjecture based on Jedi Academy Sourcebook)

• The Mon Calamari start construction of Foamwater City.
  (conjecture based on Dark Apprentice)

1,975 BBY

• A couple of millennia before their invasion of the Known Galaxy, the Yuuzhan Vong race engages in a great conflict known as the Cremlevian War. As one side nears defeat, a leader known as Yo’Gand takes command and uses a dovin basal to perform a maneuver later named Yo’Gand’s Core—he uses the basal’s gravity projection to pull Ygziir’s moon down to destroy the planet. The resulting destruction of Ygziir destroys the home base of the opposition and presumably its leader, Warmaster Steng, and the victory unites the Vong together as never before. The cost of this victory is immense, though. Nearly every inhabitable planet in the Vong’s home galaxy is destroyed. In the wake of this destruction, the Vong gods grant upon the Vong the biotechnology to build massive worldships to carry them to another galaxy. The Vong soon leave their home galaxy behind, seeking out the new galaxy promised to them by the gods. The gods reveal further creations later, such as long-range communication techniques. Eventually, a scout will discover a new inhabitable world in another galaxy, which the current supreme overlord will declare the “promised land.” This will not come until shortly before the reign of Emperor Palpatine. The galaxy in question is, of course, the Known Galaxy.

(conjecture based on Vector Prime, The New Jedi Order Sourcebook, and I, Yuuzhan Vong)

1,750 BBY

- In this era of the New Sith Wars, the Sith Lord known as the Dark Underlord unites a large Sith group known as the Black Knights on the planetoid Malrev IV. He takes the fight to the Jedi. Eventually, the Jedi Master Murtaggh makes a deal with the Mandalorians of this era. While the Dark Underlord’s Zeltron commander is kept busy with Mandalorian attackers, Murtaggh sneaks into the Underlord’s territory and kills him. Murtaggh dies in the process himself.

(conjecture based on Evil Never Dies: The Sith Dynasties)

1,581 BBY

- The Tapani Sector enters into what is later known as the Federal Era (11,139 - 12,688 by their domestic calendar). Reformers within the Tapani Empire abolish imperial rule and establish a Tapani republic. Noble houses manage to survive the reform and begin running affairs directly through the Great Council and Procopian Senate. During this era, the Shapani Bypass is created, allowing the previously backwater periphery worlds of the sector to participate in galactic commerce. This leads to the periphery worlds declaring independence from the Tapani republic and becoming the Freeworlds Region.

(conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)

1,532 BBY

- The Kooriva, who have been nomadic since losing the proprietorship of the planet Kooriva, gain enough support to reverse the Senate’s decision on the issue, allowing them to return and take over “their” homeworld again.*

(conjecture based on Galactic Power Brokers)*

*NOTE: This interprets “centuries” as 500 years.

- A group of Dark Lords of the Sith find their way to Gap Nine and begin a reign of terror on the world, during which they build temples reminiscent of those of the First Order of the Dark Lords of the Sith. After a short time, Jedi Knights come and defeat the Sith Lords, remaking their evil temples into storehouses of knowledge and artifacts.*

(conjecture based on A Taste of Adventure: The Battle for Gap Nine)*

*NOTE: A lot of conjecture goes into this entry. First of all, the actual comments made by the Seer of the Temple in The Battle for Gap Nine refer to the “bad guys” as “travelers,” “monsters, beasts and foul vermin,” “creatures,” etc. They are said to have built the temples, and that the Jedi had to come destroy them during a time “long before the Empire.” Since this seems to suggest (but not verify) that this may have been a group of DLOTS carrying on the temple-building tradition of the First Order (much like Darth Bane would later, consciously or not, build upon the Kun/Qel-Droma dynamic in the Master/Apprentice declaration), I have assumed that these were Dark Lords of the Sith. If we assume they were from the Second Order (since they were hunted and defeated by the Jedi, who knew next to nothing about the Sith of the First Order after they were exiled), then that means this had to have taken place between 2,032 and 1,032 BBY. I simply split the difference and went with 1,532 BBY.
- The Jedi Council sends a Jedi team to Tund to speak with the Sorcerers of Tund, a group of independently-developed Force users on the world (actually formed from the remnants of Sith heretics). Upon seeing their Force mastery, the Jedi decide not to invite them into the Jedi fold, but to allow them to develop on their own, provided they don’t delve into the Dark Side. The Jedi will keep an eye on them until the events surrounding the Battle of Ruusan divert their attention to more pressing matters.*

(conjecture based on The Dark Side Sourcebook and The Essential Atlas)

*NOTE: I simply rounded the amount of time for the Jedi to have time to observe the Sorcerers’ development before losing interest to about 500 years.

1,500 BBY
- On an industrial wasteland of a planet in the Outer Rim, the Gen’Dai warrior Durge and Master Jaing, his teacher (and a Mandalorian who used to be allied with Ung Kusp), have arrived at the base of a strange doctor, who specializes in brain-to-prosthesis technology. Jaing and Durge intend to get these upgrades in order to avoid becoming obsolete. They have the process done on themselves, then test themselves in combat with a new amalgamation of the doctor’s protocol droid and his assistant Dr. Nubyll. The new enhancements work splendidly. As payment, Jaing and Durge must protect the doctor from a group of Mandalorians loyal to Ung Kusp (Jaing’s old ally, who Jaing believes betrayed him) that are about to attack the base. The Mandalorians attack and are bested by Durge, Jaing, and Nubyll, but a well-timed thermal detonator knocks the trio out. The remaining Mandalorians are able to retrieve a Sith artifact that the doctor stole from them. When Durge regains consciousness, the drives off the Mandalorians, for the most part, but he finds Jaing dying. Knowing that the doctor can help Jaing if he has the artifact back, but only if he keeps the Mandalorians from returning, Durge sets out to take on the Mandalorians and retrieve the artifact. As Durge leaves, the doctor gives Nubyll, who is actually a captured and mutilated Jedi, her lightsaber back. He then boasts to Jaing that, thanks to Durge’s meddling, a long-awaited conflict between the Mandalorians and the Sith can now ensue . . . *

(Prototypes)

*NOTE: Leland Chee has said that this story is in-continuity, but we really have no date to work from for it. It ends with the supposed instigation of hostilities between the Mandalorians and the Sith. The Sith, therefore, must be around, which puts it between 2,000 BBY and 1,000 BBY. I’ve chosen to split the difference and place the story here. Take its placement as a best guess at this point.

- Warfare continues after countless years on the planet Mon Calamari between the Mon Calamari and Quarren. In order to “civilize” the Quarren, the Mon Calamari capture 1,000,000 Quarren children and educate them among the Mon Calamari in subjects like philosophy, mathematics and science.

(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Alien Species)

- By this point, the Republic has been able to draft enough soldiers to defeat the Sith at King’s Galquek, Corphelion, and Gap 9, but the Sith have managed to find new allies in the Devaronians and Hilitians.

(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

Prototypes (SWV short story: Robert E. Barnes)
- Prototypes (SWV short story: Robert E. Barnes)

1,490 BBY
- The captive Quarren children who have been educated by the Mon Calamari are released back into Quarren society. The elder Quarren are deeply resentful of this, and the younger generation, which is now more sympathetic to the Mon Calamari, seem to have little in common with their elders.

(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Alien Species)

1,489 BBY
- 54th Atrisian Emperor Uueg Tching’s Sayings are printed in a small run for the Atrisian nobility.

(conjecture based on From the Files of Corellia Antilles)
1,480 BBY
- Around this time, the last reliable hyperspace lane to Prakith collapses. This serves the Jedi Council well, given that they were hoping to cut off Darth Andeddu’s dangerous knowledge from the rest of the galaxy, and it now remains “trapped” on Prakith.
  (conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)

1,475 BBY
- Fifteen years after reintroducing the Mon Calamari-educated Quarren into Quarren society, that generation is now ruling Quarren society and opens up diplomatic relations with the Mon Calamari. They enter a period of being able to work together for the benefit of both species on the planet.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Alien Species)

1,466 BBY
- The Sith defeat a major Jedi force at the Battle of Mizra, which will be immortalized by the poet Felloux. Over 500,000 Republic troops die, and hundreds of Jedi are captured, many eventually converting to the Dark Side rather than being killed.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Chronology and The Essential Atlas)

1,381 BBY
- The Sith Lord Dreypa’s oubliette, bearing Celeste Morne and the Muur Talisman, is discovered by miners on Jebble. Thinking that it must contain something of great value, one of the miners steals it for himself, killing others in the process. Over time, legends grow about this so-called “Jebble Box” that say it holds a Jedi treasure, can only be opened by a Force-user, and so on. Eventually, conflict surrounds it, including a war. It will eventually find its way into the hands of Schurk-Heren and the crew of the Uhemele approximately 1,400 years from now.*
  (conjecture based on Vector)*

*NOTE: This interprets “about fourteen hundred years ago” from the Dark Times segment of Vector literally. It could easily take place at the 1,400 BBY mark instead.

1,300 BBY
- Darth Rivan (a Sith Lord who takes his name from a corrupted manuscript that misspells “Revan” as “Rivan”) makes Almas in the Cularin system his home. Using kaluthin, he terraforms the world for his purposes and begins work on a Sith fortress. *
  (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide and Evil Never Dies: The Sith Dynasties)*

*NOTE: This dating is only conjecture. Based on the wording in the LFCG, we can assume that he arrived at least a decade or more before the Battle of Ruusan. However, Evil Never Dies seemingly suggests an earlier date, as Darth Rivan has to come before Belia Darzu. Thus, I have rounded his arrival to 1,300 BBY.

1,250 BBY
- During the era of the New Sith Wars, Sith Lady Belia Darzu rises to power. She is a changeling and master of Sith monster creation. She creates an army known as the Metaneocrons, which is partly based in technology and partly based in Sith monsters. Eventually, the Mecrosa Order assassimates her for unwanted incursions into Tapani space. She leaves behind her knowledge in archives on the planet Tython.
  (conjecture based on Evil Never Dies: The Sith Dynasties and Rule of Two)

1,250 – 1,230 BBY
- The Sictis Wars, a subset of the New Sith Wars, rages, wherein Jedi battle technobeasts created by Sith Lady Belia Darzu. One Jedi is infected by the technovirus and becomes the “technobeast Jedi,” retaining his personality.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)
1,240 BBY
- The Celegian later known as “One” on Byllura is born.
  (conjecture based on Knight Errant)

1,230 BBY
- Sith Lady Belia Darzu dies on Tython, ending the Sictis Wars and her string of technobeast hybrids.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)

1,196 BBY
- Hathrox III’s population becomes engaged in a civil war, using biochemical warfare as the major weapon. The resulting contamination of the planet wipes out the entire population.
  (conjecture based on Planet of Twilight)

1,150 BBY
- The slaver Zephyrus brags to equipment outfitters on Ovise III that he’d found slaves that could lift a cargo skiff one-handed. Zephyrus leaves in his ship, the Sickly Tremor, to acquire some of these slaves, but is never heard from again. In later centuries, biologists hypothesize that the slaves he was referring to were Phlogs (and possibly also Gorax), and that after acquiring some, he crashed on the Endor moon.*
  (conjecture based on Castaways of Endor)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn. This is “more than 1,100 years before ANH, so I have placed it at 1,150 BBY as an approximation. After all, if it was meant to be 1,200 BBY or earlier, wouldn’t the article have said “more than 1,200 years” before ANH instead?

1,102 BBY
- Beginning at this point, the planet Verdanth comes under the control of seventeen different Sith Lords over the next century.
  (conjecture based on Knight Errant Gazetteer)

1,102 BBY
- Vilia Calimondra is born.*
  (conjecture based on Knight Errant)*

*NOTE: She is “at least 70” in Knight Errant, so I have used “70.”

1,100 BBY
- As the New Sith Wars enter their final 100 years (and the Republic enters the final 100 years of the Draggulch period), the Republic is said to have entered its “dark age,” wherein the Republic can no longer afford to maintain its communications network, forcing it to drop all settlements outside of the Core off of the communications grid, forcing them to rely on courier ships. Meanwhile, an outbreak of the Candorian plague kills as much as two thirds of the citizens in some major population centers. This is sometimes referred to as the Republic’s “collapse.”
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Chronology)
- Tatooine (in the J11.9 system) is surveyed for the first time by the Republic Survey Corps and is deemed nominally habitable.
  (conjecture based on Secrets of Tatooine)
- Around this time, Raxus Prime churns out crude weapons as the galactic economy is collapsing. The environmental damage of this production will be felt within a century.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
- More than a millennium before the fall of the Republic, traders discover the Vorzyd Cluster. The Vorzyd Cluster is inhabited by the Vorzydiaks, the Kilmaulsi, the Paiguns, the Hrakians, and a lost colony of Selonian in the Seftek system. The region begins to thrive, economically.*
The date here, of course, is rounded up to the nearest hundred from an exact 1,019 BBY, since it’s “more than a millennium” before ROTS, not “a millennium” before.

- Sometime in this era, Jedi Master Shang-Troy Thanabo goes to Boranall, where he takes claim of two Force-sensitive identical twins, one of whom bears a scar from the other not wanting him to be born first (leaving the second twin alone). Thanabo trains the boys, who have exceptional gifts when together, but his training and love is not enough to stop the boys from turning against each other when a woman falls for the younger, unscarred, brother. The older brother tricks the girl into kissing him instead of her true lover, causing the younger brother to become jealous as well. The two brothers do battle, but it is Thanabo, who was trying to stop the fight, who ends up dead. The girl runs away, while the two continue to battle until their jealousy and hatred consume themselves . . . then the entire planet, turning it into a star. Of course, this could all just be Jedi myths, but it certainly puts the Jedi Code’s admonition about Jedi not knowing anger, fear, hatred, or love, in a new light. It also helps to explain why the Jedi, except in rare cases, no longer allow multiple Padawans to one Master.*

(Conjecture based on Geonosis and the Outer Rim Worlds)*

Mythology [flashback] (SWT14 short story: Chris Eliopolous)

Mythology [flashback] (SWT14 short story: Chris Eliopolous)

1,092 BBY
- Gub Tengo is born.

(conjecture based on Knight Errant)

1,087 BBY
- Around this time, Vannar Treece is born.*

(conjecture based on Knight Errant)*

*NOTE: He is in his fifties during Influx, which I have rounded to 55.

1,066 BBY
- By now, the Sith known as Vilia Calimondra has had various lovers and husbands. She has given birth to seven children, who are now adults. In order to keep any of them from turning on her (or teaming up against her), she creates the Charge Matrica, a challenge that is ostensibly to determine whom will be her sole heir. She challenges her children to grow their own dominions, and the one who grows theirs the most will be her heir. While the Charge Matrica begins peacefully enough, her daughter Xelian will eventually declare war on her son Chagras, beginning a conflict that will eventually leave only Chagras standing.*

(conjecture based on Knight Errant)*

*NOTE: When I first noticed that this event, 34 years prior to Knight Errant, was set in 1,066 BBY, I found myself wondering if “1066” was chosen on purpose. I asked John Jackson Miller about it, and he confirmed that, yes, this date was chosen for its reference to the Battle of Hastings in the year 1066 when William the Conqueror led the Norman conquest of England. Sometimes, being a history teacher pays off in interesting Star Wars tidbits. (Interestingly, I’m told that my family’s name, “Butler,” was once “Fitz-Simmons,” but it was changed when one of our distant ancestors became personal aide to William the Conqueror, like Alfred to Batman, his . . . “Butler.”)

1,059 BBY
- Around this time, Arkadia Calimondra is born to Lord Chagras.*

(conjecture based on Knight Errant)*

*NOTE: She is between 25 and 30 in the Knight Errant novel, so I’ve split the difference to say 27.

1,058 BBY
- Mandalorian mercenary Aga Awaud returns home to Mandalore to find that the Candorian plague has killed his family and most of his clan. Mandalorian ships are now banding together in Mandalorian Space in fear of raiders from surrounding sectors. Appalled at this situation and the gradual decline of Mandalorian society into mercenary bands in recent years, Awaud begins a movement known as the Return, which urges Mandalorians to return home to defend Mandalorian Space.

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

1,057 BBY
- Daiman, future Sith Lord, is born to Sith Lord Xelian. Daiman will later claim to be the creator of the universe, who thereby created the universe at this time and created a past to go with it to explain all that is. Some say that he has two mismatched eyes, but others believe he later changed them on purpose to match the two stars in his future dominion, the Daimanate.

(conjecture based on Knight Errant)

1,055 BBY
- Joad Kreel is born on Aquilaris.

(conjecture based on Deluge)

1,052 BBY
- Sith Lord Mandragall is seduced by the Sith Lord Xelian, who kills him in the night. Mandragall’s unusual military structure (which was mostly all talk but suggested uniting disparate bands together into a mixed army) was an idea that spread amongst the Sith and those who served them, including mercenary Beld Yulan, who trained Jarrow Rusher. Unfortunately, Beld will one day find himself willing to side with Odion against Daiman when the two are at war, due to Beld’s family dying of disease. Rusher will disagree with this choice and abandon his old mentor.

(conjecture based on Knight Errant)

1,051 BBY
- Tarsus Valorum is born.*

(conjecture based on Rule of Two)*

*NOTE: Tarsus is in his early fifties during Rule of Two.
- Aga Awaud, leader of the Mandalorian Return movement, takes the name Mandalore the Uniter. Under his leadership, the Mandalorians will survive the New Sith Wars and emerge as a regional industrial power and even a protector of neighboring systems (albeit often at a high price or as a result of coercion). Mandalorian Shocktrooper in this era will be more individualized and mobile than that of the Neo-Crusaders. Mandalore the Uniter’s own armor will be the inspiration for the look of Mandalorian armor for more than a millennium to come.

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare and The Bounty Hunter Code)

1,050 BBY
- Kerra Holt is born.

(conjecture based on Knight Errant)
- Of the seven children of Vilia Calimondra, only Chagras remains. He is the victory of the Charge Matrica, but with Vilia herself not yet dead, he does not receive his inheritance just yet. Vilia begins to worry that he will someday rise up against her to take his inheritance by force.

(conjecture based on Knight Errant)

1,046 BBY
- Sith children Quillan and Dromika, Force-linked twins, are born to Lord Chagras. They are the younger siblings of Arkadia Calimondra. The unusual twins are placed on Byllura by Lord Chagras for their protection.

(conjecture based on Knight Errant)
1,044 BBY
- Tan Tengo, granddaughter of Gub Tengo, is born.
  (conjecture based on Knight Errant)

1,043 BBY
- Aron and Mercia Holt come to Sarrassia to study the Grumani ruins that hold the key to the location of the Helm of Ieldis. They bring their daughter, Kerra Holt (age 7) with them. While Mercia studies the ruins and their inscriptions, Aron dives for relics in a cave. It is during this trip that Kerra meets and spends time with family friend Zoojoo.
  (conjecture based on Escape)

1,042 BBY
- Lureia is born.*
  (conjecture based on Knight Errant)*

*NOTE: She is “ten at most,” so I’m assuming she is ten.
- Lord Chagras, after eight years as the victor in the Charge Matrica, believes himself ready to strike against the Republic (with some prompting from Vilia Calimondra). He sets his sights on the region that includes, among other worlds, Aquilaris . . .
  (conjecture based on Knight Errant)
- Prior to Odion taking over Aquilaris, eight-year-old Kerra Holt and her family visit Joad Kreel and his family of seacroppers. After Joad takes Kerra for a ride in their submersible, she sneaks back aboard and hijacks the ship to try it out for herself, accidentally ramming the harbor wall.
  (conjecture based on Deluge)
- The Sith Lord Odion comes to Aquilaris (under orders from Lord Chagras, who is technically under orders, in part, from Vilia Calimondra), destroying communities and subjugating the Republic world. During the attack, Aron and Mercia Holt send their daughter, Kerra Holt, to find family friend Joad to prepare a line of escape. Aron comments that they must not leave their research behind. Kerra finds Joad, who points to Sith Lord Odion, finally revealing who is behind the attack. Kerra races home, only to find it in flames, her parents’ weapons left behind. She believes them to be dead. (To be continued below . . .)
  (Aflame)
- Unbeknownst to Kerra Holt, the attack on her home block was not an accident. Lord Chagras had sent Odion to the University of Sanbra, where he learned about the research being done to find the Helm of Ieldis. He learned that a dozen researchers were to meet with Jedi Vannar Treece and others at the Holt home. He portrayed the Aquilaris strike as a chance to catch Treece, though it was really to catch the researchers. Now, he has them, including Kerra’s parents, Aron and Mercia. Mercia is, at the moment, pregnant.
  (conjecture based on Escape)
- Kerra Holt is found by Jedi Knight Vannar Treece, who senses her Force sensitivity. He takes her to the Jedi Order to be trained as a Jedi. She will eventually be mentored by Treece. (To be continued below . . .)
  (Aflame)
- Unbeknownst to Kerra Holt, her parents are not dead. They have been captured by Lord Odion and will be assigned to Project Pandemonium to find the lost Helm of Ieldis. They will later check back among the survivors on Aquilaris and not find Kerra among them. They will likewise assume that she is dead.
  (conjecture based on Escape)

Knight Errant (novel/comic/short story series: John Jackson Miller)
Knight Errant (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Escape (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Escape, Part II [flashback] (comic: John Jackson Miller)
Aflame (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Aflame, Part II [flashback] (comic: John Jackson Miller)
1,040 BBY

- Sith Lord Chagras, the last surviving child of Vilia Calimondra from the Charge Matrica dies. He is poisoned. His eldest daughter, Arkadia Calimondra, will claim that he was poisoned by Vilia herself in an effort to keep him from rising against her to take his inheritance early and so that she can then set her grandchildren against each other in the Second Charge Matrica. Vilia, however, will claim that Arkadia herself killed her father in order to clear the way for her own ascension to power. As a result of Chagras death, the Chagras Hegemony falls, splitting into various parts, which first come under the control of his children and nephews, though other Sith from outside the Calimondra bloodline will rise to take other portions. In light of no more clear heirs to Vilia Calimondra’s holdings, she begins the aforementioned Second Charge Matrica, pitting the grandchildren (Quillan, Dromika, Arkadia Calimondra, Daiman, and Odion) against each other, ostensibly to determine her heir, but really to keep them fighting amongst themselves like the previous generation so that no one attempts to topple Vilia herself. Daiman and Odion are the first to go to war against each other.
  (conjecture based on Aflame and Knight Errant)
- With Lord Chagras dead, Odion makes the researchers captured on Aquilaris, including Aron and Mercia Holt, into his own team to search for the Helm of Ieldis.
  (conjecture based on Escape)
- The region of Sith space that includes the Alphoresis, Gazzari, Nilash, Tergamenion, Chelloa, and Darkknell systems (among others) comes under the control of Lord Daiman, who names his holdings the Daimanate, basing his capital on Darkknell. This region butts up against a region controlled (or that will be controlled) by Lord Ayanos Bactra (the Bactranate), which is based on Jutrand. The region of Sith space that spans from Gazzari toward the Core comes under the control of Lord Odion. It becomes known as the Odionate. Meanwhile, other regions formerly under the control of the Chagras Hegemony remain independent (or relatively so) and are referred to as the Chagras Remnant.
  (conjecture based on Knight Errant Gazetteer)
- At this time, Saaj Calician arrives on Byllura with a plan to use the Force-linked Sith twins, Dromika and Quillan, to control a new dominion via telepathic Celegians. He works to bring this plan together, which includes bringing the first (and primary) Celegian, known as “One,” to Byllura.
  (conjecture based on Knight Errant)

1,039 BBY

- Three years after Lord Odion’s attack on Aquilaris, Odion sends Aron and Mercia Holt to Sarrassia as part of Project Pandemonium to find the Helm of Ieldis. They know how dangerous the Helm would be in Odion’s hands and instead choose to leave the Grumani’s descendants to guard that location, then take the Helm of Ieldis itself with them (going AWOL from the Odionate) to hide on Skarpos. It is during this trip that they again run into Zoojoo, to whom they reveal that they believe their daughter, Kerra Holt, is dead. (She is alive and well, though, and training as a Jedi.)
  (conjecture based on Escape)

1,038 BBY

- At age 12, Kerra Holt helps coordinate travel assignments for volunteers under her mentor, Vannar Treece. She is not officially his Padawan, however, because these difficult times require Jedi to often train students only for a short time, then mentor other students, as the students are passed around. Kerra will have no formal master, but she will consider Vannar to be her master in all the ways that matter.
  (conjecture based on Knight Errant)
- Seese joins the Arkadianate on Syned.
  (conjecture based on Knight Errant)
- On Skarpos, currently under siege by the Sith, Aron and Mercia Holt have no hope to see their toddler (given up to keep the child safe) or their lost daughter Kerra Holt. They cannot let Lord Odion get his hands on the Helm of Ieldis, so they record a final message to Vannar Treece or any other Jedi working on the Helm project, then blow up the cavern they are in, burying themselves and the Helm itself.
(conjecture based on Escape)

1,037 BBY
• By this time, Saaj Calician’s plans to create a dominion using the Sith twins, Dromika and Quillan, has come to fruition . . . sort of. While the Clegians he has brought to Byllura do broadcast telepathic commands, he has underestimated the powers of the twins on himself. They control him as their “Regent Aspect,” and their dominion becomes known as the Dyarchy. They begin creating large warships to branch out in the future. One traveler in this area will tell of their rise to Jarrow Rusher, who will relay the tale to Kerra Holt before they travel to the Dyarchy five years from now.
(conjecture based on Knight Errant)
• At age 13, Kerra Holt begins choosing the names for all of Vannar Treece’s missions in Sith space. He considers it a good luck tradition.
(conjecture based on Influx)

1,036 BBY
• At age 14, Kerra Holt helps Vannar Treece raise donations for forays into Sith space.
(conjecture based on Knight Errant)

1,035 BBY
• At age 15, Kerra Holt begins outfitting Vannar Treece’s groups. Until she becomes a full Jedi Knight, however, she cannot go on the missions into Sith space herself.
(conjecture based on Knight Errant)

1,033 BBY
• Late this year, the Cyricept Personal Concealment Suit, Mark VI (stealth suit) that is worn by both Narsk Ka’hane and Kerra Holt is manufactured on Coruscant.*
(conjecture based on Knight Errant)*
*NOTE: This is four months before Knight Errant.
• Very late this year, Warmalo begins acting as a tour guide on Syned in the Arkadianate.*
(conjecture based on Knight Errant)*
*NOTE: This is three months before Knight Errant, so I have assumed it is very late in this year instead of very early the next year.

1,032 BBY
• Shortly before Kerra Holt’s first mission with Vannar Treece in Sith space, Sith Lord Daiman strikes baradium on Chelloa. Vannar convinces other Jedi, such as Jedi Masters Mrssk and Berluk, that they must strike at Daiman somehow. Baradium (used in weapons) makes him far too dangerous. He could manage to defeat his neighboring Sith or bring them together. Either way, a unified Sith force under Daiman is something they cannot allow. Their mission to knock out Daiman’s baradium operation with a stolen Sith transport is named “Operation Influx” by Kerra. Kerra herself will present the plan to the Republic Defense Ministry.
(conjecture based on Aflame and Knight Errant)
• Narsk Ka’hane arrives on Darkknell.*
(conjecture based on Knight Errant)*
*NOTE: This is one month before the Knight Errant novel.
• On the day before her eighteenth birthday, Kerra Holt, Padawan learner to Jedi Master Vannar Treece, completes her Jedi Trials and becomes a full Jedi Knight. She will now fight alongside her former Jedi Master.
(conjecture based on Aflame and Knight Errant)
• Shortly before Operation Influx, Jedi Master Vannar Treece submits a breakdown of his plan and more information on the Daimanate to Supreme Chancellor (and Jedi Master) Genarra.
(conjecture based on Knight Errant Gazetteer)
On Oranessan, Jedi Master Vannar Treece, Jedi Knight Kerra Holt (on her very first mission with Vannar in Sith space), and Dorvin Eltrom pose as a flight crew for Lord Daiman and take out a real flight crew. Their larger group (including, among others, Jedi Masters Mrssk and Berluk) boards the stolen Sith transport as part of Operation Influx to knock out Lord Daiman’s baradium operation on Chelloa. Unfortunately, they lack the dispatch case (holding the activation cylinder for their transport’s hyperdrive) that was left in the wreckage of the shuttle they shot down that held the real flight crew they replaced (before taking out the most recent team). While the rest of the team plans to use the transport to just return to their own ship, then return to Republic space, since they cannot use the transport (without a hyperdrive) to reach Chelloa as a Trojan horse, Kerra races out, against orders, and snags another activation cylinder from the Sith hangar nearby, just in time to return to the ship and allow them to continue with their mission to Chelloa.

(Influx)

On Chelloa, Sith Lord Daiman has set up an operation to mine for baradium for his weapons factories elsewhere, using slave labor to do so (organized by the community leader Gorlan Palladane). Daiman is using the weapons mostly against his own brother and rival, Lord Odion. When an attack hits unexpectedly, the local Sith minions expect Odion, but it is, in fact, a Jedi group led by Master Vannar Treece and his former Padawan, Jedi Knight Kerra Holt. They are there to destroy the baradium facilities. However, their plans are thrown into chaos when Lord Odion attacks, which is made worse by the fact that Kerra’s own family died when Odion attacked her homeworld before she joined the Jedi Order. Kerra intends to face him, but Vannar sends her to rescue slaves from the assault, while he takes on Odion. Too late, they realize that Odion’s large vehicles (kinetic corruptors) are not there to steal the baradium or simply destroy the mines. The machines actually ignite the baradium while still within the planet, decimating huge swaths of the surface. Vannar dies in the ensuing explosion, leaving Kerra abandoned with the saved slaves. To her surprises, she awakens to the healing touch of Gorlan, who is revealed to be a former Jedi Knight. Gorlan helps heal other victims of the blast, even as Lord Daiman himself arrives. (Daiman is a true lunatic Sith, who claims to have created the universe and to be a god, basically.) Daiman helps “his” people, but he very nearly takes out his frustrations with Kerra’s rebellious comments by killing Gorlan. Kerra is convinced to behave herself for the moment, but she intends to take out Daiman’s ability to wage war with the baradium that remains, regardless of Gorlan’s refusal to reclaim his Jedi mantle. Shortly thereafter, Daiman brings his spaceborne weapon factories to Chelloa to consolidate his resources. Kerra infiltrates his compound, briefly subduing him, long enough to learn about the next factories on their way, hear a bit of his insane delusions, and discover that Odion is going to return to Chelloa soon. She escapes with this knowledge, but Daiman does not send anyone after her. She is now a wild card in the game against Odion, but her target is his enemy, so she may remain in play for now. In space, Odion’s flying factory, the Spike, and his flagship, the Sword of Ieldis, engage Daiman’s forces. Little do they know that Kerra has infiltrated the ship, co-opting a droid to let her in. She overhears Odion receive a message from someone on Chelloa who had informed them about the baradium mines before Odion’s kinetic corruptor strike. The message claims that Daiman’s mines are no longer a threat, which convinces Odion to take all of his kinetic corruptors to wipe out Chelloa because someone is trying to make him back off. He senses Kerra overhearing them, and a lightsaber duel begins. During the duel, Kerra tries to convince Odion that Chelloa is not a threat and just innocent people. This tips him off, though, to the fact that Daiman is moving his factories there. Before Odion can order his men to head for Chelloa even faster, Kerra orders the droid to open the door to space, allowing her to escape to a starfighter, even as Odion must scramble to save himself. Before she can fire on his damaged ship with the starfighter, Daiman contacts them, revealing that he has caught his informant, who appears to be Gorlan! Kerra races to Chelloa, and Odion heads there as well, but he realizes that the baradium and Daiman’s factories could make Chelloa into a stronghold that he could control indefinitely. He orders the kinetic disruptors replaced by his Lightning Guard and sets course to conquer, rather than destroy, Chelloa. Daiman tortures Gorlan for more information, even as Kerra saves his family from Sith attackers. She heeds the words of Gorlan’s wife, choosing to protect the people, rather than just trying to kill the Sith, as her master would have wanted. She rescues Gorlan and learns that he did actually bring Odion to Chelloa, but it was an accident. They had tried to get the Jedi to help the planet when the baradium was discovered, so they used the only available relay to get out a message . . . but the relay was controlled by Odion. When Skodo, the Rodian who had the transmitter, was captured and did not give Gorlan up, he tried to use it again to get help, but it brought Daiman down upon him. As the Sith prepare to war further against each other, Kerra prepares a desperate plan to evacuate all 60,000 of the remaining inhabitants by stealing one of their ships. She will not be alone, however, as Gorlan reclams his lightsaber and the mantle of a Jedi Knight. As Odion’s forces attack Daiman’s, Daiman’s trap is sprung.

The mobile munitions factories are actually hiding kinetic corruptors. Daiman intends to destroy the planet and Odion with it. When Odion realizes this, he tries to get his men to Daiman’s ships to escape, but Gorlan, Kerra, and others have already seized them and loaded them with refugees. As the ships lift off, Daiman is left to find his own way off the planet (which he certainly will), while Odion (with a jetpack) chases after Kerra, who leads him away from where he can do the most damage, finally landing on the top of the ship Gorlan is aboard. Gorlan emerges, tethered to the ship, and attacks Odion to protect Kerra and avenge the deaths on Chelloa. However, when he tackles Odion of the edge of the ship, the tether is too long, and both men, not just Odion, fall too close to the ship’s thrusters.

Odion is badly burned and thought dead, while Gorlan’s burns kill him, but not before telling Kerra to finish her mission and safe all of those under Sith rule. Kerra escapes with the refugees and sends them back to Republic space, but she remains behind. Days later, Odion has been saved from death, but parts of his armor have been fused into his flesh by the thruster heat. As for Daiman, he believes Kerra to have perished on Chelloa, but he receives a message that she is alive and well. That message comes in the form of all of the statues of Daiman on Nilash, where Daiman has escaped, being beheaded. Kerra has made two very powerful new Sith enemies . . .

(Aflame)

- Kerra Holt arrives on Darkknell, disguised as an itinerant laborer on assignment.
  (conjecture based on Knight Errant)

- On Darkknell, weeks after the death of Jedi Master Vannar Treece, Kerra Holt is living covertly as a laborer and as the caregiver and tutor to young Tan Tengo, granddaughter of Gub Tengo, whom Tan and Kerra live with. At the same time, Bothan Narsk Ka’hane is acting undercover as well, using a Mark VI Cyricept Personal Concealment System (i.e. stealth suit) while in Lord Daiman’s territory. He is spying on the creation of the Convergence assault vehicle at the production facility known as Black Fang, ostensibly spying on behalf of Lord Odion (Daiman’s Sith Lord brother). Before he can blow it up, he literally crashes into errant Jedi Knight Kerra Holt, who uses his detonator to finish the job and then confiscates the stealth suit. Around the same time, Brigadier Jarrow Rusher, former soldier and now leader of the mercenary group known as Rusher’s Brigade (and commanding officer of his own makeshift battle craft, Diligence), is called, along with other mercenaries, to Lord Daiman, who “hires” (commands) them to battle the forces of Lord Odion to take control of Gazzari. When “recruiters” for Tan Tengo arrive to take her off to become a bombsight laborer for Daiman, Kerra fails to hold her tongue and is kicked out of their home. Shortly thereafter, another grand Daiman public ceremony takes place, during which Narsk, now a prisoner of Daiman witnesses Daiman via hologram making a deal with Sith Lord Ayanos Bactra, who is a sort of neutral arms dealer to other Sith Lords. He agrees to send Daiman an arxeum (a mobile training facility, basically) in return for safe passage to Vellas Pavo to eliminate a rival business interest. Daiman is to collect the arxeum at Gazzari, hence why the mercenaries were hired (and now inducted into Daiman’s slave army for greater control). Daiman is actually using the arxeum as bait for Odion, presenting a target he can’t resist attacking, even if it means killing a bunch of kids who would be students there, including Tan. Having been spying on Daiman, Kerra reluctantly speaks with Narsk and learns of Daiman’s trip to Gazzari. She leaves him able to free himself, but doesn’t free him herself. Kerra sneaks her way onto Gazzari along with Daiman’s forces, realizing almost too late that the children are there when Odion arrives to attack. Narsk, meanwhile, manages to get back to Odion’s forces before the battle commences, allowing him to be present on Odion’s side. The battle rages, and many among Rusher’s team die, but the ship is loaded up again soon with children (including Tan) that Kerra has managed to free. She and the kids get aboard the Diligence just after Kerra manages to destroy Odion’s devastating Death Spiral weapon that is clashing with Daiman’s forces. As they escape, things start to change below. Narsk has made a call to Daiman and Odion, and, all of a sudden, the two feuding brothers stop fighting and instead join together in charging into Bactra’s territory to topple him, in what appears to be an unprecedented form of cooperation between the two rivals. With little choice but to accept Kerra and the kids aboard the Diligence for now, what’s left of Rusher’s Brigade leaps to the safety of hyperspace . . . They find themselves in another Sith domain, the Dyarchy, ruled by the young Sith siblings Dromika and Quillan, who use their extreme mind powers to control their Regent, Saaj Calician, while remaining in isolation themselves. The Diligence arrives at their capital planet, Byllura, where Rusher intends to drop off Kerra and the kids to give them a safe place to live and get them out of Rusher’s hair. When they arrive, they realize something is not right. (The Sith Twins are using Celegians to amplify their mental powers and control the populace, almost like a hive with the Twins as King and Queen.) As the populace tries to grab those few who leave the ship to make them part of the collective, Kerra realizes part of the truth and warns Rusher, who saves the children, while Kerra makes her way into the Twins’ fortress, where she (with mysterious advice from Narsk via comlink, of all things), faces the rulers of the Dyarchy. Once inside, she convinces one of the Celegians to stop relaying mental messages to other Celegians aboard Dyarchy warships that have emerged and were primed to go out into the galaxy. She faces Saaj Calician, who tries to finally break free of the control the Twins have over him. He reveals that Quillan is locked in his own mind and Force perceptions, while Dromika watches over him and uses her extreme Force persuasion to control others. Kerra realizes that it is actually Quillan, very powerful, who is controlling Dromika and the others, and Dromika is just Quillan’s means of connecting to the others he controls. Using Narsk’s advice to “divide and conquer,” she snatches up Quillan and escapes aboard the Diligence, severing the connection between Quillan and the Dyarchy capital, reverting him to just another troubled child (without his connection to his sister) and ending the threat of the Dyarchy fleet. As things begin falling apart below, a Sith fleet emerges over Byllura and conquers it quickly. As this happens, the Diligence itself is captured by the fleet and brought aboard the flagship of yet another Sith Lord, Arkadia Calimondra, who claims to be there to help . . . Arkadia takes them to the heart of the Arkadianate, the planet Syned (a frozen world). There, she reveals that she is not the “dowager” (a widow who owns her husband’s property) that Saaj mentioned on Byllura, but she is, in fact, the older sister of Quillan and Dromika. She seems to be running Syned as a sort of organized chaos where people have various jobs that rely on retraining them repeatedly in new skills. She is still a Sith Lord, of course, but a very different one, focusing on order from chaos to pursue her goals and learn what is necessary to be victorious. She is also joined by Narsk, who claims to have been working for Odion until Odion and Daiman together turned on Bactra, when he then joined Arkadia and was sent to the Dyarchy, where he helped arrange for Kerra to bring down Quillan and Dromika’s leadership. As the Diligence crew and the children begin to settle in on Syned, unable to leave by Arkadia’s command but not oppressed otherwise, Kerra has a sense that something else is amiss. She is then offered the chance of a lifetime by Arkadia. The Sith Lord intends to let her know the reason for all the wars and strife in this part of the galaxy between the various Sith Lords, an explanation for chaos that has thus far left Kerra confused and frustrated. Kerra already knew that a Sith Lord woman named Xelian was the mother of brothers Odion and Daiman. She then reveals that the Sith Lord Chagras, whose death had seemed to spark the battle between the brothers, is actually Daiman and Odion’s uncle, Xelian’s brother. Chagras and Xelian were two of the seven children of the Sith Lord matriarch Vilia Calimondra, the “dowager,” who, after having several husbands over the years, amassed a huge power base and fortune. With seven children of different marriages, each child claimed to be her true heir if and when she were to die. To solve this, Vilia created the Charge Matrica, a sort of challenge to all of her children to expand their holdings as far as possible, and the one who has the most power and territory when she eventually dies will become her heir. When Xelian began to lose in this contest, she declared war on Chagras, whom Arkadia reveals was Arkadia’s own father. This began a battle between all seven children, until all were dead except for Chagras and peace finally came. Chagras would be Vilia’s heir. Chagras used his children, nieces, and nephews to restore Sith power to face the Republic, then finally set Odion loose against Aquilaris (Kerra’s homeworld, where her family died ten years ago). However, Odion died two years later, leaving no one in his generation. As a result, the Second Charge Matrica began, wherein the grandchildren are all now fighting to be the heir to Vilia’s legacy. Vilia also gives away bits of her power and fortune as rewards when her grandchildren do well, hence events known as Bequests . . . and one begins just after Arkadia reveals all of this, allowing Kerra to spy on the proceedings. Vilia gives bits of Bactra’s holdings to Odion and Daiman, doling them out as if giving candy to children. As the meeting ends, Arkadia agrees to send Quillan and Dromika to Vilia. Arkadia wants Kerra to carry Quillan to Vilia . . . and assassinate the Sith Lord grandmother. Arkadia believes (perhaps rightly, or perhaps she is lying and did it the deed herself) that Vilia saw Chagras gaining too much power on his own as her sole heir, so it was Vilia herself who had him (her own son) killed in order to keep him from one day turning on her to take his inheritance before she could die of her own accord. Arkadia wants revenge. Arkadia sweetens the pot by telling her that Vilia ordered Chagras to order Odion to attack Aquilaris. Kerra refuses and is taken prisoner, even as Rusher is ordered off the planet without the kids. Narsk is now to deliver Quillan and be the assassin in Kerra’s place, but he has other plans. He hires Rusher, who plans to save the children if possible, influenced by Kerra’s arguments on their journey. Rusher is also given half of the coordinates to get them to Republic space, very rare hyperspace coordinates indeed. Narsk frees Kerra and gives her the other half of the coordinates, then races off, while Kerra and Rusher’s men battle Arkadia’s forces to escape, which gives Narsk the distraction he needs to fulfill his own mission . . . Kerra engages Arkadia in a lightsaber duel, only to be saved by Rusher, who has saved the children. Everyone escapes as the city is nearly obliterated, but no sign is left of Arkadia, who might have survived. As for Kerra and the Diligence, they get the kids to safety, but Kerra intends to continue her fight against the Sith, and Rusher is inclined to possibly join her at a discounted rate for his services. As for Narsk, he gets Quillan safely to Vilia, having rescued him from Arkadia’s plot to use him as the delivery vehicle for a bomb as part of the assassination attempt on Vilia. Narsk has actually been working for Vilia all this time, maneuvering to get Dromika (saved from Byllura during the chaos on Syned) and Quillan safely to their grandmother. The Second Charge Matrica continues, but now Kerra understands what is happening and is a new piece in the ever-changing game of Vilia Calimondra.

(Knight Errant)

- Aquilaris, now under the control of Lord Daiman, is attacked by the space forces of Zodoh the Hutt, while Daiman himself is busy carving up the remnants of the Bactranate. The attack comes as Kerra Holt is just arriving on the planet to help her homeworld free itself of the Sith. She meets with the remnants of the Seacroppers’s Guild and find their spirits broken, even that of her old friend Joad Kreel. They are all under the influence of a form of spice called “Deluge” (AKA “the Flood”), which keeps them docile as a workforce. Zodoh uses his superweapon, the Stormdriver, to cause a massive storm, but Kerra races to stop it. The vessel is destroyed, but not by Kerra. The ship is blasted by a Republic squadron called Devil Squadron, led by Captain Jenn Devaad of Grace Command, a mercy organization from Alderaan. She offers Kerra a chance to join them and help those they can. Meanwhile, in the aftermath of the battle, Zodoh offers “terms” to the Sith, intending to take a chunk of Sith space for himself. Soon thereafter, Devil Squadron (including Kerra) attacks Lord Daiman’s holdings on Vellas Pavo, then joins in feeding the needy. She requests to officially join them, and Jenn agrees, though fellow pilot Vahss is a bit concerned about her ever learning “the rest.” Joad overhears them, but he is so drug-afflicted that he forgets to tell Kerra what he heard. While escorting Mother Grace to its jump point, they encounter Zodoh’s Voracious and engage. Zodoh reveals that his plans are to use several of his Stormdrivers to draw all of the moisture from the atmosphere of Aquilaris and literally flood the world with its own moisture as a message to the Sith: respect Zodoh or drown. Devil Squadron faces off with Zodoh’s forces, but Kerra sees the futility in it and takes her starfighter back to help those on Aquilaris, while Jenn presses forward, ending up captured by Zodoh. Kerra suggests to old seacropper friend Padgett that they get refugees to underwater harvester stations in their submersibles, but they are all in terrible shape, and the other seacroppers are on Deluge. She tries to talk sense into old friend Joad, but he sticks to wanting Deluge. In her anger, she Force slams a “food” container that Jenn’s team had left for him. It opens, revealing its contents. Soon, when Jenn, released by Zodoh after making a deal to save herself and her people from becoming his slaves (again), comes to collect the “food” containers herself, Kerra confronts her, and it is revealed that Jenn’s team has actually been giving away Deluge in “food” containers as a means of sparing the Republic from another invasion. If those on Sith worlds are too drugged up to care about invading, the Republic is safe. Operation Deluge was created by Baron Lemayne from the Republic, who had them leave it in time-release containers to allow them to free worlds, then leave drugs for the population to grind close to any occupying Sith to a halt. Jenn is willing to betray Kerra and her people to save her squadron, since the Republic did not save her and her people from five years in Zodoh’s labor camps after a bad mission on Dalaang. Jenn leaves to save her people, leaving Kerra to save hers on her own. She tries getting to as many as she can in her starfighter, even as the waters rise . . . and rise . . . and rise. She finds Joad, who has given up Deluge, but he leaps into the water, seemingly to his death . . . Jenn returns to Zodoh and gives him the drugs he asked for, only to learn that (a) he plans to use it to lace food and addict even more people and (b) he has released her squadron . . . out of an airlock. Having expected betrayal, Jenn detonates charges in many of the crates of supposed drugs. Below on Aquilaris, Joad resurfaces, literally, aboard a submersible. While Kerra’s people save themselves, Jenn escapes Zodoh’s Voracious in a two-seater Intruder starfighter and heads back for Kerra. Together, they will try to save Zodoh’s next target: Daiman’s capital, Darkknell, and its billions of inhabitants. As Zodoh’s forces attack Darkknell, Lord Daiman is catched off-guard, since many of his forces are engaging other Sith Lords (most notably Odion) elsewhere. Upon arriving in the Intruder, Kerra leaps onto the Voracious, knowing from Jenn that the Stormdrivers stopped attacking Aquilaris when she detonated her explosives aboard the Voracious. While Jenn attacks Zodoh’s forces in space, Kerra makes her way to the control dome, where she encounters Zodoh. The Hutt shuts off the artificial gavity and engages Kerra in hand-to-hand combat, until Jenn blasts the dome on Kerra’s directions. Zodoh is sent spiraling into space, while Kerra holds her breath and boards the Intruder again. They take out the control computers and destroy the Voracious, saving Darkknell. In the aftermath, Zodoh is rescued by Daiman, only so that Daiman can torture him to death using his water collection technology to suck all moisture from Zodoh’s resilient body. The people of Aquilaris plan to rebuild their society, using the underwater bases if necessary. Jenn goes back to ferrying drugs for Baron Lemayne, but she actually uses the missions to bring refugees back to the Republic, then dumps the drugs as she enters Sith territory each time. She leaves the fire lotus starfighter for Kerra, who can now travel in Sith space without having to hitch rides. Another blow has been struck against the Sith, but there is a long, long way to go.

(Deluge)

- While searching Lord Daiman’s data centers for information about her family and the Odionate, Kerra Holt draws Daiman’s attention. Rather than stopping her, he decides to help her, believing that she can help bring down his brother Lord Odion.

(conjecture based on Escape)

- On Tergamenion, Kerra Holt impersonates a laborer for Lord Daiman, jumping off a building to “commit suicide.” She is saved by one of Daiman’s guards. When she claims she would rather die than return to Daiman’s factory, the guard reveals himself to actually be Wayman, a Claimer for Lord Odion, seeking those strong-willed and ready to embrace the nothingness of death. Noting her Force abilities, he suggests she could be trained to fight against Daiman for Odion. He gives her a signaling device to contact him when she is ready to leave to serve Odion. Unbeknownst to Wayman, Kerra is actually being helped by Daiman, who sees her as a means of bringing down Odion, due to visions he has had of chaos in the Odionate. Kerra has reluctantly accepted that help because she has to find the truth about her family, using a device she wears as a necklace. The only way to do that is to get behind Odion’s lines. She joins Wayman to fight in Odion’s name as one of the Novitiates. They strike against Lord Malakite’s domain, known as the Menagerie, where he perverts life through centuries of experimentation. They strike on Skarpos. During the battle, she tries to save her comrades’ lives, which draws the ire of their leader, Yulan, but draws praise from Wayman, who now knows her as “Mercy.” Wayman has arrived from Jubalene, Odion’s capital, where he needs a team for a major assignment. Wayman wants “Mercy” with them. They visit Vanahame to rearm, then head for Jubalene, where Kerra wants to check out Odion’s data centers, which are available to Novitiates. On Jubalene, Odion explains to the assembled group (including Kerra as “Mercy”) that sensing other beings in the Force gives him pain. Thus, he seeks to destroy all other life in the universe. He also draws upon the collective anguish of his slaves to send anger and such into the minds of others, so that they will fight irrationally to the death for him. He now wants to send a Novitate team to recover the Helm of Ieldis, created by Lord Ieldis and said to give command over others to lead them to their demise. He had sent a team to look for it years ago as part of Project Pandemonium, but the trail ended on Sarrassia, which was in Lord Bactra’s realm. Now that Bactra has been taken down, he can send a team to look for the Helm. As the others go to watch gladiator-style games, Kerra claims she wants to research the Helm in order to help in their mission. She uses the data center to access the locket she has worn since Vannar Treece found her. It calls up an image of her mother (Mercia Holt, an archaeologist) and father (Aron Holt, a skin driver), but she is shocked to learn that they are not dead. They were instead captured by Odion’s forces on Aquilaris and transferred to Project Pandemonium. She then joins the Novitiates on a mission to Sarrassia, the last known location of the Helm of Ieldis (and her parents). Before the other Sith forces, led by Yulan (who wants to get back to his usual stop-off at Vanahame), can find the Grumani ruins where the Helm is said to have been, Kerra finds them, and in doing so she also finds her old family friend Zoojoo, who was there when Kerra’s parents first visited to study the ruins when Kerra was only seven. It is, in fact, the pendant from Kerra’s mother that allows access to the ruins at all. She learns the truth about her parents escaping from Odion’s Project Pandemonium to keep the Helm’s location a secret from Odion, but Zoojoo notes that it is now safe on Skarpos, the very world that Odion is now capturing from Malakite. Kerra is determined to go there to find her parents (and, incidentally, the Helm), but Zoojoo warns that this will bring the Sith right to the Helm. When Yulan and the others arrive, Zoojoo blows up the ruins to hide the secrets of the Helm, killing herself in the process. Kerra, knowing the only way to quickly get to Skarpos is to be aboard a Sith ship with the right hyperspace routes, reveals their destination (and the location of the Helm) to Yulan. They make a brief stop on Vanahame for Yulan, which Kerra discovers is to visit legions of children being kept from parents or outside contact and bred to be unfeeling slaves for Odion. She also learns that Yulan lost his own family to Candorian Plague while fighting as a mercenary, which is what drove him to join Odion. They finally arrive on Skarpos, where the Novitiates battle Malakite’s swarms and newly-arrived Daiman, who had another mole in the Novitiates, Blenk. As the three-way battle rages, Kerra ditches the other Novitiates, switches back to her own green lightsaber from their red, and charges into the Helm’s hiding place, expecting to find her parents. Instead, she is struck by lightning from Odion, who has arrived before her, taken the Helm of Ieldis, and knows her true identity. He had allowed her to find the Helm for him, and he reveals that it was he who, while seeking the Helm, set Chagras’ attackers against her home on Aquilaris. Wayman was kept near to Kerra so that he could alert Odion when she found the Helm. Yulan reveals that they found two human skeletons and a necklace like Kerra’s when uncovering the Helm. Apparently, Kerra’s parents buried themselves and the Helm to keep it out of Sith hands. With the Helm, Odion uses Kerra’s anguish to turn attackers against each other, bringing destruction. He then sets out with Kerra as his prisoner, ready for an even greater use of his newfound power. While en route, Yulan plays a recording for her that Odion wanted her to see: her parents’ final moments and a message to Vannar Treece and Kerra. They then arrive at Vanahame, the orphanage where the children (possibly including Kerra’s sibling who was not with her parents when they died) are held. Odion can now draw upon their misery to become all-powerful. Even as he goes to Vanahame, the Dowager Villia Calimondra contacts her other Sith family members to stop Odion from extinguishing life across the galaxy, since no one should want to rule a dead galaxy. On Vanahame, Odion holds Kerra prisoner with Wayman and Yulan at his side, as he turns off the lights in the orphanage, causing fear and agitation among the children, which he then draws upon to cause his enemies and subjects alike to turn on each other, planet by planet. Kerra is able to convince Yulan to be willing to live for a cause, rather than die for it, and he saves the day by turning the lights back on for the children, then freeing them to meet each other for the first time. As he does, Kerra frees herself and tries to take down Odion, but Wayman stands in her way. They duel, and she finally kills Wayman when the joy of the children causes feedback through the Force and the Helm into Odion, causing him agony. He begs Kerra to spare him and save him, claiming that he can help her find her missing sibling, but she declares that all of the orphaned children of the Odionate are truly her brothers and sisters, and she allows the power of the Helm to destroy Odion. In the aftermath, Yulan thanks Kerra for showing him a new outlook on life. He will take the children to the Republic, while Kerra continues her own fight in Sith Space to free the people there and bring them to the Republic as well. She is truly serving her “family” in Sith Space.

(Escape)

Knight Errant [continued] (novel/comic/short story series: John Jackson Miller)
Influx (starwars.com short story: John Jackson Miller)
Knight Errant [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Aflame [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Aflame, Part I (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Knight Errant #0 (comic: John Jackson Miller)
Comic Preview
Aflame, Part II [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Aflame, Part III (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Aflame, Part IV (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Aflame, Part V (comic series: John Jackson Miller)

Knight Errant (novel: John Jackson Miller)
Prologue
The Daimanate
Chapters 1 – 10
The Dyarchy
Chapters 11 – 17
The Arkadianate
Chapters 18 – 26

Knight Errant [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Deluge (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Deluge, Part I (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Deluge, Part II (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Deluge, Part III (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Deluge, Part IV (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Deluge, Part V (comic series: John Jackson Miller)

Escape [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Escape, Part I (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Escape, Part II [continued] (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Escape, Part III (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Escape, Part IV (comic series: John Jackson Miller)
Escape, Part V (comic series: John Jackson Miller)

1,030 BBY
• Argel Tenn is born.*
  (conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)*
*NOTE: He is “about fifty” by the time of Dynasty of Evil.
• Jedi Master (and current and/or future Grand Master) Fae Coven begins extensive study of the Jedi Code.
  (conjecture based on The Jedi Path)

1,026 BBY
• Dessel (the future Darth Bane) is born to Hurst and his wife. The mother dies in childbirth. This, coupled with the financial hardship of raising a child alone that keeps Hurst trapped in the cortosis mines of Apatros, will lead him to call the boy “Bane.”
  (conjecture based on Path of Destruction)

1,025 BBY
• Around this time, the Stone Prison on Doan is used for the last time prior to the capture of Darth Bane. It is ordered closed by the predecessor (the father, most likely) of Prince Gerran’s father (in other words, Gerran’s grandfather).*
  (conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)*
*NOTE: It had not been used in “over forty years” prior to when Gerran introduces it to Serra, which had to be sometime between their meeting in 983 BBY and his death in 981 BBY. I have rounded that forty year (since it is “over forty”) to this date. It is also noted that it hasn’t been used in almost two generations, and since a generation in Star Wars is often assumed to be 25 years (“for over a thousand generations” = 25,000, etc.), this fits with it being “almost” two generations as well.

1,022 BBY
• Gerd begins working the cortosis mines of Apatros.*
  (conjecture based on Path of Destruction)*
*NOTE: He had been working “nearly twenty years” before his last confrontation with Dessel (AKA Darth Bane). I’ve founded this to 19 years.
• Sirak the Iridonian Zabrak begins training in the Sith arts under Lord Qordis.
  (conjecture based on Path of Destruction)
• Around this time, Anzati Jedi Volfe Karkko becomes a great Jedi, despite the fears of his peers. He has never tasted the soup of a victim and decides one time couldn’t hurt. The taste entices him to the point that he begins to take more and more, gradually falling to the Dark Side and using his Jedi powers to drain essences. Members of the Jedi Council track him down to what will later be called Kiffex, where he is defeated. Due to his stature as a Jedi and among the Anzati, he is not killed, but placed in a stasis field so he can spend the coming years thinking about his failings. His lightsaber is also kept in the prison, and it is sealed to all but Jedi, but over the years, Anzati come and begin to virtually worship the “Dreaming One.”*
  (conjecture based on Darkness)*
*NOTE: The NEGtAS finally gives us a date for this event, “roughly a thousand years before the Clone Wars.”
• Several important industrial companies band together to form the Techno Union, intending to rebuild factories and restore the economies of worlds ravaged by the extended warfare with the Sith.*
  (conjecture based on The Clone Wars: The Official Episode Guide: Season 1)*
*NOTE: Information provided by Luke Van Horn. This is 1,000 years before the Clone Wars.

1,020 BBY
• Sarro Xaj is born.
  (conjecture based on Rule of Two)
• Jedi Knight Tal of Ruusan dies.
  (conjecture based on Jedi Knight)
• The city Zehava, the capital of the planet Melida/Daan, is founded.
  (conjecture based on Defenders of the Dead via TimeTales, fixed for new Jedi Apprentice dating due to Deceptions)
• Hetton begins studying the Dark Side under Gula Dwan, at his mother’s urging. Very soon, Hetton loses faith in Dwan’s knowledge and the family begins collecting various Sith and Force-related artifacts to use in later training.
  (conjecture based on Rule of Two)
• Jedi Master Pernicar’s Padawan, Wud Mortull, builds his own lightsaber.
  (conjecture based on Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)
• Around this time, Jedi Crix Sunburris joins the Jedi Starfighter Corps as a Jedi Ace.*
  (conjecture based on The Jedi Path)*
*NOTE: He is one for around 20 years, and he seems to no longer be an active pilot as of his writing in The Jedi
I have assumed that his tenure as a pilot ends when the New Sith Wars end.

1,019 BBY
- Johun Othone is born on Sermeria.
  (conjecture based on Rule of Two)
- Around this time, or so it is said, a pot of stew begins cooking at the Oyu'baat cantina in Keldabe on Mandalore. Over the next thousand years, more food is tossed into the pot, but the stew never stops cooking over the fire.
  (conjecture based on Order 66)

1,018 BBY
- The king of Maill has a coin minted in a metal that is the color of his queen’s hair. However, the metal is far too malleable and ruins several minting machines before being pulled from circulation. By the beginning of the Imperial era, it will be the single rarest form of coin in the galaxy.
  (conjecture based on Master of Deception)
- Around this time, Jedi Master Pernicar’s Padawan, Wud Mortull, disappears. He will fall to the Dark Side and join the ranks of the Sith within the next eight years.
  (conjecture based on Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)

1,016 BBY
- Tallo is born to Bordon and his wife.
  (conjecture based on Rule of Two)

1,013 BBY
- Darovit is born.
  (conjecture based on Rule of Two)
- Wend is born to Bordon and his wife.
  (conjecture based on Rule of Two)
- At the age of thirteen, Dessel (the future Darth Bane) begins working the cortosis mines of Apatros.
  (conjecture based on Path of Destruction)

1,011 BBY
- Having learned all he can from his Sith Master, Lord Na’daz, Sith student Kas’im kills him, taking his lightsaber.
  (conjecture based on Path of Destruction)

1,010 BBY
- Zannah (the future Darth Zannah) is born.*
  (conjecture based on Rule of Two)*

*NOTE: Dynasty of Evil refers to her as ten years younger than Bane, but this seems to be a poor job of rounding, given that Bane is 16 years her senior when given specific ages in the other Darth Bane novels.
- In this era, Rohlan of Kaal (heir to the Jedi lineage of the Knights of Hoth), has earned the rank of Master and, known as Master Hoth, he is now the battlemaster of the Jedi Temple on Coruscant. A current Jedi Knight studying at the Temple, Skere Kaan puts forth a the radical idea that the New Sith Wars are the result of failed Republic and Jedi Order policy. Kaan has been granted Jedi Master status, based on his political theory, and the Jedi hope to moderate his ideas to perhaps find a way to seek practical reform. This year, though, Kaan decides that enough is enough. Impatient with the Jedi Order, Kaan and other Jedi Knights who agree with him leave the Jedi Order and create the Brotherhood. They intend to conquer Sith enclaves as a prelude to ending the Sith threat and reforming the Republic. Kaan’s Brotherhood manages to conquer numerous Sith enclaves in less than a year, but in the process, the Brotherhood falls to the Dark Side, developing into the Sith sect known as the Brotherhood of Darkness. Their emergence and dominance ends the current Sith in-fighting and creates a single, major Sith threat to the Republic. Kaan bases his Brotherhood on Roon. Rather than waiting for the Republic to make another mistake after congratulating Kaan, even as he was falling to the Dark Side, Lord Hoth and his own followers from the Jedi Temple join together with Jedi Knights from the Javin Marches, Corellia, Cularin, and Kampanas. He calls the last Grand Council of the Order to declare that the various Jedi Lords and their baronies should join together into one fighting force. He is bestowed the title Lord Hoth, and now has the position of Seneschal of what he refers to as the Army of Light. He intends to take the fight directly to Lord Kaan and his Brotherhood of Darkness.

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

- In the years leading up to the Battle of Ruusan, one of Lord Skere Kaan’s greatest underlings is the Sith Lord Seviss Vaa. Seeking to bring back the true nuances of Sith alchemy used by Naga Sadow during the first Dark Lords of the Sith Order, Vaa uses Sadow’s old texts to create various beasts. On Aduba-3, he creates a Dark Side creature much like creatures that Sadow had made. The creature would be driven mad by the sight of a lightsaber, mercilessly killing whomever possessed it. Figuring he could use this creature against the Jedi someday, Vaa put it into suspended animation before eventually heading off to the Battle of Ruusan, where he died with the rest of the Sith Lords (except for Darth Bane, of course).

(conjecture based on The Starshoppers of Aduba-3)

- In a confrontation with the Sith, Jedi Master Pernicar comes face to face with his former Padawan, Wud Mortull, who went missing eight years ago. As they are about to embrace, Wud ignites a Sith lightsaber and tries to cut Pernicar down, forcing the Jedi Master to kill his former apprentice, who had joined the Sith during his eight-year absence. Following the incident, Pernicar records his thoughts on Sith lightsabers into a Jedi holocron. (To be continued below . . .

(Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)

The Jedi

Lightsabers

Sith Lightsabers

1,009 BBY

- At the age of ten, Johun Othone is discovered by the Jedi Order and brought to Coruscant to begin Jedi training. He will become the Padawan of Lord Hoth (Rohlan of Kaal).

(conjecture based on Rule of Two)

1,008 BBY

- Serra is born to the healer Caleb.

(conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)

- At the age of eighteen, Dessel (the future Darth Bane) stands up to his abusive father, Hurst, only to be beaten savagely again. While in bed that night, Des continuously wishes his father would die. Unbeknownst to him at the time, it is this hate-fueled thought process that leads to Hurst’s heart attack that night, Des’ first kill using the Dark Side.

(conjecture based on Path of Destruction)

1,006 BBY

- Dannik Jerriko is born.

(conjecture based on Out of the Closet: The Assassin’s Tale)

- The Brotherhood of Darkness, under Lord Skere Kaan, conquers the ancient Sith world of Korriban, slaying thousands of Republic troops and nearly 100 Jedi in the process. The Sith Lords Qordis and Kopcz immediately set about resurrecting the Sith Academy on the world, carrying on the tradition from the era of Darths Sion, Nihilus, and Traya. (To be continued below . . . )
1,005 BBY
- Around this time, word of Skere Kaan’s Brotherhood of Darkness becomes more widespread. Hetton’s mother urges him to join them, but he refuses to join any political faction. When she persists, he kills her. (conjecture based on Rule of Two)

1,004 BBY
- The Jedi Order unites the various baronial sectors under Jedi control into the Army of Light under Lord Hoth (Rohlan of Kaal). (conjecture based on Knight Errant Gazetteer)
- Lord Skere Kaan’s Brotherhood of Darkness lands occupying forces on Dromund Kaas and Malrev IV, only to be repulsed by Republic forces. A second wave of attacks by the Brotherhood occurs on Kashyyyk, forcing Jedi troops there to retreat to Trandosha, where most are annihilated. (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

1,003 BBY
- Around this time, Jedi Master Hoth (AKA General Hoth) becomes the leading figure on the Republic’s side of the war versus the Sith. (conjecture based on Path of Destruction)
- Three years after the resurrection of the Sith Academy on Korriban, three years before the fateful final Battle of Ruusan in the New Sith Wars, the Dark Side is about to gain one of its greatest heroes. On the planet Apatros, a young man named Dessel works as a cortosis miner, in debt past his eyeballs to the Outer Rim Oreworks Company (ORO), thanks to the debts of his late father, Hurst. On the fifth anniversary of Hurst’s death, one of the old man’s friends, Gerd, picks a fight with Des (whom he calls “Bane” because Hurst considered him the “bane” of his existence and gave him the name), leading Des to be penalized and have the day off early after unconsciously using the Dark Side to sense Gerd’s attacks and bite his thumb off. This proves fortuitous, though, as it allows him to be at his friend Groshik’s cantina, where recently-arrived Republic soldiers, there to collect cortosis, would be ready to lose some credits in sabacc. Over the course of the evening, Des uses his skills at cards and his unconscious “luck” from the Force as he gambles, while discussing cards and the politics of the New Sith Wars with the soldiers. In the final hand, Des wins big in circumstances that cause a drunken ensign to believe he had cheated. The ensign’s words nearly start a brawl between the soldiers and local miners, but the cantina closes early and everyone is forced out. After speaking with Groshik, Des leaves as well, only to be set upon by the ensign and two soldiers. Des kills the ensign in self-defense (though he could have just incapacitated him), which effectively destroys his life on Apatros. He goes to Groshik for help and is smuggled off of the planet before the Republic can bring him up on murder charges. His destination is recruitment into the Sith army. (To be continued below . . . )
- In the months after Dessel (Bane) leaves Apatros to join the army of the Sith, Des works his way up to the rank of sergeant. He spends that year serving alongside his comrade Adanar (who signed up the same day) with Lieutenant Ulabore’s Gloom Walkers. The first mission that Des and Adanar serve with the Gloom Walkers is the capture of Kashyyyk, during which the Gloom Walkers are cut off while coming in as reinforcements and Des’ Force-attuned instincts save them all during a three day trek alone. Shortly thereafter, Kashyyyk fell and the Gloom Walkers story became a legend in the Sith army. Upon the fall of Kashyyyk, Republic survivors flee to Trandosha’s city of Hsskhor, and the Gloom Walkers (with others) pursue, only to be nearly wiped out in a sneak attack by Trandoshans at night. The Sith then send in reinforcements and raze the city to the ground.
(conjecture based on Path of Destruction)

Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)

Path of Destruction [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)

Part One

Chapters 1 – 5

1,002 BBY

- One year after joining the Sith army, Dessel (Bane) is now a sergeant in the Gloom Walkers, a unit led by Lieutenant Ulabore. On a mission to Phaseera, the Walkers receive orders through Ulabore that come straight from the Sith Lords at the top. They are to hit a Republic outpost in an hour to allow a Sith force to begin their invasion of the world. Knowing that it is a suicide mission that could be carried out successfully after nightfall, Des disobeys orders, taking Ulabore captive, in order to carry out the mission a bit later, saving the lives of many of his men. Upon return, Des finds Ulabore free and is taken into custody. Rather than being court-marshaled and executed, though, tales of his amazing abilities (including expert sniping, to say the least, during the mission) reach the ears of Lord Kopecz, who takes him to Korriban. There, Des is chosen to be trained at the Sith academy to possibly become a Sith Lord one day, serving with the Brotherhood of Darkness. In accepting this offer, Des is allowed to choose a new name to be “reborn.” He chooses the name his father used to call him, making it a strength instead of a weakness. He is now “Bane.” Bane does not yet know it, but he will face resentment by arriving so late in his life and being brought by Kopecz, who is, in a sense, a rival of the academy’s headmaster, Lord Qordis. Bane’s training begins . . .

Bane is lucky in that he is being trained on Korriban, where the greatest students are, rather than to be a Sith Warrior or Marauder (on Honoghr, Gentes, or Gamorr) or a stealth assassin (as are taught on Ryloth, Umbara, and Nar Shaddaa). He has the potential to be a Sith Lord, if he can channel his potential. Over the next few weeks, he trains under Lords Qordis, Kas’im, Orilltha, Shenayag, Hezzoran, and Borthis. He also, unlike most students, spends time studying in the Sith archives, including reading materials left by Sith of various eras, even though the current thinking is that the older Sith were misguided because of their infighting. Instead, Skere Kaan believes that the New Sith should all be equal, a “Brotherhood,” as it were. He has much to learn from the past . . . At about the same time, the two-year-long Battle of Ruusan begins when a Sith fleet stages a daring sneak attack against the Republic forces stationed above Ruusan. (This is the First Battle of Ruusan.) The Sith are led by Lord Kaan himself aboard his flagship, Nightfall, who uses battle meditation. When a Jedi Master seems to be using the same technique against him, Lord Kopecz makes his way aboard the Jedi’s vessel and kills her. In the end, every single Republic element on and above Ruusan is utterly destroyed. Ruusan now belongs to the Sith (The Republic will try to take it again soon, but will fail, which is the Second Battle of Ruusan.) . . . After a few months of training, Bane is growing strong in the Dark Side and training with Lord Kas’im in a class on lightsaber combat, using a training blade. After one day’s lesson, he challenges the Makurth student Fohargh, who had beaten Bane in a similar challenge early in his training. Fohargh again bests Bane in dueling, but when Fohargh taunts him, Bane uses the Force to crush the life out of him. While this brings him some satisfaction, it also brings him to the attention of super-student Sirak and his fellow Zabrak students, Lokay and Yevra. There are some who believe Sirak to be the prophesied Sith’ari (a being embodying the epitome of Sith power), and now Sirak is waiting for Bane to one day challenge him so that Sirak can face a true challenge. That night, after discussing his abilities and actions with Qordis, Bane dreams of the day his father died and realizes that it was his own Dark Side-fueled wishes for Hurst’s demise that led to the man’s heart attack. Upon making that realization, Bane’s heart is no longer in his training. Within three weeks, his training starts to fall behind where he should be, making him a weak target in the challenge ring. He refuses to give himself completely to the Dark Side . . . Elsewhere, Lord Kaan’s forces have taken Corulag, Chandrila, and Brentaal IV, but he receives word that a massive Jedi force, the “Army of Light,” led by General Hoth, has completely wiped out the Sith forces on Ruusan, reclaiming the planet for the Republic in the Third Battle of Ruusan. Kaan sees the opportunity to wipe out the majority of the Jedi Order and orders all Sith (except for those training to be Sith Lords on Korriban and their teachers) to join forces to head for Ruusan. Meanwhile, on Korriban, Qordis orders Kas’im to shun Bane for his recent failures. When he realizes what is happening, Bane tries to challenge Sirak to quickly gain face, but he ends up pounded and in a bacta tank to heal. . . . (To be continued below . . . )

(Path of Destruction)

Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)

Path of Destruction [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)

Part One [continued]

Chapters 6 – 8

Part Two

Chapters 9 – 13

1,001 BBY

- The Old Republic scouts the planet Spira.
  (conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia)

- Irtanna joins the Republic’s efforts at Ruusan.
  (conjecture based on Rule of Two)

- Approximately one year after First Battle of Ruusan, a new offensive rages on the planet. Lord Skere Kaan’s Brotherhood of Darkness has amassed all of its might (save that of the Sith Academy on Korriban) to strike at General Hoth’s Army of Light. The Sith receive aid in the form of the disgruntled Jedi woman named Githany, who has been “close” with Jedi defense coordinator Kiel Charny. She has stolen information that leads the Sith in a devastating strike against the Jedi. The Army of Light survives but takes heavy losses. Meanwhile, on Korriban, Bane emerges from three weeks of bacta treatments as an outcast, having lost even more face in his disastrous bout with Sirak. He dives back into his study of the Sith archives, but Githany, newly-arrived to train as a Sith after her help on Ruusan, sees him as a tool that she can use to strike at Sirak instead of taking on the top student herself. Githany explains more about the nature of the Dark Side’s basis in emotion to Bane, who starts to get a sense that he needs anger and focus to reconnect with his power. Githany offers to train him what she learns, since the masters no longer will, so long as he helps her against Sirak later. Bane, who is also attracted to the manipulative woman, agrees. Unbeknownst to Githany, he has a sense of her manipulations, and he convinces Lord Kas’im to train him in secret as well, this time in lightsaber combat techniques. Over the next few weeks, Bane becomes very powerful, surpassing even Githany’s abilities, though she doesn’t let him know that. Meanwhile, they become close, despite both of them knowing that the situation is one of using each other. A month later, Githany is ready to get rid of Sirak, so she tells Bane she will challenge him, intending on using her own unreadiness to manipulate Bane into helping assassinate him outside the ring. She could then use Bane as a scapegoat. However, Bane, now more prepared than she realized, says he will challenge Sirak instead. He does so, besting Sirak in an amazing duel, but he pulls himself back from killing Sirak, which is not at all what Githany wanted. Now, Githany begins manipulating the weakened Sirak to one day help her against the new top student, Bane. (She is definitely playing into the idea of lusting for power, which is something the Brotherhood is against, hence getting rid of the term “Darth” that was so exclusive, but she just wants to be at the top of the Brotherhood, not to be one all-powerful Sith Lord on her own.) Shortly thereafter, Kas’im gives Bane a great gift, the Sith lightsaber that he took from his own master, Na’da’z, a decade earlier. All is not good news, though. Bane is called before Qordis, who tells him that now that he is again a respected student, he must stop studying with Githany and stop studying the Sith archives. Angered, Bane tells Qordis that the true power of the Sith is something that can only be learned from the past, not from Kaan’s current Brotherhood teachings. When Qordis threatens him by telling him to go into the barren Valley of the Dark Lords to seek knowledge, Bane calls his bluff and actually does so, leaving the academy behind. Even as Bane travels into the Sith tombs in the Valley and finds no Sith Lord spirits still lingering to teach him, the Sith forces on Ruusan are in need of reinforcements. Lord Kopecz finally convinces Kaan to call forth the Sith students and masters on Korriban to join the fray. Unfortunately, their most promising student, Bane, is now absent. After thirteen days, Bane returns to the academy, having found nothing, but having thought enough about the Sith to realize that the Sith had disgraced the memory of their forefathers, becoming an army of many equals rather than embodying the true power of the individual that was the basis of Sith teachings. Bane soon meets with Qordis, who welcomes his back since they need him. He declares Bane a full "Dark Lord of the Sith" and gives him a more powerful lightsaber crystal, but Bane scoffs at the Brotherhood and intends to leave again. That night, Githany calls him to the archives into a trap set by Sirak and his two Zabrak comrades. Unfortunately for Sirak, Githany decides to join with Bane and the three Zabraks are all killed. When Bane offers to give her a place at his side, she refuses, intending to join the Brotherhood. He charges into Qordis quarters and announces that he is leaving, rather than going to Ruusan. Qordis objects, but Bane declares himself "Darth Bane," a true heir to the title's respect, and leaves, stealing the starship Valcyn (a recent gift from Kaan to Qordis) and leaving Korriban behind . . . (To be continued below . . . )

(Path of Destruction)

• It is six months before the final Battle of Ruusan. After discovering a decimated Duros settlement on Harpori, Jedi Knight Crian Maru and her Padawan, Dree Vandap, have taken off in pursuit of the perpetrator of the massacre, the Sith Lord known as the Marauder—Kaox Krul. When they get to the Balowa system, Krul gets the drop on their ship, the Golden Song, sending them crashing into a nearby planet. The ship is a total loss, and Krul pursues them onto the planet. When Krul finally pounces, Dree defends herself until Crian rescues her using a speeder bike, and they evade Krul, who pursues with Dark Side speed. Days later, Crian decides that she cannot let Krul find her and Dree, and she cannot let Dree face the danger Krul represents. Crian heads off on her own after the Sith, finally confronting him in a duel. Dree finds them, though, and leaps in. While Crian is pushed away for a moment, Krul kills Dree. For hours, Crian and Krul duel, with Crian slowly wearing down. Finally, Crian asks for forgiveness from Dree and calls upon the Dark Side, betraying all of her training, and leaps in. Urged on by the Dark Side, Crian and Krul duel until finally both deliver death blows to the other in the same instant. Later, Jedi Knight Salen Toth will find Dree’s body, but no sign of the bodies of Krul or Crian.*

(Path of Destruction) [continued]

*NOTE: There is no way to tell for certain where in Path of Destruction would mark six months before the final confrontation on Ruusan, so I have split that story and put this story here at what is simply a natural splitting point in that novel. The Essential Reader’s Companion puts the story in 1,000 BBY, the same year as the Battle of Ruusan, but that seems a bit late for a story set six months before that event, since that would then place it pretty far into the year for something so many other dates are derived from. For now, I’m keeping the story here.

• On Ruusan, Jedi Master Hoth and his close advisor and friend Master Pernicar are worried. The Sith are sending reinforcements from their academy on Korriban, while the Jedi can only send children and younger Jedi to help rebuild the Jedi ranks. Master Valenthyn Fartalla, though, thinks that he could convince the Jedi on Coruscant to send more fully-trained Jedi if he were allowed to go himself, rather than letting messages from the rather abrasive Hoth be their only means of asking for aid. Meanwhile, the Sith from Korriban arrive at Lord Skere Kaan’s Brotherhood encampment, but they are notably missing Bane. Darth Bane, for his part, has gone to the so-called “Unknown World,” the ancient Rakatan homeworld of Lehon (also known as Rakata Prime), where Darth Revan had once discovered the great power of the Rakatan Star Forge. This was also where the redeemed Jedi Master Revan defeated Darth Malak. There, within the ruins of the Rakatan Temple, he discovers the ancient Sith Holocron that holds the knowledge of Darth Revan himself . . . (To be continued below . . . )

(Path of Destruction)

Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
Path of Destruction [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
Part Two [continued]
Chapter 13 [continued]
Chapters 14 – 20

Darkness Shared (G5/SWH short story: Bill Slavicsek)

Darkness Shared (G5/SWH short story: Bill Slavicsek)
Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
Path of Destruction [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
Part Three
Chapters 21 - 22

1,000 BBY

- The Queen of Alpherides is born.
  (conjecture based on The Freedon Nadd Uprising)
- Zorba the Hutt is born.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Characters)
- The Jedi begin using training lightsaber, low-powered variants of the real weapons, meant to have non-lethal results in sparring.
  (conjecture based on Power of the Jedi Sourcebook)
- The Arrochar Mountain Rangers begin defending the planet Arrochar.
  (conjecture based on Rebel Girl)*

*NOTE: Interestingly, unless a generation on Arrochar is 50 years instead of around 25, this means that the Rangers were active for 500 years before the royal family that Leia nearly marries into in Rebel Girl ever came to power by defeating “savage tribes.” Did “savage tribes” set up the Arrochar Mountain Rangers?

- Tarsus Valorum is elected as Supreme Chancellor of the Republic. He is the first non-Jedi to hold the post in over 400 years. Rumors persist that Jedi Master Valentyne Farfalla was suggested for the job, but turned it down.
  (conjecture based on Rule of Two)
- By a century after the time of the Vorzyd Cluster’s discovery by traders, the five native species (Vorzydiaks, Kilmaulsi, Paiguns, Hrakians, and Selonian colonists) form the Commonality, a new economic and political entity.
  (conjecture based on Geonosis and the Outer Rim Worlds)*

*NOTE: The date here, if course, is based on the rounded date for the Vorzyd Cluster’s discovery.

- Members of the Brotherhood of Darkness bring a legion of Chiss back from the Unknown Regions. These Chiss will settle the planet Thule.
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn. This date is an approximation and would likely be either early this year or perhaps in the previous year.

- The Jedi hunt down Sith forces in the Cularin System, forcing Darth Rivan from Almas and destroying his home, leaving his fortress to rot. Simply happy to have driven out the Sith, the Jedi take no true note of the system, simply logging its name and moving on to the next offensive against the Sith. It is safe to assume that Rivan soon makes his way to Ruusan.
  (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)*

*NOTE: This assumes that the defeat in the Cularin system was near the time of the Battle of Ruusan, as the RPG site seems to suggest.

- Doonium becomes the metal alloy of choice for capital starship construction.
  (conjecture based on Galaxywide News Nets supplement in The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #10)
- A tap root tree begins growing on Sulon. It will come to be used by settlers led by Morgan Katarn a millennium later.
  (conjecture based on Soldier for the Empire)
- Around this time, the planet Roon is discovered and settled for the first time, but it is a very slow trickle of settlers that comes to the world.
  (conjecture based on Geonosis and the Outer Rim Worlds)
- By this time, the city of Csaplar, the largest city on the Chiss homeworld of Csilla, has become the capital of the 28 Chiss Ascendancy colony worlds.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
- The game Dejarik is invented. The Dejarik Entertainment Company has decided to amalgamate a number of similar strategy games, devised by disparate species, into one. This new game, which is touted as a potential galactic peacemaker by its creators, will go on to be incorporated in a new range of hologame tables. While the idea is laudable and the basic game absorbing, the company encounters severe difficulties. The idea behind the game is to use representations of real and mythical creatures from a number of cultures. This plan is realized, but not before various minor politicians, fanatical religious cults, and animal protection groups all have their say. The game is delayed for over four standard years, costing the company a great deal in development costs and settlement fees from a number of lawsuits. It is worth it in the end, however, as the game is warmly accepted by the galactic public.

(conjecture based on Fact Files via TimeTales, verbatim)
- Ancient Huttese comes into use during this time, at the latest.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Phrase Book and Travel Guide)
- The Zuma region is charted.
  (conjecture based on Endor and the Moddell Sector)
- Corellian Engineering Corporation releases the YV series of ships, based on the success of the YT series. Unfortunately, the YV series is nowhere near as upgradable and is not a major success.
  (conjecture based on A Legacy of Starships)
- The "witch" Sycorax, who lives on Necropolis with her son, tells tales of how she can revive the dead. The locals do not believe her and end up murdering her son and telling her to bring him back to life. Instead, she dies of a broken heart and they are buried together in what comes to be known as the Crypt of the Ancients. Before she dies, however, Sycorax places the Curse of Sycorax on Necropolis, telling the locals that if they ever ignore the dead, the dead will rise and take vengeance.
  (conjecture based on City of the Dead)
- Around this time, Thull Vandron, a wealthy shipping magnate, explorer, and hero of the Republic's battle against the Brotherhood of Darkness, enters the Senate.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
- By this time, Raxus Prime's environment is damaged, polluted, and loaded with junk from 100 years of frantic weapon manufacturing. The planet is a junk world now, but the Corporate Alliance and Commerce Guild will continue operating on the planet, since they can make money on salvaging and environmental laws are non-existent on the planet.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
- Books are almost totally phased out in lieu of electronic media.
  (conjecture based on Ghost of the Jedi)
- The Erasmus gambit is first used.
  (conjecture based on Rebel Alliance Sourcebook)
- Socorro gets the last rain it will ever get.
  (conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia)
- The planet Charity is settled. Shortly thereafter "the Cadmium Elk" and "the Cadmium Beet" are genetically engineered to thrive despite the planet's high cadmium levels.*
  (conjecture based on As Cold as Charity)*

*NOTE: This is "many years ago" as of the story, but given that an entire nomadic society ha to develop its own traditions and such in the gap between this and the story, it is probably safe to assume at least a 1,000 year gap.
- The Ewoks of the forest moon of Endor begin telling tales of the prophesied return of the Golden One who would lead the Ewoks in a great battle.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 5: Return of the Jedi)
- Orin, the hostile, uninhabitable second planet in the Bespin system, is knocked from its original orbit, when the Velser's Ring asteroid belt is formed.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 2: Yavin and Bespin via TimeTales, abridged)
- The Nikto cult of M'dweshuu rises again on Kintan, temporarily forcing the Hutts from the world. The Hutts soon return in force, however, resubjugating the world.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Alien Species)
- An unknown Alsakan artist from the primitivist school of Collus Elder carves a block of milky chalcedony into an idol of the tessent that has been a symbol of Alsakan nationalism since the days of Saml Previl, the Prime Abseiler of Alsakan.
  (conjecture based on Race for the Tessent)
- At the urging of the House of Tund in the Centrality, the GenoHaradan assassins guild forms
Tac-Spec Corporation as a front to sell its Footman droids to members of noble houses.
(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)

- By this time, the ability to create holocrons have been lost to the Sith.
(conjecture based on The Dark Side Sourcebook via TimeTales, verbatim)

- (Please note that the following summary represents one of two different historical interpretations of the events surrounding the final Battle of Ruusan. There is no indication as of yet as to which of these two similar, yet somewhat divergent, tales is the correct historical accounting of these events.) Several weeks have passed since Darth Bane arrived on Lehon, and he has learned more about the Sith than he could have ever dreamed from the Sith Holocron of Darth Revan. In particular, he has learned that the nature of the Sith requires one Sith Master and one Sith Apprentice (Shadow Hand), in order to get the most out of the Dark Side and grow in true power. In the words of Bane as he digests this, “Two there should be; no more, no less. One to embody the power, the other to crave it.” Thus, the legendary Sith Rule of Two is born. On Ruusan, Githany has a vision of Bane coming to destroy the Brotherhood of Darkness. Heeding her warning, Lord Skere Kaan sends Lord Kas’im to Lehon in a last attempt to recruit him. Bane, of course, refuses the offer and duels his former teacher, slaying him. Knowing that the Sith are now desperate enough to come after him, Bane contacts the Brotherhood, pretending to be broken and penitent, asking to be allowed to return. Kaan sends Githany as his envoy to meet with Bane. . . Also on Ruusan, it has now been months since Valenthyne Farfalla went to get Jedi reinforcements. In a new battle with the Sith while protecting a convoy, Farfalla’s 300 Jedi arrive to save the day, but General Hoth is not very welcoming, owing to the fact that his close friend Pernicar died in that very battle. Farfalla senses Hoth angling toward the Dark Side and leaves with his troops for other battles Elsewhere, Githany meets with Bane on Ambria, and he agrees to come back to the Sith, while she seems at least marginally receptive to his ideas. Little does she know that his goal is to make his way to Ruusan to completely destroy the Brotherhood of Darkness are restart the Sith Order with himself and one apprentice (perhaps Githany). During their encounter, though, she kisses him, poisoning him with deadly synox on her lips. After she leaves, he begins to feel its effects, forcing him to seek out a well-known, masterful healer on Ambria known as Caleb. After he takes a fall, a family finds him when a child finds his lightsaber. Bane kills the family and steals their vehicle to seek out Caleb. Elsewhere, on the planet Somov Rit, three children, known as Rain, Bug, and Tomcat (whose real name is Darovit, but who goes by “Tomcat” under Somov Rit custom), sons and nephew of a native named Root, are playing around when Root arrives with Torr Snapit, a Jedi who has come to take the boys, who have Force abilities, to the front lines on Ruusan, where children are becoming the next line of reinforcements for the Army of Light. Tomcat convinces Torr to allow Rain, who has no Force powers as of yet, to come with them. On Ruusan, the Light Jedi charge against the Sith gun turrets. Lord Gale and his host, Turpimir, Lord Saleeh, Chayka, Žor Vlahu and his sister, among other Jedi, die in the assault, but the Sith ranks break and the vassals of the Sith die by the thousands. Petja survives and rushes to tell Lord Hoth (Rohlan of Kaal) the news of the victory. Still, the situation looks bleak for the Jedi. Shortly thereafter, General Hoth has a conversation with the Force ghost of Pernicar, who convinces him to work with Farfalla again. En route to Ruusan, Tomcat and Bug meet two other young Force-attuned students, Sladak and Slatka before they emerge from hyperspace and head for Ruusan. Upon arrival, they are attacked by Sith fighters. Sladak and Sladak are killed in the attack, and Rain is sent flying out of the vessel to an unknown fate. Several Jedi arrive to drive off the Sith fighters. Torr, Bug, and Tomcat are saved. On Ambria, Bane discovers Caleb and threatens the man’s family to get him to help. After a short time, Darth Bane is healed. He then heads for Ruusan. A short time later on Ruusan, as Bouncers, the native Force-sensitive sentient species on Ruusan, fly overhead, Tomcat, Bug, and Torr head for the Light Jedi army, believing that Rain must be dead. Finally arriving on Ruusan, Bane comes across a fallen Sith, killing him as the first step in purging the Dark Side of the Brotherhood. Soon, Bane barges in on a meeting between Kaan and the rest of the Brotherhood’s de facto leadership. He urges the Sith to destroy the forest to kill the Jedi, rather than just fighting in the forest. Meanwhile, Torr and the kids are set upon by Sith minions and soon find themselves at a rope bridge. They intend to cross and have Torr cut the bridge down, but when the minions catch up, Torr has the boys cross and then slices the ropes with his lightsaber, plunging to his death with the minions, it seems. That night, as the Sith prepare to merge their Dark Side energies, under Bane’s guidance, in order to destroy the forest, Bane speaks with Githany, revealing that he knew of her poison. He again is convinced that she could be his Sith Apprentice when the Brotherhood is gone. Under the collapsed bridge, Tomcat retrieves Torr’s lightsaber, but ignores the dying Torr’s warnings about using another’s lightsaber. He leaves Torr to die. Upon reaching the top of the cliff again, Tomcat and Bug are caught by Sith minions, but are saved by Kiel Charny and his troops, members of the Army of Light, who recognize Torr’s lightsaber. Elsewhere, Rain is in fact alive and well, being ministered to by the Bouncers. When Tomcat and Bug are assigned to help push a kitchen wagon, Tomcat flips out, arrogantly saying he is a Jedi and above such duties. He tries to fight the head cook with Torr’s lightsaber, but is humiliated. Tomcat runs off. Elsewhere, Rain goes with the Bouncers and discovers that many are dying due to the “bad dreams that kill,” which we might take to be a Dark Side influence killing them. Rain tries to use the Force to protect the Bouncers, but finds that she can’t. On the battlefield, Tomcat is met by General Charny, who offers to make him part of his fighting force, believing that Torr gave Tomcat his lightsaber, which would have meant Torr had great faith in the boy. Finally arriving on the front lines, Charny and Tomcat are present for the next Sith charge, but after the battle (during which Tomcat battles well, which only boosts his arrogance), they discover that the enemy were only footsoldiers. No actual Sith Lords were present. Instead, the Sith have begun their ritual, which unleashes a Sith storm that destroys much of the forest and sends the Jedi into disarray.

Unbeknownst to the rest of the Sith, Bane is creating the storm by sucking in their essences. Unfortunately, before Bane can drain them all dry, Kaan stops the process in order to attack the Jedi head on. Githany agrees with his tactic, making Bane doubt her worthiness. As Kaan’s Sith take on the Jedi in a massive battle, Bane confronts Qordis, killing the Sith Lord and using the Sith’s communications equipment to order the Sith fleet in orbit to engage the Jedi fleet, thereby opening up a path for Farfalla’s Jedi reinforcements, heretofore kept at bay, to head for the surface to engage Kaan’s forces. As Kaan and Githany’s team attacks the Jedi, Tomcat battles as well, losing his stolen saber. Githany, meanwhile, duels with Kiel Charney, her former lover, with her lightwhip. She severs his hand, which falls near enough to Tomcat for him to retrieve the lightsaber from it and kill Charney himself. Having seen Sith power, Tomcat, now preferring to be called “Darovit,” has joined the Sith ranks. Moments later, when the newly combined Jedi force sends the Sith packing, Hoth is grateful for Farfalla’s assistance. When Kaan confronts Bane, he falls further into Bane’s trap. Bane makes him think that he is going to take over the Brotherhood by destroying the Jedi with a secret Sith weapon, the Thought Bomb. Kaan, though, “convinces” Bane that the Sith wouldn’t follow him if they knew of his treachery in letting the Jedi reinforcements through. Instead, Kaan will unleash the Thought Bomb, while Bane remains behind, so that Kaan can bring him back into the Brotherhood after it is done and urge everyone else’s “forgiveness.” Elsewhere, Bug is told of Darovit’s defection, and barely believes it. Meanwhile, the Force has awakened in Rain, and she has saved the floater Laa from the energies. Laa, though, senses dark times ahead, when Rain herself will be a Dark Jedi. At the Jedi camp, as Petja helps patrol the grounds for “rogue” bouncers (by shooting them with arrows to kill them), Bug (actually named Hardin) is inducted as a member in the Army of Light. Even as the Sith gather in a series of local caves and tunnels to gather their collective power for Kaan’s Thought Bomb, Hoth’s Jedi prepare to strike at them in their apparently unsafe position. Unwilling to lay down their lives for Kaan’s lunatic scheme, both Githany and Kopecz leave the chamber. Darovit, also in the tunnels, comes face to face with Hardin, forcing a duel between the cousins. Meanwhile, Kopecz works his way to the surface, where he battles Farfalla, knowing that he will die at the Jedi’s hands rather than be trapped eternally in the Thought Bomb’s detonation. Despite the danger, Hoth leads a group of volunteer Jedi into Kaan’s obvious trap. Upon arrival, Kaan and Hoth exchange a few words, then Kaan activates the bomb. The energy spreads from the point of ignition, trapping the spirits of Jedi and Sith alike in an eternal prison. Their duel interrupted by the bomb, Darovit has just shut down his lightsaber, at the sound of the ruble when he sees the life being drained from Hardin. For some reason, perhaps because of his true unworthiness and lack of real Force attunement, Darovit is unaffected. A falling part of the cave roof crushes and kills Hardin. Darovit escapes, only to find that all of the Jedi and Sith are “dying,” their souls being pulled into the Thought Bomb ellipsoid. Githany, on her way out of the caves, is caught in the energy wave, trapped with everyone else as her body crumbles to dust. The Battle of Ruusan is over. Up above, Farfalla and the rest of the Jedi make preparations to leave, after they check for survivors and local “Bouncers,” a Force-sensitive species that might be driven mad by the Sith ritual. Meanwhile, Darth Bane meets a little girl named Zannah (Rain, now using her real name). Zannah had befriended the Bouncer Laa, but when Laa was killed by a Jedi, she had killed the Jedi through Dark Side instinct, revealing her Force potential finally. Not knowing where to turn, she turns to Bane, who sees her potential as a Sith Apprentice. Thus, the first Master and Apprentice partnership in the new Rule of Two is forged, and the Sith Order begins anew . . . (The summary for Jedi vs. Sith continues in the first few events of the summary for Rule of Two, while the summary for Path of Destruction ends here.)

(Path of Destruction and Jedi vs. Sith)*

*NOTE: The events of Path of Destruction and Jedi vs. Sith merge together, but their stories do not exactly match up. Instead, the latter events start to deviate, most notably in whether the kids are involved in the actions of Githany at all. I asked Leland Chee, “I was curious as to which of the two different versions of the battle [of Ruusan] (and the actions of its key players) is now considered accurate. (I’m guessing that it’s like with the Battle of Coruscant, where we’re seeing it from two different historical perspectives, so the truth is a blending, but I wanted to be sure before I tried to summarize POD for my timeline and integrate it with JvS.)” His answer was as follows: “Yes, ‘integrated’ with the more recent source being favored for dealing with the concrete inconsistencies.” Thus, I have merged the summaries of Path of Destruction and Jedi vs. Sith here and integrated their title listings below as best as can be done without accounting for scenes that seem to take place at different times in the two different sources. When glaring inconsistencies emerged, I favored the Path of Destruction version of events and tried to allow the Jedi vs. Sith events to somehow still transpire, just not with 100% adherence to the comic books themselves. Until we have a point-by-point description of how these two stories integrate, this is the best fans can do.

- On Ruusan, Darovit, a temporary traitor to the Jedi cause, makes his way past the bodies of dead Jedi and their non-Jedi allies, finally entering the caverns below where he discovers the ovoid container for Jedi and Sith souls that were trapped by the Thought Bomb. Nearby, Darth Bane and Zannah discuss the weakness of the Sith who died, then Bane races off to kill several mercenaries, leaving a pair to escape and spread stories of the Sith surviving, solely to discredit more reputable sources that might say the same. In the Sith camp, Zannah finds Qordis’ journal, which reveals to Bane that the tomb of Freedon Nadd is on the Dxun moon of Onderon. Bane and Zannah enter the caves to see the fruits of Lord Kaa’s Thought Bomb, only for them to run into Darovit, who tries to get through to Rain and strike against Bane. To save him from being killed by Bane, Zannah uses the Dark Side to cause his hand to basically explode (or disintegrate), leaving him with a stump. They then leave Darovit there with his pain. Elsewhere, Valenthyne Farfalla, the current commander of the Army of Light, orders Lord Hoth’s Padawan, Johun Othone, to stay away aboard their ships above Ruusan to avoid possible aftershocks of the Thought Bomb. Johun, however, uses the Force to influence a team of non-Jedi heading for Ruusan, consisting of Irtanna, Bordon, and Bordon’s two sons (Tallo and Wend). Upon arrival, Johun discovers the surviving mercenaries. When Farfalla sends someone to bring Johun back, he brings the survivors and their message that the Sith have survived, but Farfalla does not believe them. He even convinces Johun that the Sith could not have survived. Meanwhile, Bane takes the Valcyn and leaves for the Dxun moon, telling Zannah that she must find her own way off of Ruusan to meet him on Onderon. If she can, he will train her. If she cannot, then she is not worthy of being a Sith. As he leaves, she discovers Irtanna and the others, who take her in. Once in space, though, she kills everyone aboard and steals the ship, setting a course for Onderon. Having escaped from Ruusan in his Valcyn, Darth Bane finds his way to the Dxun moon of Onderon, where he, knowing he is the last of the Sith order to survive, hopes to find ancient knowledge on the moon from the earlier incarnations of the Dark Lords of the Sith under, among others, Freedon Nadd and Exar Kun. As he approaches the moon, the spirit of Lord Qordis, only recently killed on Ruusan, taunts him and causes the ship to crash. Upon escaping from the crash site, Bane can only become angrier as the Qordis avatar causes the ship to explode. Urged on by the spirit of Lord Kaa, Bane cuts his way through the Dxun jungle toward Freedon Nadd’s tomb. At the tomb, he finds that it has already been raided (by Exar Kun millennia earlier). Kaan’s spirit leads him deeper into the tomb, where he finds an ancient Sith holocron, but also finds himself set upon by a pair or parent orbalisks. The orbalisks attach to Bane’s body and soon begin to multiply, creating a lightsaber-proof shell of living armor, feeding off the Dark Side, around him and pumping him with adrenaline for increased strength. (Bane soon constructs a cage-like helmet to protect his face). It is while being covered by these orbalisks that Bane spends countless days studying the Sith holocron and determining the best way to continue the Brotherhood of Darkness as it is meant to be. He decides that there will from that day forward only ever be two Dark Lords of the Sith, one master and one apprentice. Setting out into the jungle again after his studies, Bane captures and rides a skreev. He begins plotting to wait until (or perhaps speed along the moon somehow until) the Dxun moon and Onderon are close enough for him to fly from moon to planet as the Beast Riders did during the Beast Wars. He does so, arriving just after Zannah, who is set upon by Beast Riders. Bane saves her and the two are free to begin her training as a Sith. Meanwhile, Johun has become Farfalla’s Padawan, but he is then asked to head personal security for Supreme Chancellor Tarsus Valorum, a position that he takes upon immediate elevation to the rank of Jedi Knight. Valorum, meanwhile, is pursuing the Ruusan Reformations, which include the demilitarization of the Jedi and oversight by the Senate, since the war with the New Sith is over. Back on Ruusan, Darovit consults the Bouncers and hears the prophecy of the one who will free the Jedi souls (Kyle Katarn, centuries later). When he asks what he will become himself, they suggest that his goal now is simply to grow into a man . . . (To be continued below . . . )*

(Rule of Two, Bane of the Sith, and Jedi vs. Sith)*

*NOTE: This summary is a bit complex. The bulk of the story comes from the prologue and first nine chapters of Darth Bane: Rule of Two. However, the epilogue first chapters of Rule of Two run parallel (albeit slightly altered) to the last few pages of the final issue of Jedi vs. Sith. Also, once Bane arrives at the Dxun moon and begins the sequence of events where he gets the orbalisks and such, the story begins to parallel (again, slightly altered) the events of Bane of the Sith. Thus, this summary tries to blend all three sources into the most canonically acceptable form.

- In the wake of Lord Kaan’s Thought Bomb, the cultists on Veroleem begin using kryotin powder in their recruitment efforts more frequently, since the Jedi are preoccupied elsewhere.*
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke Van Horn.

- Just prior to the enactment of the Ruusan Reformations, Senator Thull Vandron of Axum, who is pushing for a no tolerance policy on the idea of central power in the galaxy, finally becomes disgusted at resistance to his ideas. He leaves the Senate with other wealthy Core Worlders and heads for the outer reaches of the galaxy along secret hyperspace routes he himself charted in his days as an explorer. He and these nobles settle the Senex and Juvex regions, with the Senex being ruled by Houses Vandron, Garonnin, Elegin, Anturi, Taneel, Petro, Araba, Hax, and Viholn, while the Juvex is divided amongst Houses Sreethyn, Carbinol, Halikeenovich, Sisemon, Kassido, Kellermin, Pilar, and Mekuun. Any non-human species already in these areas are subjugated, eventually becoming slave races.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

- Darth Bane sets a plan in motion to create a network of intelligence information to be funneled to him via informants, using money taken from Sith accounts that once belonged to Lord Qordis.
  (conjecture based on Rule of Two)

- Darth Bane creates the Sith Archives.
  (conjecture based on Star Wars: Journal—“Darth Maul” via TimeTales, paraphrased)

- With the rise of Darth Bane and his “Rule of Two,” the Sith devotees on the planet Thule swear their allegiance to Bane and his new two-Sith incarnation of the Sith Order.
  (conjecture based on S Geonosis and the Outer Rim Worlds)

- The Jedi begin to keep details of lightsaber manufacture a secret.
  (conjecture based on Shadow Hunter via TimeTales, paraphrased)

- In the wake of the Battle of Ruusan, Set Harth, Padawan to Aru-Wen, who was killed on Ruusan, is taken in by Jedi Master Obba of the Council of First Knowledge.
  (conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil and The Dark Side Sourcebook)
• In the wake of the Battle of Ruusan, the Jedi lose access to the many gems of that planet, which had previously given Jedi lightsabers an extremely large variety of colors. Over the next thousand years, the sources for lightsaber gems will dwindle until, by the time of Supreme Chancellors Valorum and Palpatine, lightsabers will all use gems from the caves of Ilum, limiting their colors, in most cases, to blue and green. Darksiders will continue to use varying colors, especially red, by using alternate sources of crystals.
(conjecture based on Power of the Jedi Sourcebook)

• In the wake of the Battle of Ruusan and the defeat of the Dark Lords of the Sith, the Republic, which was being torn apart by the Sith, finally settles into one cohesive whole again. To remember this great struggle and the consequences that come from evil, many will refer to this era as the birth of the Republic in its present form (until the rise of the Empire), rather than its original founding many millennia earlier.
(conjecture based on Shatterpoint)

• In the wake of the Battle of Ruusan many of the soldiers from the Brotherhood of Darkness’ regular army are taken as prisoners of war to various work planets.
(conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)

• In the wake of the Battle of Ruusan, Jedi Master Morrit Ch’gally, a veteran of the recent Sith Wars and member of the Jedi Temple’s Acquisition Division, founds a new discipline within the Jedi Order, the Jedi Sentinels, based on a philosophy that in order to truly serve the people, one must be among them and solve problems not just on a large scale but a small, more personal scale as well.
(conjecture based on Endless Vigil)

• In the wake of the Battle of Ruusan, the Jedi Council rejects the idea put forth by Jedi Padawan Johun Othone (former Padawan of Lord Hoth) to create a memorial in the Valley of the Jedi, the site of the Army of Light’s final stand. The public takes Othone’s side over the Jedi Council and support him when he begins to create a mausoleum of his own, with numerous statues.
(conjecture based on Power of the Jedi Sourcebook)

• In the wake of the Battle of Ruusan, the Jedi Order begins to centralize its activities. The Jedi center on Coruscant is greatly expanded into what comes to be known as the Jedi’s Coruscant ziggurat. After a short while, five towers are built atop the ziggurat, which is finally given the name “the Jedi Temple.” Even the Great Library of Ossus is cleaned out, in order to bring all Jedi knowledge into the great Jedi Archives of Coruscant’s Jedi Temple.
(conjecture based on Power of the Jedi Sourcebook)

• In the wake of the Battle of Ruusan, the Gen’Dai bounty hunter Durge, who had been hired by one of the Dark Lords of the Sith, goes into hiding to escape the Jedi.
(conjecture based on Durge’s entry on the starwars.com databank)

• In the wake of the Battle of Ruusan, Merr-Sonn Munitions cuts back on its production of cortosis armor and weapons, but still continues production on a few, including the Scalphpunter rifle, which are sold to mercenaries that fear crossing paths with Jedi Knights.
(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Weapons and Technology)

• In the wake of the Battle of Ruusan, Supreme Chancellor Tarsus Valorum initiates the Ruusan Reformations. This initiates a new era for the Republic, wherein the standing Republic Army is dismantled, power is transferred in many cases from the Chancellor to the Senate, and the Jedi Order becomes a branch of the Judicial Department and thus answerable to the Senate. The Senate, which had previously had both seated and unseated members for different sectors is now reorganized (again) into 1,024 regional sectors, each with its own Senator, along with representation for “functional constituencies,” which will lead to representation nearly a millennium from now for groups like the Trade Federation. Moreover, by setting a moratorium on the number of regional sectors, this guaranteed the side effect that outlying settlements would be annexed into outlying sectors, thereby causing those sectors to continuously swell due to expansion and exploration. The military is to be disbanded in favor of a centralized, but smaller Republic Judicial Forces (headed by Admiral Lune Banjeer, a veteran of Ruusan) and local Planetary Security Forces. Valorum even has the calendar reset for this year to be “year one,” but future events will again reset the calendar at least two more times (the Great ReSynchronization and the Battle of Yavin’s historical significance provide those reset moments). This also ends the so-called Draggulch period and the Republic’s 100-year “dark age.”

- In the wake of the Battle of Ruusan, the Mandalorians begin to remake their culture to be more focused on technology, essentially building up as if for yet another war.

(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

- In the wake of the Battle of Ruusan, the Jedi trials Chamber at the Jedi Temple is upgraded with a holographic projector to allow those facing their Trials to face historical figures like Darth Ruin.

(conjecture based on The Jedi Path)

- In the wake of the Battle of Ruusan, Jedi and bounty hunters will often come into conflict when chasing down the same criminals. This will cause the Galactic Senate to propose that the bounty hunters need a governing body like the Jedi Order to communicate with law enforcement agencies. Four bounty hunters (Thrasak of Trandosh, Teesoo of Rodia, Saya Kski the Twi’lek outcast, and Keekrim Pon of Corellia) join together to form (or reform) what is known (at the time) as the New Bounty Hunters Guild. It is this New Bounty Hunters Guild that creates the Bounty Hunter’s Creed. That creed will be the basis for rules that members of the Bounty Hunters Guild will follow in the millennium to come and be written in the Bounty Hunters Guild Handbook.

(conjecture based on The Bounty Hunter Code)

- In reaction to the Ruusan Reformations, the Jedi Order gives up most of its vehicles and starships of war, become part of the Judicial Department, consolidate training at the Jedi Temple on Coruscant, and decide to begin teaching Jedi students at infancy, rather than later, after attachments and other corruption can enter their ways of thinking. In reaction to this, many of the remaining Jedi Lords of places like Corellia choose not to abide by these new decrees and continue their own traditions locally until their lines eventually die off. For its part, the Jedi Council mostly ignores the “unsavory” idea of Jedi feudalism and will not acknowledge the traditions of the “Jedi Lords.”

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

- Around this time, the galactic timekeeping standard for the Republic is set during the so-called Ruusan Reformation.*

(conjecture based on HoloNet News, Volume 531, Number 45, clarified by Dan Wallace’s VIP blog on starwars.com)*

*NOTE: The HNN article would suggest that this takes place around 1,023 BBY, but Dan Wallace has clarified that it is referring to the events in the Battle of Ruusan as the reason for the new calendar, so we’ll assume that “1,000 years” being constantly referenced is, of course, referring back here, rather than to a literal 1,000 years before the HNN article or the various comments in the Prequel Trilogy.

- Six months after the Battle of Ruusan, the Republic pardons any non-Sith who had served in the rank and file of the Brotherhood of Darkness’ army. Lucia, formerly of the Gloom Walkers, is released from a work planet, as are other prisoners of war from the conflict. Lucia begins working for the next thirteen years as a hired bodyguard, then as a freelance mercenary, then as a bounty hunter.

(conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)

- Over the next millennium, the Old Republic will engage in the Unification Campaigns to bring the Republic back together in the wake of the New Sith Wars. This will include Republic Judicial Forces victories at Vondarc, D’rinba, and the Klina Marches, valiant service on Korvali in ending the Melusi Uprising, and ending the Belderone Contention during the Battle of the Dandrian Ring.

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

- In the wake of the Battle of Ruusan, some who seek knowledge rather than physical power and still study Sith philosophy will set themselves up as the Blackguard on Mustafar.

(conjecture based on Book of Sith)

- In the wake of the Battle of Ruusan, only about 100,000 inhabitants remain on the war-torn planet Auratera, which has frequently been captured and recaptured throughout the millennia of Jedi and Sith conflicts. In order to protect the planet from further destruction, Jedi Master Nareen Cale alters official war reports to claim that the planet is uninhabitable, a total loss during the war. The locals support the measure, seeking only peace. Select Jedi are still able to journey to Auratera, however, to visit and study the Acablas Ruins, a major vergence in the Force. Meanwhile, an Ithorian group sets up in the city of Dewbright and will spend lifetimes working to restore the planet from the damage of the recent conflict.

(conjecture based on Nexus of Power)

Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
Path of Destruction [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
  Part Three [continued]
    Chapter 22 [continued]
    Chapter 23 – 25

Jedi vs. Sith (comic series: Darko Macan)
  Jedi vs. Sith, Part I (comic: Darko Macan)

Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
Path of Destruction [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
  Part Three [continued]
    Chapter 26

Jedi vs. Sith [continued] (comic series: Darko Macan)
  Jedi vs. Sith, Part I [continued] (comic: Darko Macan)
  Jedi vs. Sith, Part II (comic: Darko Macan)

Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
Path of Destruction [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
  Part Three [continued]
    Chapters 27

Jedi vs. Sith [continued] (comic series: Darko Macan)
  Jedi vs. Sith, Part II [continued] (comic: Darko Macan)

Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
Path of Destruction [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
  Part Three [continued]
    Chapters 27 [continued]

Jedi vs. Sith [continued] (comic series: Darko Macan)
  Jedi vs. Sith, Part II [continued] (comic: Darko Macan)

Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
Path of Destruction [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
  Part Three [continued]
    Chapters 27 [continued]

Jedi vs. Sith [continued] (comic series: Darko Macan)
  Jedi vs. Sith, Part III (comic: Darko Macan)

Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
Path of Destruction [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
  Part Three [continued]
    Chapter 28

Jedi vs. Sith [continued] (comic series: Darko Macan)
  Jedi vs. Sith, Part III [continued] (comic: Darko Macan)
Jedi vs. Sith [continued] (comic series: Darko Macan)
   Jedi vs. Sith, Part IV (comic: Darko Macan)
Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
   Path of Destruction [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
   Part Three [continued]
   Chapter 28 [continued]
Jedi vs. Sith [continued] (comic series: Darko Macan)
   Jedi vs. Sith, Part IV [continued] (comic: Darko Macan)
   Jedi vs. Sith, Part V (comic: Darko Macan)
Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
   Path of Destruction [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
   Part Three [continued]
   Chapter 30 [continued]
Jedi vs. Sith [continued] (comic series: Darko Macan)
   Jedi vs. Sith, Part V [continued] (comic: Darko Macan)
Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
   Path of Destruction [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
   Part Three [continued]
   Chapter 30 [continued]
Jedi vs. Sith [continued] (comic series: Darko Macan)
   Jedi vs. Sith, Part VI (comic: Darko Macan)
Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
   Path of Destruction [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
   Part Three [continued]
   Chapter 31
   Epilogue
Jedi vs. Sith [continued] (comic series: Darko Macan)
   Jedi vs. Sith, Part VI [continued] (comic: Darko Macan)
Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
   Rule of Two (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
   Prologue
   Chapters 1 – 4
Jedi vs. Sith [continued] (comic series: Darko Macan)
   Jedi vs. Sith, Part VI [continued] (comic: Darko Macan)
Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
   Rule of Two [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
   Chapters 5 – 7
Bane of the Sith (G3/SWH short story: Kevin J. Anderson)
Bane of the Sith (G3/SWH short story: Kevin J. Anderson)
Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
   Rule of Two [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
   Chapter 8
Bane of the Sith [continued] (G3/SWH short story: Kevin J. Anderson)
Bane of the Sith [continued] (G3/SWH short story: Kevin J. Anderson)
Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
   Rule of Two [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
   Chapter 8 [continued]
   Chapter 9
Jedi vs. Sith [continued] (comic series: Darko Macan)
   Jedi vs. Sith, Part VI [continued] (comic: Darko Macan)
Epilogue
Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
Rule of Two [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
Chapter 10 [flashback]

“Darth Bane Novel #2” (canceled novel: Elizabeth Hand)*

*NOTE: This novel never came to exist. Consider it historical curiosity.

999 BBY

- Darth Bane and Zannah meet with a Muun from the InterGalactic Banking Clan, finalizing a conduit of information to the Sith, finishing the plan that Bane had set in motion a year earlier. When Bane lets the Muun live, it teaches Zannah that sometimes death serves no purpose.
  (To be continued below . . .)

  (Rule of Two)

Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
Rule of Two [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
Chapter 11 [flashback]

998 BBY

- An ancient hero of a militaristic Twi'lek clan living in the dark region of Ryloth dies. His ashes are crystallized and formed into a crystal skull, in the resemblance of the hero. The skull will come to be a part of all official law ceremonies for the clan.
  (conjecture based on Idol Intentions)
- Darth Bane explains to Darth Zannah that she has the ability to become a great Sith Sorcerer, using her somewhat rare talents. (To be continued below . . .)
  (Rule of Two)

Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
Rule of Two [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
Chapter 13 [second flashback]

997 BBY

- Novor Major, the star in the Novor System, expands into a red giant, tearing apart the seventeen inner-most planets in the system. The outer 16 planets survive the expansion, and their environments are quickly modified by the additional radiation from the star. The seventeen inner planets that are destroyed form the Novor Asteroid Field.
  (conjecture based on Secrets of the Sisar Run via TimeTales, verbatim)
- Darth Bane begins having Darth Zannah practice lightsaber techniques, as a precursor to having her construct her own lightsaber.
  (conjecture based on Rule of Two)
- Sarro Xaj is promoted to the rank of Jedi Knight.
  (conjecture based on Rule of Two)

996 BBY

- Tarsus Valorum’s is elected to a second term as Supreme Chancellor.
  (conjecture based on Rule of Two)
- Darth Zannah constructs her first lightsaber and begins developing her own fighting style. (To be continued below . . .)
  (Rule of Two)
- Darovit quits wandering Ruusan and settles down in one place.
  (conjecture based on Rule of Two)
- On the planet Ceriun, a Jedi vessel crashes. The Jedi dies, but before he does, he passes along a holocube map to area elders, asking them to keep it safe until the Jedi come for it. They are hiding it from the Sith, and the children of the elders, including the abused Tenno, believe that it is insane to bring about their own doom by hiding things from any Sith who come along. To keep it truly safe, the kids attack their own parents, stealing the Sith map to hold for the Sith in case they come, so they can be on the winning side. Tenno even kills his own abusive father. The kids are just leaving when a Sith Lord arrives. They try to explain why they have taken the map, holding it for the Sith, but the Sith Lord rewards them by killing all but Tenno. Once Tenno hands it over, though, the Sith Lord leaves, pronouncing that no one is to harm Tenno, for if they do, they will answer to him.

(All for You)
Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
Rule of Two [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
Chapter 13 [first flashback]
All for You (SWT17 short story: Adam Gallardo)

995 BBY
- Darth Bane makes his first attempt at creating his own Sith Holocron. The attempt fails.
  (conjecture based on Rule of Two)
- Nalia Adollu leaves her Jedi Master, Anno Wen-Chii, on Polus for the last time in the next five years. Her relative seclusion will allow Darth Zannah to assume her identity while infiltrating the Jedi Archives five years from now.
  (conjecture based on Rule of Two)

994 BBY
- The Old Gungan language goes back to this time.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Phrase Book and Travel Guide)

992 BBY
- Darth Bane discovers information about Sith glyphs that he thinks will help him build a Sith Holocron. This attempt fails, just like his previous attempts.
  (conjecture based on Rule of Two)
- Tarsus Valorum's second term as Supreme Chancellor ends. He becomes a diplomat for the Republic, and Johun Othone remains at his side as advisor and protector.
  (conjecture based on Rule of Two)
- The healer Caleb sends his daughter Serra (now 16) away from Ambria in hopes to protect her from Darth Bane, who Caleb believes will return for him someday.
  (conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)

990 BBY
- Jedi Master Bodo Baas writes a prophecy about the Skywalker twins and later includes it in his holocron.
  (conjecture based on Dark Empire)
- By this time, the galaxy's attention is again turned inward at its own rot, rather than outward at such things as the memorial in the Valley of the Jedi.
  (conjecture based on Power of the Jedi Sourcebook)
- The Khomm race begins using cloning instead of procreation.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Alien Species)
- A movement for equality for the lower castes on the planet Doan begins in earnest. There is resistance by the nobility but no violence ensues . . . yet.
  (conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)
- Around this time, a stellar energy station is established at Ten Mile Plateau near Worlport on Ord Mantell. It is eventually abandoned without explanation. Some claim that the presence of Mantellian Savrips was the cause. Over the years to come, others will try to set up in the old energy station, but no group will ever stay for more than a few years.*
  (conjecture based on Mask of the Pirate Queen)*

*NOTE: This station is set up “nearly a thousand years ago” as of Mask of the Pirate Queen, which I have approximated as 990 years.
- TCW DATE: Jedi training droid Huyang begins serving aboard the Jedi training starship Crucible.*
  (conjecture based on Overlords)*

NOTE: He has “lived” on the ship for 1,000 years as of the episode. This assumes A Test of Strength is in 20 BBY.

- At this time, a Jedi textbook known as The Jedi Path is produced. Its writers and contributors include Grand Master Fae Coven, Chief Librarian Restelly Quist, recruiter Morrit Ch’gally, Seer Sabla-Mandibu, Jedi Ace (pilot) Crix Sunburris, biologist Bowspritz, Battlemaster Skarch Vaunk, and AgriCorps Jedi Gal-Stod Slagistrough.
  (conjecture based on The Jedi Path and comments by Dan Wallace on his blog)

- Around this time, the Jedi Starfighter Corps’ Kuat Redshift starfighters are being phased out in favor of Savage Star fighters. Jedi Ace Crix Sunburris is also pushing for the development of a new, peacetime Jedi praxeum at the Abhean Shipyards, which he suggests be called the Sunburris (after himself). This new ship would join the wartime praxeum ships known as Corellian Colonizers (the Beneficia, the Luminosity, and the Silikan Stillness, all flown by the Jedi Exploration Corps). Sunburris’ design will not be created just now but will eventually develop into the Chu’unthor.
  (conjecture based on The Jedi Path)

- Set Harth eventually leaves the Jedi Order intending to gain personal wealth and to train independently. He heads for Ruusan, where he battles a Dark Side warrior in an abandoned Sith armory to steal a Sith artifact. Using the artifact, he begins to explore the Dark Side on Nar Shaddaa. He soon finds a Hutt slaver in his search for other artifacts and discovers the Hutt’s other contact, a Dark Jedi named Bal Serinus. Serinus attacks Harth, for unknown reasons, but then both are imprisoned. While imprisoned, Harth and Serinus form a bond from cell to cell, but when Serinus cuts off contact unexpectedly, Harth vows vengeance for her presumed death.*
  (conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil and The Dark Side Sourcebook)*

NOTE: The sourcebook suggests that this was soon after the Battle of Ruusan, without the intervening time with the Jedi Council of First Knowledge, but details in Dynasty of Evil novel place him leaving the order around ten years later, as he is “hiding out,” so to speak, from the Jedi for the decade prior to that novel.

- On Serenno, Darth Zannah, apprentice of Darth Bane, betrays her lover, the Twi'lek Kelad’den (Kel), by pushing for the anti-Republic rebel group he belongs to (led by the mysterious Hetton) to strike against former Chancellor Tarsus Valorum during an upcoming visit. They carry out the strike, but everyone involved is killed, thanks in large part to Valorum’s friend (and former security chief), Jedi Knight Johun Othone. By focusing the Republic’s attention on such groups, though, Zannah and Bane are continuing to keep the Republic distracted from any of their own Sith activities in the background. Zannah is taken by the other rebels, who now suspect that she set them up, to their leader, Hetton. She kills those who brought her, leaving her alone with Hetton, who immediately humbles himself before her, claiming that he has awaited someone like her all his life. Hetton is a Force-sensitive, who, in a sense, worships the Sith Lords and their teachings, spending his life gathering knowledge about the Force to one day pass to them and be rewarded in turn. While she gains information from him, including information from the Sith Lord Belia Darzu, which might help Darth Bane complete his obsessive quest to create his own Sith Holocron, Johun meets with Jedi Master Farfalla, who begrudgingly lets him go to Ruusan to oversee a monument that the Republic is building to the Army of Light. On Ambria, Zannah arrives with Hetton and some of his Umbaran Sith assassins, to find Bane. The assassins and Hetton attack Bane, since Hetton intends to kill Bane and make himself Zannah’s apprentice, but the guards and Hetton are easily killed. Bane nearly kills Zannah for the betrayal, only to discover that she brought Hetton and the guards so that Bane could kill (and thereby silence them), so that she could deliver the Holocron secrets to him. As it turns out, the data merely points them to where they can find the necessary information, sending Bane on a quest to the legendary birthplace of the Jedi Order, the planet Tython. While he does so, he sends Zannah to the Jedi Temple on Coruscant to infiltrate the Jedi Archives and seek out any information that might help separate the parasitic orbalisks from his body, which she also knows might be the only way to make him vulnerable enough to one day kill him and take his place as Sith Master. She infiltrates as Nalia Adollu. Unbeknownst to her, though, Johun has run into Darovit on Ruusan, who tells him of Bane and Zannah surviving. Johun has brought Darovit back to Coruscant to speak with Farfalla, but Darovit, while waiting for the meeting, enters the Jedi Archives. There, the two cousins bump into each other, leading Zannah to take Darovit with her and escape with important information and the knowledge that Darovit has been acting as a healer over the last decade, which may, with the information, help save Bane from the orbalisks. In her haste, she leaves information behind that leads Farfalla, Johun, and a team of three other Jedi to Tython. The Jedi arrive just after Zannah and Darovit, leading to a deadly confrontation in which all of the Jedi (including Farfalla and Johun) are killed, but Bane is gravely wounded by his own Force lightning turned back on him. Zannah and Darovit take him back to Ambria, where they seek out the healer Caleb that saved Bane a decade earlier. Caleb agrees to help, but only if they turn Bane over to the Jedi for justice. Zannah contacts the Jedi, but she leaves her wording vague. When Darovit tries to get her to join the Light Side and turn herself in to save herself, she makes a final decision. As Bane is healing, she kills Caleb, leaving Darovit for the Jedi to find. She has driven him mad with her Dark Side visions, though, and he attacks the Jedi when they arrive. The Jedi kill him and assume that he is the Sith Lord, who would have presumably killed Caleb after being healed. The Jedi leave, believing the Sith to now truly be extinct, but Bane and Zannah remain to plot for the future . . .

(rule of Two)

- In the wake of being freed from the orbalisks, Darth Bane no longer has to hide behind his appearance. He and Darth Zannah set themselves up as brother and sister antique collectors (Sepp and Allia Omek) on Ciutric IV in order to have a cover under which go gather ancient Sith artifacts.
  (conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)
- Around this time, Darth Bane completes a book of Sith teachings called The Rule of Two, which will become part of the Sith Archives, then later become (in small portion) part of the Book of Sith.
  (conjecture based on Book of Sith)

Darth Bane [continued] (novel series: Drew Karpyshyn)
Rule of Two [continued] (novel: Drew Karpyshyn)
  Chapter 10 [continued]
  Chapter 11 [continued]
  Chapter 12
  Chapter 13 [continued]
  Chapters 14 – 24
  Epilogue

987 BBY

- Salto Zendar and his three brothers attempt to kidnap a Munn official from the InterGalactic Banking Clan to hold for ransom. The plan fails, leaving two of the brothers dead, another captured alive, and Salto on the run. The IBC hires bounty hunter (and former Gloom Walker) Lucia to hunt him down. She tracks him to a hospital on Bandomeer, where he is being treated by the Force-healer Serra (daughter of Ambrian healer Caleb). Serra refuses to allow Lucia to take Salto, but other bounty hunters have also tracked him down. They attack, Salto is killed, and Lucia is injured, but Serra saves her life. Now owing her life to Serra, Lucia becomes her bodyguard in her travels.
  (conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)

985 BBY

- Huntress (the future Darth Cognus) becomes an assassin.
  (conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)
- A few years prior to their final confrontation, Darth Zannah begins to learn as much as she can about Darth Bane’s network of contacts and financial resources to use once she becomes the new Sith Master.
  (conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)
983 BBY
- Serra (daughter of Caleb) and Lucia come to Doan, where Serra is hired by the king to heal his son, Prince Gerran, who is afflicted with Idolian fever. She treats him for three months as he becomes healthy again, and by the end of that time, the two are in love.
  (conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)

982 BBY
- Serra (daughter of Caleb) marries Prince Gerran of Doan. For the first year of their marriage, she is happy and no longer has nightmares about Darth Bane.
  (conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)
- With the marriage of Serra and Prince Gerran on Doan, Lucia, Serra’s bodyguard, becomes a member of the Doan Royal Guard.
  (conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)

981 BBY
- Three months prior to the death of Jedi Medd Tandar on Doan, the resistance on Doan, led by Gelba, attempts to force the Prince Gerran’s speeder to land in order to capture him and force the king to negotiate. Instead, the strike ends in the prince’s death, leading the king to declare martial law. While there are those in the Senate who see the oppression of the lower classes by the nobility, movement toward Senate intervention is now hindered by the fact that the formerly peaceful resistance is now seen as a group of terrorists. This event also leaves Serra a widow.
  (conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)
- In the few months prior to once again facing Darth Bane, Serra begins having dreams (or nightmares) of Bane again. This may be a reaction to the trauma of having lost her husband, Prince Gerran.
  (conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)
- Two months prior to the confrontation between Darth Bane and Darth Zannah, a Sith text pointing to the location of the holocron of Darth Andeddu is finally delivered to Bane by his Sith artifact dealer contact, Argel Tenn. He immediately begins studying it to find the secret of prolonging his life until the day when Darth Zannah is truly ready to replace him.
  * (conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)*

*NOTE: The novel refers to this as two months before Dynasty of Evil, yet also as “several months” before the novel. I’m assuming that perhaps he arranged for its purchase several months before the novel, then actually had it come into his possession only two months before the novel.
- A few weeks prior to the death of Jedi Medd Tandar on Doan, members of the Doan resistance uncover a tomb that contains apparent Dark Side artifacts. The Jedi Council of First Knowledge (specifically Master Obba) will soon send Medd Tandar to investigate and attempt to gain the good graces of the mining caste (who technically now own the artifacts they uncovered) by mediating the dispute between the resistance and the world’s nobility. The nobles will allow Medd to come mediate because they believe that the artifacts could be used against the nobility.
  (conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)
- A very short time prior to the final confrontation between Darths Bane and Zannah, the two purchase two of the latest and most expensive model of shuttle from Cygnus Spaceworks, a pair of Theta-class T-1 shuttles. Banes is named the Triumph, while Zannah’s is the Victory.
  (conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)

980 BBY
- Three days prior to Darth Bane gaining the scroll that points him to Prakith, the Jedi Council requests that the body of fallen Jedi Medd Tandar be transferred back to Coruscant.
  (conjecture based on Dynasty of Evil)
- Ten years after Darth Bane was freed from his orbalisk armor, he is awaiting the day when Darth Zannah will finally challenge him. It seems, though, that this may not come to pass fast enough, as Bane himself is growing weaker because of his use of the Dark Side and the lingering damage from the orbalisks. Rather than forcing Zannah to act (since that would either leave him unable to train a new apprentice before his own death if he won, but could also leave the Sith with a weak Sith Master if she won), he chooses to seek out the ancient holocron of Darth Andeddu in order to learn how to preserve his spirit in a new body. That way, he can live long enough to wait for Zannah to finally make her move at the right time, or replace her and have time to train someone new. Even as Bane researches Andeddu via his contacts, having set himself up as a collector of antiques on Ciutric IV, other plots are unfolding. On the planet Doan, a group of miners is intending to rise up against their king. Jedi Knight Medd Tandar, on Doan to seek ancient Sith artifacts for the Jedi Order’s Council of First Knowledge, is caught in the middle of the conflict, hoping to convince Gelba and other rebels to avoid bloodshed. However, their meeting is cut short by the emergence of the assassin known as the Huntress, who instinctively uses the Dark Side. Tandar and the others are all wiped out. The Huntress had been sent by former Gloom Walker Lucia, who is now the bodyguard of Serra, who is both the princess of Doan (having married Prince Gerran, who is now dead) and the daughter of the Ambrian healer Caleb, who had previously faced down and been killed by Bane (though she does not yet know this). She hired the Huntress to kill the rebels because she knew the rebels had killed Prince Gerran, but in gaining revenge for Serra, Lucia has inflamed passions on the world even more. Because of Tandar’s death, Serra and Lucia go to Coruscant to reassure the Jedi Order (including Jedi Master Obba, Tandar’s master) that the rulers of Doan had no hand in Tandar’s death. While there, she learns that her father was killed a decade ago by Darth Bane when he returned to Ambria. Serra asks Lucia to contact Huntress for her. She has a score to settle with the Sith Lord. Lucia arranges the meeting, and Serra shows the Huntress where Caleb died. Huntress can sense the previous presence (by using the Force to see through time, somewhat) of Bane, Zannah, and Darovit. She agrees to hunt down Bane. Meanwhile, Bane heads for Prakith to claim Andeddu’s holocron, but only after he is able to send Zannah away to Doan to recover the Sith artifacts and get her out of the way. While there, she discovers that another individual, a second former student of Jedi Master Obba, Set Harth, has fallen to the Dark Side (to an extent) and stole the artifacts. She traces him to his home on Nal Hutta, where she tests him and makes him her prime candidate to be her Sith Apprentice once she takes out Darth Bane on return from this mission. Bane manages to get the holocron from its keepers on Prakith, then returns to Ciutric IV to study its teachings about how to transfer his spirit into another body for immortality. He is then caught in a trap set by the Huntress and her mercenaries. Thanks to a heavy sedative called senflax, she is able to subdue Bane, taking him, his lightsaber, Bane’s own holocron, and Andeddu’s holocron with her to turn him over to Serra at the supposedly-unused royal dungeon (the Stone Prison) on Doan. When Zannah and Set arrive, they see the damage from the battle between Bane and Huntress. They head back to Doan to find Bane. On Doan, Bane is kept sedated and tortured by Serra, but it is pulling Serra close to the Dark Side. Concerned for Serra and shocked to realize that Bane is actually her former Gloom Walkers commander, Dessel, who saved her life years ago, Lucia counteracts the sedatives with a stimulant, allowing Bane to soon free himself. By that time, Zannah and Set have arrived. Zannah sets out after Bane, telling Set to stay with their ship, but Set senses the presence of Andeddu’s holocron, which he had studied, and he sets out for the Stone Prison himself to claim it. In the prison, Bane senses Zannah’s arrival as he tries to capture Serra, who is now heading for the control room of the prison to activate a self-destruct system to bring it all down on Bane. Huntress, having revealed Lucia’s actions to Serra, decides to stick around and wait for the Sith in the hangar, hoping to join whomever emerges. Set manages to get inside the prison take Andeddu’s holocron, then heads back to the hangar himself, running into Huntress. The two do battle over her ship, which he is trying to steal. Meanwhile, Bane finds Lucia, but he is not the man she once knew. When he is about to kill Lucia to get to Serra (who has set the self-destruct now), Zannah arrives and attacks both Bane and Lucia, killing the latter. Bane battles Zannah, but Huntress still has his lightsaber, making the battle difficult. Serra deactivates the self-destruct for ethical reasons, then discovers Lucia’s body. Serra takes Lucia’s body to an evacuation shuttle and restarts the destruct countdown. Bane and Zannah battle until he can use an explosive charge to The Chiss Ascendancy begins to make use of a law that forbids them from attacking another force unless attacked first.*

*NOTE: This took place around 1,000 years before SQ.

973 BY

The sum of Yuuzhan Vong shaping knowledge is codified at this time. After this point, with the exception of what little is learned 1,000 years later during the invasion of the galaxy, no new teachings are entered into the Yuuzhan Vong knowledge base by the Yuuzhan Vong gods. This fact is kept secret from all but a few Yuuzhan Vong for the next millennium.

*NOTE: The Tac-Spec Footman thing is a little screwy. The company is apparently founded specifically to create these droids, and we're given a date of 1,000 BY for the company's formation . . . but then we are told that the first of the droids hit the market "a few decades" after the Battle of Ruusan. To make it a tad more confusing, we are given a date of approximately 400 BY for when the company goes under. However, we are also told that the Tac-Spec Footman is sold for "the next 600 years" after the line is introduced. So, either 1,000 – 600 BY is a very rough estimate for the company's (and droid's) existence, or it took the company a while to sell the droids, or the fact that the NEGtD's profile is for the Tac-Spec Corporation FIII Footman Droid (F-three, rather than F-one) could mean that the first Footman droids are released when the company forms, and it happened to take a few decades for the model being profiled to be introduced. I prefer the latter explanation. As for the end of the company, I'm going with the more specifically-stated 400 BY date for that, rather than pushing it a few decades because of the Footman FIII confusion. (And, yes, 970 BY is an estimate of "a few decades" after the Battle of Ruusan.)

966 BY

Around this time is the last time the Jedi Order senses the Dark Side of the Force at work (at least by Sith hands) for the next 800 years, until Darth Tenebrous’ master rends the Force.
964 BBY
- The Utegetu Nebula is formed by a supernova. The planet Woteba and its fellow planets in the new Utegetu Nebula are blasted clean of life, but advanced nanotechnology begins terraforming the planets to revitalize their lush environments.
  (conjecture based on The Unseen Queen)

963 – 962 BBY
- Around this time, the first new fertile soil begins emerging on Woteba and the other planets in the Utegetu Nebula, thanks to the terraforming efforts of advanced nanotechnology.
  (conjecture based on The Unseen Queen)

948 BBY
- The Yuuzhan Vong worldship, Baanu Miir, is grown.
  (conjecture based on Rebirth)*
*NOTE: This rounds “almost a thousand years old” to 975 years old.

920 BBY
- Aruk the Hutt is born.
  (conjecture based on The Hutt Gambit)
- Direus’pei (later known as the “Good Hutt”) is born.
  (conjecture based on The Despotica)

915 BBY
- Sise Fromm is born.
  (conjecture based on Escape Into Terror)

902 BBY
- A Jedi vessel visits Barab I and ends a dispute between Barabel factions. While Barabel society is not made public, the Barabels are left with stories of great warriors from beyond the clouds.
  (conjecture based on Alien Anthology and The New Essential Guide to Alien Species)*
*NOTE: I had originally rounded “countless centuries ago” to 900 years, but the NEGtAS put this at 4,500 BBY, thereby necessitating a date change. Then (some say due to my dating, but I have no way to prove that) it was moved in the Complete Star Wars Encyclopedia to 902 BBY. I have since moved it back. My thanks to reader Feher Laszlo for pointing out the change.

900 BBY
- Production ceases on Corellian Engineering Corporation’s YG series of ships.
  (conjecture based on A Legacy of Starships via TimeTales, verbatim)
- Five powerful families from Coruscant move to the planet Eriadu, where they form the Quintad, a new oligarchy that slowly transforms the planet into an industrial powerhouse. The most powerful of the Quintad houses is the Tarkin family.
  (conjecture based on Geonosis and the Outer Rim Worlds)
- Around this time, Jedi Needa Kame takes a leave of absence from Jedi duties and travels to Iktotch, where he builds a retreat in the mountains and spends the next decade meditating and developing the so-called Herder’s Gauntlets.
  (conjecture based on Nexus of Power)
- Greel Ptavvish, the first great Felin philosopher, assembled the Felin clan leaders together and persuaded them that their warring ways would lead to disaster for their people. He proposed the creation of a global government comprised of the senior members of each clan. The plan was implemented and the Felin High Command came into being.*
896 BBY
- Yoda is born.
  (conjecture based on Star Wars: Episode VI—“Return of the Jedi”)

890 BBY
- Around this time, a schism in the Bounty Hunters Guild between the majority of the guild and a splinter group that forms a humans-only confederacy, leads to the deaths of the humans-only faction in a massive explosion that destroys the space station at Ixtlar. The cause of the explosion is never determined, but rumors will persist that it was another faction of Guild hunters, which included humans, were responsible. (In truth, it was Mandalorians that caused the explosion as retaliation for Guild hunters invading Mandalorian territory.) It is this schism that causes the Guild to begin actively recruiting and promoting from many different species, making it a truly egalitarian organization, even going so far as to allow membership to droids.*
  (conjecture based on The Bounty Hunter Code)*
  *NOTE: This is “almost 900 years ago,” as of the time that Kenek Weeyo writes his chapter of The Bounty Hunters Guild Handbook. There is no real indication of when that as written, since Weeyo’s section is in the Updated Imperial Edition of the book, yet does not mention the Empire at all. Consider this a best guess date.
- Around this time, Jedi Needa Kame finishes work on the Herder's Gauntlets, which allow a Force-user who is not otherwise strong in telekinesis to use that ability.
  (conjecture based on Nexus of Power)

881 BBY
- Popara the Hutt of the Anjiliac Clan is born.
  (conjecture based on Scourge)

867 BBY
- TCW DATE: Naboo joins the Republic. This event will be commemorated in years to come by the Festival of Light.*
  (conjecture based on Crisis on Naboo)*
  *NOTE: This assumes that Crisis on Naboo is set in 20 BBY.

850 BBY
- Nearly a thousand years before the Corellian Crisis for the Galactic Alliance, Darth Cognus and her Sith Apprentice (Shadow Hand), Darth Millennial are at odds. Barely escaping Cognus’ wrath, Millennial, a three-eyed mutant, escapes to the planet Dromund Kass. There, he meditates on Sith teachings and pre-Republic writings of Plaristes and Dak Ramis. He creates a sort of Dark Side religion known as the Dark Force. He considers himself a sort of Prophet of the Dark Force (or Dark Side). The religion attracts many followers in these early days.*
  (conjecture based on Evil Never Dies: The Sith Dynasties)*
  *NOTE: This is “nearly a thousand years” before the present tense of Evil Never Dies. Given the information in that article, I'm assuming this means nearly 1,000 years before Legacy of the Force, but it means that either Cognus and Millennial survived the Battle of Ruusan (instead of just Bane and Zannah), or Cognus and Millennial are later Sith. I've rounded this to 850 BBY to give these two time to develop in the wake of Darth Zannah.

832 BBY
- Theed becomes the human capital of Naboo when King Jafan unites its human city-states at the end of the Time of Suffering and ushers in the Time of Great Peace that will last until the Trade Federation blockade of Naboo 800 years from now. Theed Royal Palace and Theed Spaceport are built.*
(conjecture based on Nexus of Power)*
*NOTE: For what it’s worth, this information seems to add more detail to the Naboo backstory while other information in the book clashes a little with existing information from before Nexus of Power was published.

822 BBY
- On Mrissst, the Center for Linguistic Studies is founded.
  (conjecture based on HoloNet News, Volume 531, Number 47)
- TCW DATE: According to Jedi Master Kit Fisto during the Separatist takeover of Ukio, Yoda begins piling up favors for later use around this time.*
  (conjecture based on Act on Instinct)*
*NOTE: Yes, I know he was likely rounding, since Yoda hadn’t turned 900 years old at the time he said this. It is simply interesting to see the idea that Yoda was able to gain political influence for such a long time, so much so that it could help the Republic centuries later.

800 BBY
- On Elrood, Radell Mining Corporation is founded.
  (conjecture based on Planets of the Galaxy: Volume Three)
- Around this time, the Royal Palace on Alderaan is built.*
  (conjecture based on Dark Lord: The Rise of Darth Vader)*
*NOTE: The palace is more than seven centuries old as of Dark Lord, which takes place 19 – 18 BBY. I’ve rounded here to an even hundred year mark.
- Around this time, the Starhunter Dhelba, an early menagerie ark, carrying Gupin, tree goats and Teeks, disappears near Endor.*
  (conjecture based on Castaways of Endor)*
*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn.
- Hyperspace scouts discover the planet Rothana and sell its location to Kuat Drive Yards. KDV discovers it as a mineral-rich world and sends engineer Quiberon Kuat to the system with thousands of workers and a fleet of ships. Their operation will grow to become Rothana Heavy Engineering.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)
- Within a couple of centuries after the Battle of Ruusan, due to the slow shift in location of nebulae, hyperspace routes to Ruusan are erased. Hoping that the planet will become obscure, thereby preventing anyone travelling there to obtain Sith knowledge, the Jedi Order stealthily have the planet removed from star charts.*
  (conjecture based on The Clone Wars: The Official Episode Guide: Season 1)*
*NOTE: Information provided by Luke Van Horn.

796 BBY
- Yoda, now a Jedi Master, begins training Jedi.
  (conjecture based on Star Wars: Episode V--“The Empire Strikes Back”)

750 BBY
- The Grissmath Dynasty begins sending its convicted criminals and other prisoners to the planet Nam Chorios.
  (conjecture based on Planet of Twilight and The Essential Guide to Alien Species)

738 BBY
- On Mandalore, a small but growing faction begins urging the Mandalorian leadership to join the Republic. Not only would it quickly make the Mandalorians a major power in the Senate due to their regional might and oversight, but it would stave off a confrontation with the Republic that the Mandalorians could not win. This minority movement is shouted down, as the Mandalorian culture clings to its independence and its warrior ways. The growing advancement of the Mandalorians since the Battle of Ruusan, under the policies created under Mandalore the Uniter, finally prompts the Republic to take action against the Mandalorians. A Republic task force made of Judicial Forces and Planetary Security Forces units, coordinated by the Jedi Order, engages in a pre-emptive war against the Mandalorians.
Key Mandalorian planets (Fenel, Ordo, Concord Dawn, and Mandalore itself, for example) are bombarded from orbit, leaving large portions of those worlds as wastelands. The Republic occupies and disarms Mandalorian Space, setting up a caretaker government run by members of the failed pro-Republic peace movement. This event becomes known in the Republic as the Mandalorian Excision. The Mandalorian “Death Watch” movement of future generations will refer to this time as the Dral’Han (the “Annihilation”) and claim that it was because the Mandalorians, under Mandalore the Uniter and his successors, had created an honorable, “perfect” civilization wherein warriors ruled, protecting artisans, manufacturers, and laborers, who supported the warriors, and under whom were vassals and servants.

(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas, The Essential Guide to Warfare and The Bounty Hunter Code)

- In the wake of the Mandalorian Excision, the leaders of various Planetary Security Forces meet at the Corsin Retreat to discuss best practices in how to coordinate the various PSFs in times of need. They decide to revive the old Republic Naval College on Anaxes, which sees a new life as the College of Planetary Security Forces.

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

708 BBY

- The Republic finally ends its decades-long occupation of Mandalorian Space, and the now-independent Mandalorian culture emerges changed. The faction that had once urged for Mandalore to join the Republic to maintain peace that was then put in power as the caretaker government after the Mandalorian Excision has grown in its following, but it has also grown resentful of the Republic. Knowing that conflict with the Republic could only result in further decimation of Mandalorian worlds, this faction renounces its warrior codes (and, one would assume, its warrior religion) and embrace pacifism and political neutrality in galactic conflict. They become known as the New Mandalorians. Some of those who refuse to give up their warrior ways either abandon Mandalore to become mercenaries as had been the case before Mandalore the Uniter called for the Return and just after the Battle of Malachor V. Those Mandalorians who cling to warrior ways in the Mandalorian diaspora in the galaxy at large will come to refer to themselves as the True Mandalorians and choose a new Mandalore (leader) from amongst themselves, even though the planet Mandalore, now ruled from Sundari, will not acknowledge their political authority in the slightest. In return, the True Mandalorians will consider the New Mandalorian leaders as “Anti-Mandalores.” The True Mandalorians will refer to the New Mandalorians as a whole as the “Faithless,” dubbing themselves the “Faithful” (Aka’liit). In this era, about a generation after the Mandalorian Excision (AKA “Annihilation”), the secret network of True Mandalorian clans and their representatives declares the first in a line of “True Mandalores,” ordering the ba’slan shev’la, the disappearance until an opportune time to strike back against the New Mandalorians. These hidden warriors would be known to the True Mandalorians as the Vanguard of the Faithful (the Alor’a Aka’liit). The New Mandalorians, meanwhile, destroy many sets of heirloom Mandalorian armor, necessitating that the True Mandalorians make armor from what little beskari they can acquire and other non-beskar materials.*

(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas, The Essential Guide to Warfare, and The Bounty Hunter Code)*

*NOTE: This is not an exact date. The occupation lasted “decades,” which I have conjectured can be rounded to about 30 years. This is mainly to give readers of the SWT-G a sense of the passage of time here.

704 BBY

- The Republic ends its experiment in corporate administration known as the Outer Expansion Zone, due to local civil unrest, brought on by exploitation.

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

700 BBY

- Gardulla the Hutt is born on Nal Hutta.

(conjecture based on Secrets of Tatooine)
• The Death Seed plague decimates entire systems.
  (conjecture based on Planet of Twilight)

• As the Iotran nations unify, the Iotran Police Force is formed from the remnants of each nation's military.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 12: Aliens--“Enemies and Allies”)

• The Old Republic sets up a base on Borleias.
  (conjecture based on Rogue Squadron)

• Around this era, Cybot Galactica introduces the WED Treadwell Repair Droid.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)

  *NOTE: This is “more than seven centuries” before the present tense of the NEGtD, which is set after Dark Nest.

• Alderaan Biotics sets up a hydroponics facility on Borleias.
  (conjecture based on Rogue Squadron)

• Over the decade that begins in this year, Republic Judicial Forces play a key role in the Battles of the Black Delve.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

• Around this time, the human Houses that rule the Senex and Juvex regions annex neighboring systems that they refer to as the Ninth Quadrant, in order to guard against competition from Eriadu. The Senex and Juvex refuse to join the Republic, often so far as to mine hyperspace routes to remain independent.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

• The B’omarr Order arrives at Tatooine in several ships to set up a monastery. The original plan is refit quickly to handle sandstorms and Sand People. The monastery will later come to be Jabba the Hutt’s home.
  (conjecture based on Secrets of Tatooine)

  NOTE: This story was obviously apocryphal for a long time because Yoda was said to be the one who did this during the Clone Wars, but since that fact has been kicked out of continuity, that leaves room for this story to return to continuity. Take it with a grain of salt, though.

  Heart of Darkness (SWT16 short story: Paul Lee))

684 BBY

• Vortga the Hutt travels to the ruins of Pybus, which were abandoned by the Hutts long ago due to superstitions about vengeful spirits. He sets up a base of operations there and a place to house his vast fortune, using those superstitions as an extra means of security.
  (conjecture based on The Dead Road)

671 BBY

• Direus’pei is hired by Kossak the Younger to write Evocar, a “Great Work” based on Kossak the Mighty, who defied Xim the Despot. Kossak the Younger claims to be related to the earlier Kossak and intends for Direus’pei to weave a quasi-historical tale that will drop hints to his own lineage and strengthen his claims. Instead, he creates a thirteen-episode epic that not only does not mention Kossak the Younger (a “future nephew”) but also highlights the mistreatment of slave species by the Hutts due to the Treaty of Vontor. Angered, Kossak has Direus’pei and his play destroyed, but a copy is circulated by his scribe, Ro Vacca, as part of Direus’pei’s last wishes. The spread of this earlier draft of Evocar causes eruptions of anti-Hutt sentiment on these enslaved worlds. Direus’pei becomes known as the “Good Hutt,” though the uprisings that he inspired are eventually quelled. Given that the writing of Evocar was at Kossak’s request, even if he did not agree with the contents of the actual work, Kossak is condemned to acid transfusion. As a warning to others about not over-embellishing one’s genealogy, jars of Kossak’s doo are put on display in the main terminal of Nal Hutta’s Qedriga spaceport.
(conjecture based on The Despotica)

654 BBY
- Around this time, 600 years before Darth Sidious journeys to Kursid with Darth Plagueis, Sith Lords of the Darth Bane lineage begin visiting Kursid as a training ground. A cult will begin to form amongst the natives that worships the Sith.
(conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)

632 BBY
- Cybot Galactica begins manufacturing PK worker droids.*
(conjecture based on information found at starwars.com)*

*NOTE: This entry was conjectured by Andrew Gordon. His logic is as follows: “Cybot Galactica has been producing them for centuries, and they have become very common. Therefore, I choose 632 [BBY], because they can be in production for so long that the Trade Federation begins using them. Therefore, that leaves about 300 years between that and the founding of the TF for them to become popular.”

620 BBY
- A Coruscant-born human Jedi Knight named Marus Timpel is on Antar 4 (the Gotal homeworld), when he meets a Gotal named Kaskutal. Kaskutal had been turned down for Jedi training as a child by Timpel himself, but Kaskutal retains a great admiration for the Jedi Order. He forms a group to help the Jedi wherever possible, which comes to be known as the Antarian Rangers.
(conjecture based on Hero’s Guide and Fly Casual)

612 BBY
- The planet Quadrant Seven experiences its last war for at least the next 573 years. This is partially due to an isolationist policy that is against the use of long-range comlinks and off-world transports unless absolutely necessary.
(conjecture based on Secrets of the Jedi)

610 BBY
- Delwannamapia (Delwanna) is born on Kashyyyk.
(conjecture based on The Paradise Snare)

600 BBY
- Jabba Desilijic Tiure is born.
(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Characters)
- Gurtag the Hutt is born.
(conjecture based on The Politics of Contraband)
- B-1D4 (the future “Heart of Steel”) is first activated.*
(conjecture based on Prisoner of the Nikto Pirates)*

*NOTE: In Prisoner of the Nikto Pirates, it is said that B-1D4 “couldn’t be less than six hundred years old.” I’ve simply put it here (603 years before that story) as a way of rounding the figure off. She could be far older than this, since we don’t know the exact period when B-1 models were first used, if she was one of the first, etc.
- Murgoob the Great (a Dulok oracle) is born on the forest moon of Endor.*
(conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia and Wicket’s Wagon)*

*NOTE: This interprets “seasons” as “years,” which is how most of the date references in the Ewoks cartoons are handled. (Odd, but that’s how the dates are to be interpreted from the series).
- Republic Judicial Forces play a key role in the Utor Shock.
(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)
- A fallen Jedi named Aliya is banished by the Jedi Council to the planet Dathomir, where she tames the indigenous rancors and establishes rule over the planet. The training she gives to her daughters in the ways of the Force eventually leads to the line of female Dathomirian Jedi known as the “Witches of Dathomir.” The Shamanistic beliefs about the Light Side and Dark Side carry over elements of the Ones in that the Winged Goddess of the Dathomiri faith is the “griffin” form of Daughter, whereas the Fanged God is the “gargoyle” form of the Son. The Witches, however, are to worship both as the Twin Deities, rather than thinking in terms of “good” and “evil.” When Allya finally dies later, her teachings are altered by those who claim that, in the end, she came to believe in a difference (in the Force) between “good” and “evil.” Allya’s teachings, in this altered form, become the Book of Law, but some refuse to follow this “heresy.” Those Witches who claim that this is heresy are themselves labeled as heretics and exiled from the Dathomiri witch clans. They will continue following an earlier version of Allya’s teachings and come to be known as the Nightsisters. The first direct calling upon the powers of the Fanged God (the Dark Side) by the Nightsisters burst blood vessels in their faces, leaving them marked. In the future, they will come to use ritualistic tattoos on their faces (and other body regions in the case of the Nightbrothers) as a way of distinguishing themselves, based on this accident of Dark Side use.

(conjecture based on The Dark Side Sourcebook and Book of Sith)

- Around this time, Jedi Master Bodo Baas comes into possession of the Tedryn Holocron that was once used by his ancestor, Vodo-Siosk Baas.

(conjecture based on Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)

- Five centuries after first the Vorzyd Cluster made first contact with Republic traders, a consortium from Commenor led by the Greyshade family attains rights to the planet Columex, which they change into a thriving business world. The Greyshades will quickly move the company’s interests throughout the Commonality, finally gaining full membership, then gaining entrance into the Republic for the system, with the Greyshade family as their traditional representatives.*

(conjecture based on Geonosis and the Outer Rim Worlds)*

*NOTE: The date here, if course, is based on the rounded date for the Vorzyd Cluster’s discovery.

- A family of Tapasi nobles come to what will later be called Christophis. They invest enough in the world to hire Given mathematicians and Verpines to help clear the asteroid field that made travel in the system difficult and to prepare starship and mining technologies to make the planet truly profitable for mining. This process takes approximately a century.

(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

597 BBY
- Hanson Mining Consolidated discovers valuable ore in seedbeds on Neona.*

(conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)*

*NOTE: This assumes that “a few hundred years ago” is rounded to 500 years.

590 BBY
- Gandle Ott is colonized by the Old Republic, marking the first venture of the Old Republic into the Kathol sector.*

(conjecture based on The DarkStryder Campaign)*

*NOTE: This assumes that “nearly six centuries” before 8 ABY can be rounded to about 590 BBY (a nice round number).

586 BBY
- Hugo Bartyn is born.

(conjecture based on Bartyn’s Landing)

584 BBY
- The red giant star known as Caronth (the seventh brightest and second largest star in the galaxy) begins being watched in case of supernova.

(conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia and Tyrant’s Test)
580 BBY
- Jedi Master Bodo Baas and other Jedi make a diplomatic visit to Yanibar to try to convince the Zeison Sha followers to join with the Jedi and work together. However, centuries of being “abandoned” by the Jedi during the New Sith Wars and then centuries of seeing the Jedi simply show up and take away children for Jedi training has soured the Zeison Sha opinion of the Jedi Oder. They decide to remain independent. Shortly thereafter, the Jedi learn that a Matukai (Force-based martial artist) named Mendor Typhoons and two of his apprentices have defeated pirates near Ord Radama. They Jedi diplomats, including Bodo Baas, tries to bring the Matukai into the Jedi fold as well, only to find that this group is also unwilling to join forces. (To be continued below . . . )

(Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)

(Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force [continued] (essential guide: Ryder Windham)

Other Force-Using Organizations
Zeison Sha
Matukai

566 BBY
- Around this time, the Sith following the Rule of Two stop using children as apprentices, until Darth Sidious begins training Darth Maul.

(conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)

564 BBY
- At about this time, Zeltros is invaded. This is the first of twelve separate invasions that will take place on the world over the next six centuries. Generally, invaders end up giving in to the Zeltrons’ partying nature upon exposure to their pheromones, and invasions don’t last long.*

(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Alien Species)*

*NOTE: I have revised this date based on the information being referenced as “the past six centuries” in the NEGtAS, which was theoretically “written” after the end of the Swarm War in 36 ABY.

553 BBY
- In the independent Senex and Juvex region, a warlord named Osted Picutorion marries the deranged Senex princess Farasa Anturi (from House Anturi, the weakest Senex House), then battles House Vandron and House Petro, freeing the people of Hutlar (the Hutlarians) from slavery. The couple’s forces then occupy Karfeddion. This period of turmoil, known as the Crimson Days, ends with the Third Nanama Synod accepting the legality of their marriage and the freedom of the Hutlarians.

(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

550 BBY
- On Tatooine, a bandit named Alkhara comes to the B’omarr temple with his scummy followers. He intends to take over the monastery by force to save himself from those he has wronged, but the monks welcome him with open arms, making their refuge his refuge.

(conjecture based on Secrets of Tatooine)

540 BBY
- The great warrior (better known as the “Time Guardian”) Tet-Ami saves the people of Carthas from alien beasts, earning himself the status of legend. A temple is built in his honor that will remain unopened for centuries . . . (To be continued below . . . )*

(The Secret of Tet-Ami)*

*NOTE: See the summary of the rest of this story at 40 BBY to discover the truth about “Tet-Ami.”

The Secret of Tet-Ami (SWT13 short story: Fabian Nicieza)
The Secret of Tet-Ami (SWT13 short story: Fabian Nicieza)
539 BBY
- 54th Atrisian Emperor Uueg Tching’s Sayings are released to the general public by the Atrisian Parliament in a grab at public support for their new government. (conjecture based on From the Files of Corellia Antilles)
- Around this time, Sith Lord Darth Gravid, who believes that the Sith will be doomed if they only study the Dark Side, is driven mad by trying to straddle the line between the Dark and Light Sides of the Force. He begins to "safeguard" the Sith’s future by destroying ancient texts, holocrons, and treatises that the Sith Lords have amassed over generations since the era of Darth Bane. He destroys much of these teachings before his own apprentice, Darth Gean, kills him. Darth Gean will pass down “true” Sith teachings to his own apprentice and on down the Sith line. Darth Plagueis will consider this event the greatest setback to the Sith agenda in the era since Darth Bane instituted the Rule of Two, and he will believe that this was when the Sith lost the knowledge of how to defeat death and extend life (or consciousness in the Force). (conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)

533 BBY
- The Gungans on Naboo begin using the quarry as a place for punishment. (conjecture based on Rescue in the Core)

*NOTE: The actual reference says “for centuries.” I rounded to 500 years before the story takes place.

532 BBY
- A team from Outer Rim Oreworks Corporation first maps the planet Lamaredd in the Lamaro system. Upon discovering useful metals in the system, ORO sends a team led by Hugo Bartyn to assess the system for potential mining. Bartyn, ready for retiring in style, decides to make Lamaredd his own personal operation. He sets up ORO mining facilities on the world, getting himself in to the position of administrator. While decimating the native Menahuun population to near extinction, he establishes a full-fledged mining operation, while keeping one of the true treasures of Lamaredd to himself—its excellent fishing grounds. Bartyn purchases a dilapidated Hoersch-Kessel LH 3010 from the Neimoidians to use as his personal “home,” Bartyn’s Landing, from which he runs his fishing operation under the name Bartyn Gourmet Delicacies. He imports indentured servants from water worlds like Naboo, Iskalon, and Mon Calamari to act as workers for the operation, which grows into Bartyn’s own fiefdom. By the time ORO becomes aware of his activities, it is too late to stop him. They place their own security force and flight controller on the world, but given that they must answer to the ORO administrator, which is still Bartyn, nothing much changes. Meanwhile, the alien fishermen begin to tire of Bartyn and, under the leadership of Sirrik Olyeg, create the Sailors’ Union. Negotiations win concessions for both sides, and operations continue in an uneasy alliance. Shortly thereafter, Bartyn has Olyeg assassinated. (conjecture based on Bartyn’s Landing)

531 BBY
- On Cularin, Cloud Mountain erupts. When the activity dies down, the twelve tribes (irstats) of Tarasin that lived near the mountain, join into a larger Hiironi (“different but together”) irstat. Some species of animals have been destroyed, while some, like the dua-wurm, simply relocate. (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide and www.wizards.com)

*NOTE: This rounds centuries before LF to 500 years.

528 BBY
- Yanth the Hutt is born. (conjecture based on Shadow Hunter)

*NOTE: The actual reference says he is less than 500 years old in Shadow Hunter. I have rounded to 495 years before that story.
527 BBY
- Outer Rim Oreworks sets up an operation on Engebo V.
  (conjecture based on Death, Dirt, and the Nerf Rancher’s Daughter)

*NOTE: This assumes that DDATNRD takes place 27 BBY and “a few centuries” can mean 500 years.

524 BBY
- This is as far back as the Arkanian Orbital Logs mention the Rockhound, an asteroid tug produced by BramDorc Corporation in the Unknown Regions. It is unknown how long the ship was in service prior to this earliest mention.
  (conjecture based on Allies)

522 BBY
- The Techno Union purchases the Foerost shipyards from the Republic.
  (conjecture based on HoloNet News, Volume 531, Number 53)

*NOTE: This rounds “centuries ago” to 500 years.
- Around this time, a corporate exploration vessel chances upon O’reen. Finding the population comparatively technologically primitive, he decides to fly low, cowing the natives and setting the stage for a corporate takeover. He underestimates the militaristic inhabitants, however, who quickly capture the vessel and incorporate the advanced technology, allowing them to conduct raids elsewhere to acquire even more technology.
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn. This is “several centuries” (which I have rounded to 500 years) before the Clone Wars.

521 BBY
- Coruscant is later said to have glittered as a golden-towered centerpiece in the Republic’s crown starting around this time.
  (conjecture based on The Cestus Deception)

*NOTE: Why Steven Barnes would say “half a millennium” for this, rather than much longer, is beyond me, but there it is.

520 BBY
- The Sulloran estate gains prominence.
  (conjecture based on Wanted by Cracken: Updates)

*NOTE: See "On RPG Magazine Stories" in How to Use The Timeline Section.
- The species-gathering Ark of Baron Auletphant, lost in space for 10,000 years, is finally recovered and becomes part of the Baobab Archives on Manda.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

519 BBY
- Even Piell will later speculate that the spice den that will be the site of his final battle with stormtroopers sees its last use around this time.
  (conjecture based on Jedi Twilight)

515 BBY
- In what will become known as the Corporate Sector, Republic corporations are given the chance to spur growth in the region. They create the Expansionist Oligarchy, but they quickly become corrupt and abusive to their citizens, who will call for the creation of the Corporate Sector a generation later.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

*NOTE: This assumes that the Corporate Sector is founded in 490 BBY, per the NEGtAS, and that a generation can be rounded to 25 years.

509 BBY
• Yaddle is born.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Characters)

502 BBY
• Settlements at Bartyn’s Landing on Lamaredd begin to be harassed by unknown assailants.
  Blame is quickly placed on the near-extinct Menahuun, whom Hugo Bartyn had nearly wiped out thirty years earlier. Bartyn and his eldest son, Traggat, head with a field team into the jungle to wipe out the Menahuun, but are never heard from again. Later investigations will reveal that they met a violent end.
  (conjecture based on Bartyn’s Landing)

500 BBY
• Sometime, centuries before Jacen Solo learns the story of Darth Vectivus, the director of a mining colony near Bimmiel is exposed to the Dark Side energies left behind by the now-extinct mynock-like species that used to live there. When the mining operation becomes useless and stops being profitable, he shuts it down, but he keeps the habitat for his own underground home. He ventures into the galaxy and discovers the current Sith Lord. He becomes the Sith Apprentice (Shadow Hand) of the era, taking the name Darth Vectivus.
  Then, living by Sith principles, without a lust for power and corruption, he returns to the habitat to live out his days. It is his home that will eventually be found by Lumiya, and his spirit will remain in one form or another, thanks to the Force energies of the place, until at least the time when he confronts Jedi Knight Nelani during Jacen’s temptation.*
  (conjecture based on Betrayal)*

*NOTE: I have rounded centuries to 500 years. Hopefully, we will eventually learn more about Darth Vectivus.
• Uhl Eharl Khoehng is first performed.
  (conjecture based on Uhl Eharl Khoehng)
• An unknown race sends a base ship to Orellon II as part of a plan to gather specimens of at least 30,000 different species.
  (conjecture based on The Prophecy)
• The Altiri colonize Priva, one of their homeworld’s moons.*
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn.
• Around this time, the family that will include Prince Kaspar on Arrochar wrests control of the planet from savage tribes.*
  (conjecture based on Rebel Girl)*

*NOTE: This assumes that “twenty generations” can be rounded to 500 years (20 times 25, like the old “for over a thousand generations” calculation that gave us 25,000 years of the Republic for so much of the continuity’s life).
• A tradition begins among the nobility of Kuat to poison one’s enemies with the use of a ring through which the poison may be injected into the intended victim.
  (conjecture based on Specter of the Past)
• The Odenji enter a species-wide sadness known as the melanncho.*
  (conjecture based on Alien Encounters supplement in The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #13)*

*NOTE: This rounds several centuries to 500 years.
• An archaeological dig begins on Polis Massa that will last at least 500 years. The Polis Massans believe that they are the descendants of the Eellayin people who were native to Polis Massa before a cataclysm shattered the world into thousands of asteroids (which are now known collectively as “Polis Massa.” The dig is to search for clues about this suspected ancestry.*
  (conjecture based on Strongholds of Resistance)*

*NOTE: Strongholds of Resistance and The New Essential Guide to Alien Species put this event around this time, 500 BBY, while The New Essential Guide to Droids seems to put it around 464 BBY, due to being 500 years before its “present,” which is apparently after the Dark Nest Trilogy, which ended in 36 ABY.
• The Mineral Assets Partnership sets up a mining colony on Karra, based on incorrect beliefs that varmigio is abundant on the world. When the truth of the matter is discovered, the colony’s funding is cut and the miners are stranded.*
(conjecture based on Stranded)*

*NOTE: The mention of this in the supplemental information for Stranded is vague and only says “several hundred years ago.” I chose to interpret that as 500 years, a nice round number.

- The science vessel Prana Lexander is lost.
  (borrowed, with thanks, from Christopher McElroy's TimeTales)

- When the planet later known as Christophsis is ready for legitimate mining, thanks to Givin and Verpine efforts over the last 100 years on behalf of their Tapasi employers, along with deposits of valuable resources now being discovered, the Tapasi settlers on Christophsis hire excellent Vippit lawyers to make sure that the Givin and Verpines are disenfranchised and only the Tapasi profit from the planet. They even go so far as to rename the planet after their own family, dubbing it “Christophsis.”
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

- The planet Plagen and its native Chikarri are discovered. Shortly thereafter, the Chikarri sell port rights to the Klatooinian Trade Guild.
  (conjecture based on Alien Encounters supplement in The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #11)

- Modern Huttese comes into use.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Phrase Book and Travel Guide)

- The Jedi training vessel Chu’unthor (named for the Cerean word for “academy”), the brain child of Cerean Jedi So-Rowan and Human Jedi Ivixa Delbaeth, is built in orbit around Abhean. When launched, it acts as a training and exploratory vessel for the Jedi Order, negotiating a truce on Qualtrough and making first contact with the Elathan. It will also produce several powerful Jedi, including Ainvar ul-ESca.*
  (conjecture based on Power of the Jedi Sourcebook)*

*NOTE: The New Essential Guide to Vehicles and Vessels puts this event closer to 400 BBY instead of 500 BBY, but it is rounding at the time, so I’m keeping it here, where the Power of the Jedi Sourcebook placed it more firmly.

- Centuries before the enslavement of the Wookiees by the Empire, the Wookiees make enemies of the Trandoshans, whose hatred will help lead them into slavery under Palpatine. As Kashyyk prospers, visitors begin arriving on the scenic world. To protect their ecosystem and culture, the Wookiees pass laws to restrict travel and tourism. When the Trandoshans, who were profiting from the tourist industry from Dosha, learn of this, they commence raids on Kashyyk, which then spill over into armed conflict on both Kashyyk and Dosha. Finally, the Senate sides with the Wookiees, and the turmoil is ended, but the hatred between the two races will continue for centuries.
  (conjecture based on Secrets of Kashyyk)

- The Inheritance Exemption law is put into place by the leaders of the Kuat ruling families, and stipulates that the Kuat family will maintain control of Kuat Drive Yards without exception. Each succeeding Kuati generation will supply a leader for the vast starship manufacturing facility, who will work with the interests of all ruling families. This exemption is enacted when it is discovered that the Kuat family has inherited skills needed to manage the corporation. Some families, such as the Knylenn and Kadnessi, chafe at the exemption, but are forced to agree that the Kuat family brings prestige and wealth to all Kuati families.
  (conjecture based on Slave Ship via TimeTales, verbatim)

- Information disks are used for the last time in this period of galactic history. They will later be found in museums.
  (conjecture based on Rogue Planet via TimeTales, verbatim)

- Around this time, Talus and Tralus secede from Corellian control and declare themselves independent. They join together to form the Federation of the Double Worlds (Fed-Dub). Corellia makes an alliance with Selonia and Drall in an attempt to conquer Talus and Tralus. They fail in doing so, and the Drall soon give up war (for the most part) to focus on scholarship and self-improvement, while the Selonians once again retreat into isolation. The Double Worlds use this event to further cement their two-world government as an independent political entity in the system. Unfortunately for its citizens, Fed-Dub will develop over the next 500 years from a republic that is dedicated to the improvement of life for its citizens to a corrupt plutocracy that is only interested in the well-being and rights of the rich and powerful. It will come to be dominated by Talus, the more populated and developed of the Double Worlds.
(conjecture based on Suns of Fortune)

- Sacred Way colonists arrive on Aduba-3. A while later, separatists create the village of Onacra, unknowingly building it near the site of Sith Lord Seviss Vaa’s hidden Dark Side beast, which is in suspended animation. A Force-sensitive villager discovers the creature, and passes down knowledge of its existence and location to his descendants over the years. The last of these protectors would come to be known as the Old One. Both he and the beast would die during the defeat of the Cloud Riders by Han Solo and the Star-Hoppers.
(conjecture based on The Starhoppers of Aduba-3)

- After a successful mission to an unnamed planet, Sith Lord Master Finn and his apprentice are preparing to leave the world. They are stopped by the Toydarian Lod, who offers to sell Finn a new servant, the girl Marka. When Lod slaps Marka, the apprentice kills the Toydarian for the slap and for calling him a slave. Knowing that empathy is a Jedi trait, not fit for a Sith, Finn knocks him on his ass. Marka tries to convince him to take her with him, but Finn knows that she is strong in the Force and is trying to use a mind trick on him. As Finn heads for their ship (what appears to be a very early incarnation of the Sith Infiltrator design, though this is probably just a coincidence), he has his apprentice “deal with” Marka. When she arrives with the apprentice atop the tower where their ship awaits, Finn tells her that he has no need for a slave and already has an apprentice. At this, she pushes the apprentice off the tower to his death. Finn takes her as his new apprentice.
(The Apprentice) *

*NOTE: This story can take place anytime between the era of Bane and the era of Palpatine. One should also not confuse this tale with the Marvel series tale of the same name, nor the story of the same name that appears in Gamer #8.

The Apprentice (SWT17 short story: Mike Denning)
The Apprentice (SWT17 short story: Mike Denning)

498 BBY

- Around this time, the Nimbanel of the planet Nimban secede from the Republic and successfully petition to join Hutt Space.*
(conjecture based on Lords of Nal Hutta)*

*NOTE: This assumes that the “present” for Lords of Nal Hutta is about 2 ABY, given that it references events in that year at one point. This is “several centuries ago” from that “present,” so I have rounded that to 500 years.

497 BBY

- The planet Aleron is settled and terraformed by colonists from Gilliana.
(conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)

- During a great war between the Ewoks and Duloks on the forest moon of Endor, in which the Dulok oracle Murgoob participated, the Ewoks use a battlewagon built by Erpham Warrick to win the conflict, gaining control of the forest and forcing the Duloks back into the swamps.*
(conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia and Wicket’s Wagon)*

*NOTE: This interprets “seasons” as “years,” which is how most of the date references in the Ewoks cartoons are handled. This also interprets “many hundreds of seasons ago” as approximately 500 years.

496 BBY

- On Teyr, the city of Sidonna constructs its first spaceport.
(conjecture based on Shield of Lies)

495 BBY

- The Anarrians colonize Secava, one of their homeworld’s moons.*
(conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn. This is “a few years” after the Altiri colonize Priva, which is said to be around 500 BBY.

- Rendilli Stardrives launches the Xanter-class deep-space exploration frigate.*
(conjecture based on Enter the Unknown)*

*NOTE: According to Enter the Unknown, this happened “almost 500 years ago.”
491 BBY
- The indigenous population of Jandoon becomes extinct.*
  (conjecture based on Relic)*
  *NOTE: This assumes “centuries ago” can be rounded to 500 years before Relic takes place.

490 BBY
- The Corporate Sector is established.*
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Alien Species)*
  *NOTE: The Essential Atlas rounds this date to “around 500” BBY.
- Among the early sponsors of the Corporate Sector is Chiewab Amalgamated Pharmaceuticals Company.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Weapons and Technology)
- The Arkanians transform the primitive Yaka into greatly intelligent beings via cybernetic technology. Many Arkanians protest this move, but the Arkanian Dominion approves of the project.
  (conjecture based Star Wars: Dark Empire Sourcebook and The Essential Guide to Alien Species)
- Botor begins feuding with its neighbor planet.
  (conjecture based Dark Empire Sourcebook)
- Gandle Ott is nicknamed “Little Coruscant” among the Kathol Sector worlds.*
  (conjecture based on The DarkStryder Campaign: Death is Remotely Possible)*
  *NOTE: This assumes that “with a hundred years” after “nearly six centuries” before 8 ABY can be rounded to about 490 BBY (a nice round number).

475 BBY
- The Yinchorr system is charted.
  (conjecture based on Alien Anthology)

472 BBY
- A Jedi Master who will later train Qui-Gon Jinn in lightsaber dueling begins training Jedi.*
  (conjecture based on Star Wars: The Roleplaying Game: Core Rulebook)*
  *NOTE: The RPG states that Qui-Gon’s master noted during his training that Qui-Gon was one of the best lightsaber duelists that he had seen in his 400 years of teaching Jedi. I have assumed that Qui-Gon was about twenty years old when this was stated, which dates this event back 380 years from Qui-Gon’s birth 92 BBY. Due to recent information revealed about Qui-Gon’s relationship to Dooku, though, we can only assume that this was a sword master, not his Master when he was Padawan.

470 BBY
- The ancient Constitutional clause known as Corellia’s Contemplanys Hermi is last used.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Chronology)

460 BBY
- The tassel recording technique used by the Tahu’ip culture on Ryloth stops being used around this time.
  (conjecture based on Betrayal)
- Around this time, a mysterious star probe is discovered on Foran Tutha. Scholars begin debating whether these remains of an ancient starship are technology from the Celestials, the Rakatans, or perhaps early Core Worlds residents.*
  (conjecture based on The History of Xim and the Tion Cluster)*
  *NOTE: This debate has been going on for 500 years, as of the time of the article. We have little indication as to the timing of the article, other than that it must be at least 39 years after ANH, given that it refers to an event 10 years after the end of the Yuzhan Vong War. I have assumed that the article is written around 40 ABY, which means that 500 years earlier would be this year.

453 BBY
Within a century of the Crimson Days, the rebellious House Mekuu of Juvex has dissolved itself and reconstituted itself as a Republic sector. The Ninth Quadrant, a Senex and Juvex holding, is stripped from their control and becomes part of the Bozhnee sector of the Outer Rim. The Senex and Juvex agree to seek peace with the Republic at the Fourth Nantama Synod, though many in the Republic will resent the entry of these slavers into the Republic until they help the Republic crack down on the Nebula Front that will about four centuries from now.

(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

439 BBY
• An Ithorian genetic experiment creates Spore by accident. It begins to take over the population of Ithor, but Jedi Knights are called in to help fight it. (Exact date of report via HoloNet News: 404BrS:4:18)

(conjecture based on Spore and HoloNet News, Volume 531, Number 52)

432 BBY
• The Great Hohokum is born.

(conjecture based on Rescue in the Core via TimeTales, abridged)

421 BBY
• TCW DATE: Around this time, Lanteeb is settled by colonists from Rocantor.

(conjecture based on Stealth)

420 BBY
• The droid known as Fidelis goes online around this time, serving the Marleaux family on Vjun for several centuries.

(conjecture based on Dark Rendezvous)

419 BBY
• Rokko the Hutt of the Besadii clan is born.

(conjecture based on Jedi Twilight)
• Around this time, Taselda (AKA Sel) is born on Alderaan, though she is of Hapan descent. She is discovered as Force sensitive and will eventually become the Padawan of Beldorian, the Hutt Jedi.

(conjecture based on Conviction)

402 BBY
• When Han Solo escapes the Espos that come for him during his meeting with Ploovo Twofor-One on Etti IV, a blast from one of the Espos will shatter a globe of Novinian grog from this year.

(conjecture based on Han Solo at Stars’ End)

400 BBY
• Cherishites settle Rhamalai. Among them is a Jedi, who will act as their protector.

(conjecture based on The Occupation of Rhamalai)
• Around this time, the Barabels of Barab I begin writing down their history for the first time.

(conjecture based on Geonosis and the Outer Rim Worlds)
• Beldorion the Hutt, a Jedi, discovers that crystals on Nam Chorios amplify his Force powers. He sets himself up as a dictator. His Padawan, Taselda, also comes to the planet and will eventually extend her own life span by consuming drochs.*

(conjecture based on The New Essential Chronology and Conviction)*

*NOTE: The Power of the Jedi Sourcebook web enhancement, The Planet of Twilight, suggests that he was only ruling Nam Chorios for a few years before Seti Ashgad I took over just after the outbreak of the Clone Wars. This contradicts all previous materials, but perhaps this is when Beldorion learns of the crystals, then he does not officially make himself dictator for another few centuries, perhaps building a power base there in the meantime.
Hutts are long-lived, after all, and can stand to be patient.

- Around this time, Tac-Spec Corporation (the GenoHaradan assassins guild’s front to sell its Footman droids to members of noble houses) goes out of business.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)

- Lord Ecclessis Figg builds Cloud City on Bespin. When construction begins, he purchases three enslaved Ugnaught tribes (the Irden, the Botrut, and the Isced). He makes them a deal, freeing them with the promise of a future home for them and their descendants on Cloud City in return for them building Cloud City for him. He contracts Alderaanian architect Nyronconel to design the upper areas of the Floating Home Mining Colony (his original name for Cloud City). The city is built not as a tourist destination but to illegally mine tibanna gas without the Mining Guild’s notice.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare and The Jewel of Yavin)

398 BBY

- Around this time, the Reverie, a luxury starship, is completed. It has taken the combined efforts of six planets (who have now gone broke, it is rumored) to build it. Unfortunately, they cut corners on safety when making it luxurious.
  (conjecture based on Boba Fett and the Ship of Fear)

396 BBY

- A couple of years into its voyages, the Reverie experiences a hull breach that scuttles the ship. Various parties will attempt to purchase and repair the ship over the years, but none will manage to do so. Instead, it will wind up at a ship graveyard on the edge of the galaxy. Rumors will persist that the Arachedron, an artifact supposedly central to some ancient, extinct culture, remains aboard the ship... and is cursed...
  (conjecture based on Boba Fett and the Ship of Fear)

392 BBY

- Kal’Shebbol is settled by a group of escaped Twi'lek slaves.
  (conjecture based on The DarkStryder Campaign)

390 BBY

- A new Majvarra is born on Yvara, as the nexus to the Yvarema hive mind.*
  (conjecture based on The DarkStryder Campaign: The Kathol Rift—“Home”)*

*NOTE: The source material says the Majvara is nearing the end of her 400-year life span. I have interpreted this as her being approximately 398 years old in TDC:TKR.

- Popara the Hutt procures a space station in orbit of Droxu.*
  (conjecture based on Tempest Feud)*

*NOTE: This information is found in the Tempest Feud adventure for the Wizards of the Coast RPG. However, the story was later supplanted by Scourge, which is a sort of novelization of the adventure. If we assume the data from the RPG to still hold, for the most part, then this information can be dated back “over 400 years” (which I have approximated to 409 years to land it at this round number) from the date of Scourge (i.e. Tempest Feud) in 19 ABY.

388 BBY

- Ikrit becomes a Jedi Master.
  (conjecture based on The Golden Globe)

380 BBY

- A Selonian terrorist group calling themselves the Afarathu cause unrest on Corellia. The Jedi Council sends Jedi from other worlds to stop the sect, ordering Corellian Jedi to protect their planet, but not to actively seek out the terrorists themselves. Four newly promoted Jedi Knights go after the terrorists, only to die trying. Keiran Halcyon, a Corellian Jedi, followed orders to protect his planet and its citizens, but wound up in the right place at the right time to encounter an Afarathu lieutenant. After a battle that nearly kills Keiran, the lieutenant is captured, and information from the lieutenant helps the other Jedi bring down the entire sect.
Keiran earns his title of Jedi Knight during the course of this uprising.*
(conjecture based on Power of the Jedi Sourcebook, Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force, and I, Jedi)*
*NOTE: This had originally seemed to be in 389 BBY, but JvS:TEGttF has pinned it down here instead.

378 BBY
- Ikrit, a Jedi Master, arrives on Yavin IV to study the Massassi and finds the Golden Globe left by Exar Kun.
  (conjecture based on The Golden Globe)
- Around this time, the Co-sal-trei tribe on Kariek is defeated by two rival tribes, including the Hu-shi-crive tribe, who close the leaders’ escape tunnel, allowing them to die inside. Shortly thereafter, another tribe defeats the original attackers. This leaves the tunnel unknown to most of the other Eickarie on the planet.
  (conjecture based on Fool’s Bargain)

365 BBY
- Near-human colonists from the supernova-threatened world of Hettitite come to Sernpidal.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

350 BBY
- Attichitcuk (Itchy) is born on Kashyyyk.
  (conjecture based on Galactic Battlegrounds)
- The advanced planet Fyodos is devastated by the “Great Cleansing”, a war in which weapons of mass destruction are employed. The entire population on the continent of Othlor are killed. In future years, Othlor would be reclaimed by nature and be filled with wildlife.
  (conjecture based on Planets of the Galaxy: Volume Two via TimeTales, verbatim)
- The Trade Federation is founded with the mission of ensuring that mercantile interests have a voice in the Galactic Senate and to protect members from piracy and unfair practices. Among the major members is the Neimoidian race. Shortly thereafter, the Trade Federation contracts with Hoersch-Kessel Drive for the creation of Trade Federation freighters.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Alien Species)

348 BBY
- Around this time, the “city” of New Vertica on Nar Shaddaa secedes from the Hutt governmental authority on the moon. The Hutts, amused, send in troops to take it back, only to be defeated by the locals. A compromise is reached, in which New Vertica remains independent (so the Hutts need not bother spending money to govern or protect it), but the region still must pay dues to the Hutts (essentially giving them something for nothing, profit-wise).*
  (conjecture based on Lords of Nal Hutta)*
*NOTE: This assumes that the “present” for Lords of Nal Hutta is about 2 ABY, given that it references events in that year at one point. It is about 350 years before that “present.”

342 BBY
- Kal’Shebbol becomes a major trading post.
  (conjecture based on The DarkStryder Campaign)

340 BBY
- The Chu’unthor, a ship which acted as a spacefaring Jedi academy and that acted as the flagship of the Jedi ExplorCorps, crashes on the planet Dathomir. Later in the year, a group of Jedi (Yoda, Gra’aton, and Vulatan) attempts a rescue of the vessel’s crew and passengers, but is stopped by the Witches of Dathomir. After saving the life of Rell, one of the witches, a truce is negotiated, wherein the Jedi can leave, but the ship and its library are left behind, hidden until a prophesied young Jedi (Luke Skywalker) would arrive to free the witches from the influence of the Nightsisters.
(conjecture based on The New Essential Chronology)

- With the loss of the Chu’unthor, the Jedi ExplorCorps declines in usefulness.
(conjecture based on Power of the Jedi Sourcebook)

335 BBY
- A granite slug is sent into Coruscant's lower levels as a clean-up measure.
(conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia)

332 BBY
- A member of the Clan Vos becomes Sheyf of the Guardians on Kiffu. The family will remain in the position for at least the next three centuries.
(conjecture based on Twilight)

- A group of humans, Bith, Zabraks, and Sullustans (mainly engineers, designers, and laborers) colonize the planet Nubia and set up the Nubian Design Collective. They begin accepting small contracts from wealthy clients, including Naboo, for whom they will eventually create the Naboo Royal Starship and N-1 Starfighter.*
(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Vehicles and Vessels)*

*NOTE: This source puts the date for this event roughly 300 years before TPM, whereas Suns of Fortune, speaking from a perspective right after ANH, calls it "almost three hundred years ago." Take this as an approximate date, given that contradiction.

330 BBY
- Around this time, a slave transport carrying hundreds off Talz crash-lands on the planet that will one day be known as Vlemoth Port. The surviving Talz develop their own tribal groups and settlements on the otherwise uninhabited planet.*
(conjecture based on Friends Like These)*

*NOTE: This is "centuries" before Clan Awaud arrived, which was itself “decades” before Friends Like These. As I rounded the Mandalorian date to 30 BBY, I have rounded “centuries” to 300 years for this entry.

325 BBY
- The ship that will come to be called the Lumrunner is built.*
(conjecture based on the Lumrunners)*

*NOTE: This assumes that Shamus Falconi’s grandmother’s pirate career started at about 25 BBY.

- The 42 oldest trees (as of 31 BBY) in the Sacred Ch’ala tree grove on Cularin, begin life.*
(conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)*

*NOTE: This rounds almost 300 years before LF to 325 BBY.

- Decades before he will finally face Tulak for revenge, Jedi Polvin Kut’s family is slaughtered by Tulak.
(conjecture based on Yaddle’s Tale: The One Below)

322 BBY
- Cybot Galactic begins using the Universal Socket Interface when building droids, which allows droid parts between companies to be easily swapped back and forth. (This will later be the socket that connects the heads of both Battle Droids and protocol droids like C-3PO to their bodies . . . )
(conjecture based on HoloNet News, Volume 531, Number 56)

321 BBY
- The single X’Ting hive on Ord Cestus contacts the Republic leadership and offers land on Ord Cestus for a prison facility. Shortly thereafter, once the first prison (the Grand ChikatLik) is built, a group of twelve Cybot Galactica officials are sent to the prison after a series of scandals and tragedy on Etti IV.
(conjecture based on The Cestus Deception)
319 BBY
- The twelve Cybot Galactica officials in prison on Ord Cestus use the prison’s policy of utilizing prisoner skills to strike a deal with the facility’s operators to begin research and fabrication on a line of droid products, using the free labor found in the prison. As this operation grows in size and profits, it will come to be known as Cestus Cybernetics, eventually becoming the de facto rulers of Ord Cestus, pulling the strings of all but the most steadfast of Hive Regents.

(conjecture based on The Cestus Deception)

318 BBY
- Starships and Aerospace Engineers Incorporated is formed.

(conjecture based on Han Solo and the Corporate Sector Sourcebook)

312 BBY
- Berethon e Solo, King of Corellia, introduces democracy to Corellia.

(conjecture based on The Paradise Snare)

311 BBY
- The Kuati Succession Crisis occurs when Kuat Drive Yards’ principal director Ursela Kuat is killed when his star yacht is destroyed along the secret KDY Rothana Route. It will not be until decades later that it is proven that he has been killed by rivals on the KDY directorate.

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

301 BBY
- Vesla is colonized by humans.*

(conjecture based on Ship of Fools)*

*NOTE: This assumes that the story is set shortly after ANH, that the revolution against the Barons is within the year before ANH, and that references to this being “300” years ago and “around 300” years ago can be assumed to be 300 years before the revolution.

300 BBY
- Karia Ver Seryan is born on Kerlsil.

(conjecture based on Ambush at Corellia)
- Spore is defeated by a combination of Ithorians and Jedi Knights and trapped in an asteroid tomb near Ithor.

(conjecture based on Spore)
- The planet Shaum Hii (and its indigenous sentient species, the Kian’thar) is discovered.

(conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 12: Aliens—“Enemies and Allies”)
- The Ho’Din nearly destroy their world, Moltok, through industrialization.

(conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 4: Alien Races)
- Industrialization begins on Kubindi.*

(conjecture based on A Free-Trader’s Guide to the Planets)*

*NOTE: This is an estimate, since the Kubindi section of the article uses local years, not standard years.
- The Harbright family begins serving the Old Republic.*

(conjecture based on The Void Terror)*

*NOTE: The capsule for The Void Terror says the Harbright family served the Old Republic for three centuries. It is unclear whether this means just the Old Republic or the Old Republic and Galactic Empire as it disintegrated into Palpatine’s New Order.
- Growix Computers is founded.

(conjecture based on Han Solo and the Corporate Sector Sourcebook)
- Colonists come to Annaj (known as Cannij Barr by the indigenous Ayrou). They set it up as a scouting base for the Moddell Sector and the backwaters of the Ablajeeck Sector.

(conjecture based on Endor and the Moddell Sector)
- The Jedi that guarded the settlement on Rhamalai finally dies.

(conjecture based on The Occupation of Rhamalai)
• Around this time, the Tchines, seven identical ancient statues known as the Seven Sisters, are discovered. The fate and ownership of each will be tracked with great interest by art collectors for at least the next three centuries.
  (conjecture based on Winner Lose All)
• Thrackian insectoids begin to communicate through their mandibles instead of just smell.
  (conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia)
• The Bothans begin gaining prominence as information brokers.
  (conjecture based on the Essential Guide to Planets and Moons)
• The family line that will one day include Zuckuss begins its long tradition as Findsmen.
  (conjecture based on information found at starwars.com)
• On Orellon II, the base ship sent by an unknown alien species last communicates with its homeworld. Soon, the aliens who sent the ship will be extinct, leaving only their machines to carry on their final orders.
  (conjecture based on The Prophecy)
• An Anx known as the Great Goblin sets the record for kills in the gladiator pits of Loovria, but is soon sold to a Hutt crimelord. He dies of terror during a two-day, companionless journey aboard a Hutt freighter bound for Nal Hutta.
  (conjecture based on The University of Sanbra Guide to Intelligent Life: The Anx)
• The Chazrach, a species of stocky, reptilian humanoids are conquered and enslaved by the Yuuzhan Vong. They become intensely loyal to the Vong, and over time, several Chazrach earn social elevation to the warrior caste for their bravery in combat.
  (conjecture based on Onslaught via TimeTales, abridged)
• The Republic brings Barseg to heel, thereby ending Barseg’s enslavement of the people of Lorrad, though economic conditions do not change much on Lorrad.
  (conjecture based on The History of Xim and the Tion Cluster)
• The pirate cruiser Xim’s Scion, built by Hoersch-Kessel Drive, gets into a skirmish with CorSec forces, during which its engines are nearly destroyed. The wreck is salvaged by Correllians who tow it into an orbit around Corellia’s outermost moon and turn it into a refueling depot. It will eventually be purchased by a Hutt named Gormo Vosadii Grasso, who will add modular expansions and such to the “station,” with the help of Hoersch-Kessel Drive.
  (conjecture based on Sons of Fortune)*
  *NOTE: This rounds “a few centuries ago” to 300 years.
• A dispute over patent rights between the cities Nozho and Weogar on the Bith homeworld ends in a brutal war in which chemical and biological warfare deforms the planet’s ecosystem, forcing Biths to live in sealed domes.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Alien Species)*
  *NOTE: The original EGtAS put this event here with a specific date. The NEgAS (the updated edition) put this at the same time in its timeline, but in its text, it says that this is almost 100 years before the rise of the Empire. I have to assume that the text reference is a mistake in light of the timeline date being repeated in both books.
• The Order of the Kilmar Bange is formed as a social club, however, it will later evolve into a secret society based in Tapani Sector, which is considered harmless during peacetime, but could be the most ferocious of enemies during war. Made up of former House Melantha members who had graduated from the Imperial Academy on Raithal, the Order also accepts associate memberships from Corulag graduates. Their mission is to ensure brotherhood among its members and to strengthen the ties between House Melantha and the Empire, especially during the height of the Galactic Civil War.
  (conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse via TimeTales, verbatim)
• The Techno Union discovers rare metals and ores in the lava flows of Mustafar and purchases the entire world.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)
  *NOTE: Since the present tense of the NEgID seems to be set after Dark Nest, I have rounded “more than three centuries ago” to 300 BBY, since the difference between ANH and DN would account for the “more than” pretty well.
• During a civil war, one faction in the Croke Reach attempt to use Lugubraa as mercenaries against their enemies. The plan backfires, as the Lugubraa become an environmental menace, threatening to eat everything in sight and leading to worries of extinction for the Crokes.*

(conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke Van Horn. This one is somewhat frustrating. The Unknown Regions gives no indication of what it considers to be the “present.” Sometimes, it seems that the present is the era of the Classic Trilogy, while other times it seems that it must be after the events of Legacy. If one considers the span of what we think of as the main bulk of Star Wars (the generations of film characters and their direct descendants’ adventures) as being a sort of unified “present,” then we can try to date backward, but it is a very rough approximation process. This event, for what it’s worth, is “more than 300 years ago” from the unknown perspective of The Unknown Regions. This is only an approximation.

299 BBY
- Gowix Computers sets up shop on Corellia.
  (conjecture based on Galaxywide News Nets supplement in The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #7)

297 BBY
- The empathic Kian'thar race is discovered (and subsequently manipulated) by Black Sun.
  (conjecture based on Shadows of the Empire Sourcebook)

296 BBY
- In the Companion Besh, the Tofs conquer the Nagai’s home planet, Nagi, after the Nagai’s first unmanned hyperspace vessel is spotted by the Tofs and tracked back to Nagi, which is ripe for conquest.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Alien Species)
- The Old Republic makes contact with the Jarell of Oon Tien.
  (conjecture based on The DarkStryder Campaign via TimeTales, paraphrased)

295 BBY
- Jedi Knight Polvin Kut and his Padawan, Yaddle, are called to liberate the Colonies from Tulak, the Advozsec warlock. The campaign leads them to Koba’s outer moon, where Kut, tempted by the Dark Side to get revenge for the murder of his family, is killed in action. Yaddle is captured and held prisoner, and she ends up being left behind when Tulak moves on. (To be continued below . . . )
  (Yaddle’s Tale: The One Below)

Yaddle’s Tale: The One Below [flashback] (SWT5 short story: Dean Motter)

292 BBY
- Mother Rell is born on Dathomir.
  (conjecture based on The Courtship of Princess Leia)
- Old Republic colony ships land on Oon Tien, first encountering the Jarell culture.
  (conjecture based on The DarkStryder Campaign)
  - A small cult forms a settlement on Binaros, building temples to their deity.
    (conjecture based on The DarkStryder Campaign: The Kathol Outback—“Plant Food”)

290 BBY
- The planet Myrkr is discovered by the Old Republic and becomes off-limits.
  (conjecture based on Heir to the Empire)

281 BBY
- On Cejansij, the Grand Rim Promenade is built.
  (conjecture based on Specter of the Past)
280 BBY
- The Ho'Din develop herbal methods of ridding themselves of the parasitic organisms threatening to destroy their species.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 4: Alien Races)

278 BBY
- The Kian'thar attempt to colonize Bestine, but they fail in doing so.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

275 BBY
- The Central Gathering Hall clock on the planet Coruscant is changed. It will now mark time based on atmospheric phenomenon.
  (conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia)
- The jungle barbarian culture on Janquine finally phases out, its language being absorbed by the mountain Mooloolian tribes.
  (conjecture based on Vector Prime)

274 BBY
- The Trade Federation Defense Force is established.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

272 BBY
- The Wookiee Merumeru is born.*
  (conjecture based on The Clone Wars Campaign Guide)*
*NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn. He is 250 during the Clone Wars.
- The cult settlement on Binaros is wiped out by disease.
  (conjecture based on The DarkStryder Campaign: The Kathol Outback—"Plant Food")
- The Naboo royal gown is adorned with various emblems.
  (conjecture based on Episode I: Visual Dictionary)

252 BBY
- Yaruu is born on Kashyyk.
  (conjecture based on Secrets of Kashyyk)

250 BBY
- The beautiful planet Adarlon is settled by the order of the Republic Senate. It is the first planet settled in the Minos Cluster. The settlers are a group of "superior" stock humans, who create the most "beautiful" and "intelligent" colony ever seen.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 6: Tramp Freighters)
- Gelgelar is colonized.
  (conjecture based on Platt’s Starport Guide)
- Colonists from Salliche, led by Adarian Tropis, leaves the planet to search for a new home, eventually finding Varonat.*
  (conjecture based on First Contact)*
*NOTE: Whether the colonists found Varonat the same year that they left is unlikely, but since no date for their arrival on Varonat is listed, that fact is included with their departure date.
- Colonists from Salliche settle on Port Haven.
  (conjecture based on Platt’s Starport Guide)
- By this point, the Trade Federation has almost entirely dropped its original mission of protecting the spacelanes and is instead a full-time advocate for its interests in the Senate.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

248 BBY
- Volume 1, issue 1 of the Byblos Journal of Historical Science, is published.*
The Star Wars Timeline Gold: Legends Timeline, Vol. 1

(conjecture based on Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Praji: A Cartel of Genes)

*NOTE: This is 352 years prior to the issue that includes Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Praji: A Cartel of Genes.

247 BBY
- Bosbit Matarcher is born.
  (conjecture based on HoloNet News, Volume 531, Number 48)

241 BBY
- Ralrracheen is born on Kashyyk.
  (conjecture based on Thrawn Trilogy Sourcebook)

237 BBY
- Around this time, the Falleen known as Trezza is born.
  (conjecture based on Restraint)
*NOTE: He is nearly 200 years old in Restraint and had trained others for half his life. In order to make the split in half simple, I have assumed he is 198 (nearly 200), which lets the 198 split evenly into 99 years.*

236 BBY
- Mexnean is born on Berrite.
  (conjecture based on Wanted by Cracken)

232 BBY
- Supreme Chancellor Valorum is elected.
  (conjecture based on Episode I: Visual Dictionary)
*NOTE: This is an ancestor of the Valorum in TPM, not the same man. It is likely to be either Tarsus, Tullius, or Laeca, all of whom are considered part of the Valorum political dynasty, according to The New Essential Guide to Characters.
- During exploration of the Cularin system, Reidi Artom records her observations on seeing the Sith fortress on Almas from orbit. (To be continued below . . .)
  (Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force [continued])
- The star in the Spiners’ home system goes supernova, destroying the region, including Worxer, the Spiner homeworld. Only a few thousand can be saved by the Republic, as the species has none of its own space-faring technology. Those who survive soon discover that their genes bear a flaw that allows them to only procreate on their homeworld. As such, the species, which begins to be thought extinct, actually starts the slow decline toward extinction as members die off of old age, accidents, and so forth. The Worxi language becomes lost.
  (conjecture based on The Starhoppers of Aduba-3 and Alien Anthology)
- Rori, a moon of Naboo, suffers an outbreak of brainworm. The Naboo Royal Advisory Council commissions the construction of Restuss, a second space port city for the moon.
  (conjecture based on Galaxies: Jump to Lightspeed: Prima Official Game Guide)
NOTE: All information from this strategy guide was submitted by Luke Van Horn.

  The Dark Side [continued]
  Dark Jedi [continued]
  The Dark Jedi Conflict

231 BBY
- Explorer Reidi Artom “discovers” the Cularin system and the native Tarasin with their natural Force attunement. She logs the system as Reidi Artom VI, but a records check reveals the original name of the system, logged by Jedi centuries earlier. Artom helps found the town of Gadrin and works to help link a second town, Hedrett, to it via a great bridge. As she continues to explore, colonists begin to arrive, mainly mining and business interests. Warfare breaks out briefly with the Tarasin, but peace is soon reached. Artom continues her explorations, naming Artom’s Crest on the moon Rannok.
(conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)

*NOTE: I shifted this to 231 BBY from 232 BBY to better fit with the 200th anniversary in A Cularin Presence.

229 BBY

- Republic expeditions into the Gardaji region report only rocky rubble and protoplanets in the region, along with scattered reports that various rich star travel connoisseurs are having special ships made along a de facto trade route through the area. There is no evidence at this time of the existence of the planet Zonama Sekot, which will be rumored to exist until the Jedi Knight Vergere discovers it again in just over two hundred years.

(conjecture based on Rogue Planet)

223 BBY

- The citizens of Ansion (divided between those of the cities and the nomadic Alwari) finally come to an uneasy peace after millennia of warfare. The hatreds and prejudices between them will remain for a long time to come.

(conjecture based on The Approaching Storm)

220 BBY

- The ancient Duros mining city Tayana, situated in the bowl of a meteor crater, reaches its height during the Duros Industrial Age.
  (conjecture based on The University of Sanbra Guide to Intelligent Life: The Duros via TimeTales, verbatim)
- At around this time (or a few years later), a Nikto survey team first discovers the Drongar system.
  (conjecture based on Battle Surgeons)
- The droid known as Solis goes online around this time.
  (conjecture based on Dark Rendezvous)

219 BBY

- Around this time, the Dark Side of the Force begins to gain in power, as the galaxy begins a 200-year slide toward darkness.
  (conjecture based on Labyrinth of Evil)

215 BBY

- According to the Imperial propaganda documents known as The Private Journals of Mace Windu, this is when Mace Windu records an entry about the Korunnai culture. It is likely either faked or made up of edited and otherwise manipulated material from Mace himself. (To be continued below . . . )
  (Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)

  Other Force-Using Organizations [continued]
    Korunnai

212 BBY

- Bosbit Matarcher purchases a Delemedian starhopper and takes it out on an outsystem trip. When he engages the hyperdrive, the faulty relativistic shielding launches him 190 years into the future.
  (conjecture based on HoloNet News, Volume 531, Number 48)

*NOTE: The article suggests that he was 35 when he went into the future (sort of), and he is now 225 years old, but in his quote, Bosbit says it was 200 years later. I chose to assume that he was rounding when he said 200 years.

211 BBY
- The Kian’thar attempt to colonize Bestine again, but they fail in doing so a second time.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

211 BBY
- Alderaan begins using cryodexes as a means of fool-proof encryption of sensitive information. By the time of the Battle of Yavin, 137 will be known to have been created.*
  (conjecture based on Scoundrels)*
  *NOTE: They have been in service for “over two hundred years,” which I have rounded to 210 years.

210 BBY
- Corellian Engineering Corporation releases the YG-4210.*
  (conjecture based on Enter the Unknown)*
  *NOTE: This is “more than two centuries ago” by the time of Enter the Unknown.

207 BBY
- Reiart Artom leaves for the Unknown Regions.
  (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)

206 BBY
- Oppo Rancisis is born to the Blood Monarch of Thisspias. Due to his Force-attunement, he is turned over to the Jedi Order as a baby and later taken by Yaddle as Padawan.*
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Characters)*
  *NOTE: This apprenticeship must take place much later, as Yaddle is still stuck on Koba at this time. The NEGtC notes both this apprenticeship and Yaddle’s time imprisoned, so we are to assume that the Star Wars Tales story is still considered C-Canon, as is this information.

205 BBY
- Sundarian immigrants begin moving to Garos IV and "stealing jobs" from the Garosians.
  (conjecture based on Turning Point)
- Around this time, the Houk attempt to colonize Sriluur, the homeworld of the Weequays. A state of "restless antagonism" begins that will last nearly the next two centuries.*
  (conjecture based on Suns of Fortune)*
  *NOTE: This is “over 200 years ago” as of Edge of the Empire, which I have rounded to 205 years.

201 BBY
- Salporin is born on Kashyykyk.
  (conjecture based on Thrawn Trilogy Sourcebook)

200 BBY
- Chewbacca is born on Kashyykyk to Attichitcuk and his mate.
  (conjecture based on canonical and Official Continuity references)
- Glova is colonized.
  (conjecture based on The Politics of Contraband)
- The planet Bissillirius, located in the Trax system, is discovered by a group of Republic scouts whose hyperdrive cuts out in the middle of nowhere. The scouts are led by Arnoll Draenell, who maps and names each of the five planets which orbit the star.
  (conjecture based on GameMaster Kit via TimeTales, verbatim)
- The Ithullian species is destroyed by a group of warrior (True) Mandalorians after a war over a narcolethe distillery. The Jedi Council does not respond, but several rogue Jedi join with the Bounty Hunters Guild to hunt down and kill the reigning True Mandalore of this era.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Chronology)
- A plague wipes out the civilization of Fere.
  (conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia)
- Humans on Rydar II try to destroy the indigenous Ranat species, eventually leading three Ranats to stow away to Aralia (where the ship crashes) and begin creating a new homeworld.
• A 3-level marketplace is built on Bimmisaari.
  (conjecture based on Heir to the Empire)
• As droid laws start to slacken, BRT supercomputers are introduced as near-omniscient planetary networks. This is a revived attempt at artificial intelligence on behalf of the BRT manufacturer, Aratech, which was also responsible for the ill-fated G0-T0 droids that attempted to break away from the Republic. Many Core Worlds adopt BRT supercomputers, but the outcry from public employees who are unemployed while the supercomputers take over their jobs is so great that most worlds dismantle or unplug their BRTs within a few years. Public dislike of the BRT supercomputers will eventually lead to another new cap on droid brain computing power. The overall failure of the BRT line leads Aratech to focus on repulsorlift technology rather than artificial intelligence, eventually leading the company to be known as Aratech Repulsor Company. Not all of the BRTs are out of service, though. The library of Obroa-skai purchases several BRTs to help organize their information. One such BRT (nicknamed “Mistress Mnemos”) is sent to an Obroa-skai branch on Fusai.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)
• The once-unassuming orange star in the Carosus System expands into a red giant, and consumes the five innermost planets in its system. The event was foreseen by the Carosite astronomers, and most Carosites on the fourth planet were evacuated to Carosi XII.
  (conjecture based on Planes of the Galaxy: Volume Two via TimeTales, abridged)
• AL-BRT-34-X3 is activated.*
  (conjecture based on Cracken’s Rebel Operatives)

  *NOTE: This event has been moved from 201 BBY to 200 BBY to coincide with new information from the NEGtD that puts the creation of the first BRT supercomputers at 200 BBY.
• The Bothan explorer Karka Vri'skar discovers the Dressellians, but the Bothans decide to leave them to their own evolution for the time being. This does, however, create a cultural bond between the Dressellians and the Bothans, so much so that Dressellians adopt the Bothan alphabet in favor or their own native pictographic alphabet, which allows Dresselian literature to spread beyond their homeworld. They also begin to adopt Bothan words for technologies that the pre-industrial Dressellians have no terms for, thereby “tainting” one of the galaxy’s great “romantic languages.”
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Alien Species, The New Essential Guide to Alien Species, and Stay on Target)
• The House Ministry of Inquiry of House Mecetti is formed in the Tapani Sector.
  (conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse via TimeTales, paraphrased)
• The Tiercan Dam is erected on Duro.
  (conjecture based on Gamer #3 via TimeTales, abridged)
• The Tallaan Imperial Shipyards are built.*
  (conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)

  *NOTE: This date goes by the “Most of the orbit docks themselves are over 200 years old” comment made in the LOTE Gamemaster Guide. Since the LOTE campaign takes place 3 ABY, 200 BBY (203 years earlier) made sense for an “over 200 year” date.
• Tor-Ro-Bo Industries and Eeook Mining and Reclamation both rediscover at the same time the planet 244Core. They both establish settlements and begin fighting for control of the planet. The conflict allows other corporations to also attempt control of the planet, leading violence and instability to spiral out of control. Eventually the negotiator Relaali, secretly a member of the Omenada Force tradition, is able to bring the various factions together and broker a peace treaty and a nominal government for the planet.*
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)

  *NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn.

199 BBY
• The Charon extinguish a lifeform and reconstruct it, naming it the “gatebeast.” The gate power harnessed by the Charon is not fully understood, and the Charon bioscientists who program the gatebeast keep its abilities limited. The gatebeast targets a subject and reflects its matter to a new location.
197 BBY
- Reena University is founded.
  (conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)

196 BBY
- Susejo of Choi becomes yet another victim of the Sarlacc on Tatooine.
  (conjecture based on A Barve Like That: The Tale of Boba Fett)
- A merchant prince’s ship is caught in the gravity well of Zelos II during the Day of the Sepulchral Night. The ship is pulled down to crash into Zelosian’s Chine. The prince has his men store the treasure in a cave in the upper regions of the mountain range, until he can build a raft from parts of the ship, head for the mainland, and return for the treasure. The prince builds the raft and heads for the mainland, but dies en route. The treasure remains hidden for the next two centuries.
  (conjecture based on Day of the Sepulchral Night)
- The colonists’ children of the planet Talasea begin immigrating to worlds where they can see the stars and don’t have to work so hard.
  (conjecture based on Rogue Squadron via TimeTales, verbatim)
- Around this time, Yoda, now 700 years old, stops being able to lift all six Muntuur Stones during meditation. He can now only lift five.
  (conjecture based on The Jedi Path)

195 BBY
- By this time, Yaddle, imprisoned on Koba’s outer moon, has become known to the Kobans as “the one below,” and is being given food as a sort of religious ritual. In the time since her imprisonment, she has continued honing her Jedi skills on her own. (To be continued below. . . )
  (Yaddle’s Tale: The One Below)
NOTE: This assumes a 295 BBY date for the death of Polvin Kut.

194 BBY
- The term “spice” gains widespread usage.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 11: Criminal Organizations)
- Around this time, droids, originally using a language called CBell-1 that had only “yes” and “no” sounds, begin to be programmed with the Yperio program created by Yperio Baobab, marking the birth of the Bab-Prime droid language. This new programming is taken in by different models in different ways, causing some of the droids to slowly begin to show emotions more than others, though memory wipes cleared that up in most cases. The Bab-Prime language will later develop into Bab-Neo (also known as Babno).
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Phrase Book and Travel Guide)

192 BBY
- Slavery is abolished in the Hapes Cluster.
  (conjecture based on Cracken’s Threat Dossier)
- Bunkurd Corporation on Coruscant engineers a bacterium that breaks down sewage for recycling 20% faster than previous agents used for the same purpose.
  (conjecture based on Wraith Squadron via TimeTales, abridged)

191 BBY
- The JV-Z1 droid line enters service.
190 BBY
- Vima-Da-Boda, descendant of Andur, Nomi, and Vima Sunrider is born.
  (conjecture based on Dark Empire)
- Around this time, 8t88 is created.*
  (conjecture based on Kyle Katarn’s Tale)*
*NOTE: The droid is “nearly 200” when destroyed by Kyle Katarn. I rounded that to 195 years old.

189 BBY
- The Vors enter the mainstream galactic civilization.
  (conjecture based on Jedi Academy Sourcebook)
- The planet Cyrillia becomes a stop on the Podracing circuit, which brings long-awaited notoriety to their excellent pit droids, which were created centuries earlier.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)

188 BBY
- The Jedi send Master Qornah and his Padawan Kibh Jeen (who is about ready for his trials) to Cularin to keep watch over and study the Sith fortress left by Darth Rivan.  Seduced by the Dark Side energies of the place and the Dark Force religious teachings of the long-dead Darth Millennial, Kibh Jeen falls to the Dark Side and kills Qornah from behind.  He disappears for a few months before returning, ready to lash out at the Jedi Council.  He goes into space and dominates the minds of a large group of pirates, whom he uses to recruit more and more mercenaries and pirates as his own private army.  He launches an all-out assault on the floating cities of Genarius, sparking the Dark Jedi Conflict.
  (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide and Evil Never Dies: The Sith Dynasties)
- The Treaty of Vors is signed.  (Exact date of report via HoloNet News: 153BrS:4:18)
  (conjecture based on HoloNet News, Volume 531, Number 52)

187 BBY
- Krunch is born, probably on Kashyyyk.
  (conjecture based on Cracken’s Rebel Operatives)

185 BBY
- The sister of Oppo Rancisis is killed at the Thisspias alcazar on Ratamesh.  Oppo inherits the throne but abdicates so he can continue his Jedi training.
  (conjecture based on Power of the Jedi Sourcebook)
- Tarfful completes his Hrrtayyk ceremony.  Chewbacca does not attend out of jealousy.
  (conjecture based on Chewbacca and the Slavers of the Shadowlands)
- Chewbacca, now in his Wookiee “teen” years, is jealous of Tarfful, who has just gone through his Hrrtayyk ceremony.  He announces to Ralrra that he intends to go into the Shadowlands to prove himself.  Tarfful arrives and joins Ralrra in trying to talk him out of it, but Chewie refuses to be dissuaded.  Instead, Ralrra, Tarfful, and two of Tarfful’s little students, Saarcheen and Barraak join him.  Once in the Shadowlands, Tarfful claims that Chewie is acting like a fool, rather than an adult, which prompts Chewie to pounce on him.  They fall to a lower level, where they discover a group of slavers, led by the human Nishrah, which includes her goons, Twool and Lix.  The older Wookiees argue over what to do next, but then Lix discovers them.  He kills Barraak.  In the scuffle that follows, the Wookiees escape the three slavers, then Ralraa takes Saarcheen away to safety, while Chewie and Tarfful plan to take out the slavers.  In the battle, the Wookiees manage to get the better of the slavers, for the most part, but the day is truly saved with the arrival of reinforcements sent by Ralrra.  When Lix tries to escape, Chewie goes after him, allowing him to be captured by a huge snake, then refusing to either save him or kill him directly.  Chewie blames himself for Barraak’s death, but it is a lesson that will stay with him for the rest of his life . . . (To be continued below . . .)

(Chewbacca and the Slavers of the Shadowlands)

Star Wars Adventures (comic series: Jeremy Barlow & Tom Taylor & Chris Cerasi)

Chewbacca and the Slavers of the Shadowlands [flashback] (comic: Chris Cerasi)

183 BBY

- The Chiss Ascendancy begins studying the Redoubt.*
  (conjecture based on Survivor's Quest)*
*NOTE: This is said to have taken place “over two hundred years” before SQ, so I put it here, 205 years earlier.

182 BBY

- Ten years before meeting his future codicil wife, Caar Damask leaves his original wife on Muunilinst to manage InterGalactic Banking Clan interests on Mygeeto as a favor to Mals Tonith.*
  (conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)*
*NOTE: See notes with other Darth Plagueis events below, including Hego Damask’s birth, for the rationale behind this date.

181 BBY

- The Dark Jedi Conflict in the Cularin System finally ends when a Jedi and her Padawan come to the system and organize a counteroffensive against Kibh Jeen’s hidden forces. His pirate fleet is destroyed, and Kibh himself is killed. While dying, Jeen rants about there always being no more or less than two Sith. From this, the Jedi learn of the Sith “Rule of Two.”*
  (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide and Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)*
*NOTE: I had originally placed this at 186 BBY, but Jedi vs. Sith says that this is seven years after the beginning of the Dark Jedi Conflict.

180 BBY

- A Republic-backed soldier on Guiteica tries to lead a coup against the Bitthaevrian leaders on Guiteica. His failure leads to an all-out rebellion of the Bitthaevrians against the Republic in the Kadok Regions. The Republic tries to keep the situation contained by convincing the Kaleesh of Kalee that their own world is in peril at the hands of the Bitthaevrians. They arm and train Kaleesh warriors and send them into battle with the Bitthaevrian m’Yalfor’ac Order. Alongside Jedi Knights, the Kaleesh manage to keep the threat contained.*
  (conjecture based on The Story of General Grievous: Lord of War)*
*NOTE: This date is “decades” before the outbreak of the Huk War, which is conjectured to start around 150 BBY, based on conjectural dates for Grievous’ birth. Take this placement with a grain of salt, as it is highly conjectural. Even with just the few vague references that we have to these events (and the fact that General Grievous’ great-grandmother participated in them), we can only assume that this is not the same event as covered in the Special Military Unit Intelligence Update.

177 BBY

- The Jedi form an academy on Almas to both train future Jedi and keep an eye on the Sith fortress left by Darth Rivan. The town of Forard begins to grow up around the academy.*
  (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide and Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)*
*NOTE: I had originally placed this in 186 BBY, but JvS:TEGttF pins it down to 11 years after the arrival of Qornah and Kibh Jeen in 188 BBY.

175 BBY

- Starfighter combat comes to replace blaster sword combat in the eyes of honor-seeking citizens on Adumar.*
  (conjecture based on Starfighters of Adumar)

171 BBY
• A lone Jedi, Master Yoda, comes to the planet Ord Cestus and saves the X’Ting in their hour of need.
  (conjecture based on The Hive)

170 BBY
• H’kig pilgrims establish a foothold on Bestine, despite two previous Kian’thar efforts to colonize that failed.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

166 BBY
• Darth Tenebrous’ Twi’lek Sith Master causes a rend in the Force that makes the Jedi aware of the Dark Side (and the Sith, in theory) for the first time in 800 years. This begins the Grand Plan. He does so by essentially shrinking the influence of the Light Side that had been growing due to the presence of so many Jedi in the Republic.
  (conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)

161 BBY
• On Cularin, the Tarasin Revolt begins, when native Tarasin begin to verbally (then violently) protest the harvesting of ch’hal trees by outsiders. When the Trade Federation sends droids to fight on their behalf, full-scale conflict erupts.
  (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)

160 BBY
• Around this time (or a bit before), the Joyous Ranger asteroid tug is acquired by the Kaeg family.*
  (conjecture based on Crucible)*

*NOTE: It has been in his family for “over 200 years” in Crucible, which I have approximated to 205 years.
• After seeing him in action, Mallatobuck falls in love with Chewbacca. Her friend, Jowdrrl, tells her to drop a wroshyr louse in Chewie’s fur so she can groom his fur clean (in human terms, bathe him, etc.) by way of apology, and serious flirtation. She misses and the louse hits Chewie’s friend Dryanta. When they follow the girls to see about the traditional grooming, they come across Jowdrrl, who tells them that Malla has been captured by Trandoshans. Chewie springs into action and saves Malla, starting their long, often segmented, courtship.
  (To be continued below . . . )*
  (Chewbacca)*

*NOTE: This story is placed here due to Malla’s comment that Chewie was under 100 years old at this time. Since he seemed to not have left Kashyyyk at this time, I placed it here.

Chewbacca (comic series: Darko Macan)*
  Chewbacca, Part I [flashback] (comic: Darko Macan)*
  Chapter 1: Mallatobuck [flashback]*

*NOTE: See note with summary above.

158 BBY
• Orn Belden is born.
  (conjecture based on Truce at Bakura)
• Veermoks are brought to the quarry that Gungans use for punishment on Naboo.*
  (conjecture based on Rescue in the Core)*

*NOTE: This assumes the higher end of the “20 – 25 years is a generation” estimate, and rounds “several generations” to 5 generations.

154 BBY
• On Cularin, the Tarasin Revolt ends when two Jedi Knights and six-months of diplomacy bring about the Cularin Compact, limiting tree harvesting on the world.
  (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)
153 BBY
- Chalmun is born.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 7: Mos Eisley)

150 BBY
- Bakura is discovered by followers of the Cosmic Balance that are marginally part of Bakur Corporation, based on Hemei IV. The planet is first settled as a place to get away from the lure of wealth and to be self-sufficient. It is a major mining operation until the minerals play out and the corporation gives up on the planet. The first Prime Minister is Deredith Arden.
  (conjecture based on Truce at Bakura Sourcebook and Geonosis and the Outer Rim Worlds)
- Chewbacca leaves Kashyyyk to explore.
  (conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia)
- Generations before the birth of Gymaen jai Sheelal (General Grievous), the Yam'rii species from the planet Huk begins colonizing neighboring worlds, including Abbaji and Tovarskl. They eventually come to the neighboring planet Kalee, where they enslave the indigenous Kaleesh species. This begins the so-called Huk War.*
  (conjecture based on Unknown Soldier: The Story of General Grievous)*
*NOTE: We have no set birthdate for General Grievous at this point, so I conjectured it to be at 59 BBY, which is 30 years before he becomes a cyborg. Since this event happens “generations” before his birth, I put it at a rounded 150 BBY.
- On Wukkar, the Marblewood estate, later owned by Avrak Villachor, is built as the new home for the sector governor. It is built in the shape of the Aurebesh letter aurek, as the governor’s wife’s name begins with that letter.
  (conjecture based on Scoundrels)
- Lorgrombo begins the splitting stage of Lugubraa life.*
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*
*NOTE: Information provided by Luke Van Horn. This one is somewhat frustrating. The Unknown Regions gives no indication of what it considers to be the “present.” Sometimes, it seems that the present is the era of the Classic Trilogy, while other times it seems that it must be after the events of Legacy. If one considers the span of what we think of as the main bulk of Star Wars (the generations of film characters and their direct descendants’ adventures) as being a sort of unified “present,” then we can try to date backward, but it is a very rough approximation process. For what it’s worth, this is the first stage of the Lugubraa life cycle, and he is “more than 150 years old” as of The Unknown Regions’ nebulous “present.” This is therefore only an approximation.

149 BBY
- Sonnds is born on Hijado.
  (conjecture based on Millennium Falcon)

147 BBY
- Kijo Mnuue is born.
  (conjecture based on Cracken’s Rebel Operatives)
- Ozz, future King of the Ugnaughts of Cloud City is born.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 3: The Empire Strikes Back via TimeTales, verbatim)
- Incom and Sublight Products (Subpro) begin working together on starship development projects.
  (conjecture based on HoloNet News, Volume 531, Number 46)

145 BBY
- The Third General Survey begins to explore the spiral arms. (Exact date of report via HoloNet News: 110BrS:4:18)
  (conjecture based on HoloNet News, Volume 531, Number 52)
- The Third General Survey for the Old Republic discovers the Quella race.
  (conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia)
- When tectonic shifts open an exit to her underground prison, Yaddle once again rejoins Koban society, acting as the society’s benefactor, as a Light Side Jedi should. (To be Yaddle’s Tale: The One Below [flashback] [continued] (SWT5 short story: Dean Motter)

144 BBY

- The family that will produce the Rutanian ruler King Fane comes into power on Rutan.
  (conjecture based on The Shattered Peace)

143 BBY

- On Belasco, tunnels are built through the royal grounds, as war with a neighboring planet ensues.
  (conjecture based on The Dangerous Rescue)

142 BBY

- The Dogder family begins to serve the Hutts as counselors.
  (conjecture based on Hutt and Seek)
- The paternal grandfather of the future Colonel Geptun leaves his Korun ghosh in the jungles of Haruun Kal and begins to live in “polite society” among the Balawai of the capitol city, Pelek Baw.
  (conjecture based on Shatterpoint)

140 BBY

- The Quella are extinguished by asteroids hitting their homeworld.
  (conjecture based on Before the Storm)

138 BBY

- Around this time, the Falleen known as Trezza begins training mercenaries and paramilitaries.*
  (conjecture based on Restraint)*

*NOTE: He is nearly 200 years old in Restraint and had trained others for half his life. In order to make the split in half simple, I have assumed he is 198 (nearly 200) in Restraint, which lets the 198 split evenly into 99 years, putting the start of that training here.

132 BBY

- Around this time, Caar Damask has been hiding his Force abilities, but they have been noticed by his business contact Rugess Nome (who Caar does not realize is Darth Tenebrous, a Sith Lord). Tenebrous arranges for a woman who had been a disciple of Sith teachings (but not an apprentice due to low ability) to romance, marry, and conceive a child with Caar, expecting their offspring to be a powerful Force user that he can use in the future.*
  (conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)*

*NOTE: See the date next year with Hego Damask’s birth for the rationale for this event. I am assuming conception this year and birth the next year.

- The planet Orax is discovered by the Old Republic.
  (conjecture based Alien Encounters: The Shard)
- Omo Bouri, a Wol Cabbashite Jedi Master, orchestrates the famed Treaty of Trammis.
  (conjecture based on information posted on starwars.com via TimeTales, verbatim)
- The Terr’skir Pass is established.
  (conjecture based on Gamemaster Kit via TimeTales, abridged)
- An expedition to Rennokk, a moon of Cularin, ends with the deaths of everyone involved except a Tarasin named Kum’Jushkin.
  (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)
- A Trandoshan named Tusskrek accompanies an expedition to Rannokk, a moon of Cularin, to find a way to tap the moon’s rich minerals. When a lava creature attacks the team, only Tusskrek survives.
Having recently become patriarch of his family upon his father's death, and proving himself wise for his age, Yarua becomes Kashyyyk's primary representative in the Galactic Senate.

The Jedi Order expels Leor Hal, who has argued that the Force is inherently good, without having an actual "Dark Side." He founds the so-called "Potentium" philosophy. His followers renounce the need for Jedi Masters and actual training and are rooted out by the Jedi Order. The Potentium's followers are dispersed throughout the galaxy.

NOTE: Rogue Planet had suggested this taking place at 129 BBY, but JvS:TEGttF has pinned it down to 132 BBY.

131 BBY

Around this time, Caar Damask and his codicil wife have a child, Hego Damask, who will come to be Darth Plagueis.

NOTE: As of 66 BBY, Plagueis has been Tenebrous' apprentice for a period equivalent to an average human life span. I have assumed this to be 50 years in the Star Wars universe, due to an issue discussed below in an entry when he kills Kerred Santhe (91 BBY). That begins his apprenticeship in 116 BBY. The meeting when he is introduced to Darth Tenebrous and the deal is struck that will make him Tenebrous' apprentice is five years before that (121 BBY). Given that the Sith are not using children as apprentices anymore at this point, I am assuming that Hego is at least 15 when he is an apprentice and at least 10 when the deal is struck. That puts his birth here in 131 BBY. We are not provided with an age for Hego, but those are my best estimates, particularly given that only two other events are referenced for him during his time on Mygeeto (at ages 4 and 8).

Byrch Dyshkava is born.

Sorgoth the Evocii is born.

NOTE: This is dated back 150 years from Tempest Feud, if we can assume that Tempest Feud dates remain somewhat accurate, given that the story was supplanted by its novelization, Scourge.

The newest trees (as of 31 BBY) in the Sacred Ch'hala tree grove on Cularin, begin life.

As anti-droid sentiments grow, the Coalition of Automaton Rights Activists is formed.

130 BBY

Around this time, the Jedi begin noticing a flux in the Force, noting a shift toward darkness. Yoda, among other Jedi, begins to believe that this heralds the coming of the Chosen One sometime in the near future, as the gathering darkness can only mean a confrontation to bring balance to the Force, as one ancient prophecy foretold.

The Free Enterprise, a colony ship from Eriadu carrying Jinda and Tulgah settlers, crashes on the Endor moon. The survivors are the source of the Jinda and Tulgah populations later found on the moon.

NOTE: Information provided by Luke van Horn.

129 BBY

Illegal sports activities begin in the garbage pit areas of Coruscant.

The small, ancient world of Langhesa is overrun by Tsinimals. The Tsinimals, graceful and intolerant, had regarded the Langhesi's vital arts as a sin against their gods. Piracy and galaxy-wide conquest, however, had not bothered the Tsinimal gods in the least. The Langhesi who avoid becoming slaves migrate all over the galaxy, becoming artists and farmers, learning how to mold the elements of life into new and novel forms.
128 BBY

- Eppie Antruse is born.
  (conjecture based on Truce at Bakura)

127 BBY

- Hego Damask (age 4) begins to discover that his is different from other children. He will begin to exhibit Force abilities, turning his playmates into playthings, while trying to keep his abilities secret from others.*
  (conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)*

*NOTE: See the 131 BBY entry for Hego Damask's birth for the rationale behind this date. This happens before he is 5, making it reasonable to assume he is 4.

124 BBY

- Hego Damask (age 7) has trained himself well enough that he can now walk uncovered in the Mygeeto storms without needing protection from the elements.*
  (conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)*

*NOTE: See the 131 BBY entry for Hego Damask's birth for the rationale behind this date. This happens before he is 8, making it reasonable to assume he is 5.

- This year, Senate representation for so-called “functional constituencies” (i.e. not actual sectors) is extended to include the Republic’s eldest guilds and megacorporations, such as the Mining Guild, Trade Federation, and Bureau of Ships and Services. The Outer Rim is also declared a free trade zone (until taxation of trade routes becomes an issue again the year before the Battle of Naboo).
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

122 BBY

- The podracing events that have been held on Cyrillia now move to Baroonda. However, the time spent on Cyrillia has brought attention to the Cyrillian pit droids. Serv-O-Droid links up with the Cyrillians to provide money and support to create more of the droids, while the Cyrillians put in the labor for a share of the profits.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)

121 BBY

- Kare Fontin is born.
  (conjecture based on Gamemaster Handbook)
- Meysen Kayson is born.*
  (conjecture based on The Greel Wood Haven)*

*NOTE: This assumes that the information in The Greel Wood Haven is current as of SW4.

- Around this time, Caar Damask is approached by Rugess Nome (Darth Tenebrous) about his son, Hego Damask, who has started to exhibit powerful Force abilities. In return for moving Caar into the upper levels of the InterGalactic Banking Clan, Caar will give Hego to Nome (to be Tenebrous’ apprentice). Five years will pass before Caar’s elevation and Hego’s official indoctrination as the new Sith apprentice.*
  (conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)*

*NOTE: As of 66 BBY, Plagueis has been Tenebrous’ apprentice for a period equivalent to an average human life span. I have assumed this to be 50 years in the Star Wars universe (see 91 BBY). This meeting was five years before that apprenticeship begins in 116 BBY.

- Over the next hundred years, starting around this time, plagues (presumably introduced into X’Ting society by Cestus Cybernetics) begin to ravage the native populations of Ord Cestus, effectively leaving Cestus Cybernetics as the planet’s de facto rulers. Knowing that this Great Purge was released by Cestus Cybernetics against the X’Ting royal bloodline, the X’Ting leaders seal several unharmed royal eggs in a vault, where they intend to keep the royal bloodline safe, so that even if all current X’Ting die off, the royals might once again procreate and rebuild their society. In lieu of having royalty leading them, once the plagues do indeed take out the living royals, the Hive Council and a Regent rule the X’Ting, until the day of the royals' return.
   (conjecture based on The Cestus Deception)
• Around this time (roughly 60 years before Hego Damask takes an interest in Naboo and during the last conflict between Naboo and Gungans), the royal family of Naboo (the Palpatines) make a secret deal with mercenaries to intervene on behalf of the Naboo against the Gungans if the tide of the conflict turns against them. This ends up being unnecessary, but the fact that outsiders were to be brought in will be something that can be used against the Palpatine family later. As it turns out, some of those supporting the Palpatine family are those who will eventually be on opposite political sides: House Tapalo and House Veruna. Upon learning of this, Cosigna Palpatine’s father (Darth Sidious’ grandfather) will challenge Bon Tapalo’s father to a duel, which Tapalo will win.
   (conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)

120 BBY
• Ugloste is born on Gentes.
   (conjecture based on Special Edition Sourcebook)
• The stasis booth is developed.
   (conjecture based on Han Solo and the Corporate Sector Sourcebook)
• Around this time, the Republic first visits Elom and encounters the Elomin race. They have no knowledge yet of the Elom that are being used as slave labor.*
   (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Alien Species)*
*NOTE: The Alien Anthology would put this around 132 BBY, but the NEGtAS puts it at 120 BBY. I’m using that latter source.

119 BBY
• Nerra Ziveri, a Twi’lek Jedi Master, is placed in charge of the Jedi Academy on Almas. It is during his time in charge here that he will come to train Lanius Qel-Bertuk
   (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)
• A century before the fall of the Republic, a wealthy Esselian, Cassander Tadrin, invests in survey droids, claiming several worlds in the Outer Rim, to which he moves himself, his employees, and their families. This new region is known as the Cassandran Worlds, and the dominant planet in those worlds is Casssander’s Star, which will eventually be referred to instead as “Cassander.” The Cassandran Worlds will eventually grow to include New Bakstre, Minashee, Blita, Forsen, Garqi, Isiring, Monhudle, and others.
   (conjecture based on Geonosis and the Outer Rim Worlds)
• Around this time, Dark Side prophets at a Sith temple on the planet Thule have visions of Thule’s role in the future of the galaxy. They are seeing visions of when Count Dooku will come for the Dark Reaper.
   (conjecture based on Geonosis and the Outer Rim Worlds)
• In the last century of the Republic (beginning here, presumably), the Harch join in supporting Ando in its struggle against the Andoan Free Colonies.
   (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

118 BBY
• The Garosian War ends with a treaty, which will be violated for years.
   (conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia)
• Some Mid Rim sectors are also exempted from the taxes and such that the declaration of the Outer Rim free trade zone six years earlier exempted the Outer Rim from.
   (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

116 BBY
• Around this time, Hego Damask becomes the Sith Apprentice to Darth Tenebrous (Rugess Nome). Hego’s mother goes missing, possibly killed by Tenebrous. His father, Caar Damask, is recalled from Mygeeto to Muunilinst to become Director of the Treasury Branch of the InterGalactic Banking Clan. Hego himself will come to be known as Darth Plagueis.*
The Trade Federation uses its business savvy to gain control of all legal trade in the Cularin system.

On Orax, the Republic finally makes contact with the crystalline lifeforms known as the Shard. A few of the Shard beings merge with Republic droids, creating a new hybrid being, a sort of conscious droid.

The starship known as the Woebegone enters service. It is about half a century old when Darth Plagueis steals it.

Damask Holdings begins occupying one of Harnaidan’s most magnificent superspires on Muunilinst. The company has done so for “more than fifty years” as of the opening of Chapter 9 of Darth Plagueis.

The Galactic Games are founded as a way to promote peace amongst its contestant worlds.

Around this time, Hego Damask (Darth Plagueis) learns the truth about his birth and the deal that was brokered between his father, Caar Damask, and Darth Tenebrous to make him Tenebrous’ apprentice.

The Galactic Games are founded as a way to promote peace amongst its contestant worlds.

Magan is born on Hijado.
On Cularin, the exiled Riboga the Hutt merges criminal interests in the area into his own crime syndicate. His operation soon comes into conflict with a rival organization run by local pirates, known as the Smuggler's Confederation.

(conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)

- The Blood Carver species joins the Republic.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Alien Species)

- The last resort satellite in the Gilatter system goes out of business.
  (conjecture based on Exile)

108 BBY
- Haninum Tyk Rhinann is born on Elom.
  (conjecture based on Jedi Twilight)

- The Gungans cease using the quarry for punishment.*
  (conjecture based on Rescue in the Core)*

*NOTE: This assumes that a generation is about 20 – 25 years for Gungans, just like we're assuming with the “for over a thousand generations” comment. In this case, the quarry was unused for “over three generations,” so I chose the far end estimate of three generations being 75 years, and let the “over” just imply the far end.

107 BBY
- Waglin is born around this time.*
  (conjecture based on Millennium Falcon)*

*NOTE: He is “at least” 150 years old by 43 ABY.

106 BBY
- Bohhuah Muttah is born.
  (conjecture based on Lando Calrissian and the Flamewind of Oseon)

105 BBY
- Durga the Hutt is born to Aruk.
  (conjecture based on The Hutt Gambit)

- Weston Warsheld of House Calipsa is born.
  (conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)

- Kinnin Vo-Shay is born.*
  (conjecture based on The Last Hand)*

*NOTE: The Last Hand suggests he'd be just over 100 years old when that story takes place, if the incident in the Tyus Cluster hadn't happened. I took “just over” to be about 105 years old.

- The Molpol Traveling Circus begins.*
  (conjecture based on Millennium Falcon)*

*NOTE: It was about 100 years old by the time that Vistal Purn joins around 5 BBY.

104 BBY
- Xizor of House Sizhran is born on Falleen, the only son of King Haxim, a provincial ruler.

- The future landlady of Denetrus is born on Telos.
  (conjecture based on The Day of Reckoning)

- Around this time, the Bright Tree Village begins using the Sun Crystal as a symbol of bravery in its ceremonies.
  (conjecture based on The Black Cavern)

103 BBY
- At this time, the copy of the Jedi textbook known as The Jedi Path that was once owned by Yoda and now owned by Thame Cerulian is stored away, no longer in use by Thame but still owned by him.
  (conjecture based on The Jedi Path and comments by Dan Wallace on his blog)
102 BBY
- Dooku is born on Serenno
  (conjecture based on Dark Rendezvous)

*NOTE: Dark Rendezvous says that Dooku is 83 during that story, which would suggest a birthdate of 103 BBY, but Leland Chee (and Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force) agrees with other sources, such as Legacy of the Jedi, which put his birthdate here in 102 BBY. We can only assume that the Yoda: Dark Rendezvous age is a mistake, as the numbers cannot work out correctly if he is born this year.
- Lorian Nod is born.
  (conjecture based on Legacy of the Jedi)
- BLX-5 "Bollux" is first activated.
  (conjecture based on Han Solo and the Corporate Sector Sourcebook)
- The Andoan Free Colonies are founded.
  (conjecture based on HoloNet News, Volume 531, Number 49)

101 BBY
- BLX-5 "Bollux" receives a memory wipe and new physical augmentations.
  (conjecture based on Han Solo and the Corporate Sector Sourcebook)

100 BBY
- The Golden Age of the Old Republic ends
  (conjecture based on canonical and Official Continuity references)
- Rendili StarDrive hits its peak.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Vehicles and Vessels)
- The Gungans on Naboo call up their first Grand Army to fight off unidentified offworld invaders. It will be the last time they are called upon until the Battle of Naboo.
  (conjecture based on Galactic Battlegrounds and The New Essential Guide to Alien Species)
- The planet Lianna (part of the Tion Hegemony) is taken over by Sienar Technologies, which is soon renamed Santhe/Sienar Technologies when Kerrad Santhe, a local, buys enough stocks in the company to control it.
  (conjecture based on Mission to Lianna)
- Around this time is the last time that the safe room built into the governor’s palace on Poln Major will be used until the kidnapping of Bidor Ferrouz’ family a century from now.
  (conjecture based on Choices of One)
- Impervium armor is introduced.
  (conjecture based on Soldiers of the Empire!)
- Pergitor becomes uninhabitable due to the mining operations of Jessa Corp.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 7: Mos Eisley)
- The Astral Jester’s captain files dozens of false flight plans and travels through supposedly secret hyperspace routes into the Deep Core. He apparently discovers the wreckage of Jedi Master Val Isa’s Sanctuary in the Koler system, but he never returns from the journey.
  (conjecture based on Lessons from the Past)
- Clan warfare on Ammuud ends.
  (conjecture based on Han Solo’s Revenge and Han Solo and the Corporate Sector Sourcebook)
- The Kaminoans transport aiwhas and colo claw fish from Naboo to be genetically altered and cloned on Kamino. The aiwhas are made resistant to electricity, so that they can survive the frequent lightning on Kamino, while the colo claw fish is developed into a more vicious version known as the “saberjowl.”
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Alien Species)

NOTE: This is sometime in the relatively recent past, as of the end of the Swarm War, but since they are in common use as of the Clone Wars, I’ve just assumed they can be said to come to Kamino around 100 years before Yavin.
- On Goroth Prime, the mining settlement of J’Lan is hit by a mega-earthquake.
  (conjecture based on Goroth: Slave of the Empire via TimeTales, paraphrased)
- The Poss’Nomin species is first encountered by a party of spice traders, who have happened to investigate Illarreen. The culture had grown into several warring nations, but the appearance of offworlders ends the warfare as the Poss’Nomin must determine, as a species, how to react to the notion of otherworldly life.

(conjecture based on Alien Encounters supplement in The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #14)

• The Kubaz on Kubindi develop atomic technology.*

(conjecture based on A Free-Trader’s Guide to the Planets)*

(NOTE: This is an estimate, since the Kubindi section of the article uses local years, not standard years.

• The Jedi vessel Alpha Kentrum crashes on Orellon II. Upon meeting the locals and seeing the strange alien devices collecting species samples, he gives a prophecy to the local Kentra that someday in the future, a starship will arrive and its passengers will save them from the machines, prompting a new age of their society. The Jedi presumably dies soon after.

(conjecture based on The Prophecy)

• On Tatooine, the Dowager Queen crashes. The survivors, led by Melnea Arnthout, head for their original intended landing point, Bestine Point.

(conjecture based on Secrets of Tatooine)

99 BBY

• Arriving at Bestine Point, the crew of the crashed Dowager Queen, led by Melnea Arnthout, establish the settlement that will be known as Bestine on Tatooine. Shortly thereafter, Melnea’s protocol droid goes missing. Upon finding the droid, Melnea makes first contact with the Jawas, from whom the colonists learn the indigenous species’ name for the world “Taa-doo-Een-e,” or “Tatooine.” She quickly negotiates with the Jawas for salvage rights to the Dowager Queen, water rights, and more.

(conjecture based on Secrets of Tatooine)

• Starting now and over the next 100 years, small mining operations attempt to set up on Xorrn and profit from its rich mineral deposits, but the planet’s unstable tectonics and the high startup costs of such a venture will instead earn the planet a reputation as a credit sink and not worth the effort.

(conjecture based on Friends Like These)

98 BBY

• Mix Liddell is born.

(conjecture based on Bartyn’s Landing)

97 BBY

• Ranulph Tarkin is born on Eriadu. He will make a name for himself in business quite early, then join the Seswenna Defense Forces, also earning quite a reputation.

(conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

• A droid uprising on Bakura occurs as a result of the sabotage of a ship full of droids by the H’Lokk Consortium. This will engender a fear of droids in the Bakurans for a century to come.

(conjecture based on Truce at Bakura Sourcebook)

• House Barnaba is pulled into the mainstream political intrigue of the Tapani Sector.

(conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)

• Eppie Antruse and Orn Belden are married.

(conjecture based on Truce at Bakura Sourcebook)

96 BBY

• Corruption begins to breed within the Old Republic government.

(conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia)

• On Tatooine, as water supplies dwindle for Bestine, Fort Tusken is established, named after an island on Bestine IV.

(conjecture based on Secrets of Tatooine)
• The coin known as the Karltonian Fiskin is first minted.
  (conjecture based on The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #11 via TimeTales, paraphrased)

95 BBY
• On Lhwekk, homeworld of the Ssi-ruuvi Imperium, a new political ruler, the Shreeftut of Lhwekk, seizes power and begins an aggressive campaign to expand the Imperium at the expense of other civilizations.
  (conjecture based on Truce at Bakura Sourcebook)
• Around this time, the A280 C heavy blaster rifle is produced by BlasTech Industries.*
  (conjecture based on Forged in Battle)*
*NOTE: It has been in production “for nearly a century” as of the present of Forged in Battle, shortly after ANH. I have rounded that to 95 BBY.
• The insectoid T’kkrpks species undergoes the Great Reconciliation, during which they begin keeping time via Galactic Standard. At this time, T’Chtrrk, who will participate in the Battle of Mindor, is already an adult.
  (conjecture based on Luke Skywalker and the Shadows of Mindor)
• Riboga the Hutt begins having a secret asteroid base built in the Cularin system.
  (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)
• Fort Tusken on Tatooine is attacked by Sand People, earning them the name Tusken Raiders.
  (conjecture based on Secrets of Tatooine)
• Jedi youngling Dooku (age 7) encounters Yoda in the Jedi Temple garden. Yoda has him telekinetically move a unique (only one of its kind on Coruscant) plant from a walking path into the soil, purposely neglecting to tell him facts about the soil and pot. This is done to teach Dooku the lesson about his own noble heritage that a burden is only as heavy as one imagines, and with the Force, any burden can be lifted.*
  (conjecture based on Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)*
*NOTE: At one point, this entry had a typo in its second sentence that had Dooku lifting not a plant, but a planet. Now that would have been impressive! (My thanks to Andrew Gilbertson for catching the error.)

94 BBY
• Jafer Torles is born.
  (conjecture based on Hero of Cartao: Hero’s Call)
• Wyle Ulbreck is born.
  (conjecture based on Kenobi)
• Quintama is killed during the 21st Battle of Zehava, leaving behind his wife Pinani and several children.
  (conjecture based on Defenders of the Dead via TimeTales, abridged, and fixed for new dating based on Deceptions)
• Jedi Master T’un begins keeping records for the Jedi Temple on Coruscant.
  (conjecture based on The Uncertain Path)
• Telos experiences a famine.
  (conjecture based on The Day of Reckoning)
• At the age of nine, Dooku wins the Twelve-and-Under Tournament at the Jedi Temple.
  (conjecture based on Dark Rendezvous)

93 BBY
• Around this time, Dragomir Chlorus is born.*
  (conjecture based on Lockdown)*
*NOTE: He is “at least sixty” during Lockdown.
• Mining colonies are established on Nurstin.
  (conjecture based on Gamemaster Kit via TimeTales, paraphrased)
• Riboga the Hutt’s asteroid base is completed.
  (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)
- On Tatooine, a new wave of colonists re-establishes Anchorhead. The sandpeople seem to go into hiding, while Anchorhead profits from the use of sandcrawlers.
  (conjecture based on Secrets of Tatooine)
- Developers commission a space station to study the Gandle Ott region. Within months of entering the region, the station disappears, with all crew lost. Later research would indicate that the station had been hijacked by pirates and criminals and taken to their base planet as a way to study the Known Galaxy.*
  (conjecture based on The DarkStryder Campaign: The Kathol Outback—"Wildfire")*
*NOTE: This assumes "over 100 years ago" can be rounded to 101 years before TDC:TKO.

92 BBY
- Qui-Gon Jinn is born. Shortly thereafter, he is taken to the Jedi Temple for training.
  (conjecture based on Legacy of the Jedi)
- Tahl is born.
  (conjecture based on The Death of Hope)
- Ki-Adi-Mundi is born on Cerea.
  (conjecture based on Episode I: Insider's Guide)
- The Halmud mining center fails.
  (conjecture based on Iron Fist)
- Danoor is colonized.
  (conjecture based on The DarkStryder Campaign: The Kathol Outback—"Galaxy's Edge")

91 BBY
- Finis Valorum, future Chancellor of the Republic, is born.
  (conjecture based on Terence Stamp’s age in relation to the filming and release of The Phantom Menace via TimeTales, verbatim)
- Qui-Gon Jinn begins his Jedi training.*
  (conjecture based on Episode I: Insider’s Guide and The Rising Force)*
*This is based on Qui-Gon starting his training at the age of one, and is thus also derived from the age of Qui-Gon given in the very specifically-dated Legacy of the Jedi.
- A ship full of marauders from Sanyassa crashes on the Forest Moon of Endor. They would remain there harassing the other local species for the next century, until defeated by the Ewoks and their human allies, Cindel Towani and Noa Briqualon. Around this same time, a Dathomiri Nightsister named Charal abandons the Nightsisters with a death mark on her head. In her flight from Dathomir, she soon finds herself on the Forest Moon of Endor, joining with King Terak’s marauders. She has taken the Talisman of the Raven with her, which will allow her to change shape.*
  (conjecture based on The Illustrated Star Wars Universe: Endor Entry, Endor and the Moddell Sector, and Book of Sith)*
*NOTE: In the ISWU entry dated approximately 3.25 – 4 ABY, it is said that the marauders crashed nearly a century before. 95 was a nice round number to use.
- Twenty-five years into his apprenticeship to Darth Tenebrous, Darth Plagueis carries out his first mission for his Sith Master. In his alter ego of starship designer Rugess Nome, Tenebrous has attempted to gain leverage over Santhe Corporation by offering Kerred Santhe rights to a Nome-designed starship. He was outmaneuvered, though, and the designs were simply stolen by Santhe Security. This gave Santhe enough success when the ship was released to gain control of Sienar Technologies and Republic Sienar Systems, creating Santhe/Sienar Systems. Narro Sienar has only been able to keep his chief designer position by marrying Santhe’s youngest daughter. Narro has also struck a deal with Tenebrous to exact revenge. At a dinner to which Hego Damask (Plagueis) is invited as head of Damask Holdings, Plagueis uses a dinner of bloateel (highly poisonous) as a cover to use the Dark Side to choke Kerred Santhe. Santhe is effectively neutralized, though his body (with replacement organs) will be frozen in carbonite for preservation. This is Plagueis’ first kill for Tenebrous, and while attempts are made at retribution against Tenebrous (as Nome), none will succeed until over a century later, when forces loyal to the Santhe family join with members of the Gran Protectorate in an attempt to kill Plagueis (as Hego Damask) on Coruscant.*

(conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)*

NOTE: As of 66 BBY, Plagueis has been Tenebrou's apprentice for a period equivalent to an average human life span. I originally assumed "an average human life span" to be 100 years in the Star Wars universe, but it must be something more like 50 because this is 25 years after that. The only way for that to make sense with Kerred Santhe being alive and active in 100 BBY is for Plagueis to have become Tenebrous' apprentice no earlier than 125 BBY, which would mean that he kills Santhe the same year that he is active on Lianna. Even that extreme, though, would make Plagueis the apprentice for a mere 59 years. I am therefore rounding to 50 years for the apprenticeship, which puts this even there, 25 years into that apprenticeship, which would begin in 116 BBY. That still only allows Santhe 9 years between his activities described in Mission to Lianna and his death, prior to which he must have borne the son, Kerred Santhe II, mentioned when Plagueis catches Santhe's card cheat in the novel. Sheesh! (My thanks to Sifs Mainas for pointing out the Mission to Lianna contradiction that made me start researching this again and breaking out the ol' calculator a few times.)

90 BBY
- Bran Isken is born on-board a Corellian ship.
  (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)
- At the age of twelve, Dooku finishes unarmed sparring lessons in a balance test with Yoda. He loses because he comes in intending to lose, after six months of trying to figure out how to beat Yoda.*
  (conjecture based on Dark Rendezvous)*

NOTE: Dooku is twelve here, but it happens 70 years before Y:DR, in which Dooku is 83 years old. This is due to the time of year in which Dooku was born (apparently around the middle of the year or just before that).
- TCW DATE: At some point before becoming the Padawan of Thame Cerulian, Dooku goes on a mission with Yoda to Kashyyyk, where Yoda defeats a terentatek.
  (conjecture based on Destiny)
- The Poss’Nomin species’ warring segments unite into a cohesive society in order to adopt the galaxy’s more advanced technology and join the galactic community.
  (conjecture based on Alien Encounters supplement in The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #14)
- The Outer Rim planet named Coveway is settled by a colonization expedition.
  (conjecture based on Thrawn Trilogy Sourcebook via TimeTales, abridged)
- A Twi’lek survey team crashes on Uffel, a moon of Genarius. From the wreckage emerge Q2-2D, R4-S2, and R4-J9. QS-2D repairs and reprograms the others to follow his bidding. Q2-2D, acting, supposedly, on behalf of its dead master, makes a deal with Riboga the Hutt to share the profits of a mining operation on the generally uninhabitable Uffel in return for equipment to start the operation. As the operation grows, more and more droids arrive and are later built, all following Q2-2D’s directives.*
  (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)*

*NOTE: This assumes that the deal with Riboga took place about twenty years into Riboga’s 57 year run in the Cularin system.
- The son of the Advozsec warlock Tulak returns to Koba to claim the world as his inheritance. Upon arrival, he is faced by Yaddle, who duels the young would-be despot, finally ending in killing him when he is knocked down on his own knife. The world is free, as Yaddle’s former master, Polvin Kut, was originally attempting to make it. Yaddle will soon leave to rejoin the Jedi. (To be continued below . . . )
  (Yaddle’s Tale: The One Below)*

Yaddle’s Tale: The One Below [flashback] [continued] (SWT5 short story: Dean Motter)

89 BBY
- Cradossk is born to father Agnuk (a member of the Bounty Hunters Guild Council) among the hatchlings of his clutch mother’s egg nest on Trandosha. Cradossk is the first hatched, and he proceeds to eat his siblings as they are hatching. Young Cradossk’s first memory will be of Agnuk tossing him into a nest of eskrats to fight (and eat). Agnuk will train Cradossk as he grows up through childhood, but there will be extra pressure on Cradossk to succeed as a hunter due to Agnuk’s position in the Guild.*
The Star Wars Timeline Gold: Legends Timeline, Vol. 1

*NOTE: Cradossk’s first Guild contract is “several decades” before the Clone Wars, which I assumed to be around 50 years before. That was after four years at the Orsis Academy, which he entered when he was “barely in his teens,” which would likely be around age 13. As such, his birthdate would be around this time.

- The Old Republic settles Eol Sha.
  (conjecture based on Jedi Search)

- Ferroans, brought to Zonama Sekot by the first Magister (a former Jedi who followed the teachings of the Potentium, Leor Hal), settle at what comes to be called Middle Distance.
  (conjecture based on Rogue Planet)

- Gamorranean culture begins interacting with the Republic proper.
  (conjecture based on Planet of Twilight)

- As the Jedi Council prepares to induct Yaddle into its ranks, Yoda questions whether or not Yaddle is ready. To convince Yoda, Even Piell tells the story of how Yaddle came to be imprisoned by the Kobans and how she regained her freedom. Yoda still has his doubts, but agrees to abide by the majority decision and support Yaddle’s entry to the council.
  (Yaddle’s Tale: The One Below)

- Yaddle takes Oppo Rancisis as her Padawan Learner.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Characters)

- Dooku is chosen as Padawan of Jedi Knight Thame Cerulian.
  (conjecture based on Legacy of the Jedi)

- At this time, the copy of the Jedi textbook known as The Jedi Path that was once owned by Yoda and Thame Cerulian is passed from Thame to his new Padawan, Dooku.
  (conjecture based on The Jedi Path and comments by Dan Wallace on his blog)

- At the Jedi Temple on Coruscant, thirteen-year-old Dooku has been chosen as the Padawan of Thame Cerulian. Meanwhile, his best friend, Lorian Nod, has not yet been chosen by as Padawan to any Jedi. Lorian, always one to goad the ever-arrogant Dooku toward reckless behavior, joins Dooku in searching through Cerulian’s room, to learn more about his future Jedi Master. As they do, they find a manual to the Sith Holocron (the same “Dark Holocron” that Odan-Urr discovered millennia ago), which tempts Lorian into secretly stealing the Holocron, shortly thereafter. When found with it, having accessed its contents and letting it “warp his fragile little mind” (as Cartman might say), Lorian tries to blame the theft on Dooku. Both are to be reprimanded, but when a training exercise to hunt fruit and return to the Temple turns into a brawl between team leaders Dooku and Lorian outside the Temple, both students have failed in their opportunity to make up for their transgression. Dooku spills all the beans on Lorian, and, in the end, Dooku remains Padawan to Cerulian, while Lorian is effectively kicked out of the Jedi Order, taking an agricultural posting, forever losing his chance to be a Jedi Knight. The two former friends have not seen the last of each other . . .
  *(To be continued below . . . )

 (Legacy of the Jedi)

Yaddle’s Tale: The One Below [continued] (SWT5 short story: Dean Motter)

Legacy of the Jedi (youth novel: Jude Watson)

Legacy of the Jedi [continued] (youth novel: Jude Watson)

“Dooku”*

  Chapters 1 – 6

“Intermission #1”*

88 BBY

- Artagan Truax is born.
  (conjecture based on Lockdown)

*NOTE: He is 55 in Lockdown.

- Ronhar Kim is born to Vidar Kim and his wife. Ronhar is taken as an infant to train at the Jedi Temple.
  (conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)

- Bodo Baas’ holocron (the Tedryn Holocron) comes into the hands of Ashka Boda, another Jedi.
The Jedi Master Plett builds his Jedi safe-haven in the Plawal rift on Belsavis, naming it Plett's Well.

On Cerea, Ki-Adi-Mundi's family farm is descended upon by an Old Republic ship bearing a single visitor—a female human Jedi Knight known as the Dark Woman. She is looking for a student, and when she finds that Ki is strong in the Force, she speaks with his father about taking him off-planet for Jedi training. Ki's father will not hear of it. He wants his son to remain with his family. When the meeting is interrupted by the appearance of a raiding party led by Bin-Garda-Zon, Ki's father realizes that Zon will want to kidnap Ki to raise as his own son. They hide Ki. Zon proceeds to ransack the farm, beating up Ki's father and telling the Jedi to mind her own business. When Zon leaves, Ki's father, although it breaks his heart, knows what he must do. The Cereans need a Jedi of their own to protect them from people like Zon. He allows the Dark Woman to take Ki away for training. (To be continued below . . .)

Vow of Justice

NOTE: The Star Wars Comics Companion erroneously lists the bulk of Vow of Justice here at 88 BBY, instead of just this first portion. One could come away from that thinking that Ki-Adi-Mundi is twenty-five years old here at 88 BBY, rather than later. That's another Comics Companion error.

Rise of the Sith Omnibus (comic: Mike Kennedy & Ryder Windham & Randy Stradley & Jan Strnad & Ron Marz & Dean Motter)
Republic (comic series: Peet Janes & Jan Strnad & Tim Truman & John Ostrander & Pat Mills & Doug Petrie & Haden Blackman & Randy Stradley & Welles Hartley)
Vow of Justice (comic series: Peet Janes & Jan Strnad)
Vow of Justice, Part I [flashback] (comic: Jan Strnad)

87 BBY

Tem Chesko is born.

Full scale war breaks out between Sundari and Garos IV as a result of the destruction of a Garosian grain factory.

86 BBY

Locus Geen is born.

At this point, the computer in the office of the Bal'demnic spaceport could be considered an antique. It will still be in service two decades later.

The Sullustan manager of Colliders Casino on Lianna becomes the manager. He will still be in this position when visited by Darth Plagueis twenty years later.

Dooku receives a lesson from Yoda about the lightsaber being a Jedi's most precious weapon. (To be continued below . . .)

Most Precious Weapon

Menace Revealed Omnibus (comic: Timothy Truman & Jason Hall & Haden Blackman & Ryder Windham)
Most Precious Weapon [flashback] (comic: Jason Hall)

85 BBY

Keriin Haslip is born.

Bentis Stinex is born.*
NOTE: This date is quite conjectural. Teela Kaarz is “nearing twenty-five standard years” as of the beginning of Death Star, and she claims that Bentis Stinex is “three, maybe four times” her own age, which would give him a birth year of 75 to 100 BBY. I chose 85 as a nice split difference.

- To compete with Anchorhead on Tatooine, the settlers at Fort Tusken build Mos Eisley spaceport with the help of a group of Rodian refugees.
  (conjecture based on Secrets of Tatooine)

84 BBY

- Tuden Sal is born.
  (conjecture based on Patterns of Force)

NOTE: Tuden Sal is in his sixties in Patterns of Force, which I have rounded to 65 years old. One should note, though, that Michael Reaves had numerous date errors in the novel, including the dates of his own Shadow Hunter novel, where Tuden Sal first appeared. Take this under advisement when determining the validity of this date.

- Lord Weston Warsheld begins ruling House Calipsa.
  (conjecture based on Lords of the Expanse)

- One week before being allowed to tackle a high cliff at the Jedi Temple with cable launchers, Qui-Gon Jinn tries to scale it with his bare hands. He uses the Force as much as he can to do so, with another student, Tahl, at his side. She senses the Force far more during their race to the top, and Qui-Gon is somewhat jealous. Having completed the task, they decide they would be better as friends and rivals. Thus, the friendship of Qui-Gon and Tahl begins now, at age eight. (To be continued below . . . )

  (The Death of Hope)

NOTE: The date of this story is derived by using Qui-Gon’s age of eight for this event, dating back from his being sixteen in the Dooku and Qui-Gon Jinn segment of Legacy of the Jedi.

Jedi Apprentice (youth novel series: Dave Wolverton & Jude Watson)

The Death of Hope [flashback] (youth novel: Jude Watson)
Chapter 19 [flashback]

83 BBY

- Riga Lanchenzoor is born.
  (conjecture based on Han Solo and the Corporate Sector Sourcebook)

- During a lull in the missions carried out by Thame Cerulian and his Padawan, Dooku, Dooku spends time talking to Yoda about the notion of how Jedi are always alone.
  (conjecture based on Dark Rendezvous)

82 BBY

- Palpatine (the future Galactic Emperor and Darth Sidious) is born on Naboo to Cosigna Palpatine and his wife. (Exact date, according to Leland Chee’s blog: 47BrS:8:11)
  (conjecture based on Episode I: Insider’s Guide and Darth Plagueis)

- Doman Beruss (the male one) is born on Illodia.
  (conjecture based on Tyrant’s Test)

- The Senate Bureau of Intelligence forms the last Crisis Branch it will use until Armand Isard creates one 60 years from now.
  (conjecture based on HoloNet News, Volume 531, Number 50)

- Corellian Engineering Corporation makes its first attempt to break into the “executive light freighter” market with its new HWK-290 light freighter.*
  (conjecture based on Far Horizons)

NOTE: This rounds “decades” before the Battle of Naboo to 50 years. This makes the Moldy Crow a relatively newer ship of this type when constructed in 10 BBY.

- The Neimoidians become the controlling power within the Trade Federation. One of their first measures is to cease protecting their interests with volunteered ships from member worlds and instead replace that with a dedicated Trade Federation military force. They soon order some Federation freighters to be transformed into battleships.*
  (conjecture based on Secrets of Naboo)

NOTE: This interprets “decades” as 50 years.

- At ten-years-old, Qui-Gon Jinn and Tahl duel each other on Exhibition Day at the Jedi Temple after Tahl defeats Clee Rhara. Qui-Gon wins the duel, and when Tahl suggests it would’ve been better if she had won, he asks if she ever gives up. Her answer: “never.” (To be continued below . . .)

(The Death of Hope)

- Dooku first sees Qui-Gon Jinn duel with a lightsaber this year, presumably during the aforementioned Exhibition Day at the Jedi Temple.
  (conjecture based on Legacy of the Jedi)
- At this time, the copy of the Jedi textbook known as The Jedi Path that was once owned by Yoda, Thame Cerulian, and Dooku is passed to Qui-Gon Jinn.*
  (conjecture based on The Jedi Path and comments by Dan Wallace on his blog)*
  *NOTE: As Andrew Gilbertson quipped, “Dooku must have been really impressed by that saber demonstration.” (Qui-Gon won’t be Dooku’s apprentice for another three years or so.)

Jedi Apprentice [continued] (youth novel series: Dave Wolverton & Jude Watson)
The Death of Hope [flashback] [continued] (youth novel: Jude Watson)
Chapter 17 [flashback]

81 BBY

- Nejaa Halcyon is born.
  (conjecture based on I, Jedi)
- In the Cularin system, growing lawlessness forces the creation of an ever-strengthening military based out of Thaere Privo, the central planet of the system.*
  (conjecture based on Over Thaere on www.wizards.com)*
  *NOTE: The Over Thaere article was meant to fix an error in the Living Force Campaign that had an overall Republic military establishing bases in the Cularin system when there was no overall Republic military at the time. It tells gamers to presume that all previous information about the Republic military in the system was the Thaereian military. As such, we can apparently assume that this build-up was confined mainly to Thaere Privo until the system joined the Republic.

80 BBY

- Cliegg Lars is born.
  (conjecture based on the Official Star Wars Fact File)
- Lud, a Rakaan, is born on Raakaa IV and will grow to be a major Elrood sector crime boss.
  (conjecture based on Planets of the Galaxy: Volume Three)
- On Tatooine, Mos Espa is established.
  (conjecture based on Secrets of Tatooine)
- The agriworld of New Ator is founded by Atorese colonists.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
- Nejaa Halcyon begins his Jedi training.
  (conjecture based on I, Jedi et al)
- A chronicler from Carrivar named Succate compiles all known and rumored information on the Sorcerers of Rhand.*
  (conjecture based on The Unknown Regions)*
  *NOTE: Information provided by Luke Van Horn.
- Erel Kersos of Corellia falls in love with the offworlder Feleema and is shunned by his clan for the rest of his life.*
  (conjecture based on Jedi Healer)*
  *NOTE: The dates for Kersos’ relationship with Feleema are a little bit odd. We are told that he was clan-shunned for sixty years, but also that he and Feleema were only married for six years before she died, which was a little over thirty years before Jedi Healer. That would mean that he was shunned for about twenty years before they were married. I’m going to assume that he was perhaps in love with her, but not married to her, for that time, but it’s far more likely that when the book refers to “sixty years” of being clan-shunned, the authors meant “forty years.” So, take this entry with a grain of salt. It is literally correct, but probably not actually correct.

79 BBY

- Anoon Bondara is born.
  (conjecture based on Shadow Hunter via TimeTales, abridged)
- Qui-Gon Jinn becomes Padawan to Count Dooku.
• Qui-Gon Jinn discovers a small, smooth, Force-attuned rock in the River of Light.
  (conjecture based on The Hidden Past)
• Wyle Ulbreck begins moisture farming.
  (conjecture based on Kenobi)

78 BBY
• Rostek Horn is born on Corellia.
  (conjecture based on I, Jedi)
• Scerra is born on Corellia.
  (conjecture based on I, Jedi)
• Falin Mattran (later “Kal Skirata”) is born on Kuat.
  (conjecture based on Order 66)

77 BBY
• Dal Perhi, future Underlord of Black Sun, is born.
  (conjecture based on Jedi Twilight)
• On Cularin, Riboga the Hutt makes slaving one of his chief businesses.
  (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)

76 BBY
• Senator Galim Eddawan and his daughter Joli of Tyan are to arrive on Alpha Nonce, but never arrive.
  (conjecture based on Legacy of the Jedi)
• Qui-Gon Jinn and Didi Oddo meet for the first time.
  (conjecture based on The Deadly Hunter)
• Cradossk, barely in his teens, goes with his father, Agnuk, to Kashyyyk to kill a herd of wild grantaloupe. They kill far more than they can eat, as a lesson to Cradossk that while one can only eat so much meat, it can also be sold to the right people for a high price. They travel to the Nevoota System to sell the excess meet to one of Agnuk’s clients, a businessman who has a job for Agnuk. He has placed a bounty on a Devaronian in the Obtrexta sector. Agnuk allows Cradossk to join him on this hunt, even allowing him to take the killshot. Agnuk receives the bounty, of which he gives Cradossk a small portion. Rather than immediately enlisting Cradossk into the Bounty Hunters Guild, though, Agnuk decides to send him to train under Trezza at the Orsis Academy for the next four years. Upon arrival at the Academy, Cradossk ends up in a fight with another student, which sends him to the infirmary. There, he again tries to assert himself when visiting by Trezza, only for Trezza to repeatedly put him in his place, forcing him to realize that he needs to learn before he can truly be a skilled combatant.*
  (conjecture based on Making a Killing)*

*NOTE: Cradossk’s first Guild contract is “several decades” before the Clone Wars, which I rounded to 50 years. That is right after Cradossk gets out of the Orsis Academy, after being there for four years, which puts his entry here. Since he is said to be barely in his teens, I am assuming that he is about 13 here.
• Thirteen years after the end of Dooku’s friendship with Lorian Nod, Dooku and his Padawan Qui-Gon Jinn (now sixteen) accompany senator Blix Annon and his aide, Dooku’s old friend Eero, on a diplomatic voyage, hoping to protect the ship from possible raiders, who seem to be plaguing senatorial vessels lately. When they discover a “ship in distress,” Dooku realizes that it is a trap, but they are still attacked. The enemy’s forces board the ship, kidnapping the senator from his safe room (think “panic room”). Before the enemy group escapes, though, their leader faces off briefly with Dooku, allowing the Jedi Master to realize that the raider leader is none other than Lorian Nod. Seeking answers at the plant that supposedly created the security systems for all of the targeted senatorial ships, the two Jedi head for Kontag, where they realize the actual production isn’t taking place. Instead, they trace the real production to Von-Alai, where they are subsequently captured by Lorian’s droids, thanks to betrayal on behalf of a bitter Eero. While Lorian goats, Dooku and Qui-Gon get free, but Dooku allows Lorian to take Qui-Gon’s lightsaber, dueling with his former friend. It is only the voice of Qui-Gon that keeps Dooku from following through with his anger and killing Lorian. As it stands, Lorian is taken into custody. Upon return to Coruscant, Dooku enters the archives and views the Sith Holocron himself. After all, if Lorian did, surely Dooku deserves to as well. (To be continued below . . . )

Legacy of the Jedi

Legacy of the Jedi [continued] (youth novel: Jude Watson)

Chapter 7 – 13

75 BBY

- Jorus C’Baoth is born on Bortas. (Exact date according to Old Senate Library entry: 4\3\112 P.E.)*
  (conjecture based on Dark Force Rising)*

  *NOTE: Please bear in mind that the exact date quoted here (4\3\112 P.E.) is Zahn’s erroneous dating based on when he believed the Clone Wars took place, and has thus been translated into a corrected date. It is included here for the sake of cross-referencing for those curious. See the “On P.E. Dating” notation above (which has been updated since the publication of The New Essential Chronology).

- Around this time, Augwynne Djo is born on Dathomir.*
  (conjecture based on The Last Jedi)*

  *NOTE: The is “fifty-five or sixty” in The Last Jedi. I have split the difference and gone with 57 years old.

- King Cana begins ruling Gala.
  (conjecture based on The Mark of the Crown)

- Olgun Baobab leaves the Baobab Merchant Fleet leaves to hunt for Roonstones. He crashes on Roon, discovering some over the years, but is trapped there alone for six decades.
  (conjecture based on Across the Roon Sea)

- The planet Longwind is settled by criminals who had been released after serving their sentences in the prisons of the Old Republic.
  (conjecture based on Gamemaster Kit via TimeTales, abridged)

- Drewwa, the third moon of Almania, is colonized.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Planets and Moons via TimeTales, abridged)

- Rodians colonize the forested world of Ooo-temiuk, while also migrating to Ataruun and Tatooine.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)

- Around this time, Fabritech, primarily based on Fabrin, becomes a leader in the field of sensors, communications devices, and control systems.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Weapons and Technology)

- Sometime around this time, the Truth’s Light makes accidental contact with the insectoid scree creatures in the Vergesso Asteroids, near Wild Space. It is one of the few documented contacts with the creatures.
  (conjecture based on Ultimate Adversaries)

- More than fifty years before the Clone Wars, the Jawa outcast Tatakoz, master trader of the Mospic High Range, creates the first “monster” droid on Tatooine.*
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)"*

  *NOTE: I have rounded “over 50 years before the Clone Wars” to 75 BBY.

74 BBY

- Tra’Parr’Sratt is born, presumably on Coyn.
  (conjecture based on Out of the Cradle)

- The planet Kegan is visited by offworlders for the last time until Qui-Gon Jinn, Obi-Wan Kenobi, Adi Gallia, and Siri Tachi visit the world thirty years later.
  (conjecture based on The Fight for Truth)

- Around this time, S. Pelbion, future deputy chief administrator at the Valorum Center, is born."*
(conjecture based on Order 66)

NOTE: Pelbion is in his mid-fifties as of 19.5 BYB.

- After a two-year mission with Jedi Master Dooku, Qui-Gon Jinn returns to the Jedi Temple to soon become a full Jedi Knight. There, he is reunited with his longtime friend Tahl, and is warned by Dooku that betrayal, even from friends, is inevitable. (To be continued below . . . )
  *(Legacy of the Jedi)*
- Qui-Gon Jinn (Count Dooku’s Padawan) and Tahl are promoted to full Jedi Knights. Qui-Gon has been asked to consider taking a Padawan, but he is unsure. He and Tahl run into each other on Zekulue after years apart. After a brief talk, the two part ways again. (To be continued below . . . )*
  *(*The Death of Hope)

NOTE: This event has been moved from its previous location at 59 BYB to here due to Qui-Gon’s exact age given in Legacy of the Jedi and information regarding his final 2-year mission. It is possible that this date still holds true, but the fact that they discuss Xanatos as his potential Padawan (when Xanatos is not even born yet now, due to The Dark Side), makes it a bit iffy. Personally, I would think this would have to be sometime later or perhaps two separate events (his promotion as one, and their conversation about Xanatos as the other).

- Having been promoted to Jedi Knight, Qui-Gon Jinn saves his severed Padawan braid within the pages of his copy of The Jedi Path.
  (conjecture based on The Jedi Path)

- TCW DATE: During Qui-Gon Jinn’s first year as a Jedi Knight, he and three others are trapped in a theta storm. Qui-Gon gets to shelter and survives, while the others are exposed and die slow, agonizing deaths. He shares that story with Obi-Wan Kenobi, who will share it with Anakin Skywalker.*
  (conjecture based on Siege)*

NOTE: This assumes that Sidious makes good on his own musings in Siege.

Legacy of the Jedi [continued] (youth novel: Jude Watson)

Jedi Apprentice [continued] (youth novel series: Dave Wolverton & Jude Watson)

The Death of Hope [flashback] [continued] (youth novel: Jude Watson)

Chapter 11 [flashback]

73 BYB

- Kassar Kosciusko is born.
  (conjecture based on Cracken’s Rebel Operatives)

- On Sucaris, the parents of Falin Mattran (who had brought the family to Sucaris to work at the Kuat Drive Yards facility there) are killed when war erupts. Falin is left to fend for himself with his father’s three-edged knife for a year.
  (conjecture based on Order 66)

- The Wennis is commissioned.*
  (conjecture based on Lando Calrissian and the Flamewind of Oseon)*

NOTE: This is “nearly three quarters of a century” before Lando Calrissian and the Flamewind of Oseon. I have rounded that to 70 years.

- Hego Damask (Darth Plagueis) declines to join the Order of the Canted Circle, but he continues to do business with its Grand Mage.
  (conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)

72 BYB

- Shmi Skywalker is born.
  (conjecture based on Episode I: Insider’s Guide)

- Mace Windu is born to Ghosh Windu on the planet Haruun Kal. Within six months, before he is even old enough to walk, Jedi researchers seeking to study the Korunnai discover him. Soon, Yoda arrives and learns of his great potential. He is taken to Coruscant to be trained as a Jedi.
  (conjecture based on Episode I: Insider’s Guide and Shatterpoint)

- Arla Fett is born on Concord Dawn.*
  (conjecture based on 501st)*
NOTE: She is 14 when the True Mandalorians and Death Watch clash on Concord Dawn and she is presumed dead.

- Corellian Engineering Corporation launches the YT-1300 freighter series in partnership with Narro Sienar. The freighter is marketed as an inexpensive and easily modified alternative to the YG-series. It becomes an instant classic.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)
- With the launch of Corellian Engineering Corporation’s YT-1300 line, the older YT-1210, a variant of the YT-1200, sees sales slip.
  (conjecture based on Suns of Fortune)
- Decades before the Clone Wars, Merr-Sonn Munitions releases the R-88 Suppressor riot rifle, one of the most common riot control weapons in the galaxy in this era and similar in design an operation to the rare and much more expensive Stokhli Spray Stick.*
  (conjecture based on Far Horizons*)
- Mix Liddell moves from fishing on Lamaredd into a position as second-in-command to Chief Ertine, the head law officer of the area. A team led by Ertine and Liddell track the outlaw known as the Padawan (Byrch Dyshkava, a former Jedi Padawan) to his base, but it is a trap. Ertine is killed, and Liddell is left for dead. After days in a bacta tank, Liddell is healed and assumes the role of Chief by unanimous vote of the Bartyn’s Landing town council. He leads the Padawan’s gang into an ambush from which only the Padawan himself escapes. Liddell vows to take down the Padawan someday. Unbeknownst to Mix, the Padawan is attacked and captured by Menahuun during his escape. He will remain their prisoner for 20 years.
  (conjecture based on Bartyn’s Landing and Reckonings)
- LeisureMech Enterprises begins producing the BD-3000 luxury droid.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)
- On Sucaris, Munin Skirata discovers Falin Mattran, whose parents have been killed. Falin has lived alone on the world, fending for himself, for a year. Falin attacks Munin with a three-edged knife when he is discovered, but Munin adopts the boy, calling him Kal’ika or “little blade.” He will come to call the boy “Kal Skirata,” but Falin does not immediately take to the name. Munin takes Falin with him away from Sucaris, soon training the boy on Mes Cavoli.
  (conjecture based on Order 66)
- At this time, the copy of the Jedi textbook known as The Jedi Path that was once owned by Yoda, Thame Cerulian, and Dooku which was passed to Qui-Gon Jinn is stored away by Qui-Gon until he takes Obi-Wan Kenobi as his Padawan years from now.
  (conjecture based on The Jedi Path and comments by Dan Wallace on his blog)
- After four years, Cradossk returns to Trandosha after four years training with Trezza at the Orsis Academy. His father, Agnuk, again does not immediately bring him into the Bounty Hunters Guild, though he allows Cradossk to attend Council meetings. Frustrated by sitting around listening to elder hunters talking about past glories, he scent-marks Agnuk’s chair while Agnuk is still sitting in it. Still angered, Cradossk goes hunting on Kashyykk for a few days, then heads back. Once back on Trandosha, he encounters three Trandoshans (two slavers and a bounty hunter) in a hunting lodge on the outskirts of Lorpfan. When they ask him to take a seat, he misinterprets their request as wanting him to somehow entertain them by performing with a chair (uhm, what?), so he attacks them, killing all three and losing one hand (which will grow back) in the process. This gets Agnuk’s attention, so he begins to introduce Cradossk to influential members of the Guild and takes him to Alaris to hunt wild gundarks. It is only months later that he learns from an old friend of Agnuk that it was Agnuk himself who hired the three Trandoshans to attack Cradossk in Lorpfan as payback for Cradossk soiling Agnuk’s chair. Cradossk confronts his father, they laugh about it all, and then Cradossk breaks Agnuk’s jaw and shatters a few of his teeth. With this act, Cradossk proves himself in Agnuk’s eyes and is admitted into the Bounty Hunters Guild. Cradossk’s first contract is on Jonmor Trinto, an accountant from Humbarine that was arrested and imprisoned for embezzlement. He has recently been released from prison and allowed to settle on Longwind in the Trax sector with several other former inmates. Cradossk and Agnuk take Cradossk’s leased Loronar B-7 light freighter to Longwind, where Agnuk is to oversee Cradossk’s hunt. Cradossk goes off on his own, accosting one citizen to learn that Trinto has already left to go to Nar Shaddaa. He disables the man from being able to call for help, then returns to the ship, only to find a Jedi, Kindro Nimmel, already there and Agnuk’s dead body on the ground. Nimmel had been sent to Longwind by the Jedi Order to keep an eye on the new ex-con settlement, and he was on patrol when spotted by Agnuk. Agnuk attacked him, resulting in Nimmel killing him. Cradossk fakes anguish over Agnuk’s death to draw Nimmel closer, then attacks the Jedi, ripping him apart (and tasting Jedi blood for the first time). Cradossk takes his father’s remains (and Wookiee pelts), heads to Nar Shaddaa, and continues the hunt. He creates a path of dead bodies as he searches, finally discovering Trinto in a gambling den, along with four other wanted men. He takes Trinto alive, as required, and kills the others, earning 127,000 credits on what should have just been a 2,000 credit job. He will use the money to modify his ship further than he already has. Early in his career with the Guild, Cradossk tracks a Corellian named Thoxo to the agricultural world of Yitabo, where he is hiding out among settlers. For a week, Cradossk goes undercover as a disabled farmer, having no luck finding Thoxo (as far as he knows). He finally gets annoyed and simply goes to a local inn and screams out Thoxo’s name, which causes Thoxo, who is present (and one of the first people Cradossk questioned when he arrived), to run for it. Cradossk shoots and kills him to collect the bounty on his head.*

*NOTE: This event is “several decades” before the Clone Wars and “Jedi Rebellion.” Given that we also learn that there is a joke based on Cradossk’s hunting that is a “few decades” old, I think it is safe to round this to about 50 years before AOTC.

- On Mes Cavoli, Munin Skirata attempts to train Falin Mattran (almost seven years old), whom he has adopted. He pushes Falin hard, but has a fatherly tenderness toward the boy when nightmares of his family’s deaths come to him. Once Falin accepts his loss and his new life, he truly accepts himself as Munin’s new son, “Kal Skirata.” (To be continued below . . . )

(Order 66)

Republic Commando (video game/novel series: Karen Traviss & LucasArts & THQ)
Order 66 (novel: Karen Traviss)
Chapter 1

71 BBY
- Hotise is born.*
  (conjecture based on Death Star)*
*NOTE: Hotise is “seventy or so” as of Death Star.
- On Ord Cestus, the Grand ChikatLik prison is converted into a hotel for tourists.
  (conjecture based on The Cestus Deception)
- When the Gadon regime petition the Republic for sanctions against Kif miners that had produced high-energy ore that the regime’s enemies are now using against them, the Republic finds that the final disposition of the miners’ product is no fault of the miners, but only the fault of the regime’s enemies that used the ore for offensive purposes.
  (conjecture based on The Cestus Deception)
- Nautilan Force-sensitive Naat Lare is incarcerated for multiple crimes on the planet Bedlam.
  (conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)

70 BBY
- Seti Ashgad is born.
  (conjecture based on Planet of Twilight)
- Reeze Duurmun is born.*
  (conjecture based on Millennium Falcon)*
*NOTE: Reeze is 20 years older than Tobb Jadak.
- Tal Anavere is born.
  (conjecture based on Cracken’s Rebel Operatives)
- Dutra Zeneta is born.
  (conjecture based on Cracken’s Rebel Operatives supplement in The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #10)
• Mintinee, future Clan Mother of the Misty Falls clan on Dathomir, is born.*
  (conjecture based on Geonosis and the Outer Rim Worlds)*

*NOTE: This assumes that the setting of our vantage point in the sourcebook is from the very end of the New Jedi Order era.

• Soly Kantt begins working for Corellian Engineering Corporation.
  (conjecture based on Millennium Falcon)

• A series of accidents on ships using the substandard ores mined on Tatooine causes mining to cease on the planet, bringing planet-wide economic depression. Many of the sandcrawlers end up in the hands of the Jawas.
  (conjecture based on Secrets of Tatooine)

• The Tatoo III space station orbiting Tatooine crashes into the planet, due to being built of a metal that randomly becomes magnetic to the ores found on Tatooine.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 7: Mos Eisley)

• The Kira Run is discovered. (Exact date of report via HoloNet News: 35BrS:4:18)
  (conjecture based on HoloNet News, Volume 531, Number 52)

• The last native speakers of the Vulanish dialect in Corellia’s Great Southern Reaches finally die out.
  (conjecture based on Jedi Healer)

• Around this time, the Republic makes first contact with Vjun. Intrigued by the idea of the Force, the current head of the Marleaux family begins experimenting on the Vjun populace, artificially increasing the midichlorian counts of the natives, creating a world with a very high Force attunement . . . where almost everyone eventually goes insane.
  (conjecture based on Dark Rendezvous)

• Marblewood, the sector governor’s mansion on Wukkar, is sold when the current governor takes up residence elsewhere. No major renovations will occur for about twenty years.
  (conjecture based on Scoundrels)

69 BBY

• Clat’Ha is born.
  (conjecture based on The Rising Force)

• Xanatos is born on Telos.*
  (conjecture based on The Captive Temple and The Dark Side)*

*NOTE: Xanatos is taken by the Jedi when he is three, and he is with the Jedi for 13 years as of The Dark Side.

• The “prophet” that Darth Venamis and Darth Plagueis both consider a potential Sith Lord at one point comes to Saleucami and begins her preaching.
  (conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)

• Palpatine is forcibly enrolled in a private school in Theed by his father, Cosigna Palpatine.
Around the same time, Vidar Kim finishes his stint in the Apprentice Legislator program. The two strike up a friendship that will bear fruit later when Vidar is Senator for Naboo.
  (conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)

• The Blockade Runners’ Derby begins as an annual event on Ord Mantell.
  (conjecture based on Mask of the Pirate Queen)

68 BBY

• Andreas Pell is born.
  (conjecture based on Before the Storm)

• Dalla Solo is born to Korel Solo. Dalla will later take the name “Dalla Suul” and then “Dalla the Black.”
  (conjecture based on The Paradise Snare)

• Stalnus is born on Rior.
  (conjecture based on Wanted by Cracken)

• Essara Till is born on Naboo to a prominent family.
  (conjecture based on The Starfighter Trap)

• Bail Organa is born.
  (conjecture based on Jimmy Smits’ age via TimeTales, paraphrased)
• Around this time, Orrin Gault is born on Tatooine.*
  (conjecture based on Kenobi)*
  *NOTE: He is “nearly fifty” during Kenobi.
• Nejaa Halcyon becomes a Padawan Learner.
  (conjecture based on The Rising Force’s general dating for when this event happens in a Jedi’s career)
• The ship that will one day belong to Tem Chesko is built on Cirus II.
  (conjecture based on Tales from Mos Eisley: Mostly Automatic)

67 BBY
• Nym is born.
  (conjecture based on Starfighter via TimeTales, abridged)
• Vestin Axlon is born.*
  (conjecture based on Choices of One)*
  *NOTE: He is approximately 20 years older than Carlist Rieekan.
• Hesh Verbon is born on Naboo.*
  (conjecture based on Secrets of Naboo)*
  *NOTE: This interprets her being in her “thirties” 32 BBY as being 35.
• The man who will come to bear the stolen identities of “Tarrence Chenati” and “Kern” while under the employ of Vox Chun is born around this time.
  (conjecture based on Deceptions)
• After five years and over 300 successful hunts as a member of the Bounty Hunters Guild, Cradosk becomes the head of the Bounty Hunters Guild.*
  (conjecture based on Making a Killing)*
  *NOTE: Cradosk’s first Guild contract is “several decades” before the Clone Wars and “Jedi Rebellion,” which I rounded to 50 years before AOTC. This event is five years later.
• Ki-Adi-Mundi receives lightsaber training under Master Yoda, in the final year of his apprenticeship. When finished with his training, he prepares to return to Cerea. (To be continued below . . . )
  (Prelude to Rebellion)
• Ki-Adi-Mundi leaves Yoda for Cerea seeking justice, against the advice of Master Yoda. Upon arrival on Cerea, he remembers his youth and the evil of Bin-Garda-Zon. He returns to his home village and tells them of his adventures away from home. Finally, he asks his father about Bin-Garda-Zon and is told that Zon no longer raids villages with his gang, but the raiding parties continue. Ki heads to the raiders’ camp, planning to challenge Zon to battle, only to find that Zon had been challenged years before in the Khana for leadership of the raiders and lost to a woman. She points out Zon, who has wasted away and is now the oortender for the tribe. The female chief accepts Ki’s challenge, meant for Zon, and takes his “beating the leader with both hands tied behind his back” boast literally. Ki’s hands are bound and he is beaten mercilessly by the chief. While he is bound and held captive, Ki is assaulted by Zon, prompting him to use the Force to escape. He confronts the chief again and bests her in combat. He then orders the tribe to disperse or face him again. They do so, except for Zon, who hurls a knife at Ki, which he easily deflects. Knowing that being so inconsequential is a worse fate for Zon than anything Ki could do to him, Ki leaves Bin-Garda-Zon and heads for home.*
  (Vow of Justice)*
  *NOTE: The Star Wars Comics Companion erroneously lists the bulk of Vow of Justice at 88 BBY, instead of just the earliest portion. While that is an error, the summary does pin down Ki-Adi-Mundi as being 25 in this part of the story, which lets us pin it down to 67 BBY, instead of the previously assumed 60 BBY.
Rise of the Sith Omnibus [continued] (comic: Mike Kennedy & Ryder Windham & Randy Stradley & Jan Strnad & Ron Marz & Dean Motter)
Republic [continued] (comic series: Peet Janes & Jan Strnad & Tim Truman & John Ostrander & Pat Mills & Doug Petrie & Haden Blackman & Randy Stradley & Welles Hartley)
  Prelude to Rebellion (comic series: Peet Janes & Jan Strnad)
  Prelude to Rebellion #0 [flashback] (starwars.com comic: Peet Janes)
  Prelude to Rebellion, Part II [flashback] (comic: Jan Strnad)
  Prelude to Rebellion, Part III [flashback] (comic: Jan Strnad)
66 BBY

- Jango Fett is born, presumably on Concord Dawn.*
  (conjecture based on Jango Fett: Open Seasons*)
  *NOTE: I'd assumed he was apparently 10 when we first meet him in JF:OS, but according to Leland Chee, his birth date is here, rather than in 68 BBY.

- Dorja is born on Coruscant.
  (conjecture based on Thrawn Trilogy Sourcebook)

- Nields’ cousin (who will later be his caregiver) is born on Melida/Daan.
  (conjecture based on The Defenders of the Dead)

- Dren Melne is born on Naboo.
  (conjecture based on The Starfighter Trap)

- Future Boltrunian Dark Jedi Maw is born.*
  (conjecture based on The Dark Forces Saga, Part IV: Of the Crudest Matter*)
  *NOTE: This rounds “over seven decades old” to 71 years old as of Jedi Knight.

- The Skywalker family’s vessel is attacked and boarded by pirates, separating the family and landing at least one of them (Shmi) in slavery. She will eventually become the property of Pi-Lippa.
  (conjecture based on Star Wars: Episode I--“The Phantom Menace” novelization)

- The Radiant VII is launched for the first time.
  (conjecture based on Star Wars: Episode I--“The Phantom Menace” version of Incredible Cross-Sections)

- Xanatos is taken by Qui-Gon Jinn to train at the Jedi Temple.
  (conjecture based on The Dark Side)

- Two months before Darth Plagueis visits Bedlam to seek Naat Lare as a potential Sith candidate, Naat escapes from prison with the help of Darth Venamis, who is pretending to be a physician (or was a physician in his “profane” identity).
  (conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)

- Around this time, Mace Windu discovers that his ability to see shatterpoints in the Force is something unusual.
  (conjecture based on Shatterpoint)

- Ranulph Tarkin, as part of the Seswenna Defense Forces, leads a successful campaign against the Delmassi pirates. He soon leaves the military, becoming an executive at Quintad Orbital Manufacturing, where he begins making deals with Republic military manufacturers, who wish to lease the use of QOM’s network of shipyards and factories.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

- The two Sith Lords of this time, Darth Tenebrous (Rugess Nome, a vaunted starship designer) and his apprentice, Darth Plagueis (Muun Magister Hego Damask of Damask Holdings), are checking out a new find of cortosis on Bal’demnic when the probe they are using to check the deposits of cortosis acts on programming from Subtext Mining, which is meant to kill them. It detonates a pocket of gas that nearly kills both Sith, but they are able to escape back to their ship. Unfortunately for Tenebrous, who is forced to catch falling debris from the cavern they parked in by using the Force to hold it away, the Dark Side chooses this moment to whisper to Plagueis that the time is right to strike down his master. Plagueis uses the Force to “aid” the debris falling and crushes Tenebrous. He then observes the midichlorians and the Force in Tenebrous dying off as he dies. This is observation is all part of the Sith Grand Plan, which seeks to gain power over life and death by studying the midichlorians and the Force (in Tenebrous’ fashion to use science, but in Plagueis’ way to use study of the Force itself). Their goal was to abandon the Rule of Two and form a partnership that would have both men ruling the galaxy as immortals, using their findings (once concluded, which they are not yet) to sustain their lives indefinitely. Now, only one Sith Lord remains . . . (To be continued below . . . )*
(Darth Plagueis)*

*NOTE: The first part of the Darth Plagueis novel is labeled as “67 – 65” BBY, but the very first words in that part of the novel refer to it being “forty-seven standard years before the harrowing reign of Emperor Palpatine.” That would place the beginning of that section in 66 BBY, not 67 BBY.

- As Darth Tenebrous lays dying at the hands of Darth Plagueis on Bal’demnic, he reflects on how he was able to perceive the future through the Dark Side and his immensely powerful Bith brain. After three years of study of the Journal of the Whils and its prophecy of an individual “born of pure Force” (later born as Anakin Skywalker), he foresaw this individual being born in what might be his lifetime and attempted to adapt midichlorians to be able to transfer his essence into that powerful Force user when the time came. To this end, he has created a retrovirus, programmed with his own consciousness, that has been injected into his bloodstream, turning some of his midichlorians into what he calls “maxichlorians,” midichlorians that will migrate out of his body and into a new host upon his death, rather than “returning to the source” by dying and fading into the Force as regular midichlorians do. As he dies, the maxichlorians help carry his consciousness to Plagueis, only to meet with disaster. Upon connecting with Plagueis, Tenebrous, whose maxi-chlorians eventually robbed him of his ability to see into the future shortly before this mission, is able to see the future through Plagueis, only to find that Plagueis will not create the being “born of pure Force” that Tenebrous was trying to save his consciousness to inhabit. Knowing that if his maxi-chlorians spread within Plagueis, it would rob him of his ability to see the future and thereby make it likely impossible for him to create such a host, Tenebrous pulls back the maxi-chlorians from Plagueis, intending to somehow survive long enough in that disembodied state to still take over that host body when Plagueis creates it (which Plagueis never will). It is only later, after countless repetitions of this scene playing in his consciousness that Tenebrous will briefly realize that Plagueis is long gone, along with any chance Tenebrous had of immortality in a body, rather than in consciousness.

(The Tenebrous Way)*

*NOTE: The first part of the Darth Plagueis novel is labeled as “67 – 65” BBY, but the very first words in that part of the novel refer to it being “forty-seven standard years before the harrowing reign of Emperor Palpatine.” That would place the beginning of that section in 66 BBY, not 67 BBY. Since this event takes place during the first regular chapter of the novel (the same one that sets the date as 66 BBY), this short story takes place here also.

- With Darth Tenebrous dead and briefly studied in the Force by Darth Plagueis, it is time for Plagueis to escape from Bal’demnic. Unfortunately, their ship was destroyed in the same cave-in that killed Tenebrous. He uses the Force to leap out of the cavern, then makes his way to the nearest settlement, where he stows away aboard Ellin Lah’s Woebegone. He kills the crew when they refuse to take him to Muunilinst and heads there on his own. Upon arrival as his alter ego, Hego Damask, he has the ship destroyed but keeps Lah’s droid, 11-4D, as his own. Plagueis and 11-4D head for his privately-owned island, Aborah, where the Sith Lord introduces the droid to his (and Tenebrous’) experiments: a huge laboratory and library where he keeps various creatures and sentients as test subjects, seeking to find the necessary knowledge to prolong his life indefinitely (mostly through study of the Force, rather than science in his case). He believes the ancient Sith knew how to do this in some form, but Darth Gravid had destroyed so much of that ancient information that he is having to figure it out once again. He sees the Dark Side as an entity with its own will and actions, and part of gaining Sith power and mastering life and death will come from becoming a willing servant of the Dark Side, while also finding a way to bend it to the Sith Lord’s own will. Setbacks are seen as the Dark Side striking back at Plagueis’ own efforts in a rather unique metaphysical struggle alongside more mundane matters. Next, Plagueis heads for the hunter’s moon of Sojourn, where he holds his usual “Gathering,” an event that brings together powerful individuals from the Republic to hunt together, conspire together, and basically call the shots that will affect the galaxy for years to come. At this particular Gathering, Plagueis (as Damask) meets with many visitors, including Gardulla the Hutt (who gains his support to undermine Jabba the Hutt’s efforts on Tatooine and gain control there, promising to cut Damask in on the profits of podracing that she intends to reignite on Tatooine to compete with Malastare, while he also promises to help one of his goons, Cabra the Dug, get a hold on Nar Shaddaa), representatives of Yinchorr (who want representation in the Senate and get Damask’s support in this matter, though it will take time, in return for a Yinchorri prisoner that he can study upon realizing that the Yinchorri are not affected by Force suggestion because they have so much Force presence with their few strong midichlorians that they naturally ward off attempts to control them), Gran from Malastare (who need his support for their fuel in light of Damask Holdings helping the Trade Federation get a seat in the Senate), and from Subtext Mining on his specific invitation. The Subtext individuals are captured and sent to a moon as prisoners in retaliation for the attempt on the lives of Plagueis and Tenebrous (or Damask and Nome), but not before they try to save themselves by informing Damask of a great wealth of plasma discovered on Naboo. As things wind down, the security alarm goes off. Plagueis seeks out the intruder upon sensing the Force at work and finds himself dueling Darth Venamis, a secret apprentice of Darth Tenebrous, who was meant to test himself against Plagueis and take Plagueis’ place if he were to succeed. Plagueis defeats him, but he does not kill him yet. Instead, he transports Venamis to Aborah as an experiment, near death, so that he can, over the decades, bring him close to and even to death, then draw him back as practice in manipulating midichlorians to create, sustain, or rejuvenate life. Plagueis then uses data from Venamis’ ship to seek out other potential Force-sensitive (“Forceful,” in Plagueis’ words) beings as potential new apprentices for himself. His first candidate is in Lianna City in the Tion Cluster, but it turns out to be a Shi’ido gambling cheat working for Kerred Santhe II (a rival to Damask’s ally at Santhe/Sienar systems, Narro Sienar and heir of Plagueis’ first kill for Tenebrous, Kerred Santhe “the elder”), rather than a true candidate for apprenticeship. He then heads for Saleucami, where he investigates a so-called “prophet” who turns out to be a darksider trying to create a sort of Dark Side cult and/or army. Unfortunately, her message and intent on creating legions of adherents to the Dark Side might create an army of Sith, but would also doom the Sith to being wiped out by the Jedi as in Darth Bane’s time. Plagueis kills her and moves on to the prison of Bedlam, where he finds that the Nautilan he seeks, Naat Lare, has escaped (with the help of Venamis). He tracks Naat to the planet Abraxin, where he actually makes contact and warns Naat of two Jedi stalking him, suggesting that if he defeats them, he can be the new apprentice. Unfortunately, Naat is not ready or strong enough to be the Sith apprentice, and he is easily killed by the Jedi. Plagueis returns to Muunilinst, where he participates in a conference call with Ars Veruna of Naboo, who is currently trying to get Bon Tapalo, a “pretender to the throne” chosen as king of Naboo, despite opposition from the royalists loyal to the traditional ruling house of years gone by – House Palpatine. Tapalo’s cause is aided by a traitor in the Palpatine family, the son of Cosigna Palpatine, a young man who has given up his own name to carry only the surname of his house: “Palpatine.” Knowing that Tapalo would be open (in dealings with their plasma discovery) to working with the Trade Federation, InterGalactic Banking Clan, and other interests that tie into Damask’s own operations, while the royals would instead try to bring Naboo into galactic trade in its own right, Damask and his allies agree to back Tapalo’s bid for power. (To be continued below . . . )

(Darth Plagueis)*

*NOTE: The first part of the Darth Plagueis novel is labeled as “67 – 65” BBY, but the very first words in that part of the novel refer to it being “forty-seven standard years before the harrowing reign of Emperor Palpatine.” That would place the beginning of that section in 66 BBY, not 67 BBY.

Darth Plagueis (novel: James Luceno)

Darth Plagueis (novel: James Luceno)

Enlistment

The Underworld

The Tenebrous Way (SWI130/DRS13 short story: Matthew Stover)

The Tenebrous Way (SWI130/DRS13 short story: Matthew Stover)

Darth Plagueis [continued] (novel: James Luceno)

Darth Plagueis [continued] (novel: James Luceno)

Enlistment [continued]

The Inner Landscape

Woebegone

The Meaning of Death

Homecoming
65 BBY

- Borun Call is born.
  (conjecture based on Wanted by Cracken supplement in The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #10)

- Lorz Geptun is born on Haruun Kal.*
  (conjecture based on Luke Skywalker and the Shadows of Mindor)*

NOTE: Lorz is approximately 70 in LSATSOM.

- Raith Sienar is born.
  (conjecture based on Rogue Planet)

- As part of the new Naboo and Damask Holdings joint venture, Outer Rim Construction and Assembly builds a new Plasma Refinery Complex (PRC) in Theed on Naboo.*
  (conjecture based on Nexus of Power)

- The Hutts come to Tatooine in greater numbers and with greater influence, settling mostly around Mos Espa. With them they bring slavery and crime, but a revitalized economy. Podracing quickly becomes a key entertainment element in Mos Espa. They soon establish the New Quarter in Mos Eisley, while the Old Quarter turns more and more to crime.
  (conjecture based on Secrets of Tatooine)

- Leaving from Cirus II in his ship, Tem Chesko is heading for home when an asteroid damages the ship, taking out the hyperdrive. It will now take approximately 60 years for him to get home. (To be continued below . . . )
  (Tales from Mos Eisley: Mostly Automatic)

- Weeks after making a secret deal with Bon Tapalo and Ars Veruna of Naboo to back their bid for power, Hego Damask (Darth Plagueis) travels to Naboo to publicly solidify the arrangement. On the same trip, he visits the young Palpatine (now 17) that has betrayed his house to back Tapalo. Plagueis discovers Force potential in Palpatine, along with goals with regard to power and leadership that are in line with Plagueis’ own. He is still considering Palpatine’s potential days later on Malastare, where he is confronted by Gran who are angry with his support for the Trade Federation and Naboo’s plasma export ideas. The Gran threaten Damask, having been informed of what is happening on Naboo by representatives from Subtext Mining (another group with a grudge against Damask), but he pays it little heed. He then returns to Naboo about a month after his original visit, only to find that Cosigna Palpatine (young Palpatine’s father) is making certain that Palpatine is out of Damask’s reach. Weeks later, Damask visits Palpatine during the Legislative Youth Program to inform him of his father’s actions and intentions. When the family ship arrives to take Palpatine away to stay with the Greejatus family (out of Damask’s reach), Palpatine and his father get into a brutal shouting match, which ends when Palpatine lets go with his Force abilities and kills his entire family and all of their guards aboard the ship. He then contacts Damask for help. A week later, they meet again, once all of the evidence has been destroyed or fabricated to protect Palpatine. In the discussion that follows, Darth Plagueis takes Palpatine as his Sith apprentice, granting him a new title: “Darth Sidious.” He begins Sidious’ training on the world where Plagueis grew up, Mygeeto, and indicates that at least a decade or more will be necessary until Sidious will be ready, alongside Plagueis, to begin the endgame that will bring the galaxy into Sith hands. (To be continued below . . . )*”
  (Darth Plagueis)

*NOTE: The first part of the Darth Plagueis novel is labeled as “67 – 65” BBY, but the very first words in that part of the novel refer to it being “forty-seven standard years before the harrowing reign of Emperor Palpatine.” That would place the beginning of that section in 66 BBY, not 67 BBY. This section, then, jumps by a matter of weeks and months until finally reaching 65 BBY, when Palpatine is 17.*

- With the death of Cosigna Palpatine and the rest of his family, his son, known simply as Palpatine (later Darth Sidious) inherits the family fortune. When Bon Tapalo becomes King of Naboo, Palpatine sells the Palpatine family’s Lake Country estate and takes an apartment in Theed, continuing in mandatory public service, then for five years in the Apprentice Legislator program, then on to become Naboo’s ambassador once Tapalo is elected for another term.*

(conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)*

*NOTE: This assumes that Tapalo is elected immediately after this portion of the novel.

Tales from Mos Eisley (comic: Bruce Jones)
Tales From Mos Eisley (comic: Bruce Jones)
Mostly Automatic [flashback]

Darth Plagueis [continued] (novel: James Luceno)
Darth Plagueis [continued] (novel: James Luceno)
Enlistment [continued]
Untapped Reserves [continued]
The Cycle of Violence
Avatar of Mortality
Seduced by the Dark Side of the Force

64 BBY
• Wilhuff Tarkin is born on Eriadu.
  (conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia and Peter Cushing’s age during A New Hope)

63 BBY
• Korgath is born.
  (conjecture based on Cracken’s Rebel Operatives supplement in The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #11)
• Mace Windu has a vague vision of the lightsaber he will eventually build.*
  (conjecture based on Shatterpoint)*

  *NOTE: See note for a similar event 61 BBY.
• Around this time, the Old Republic begins debating turning over the planet Alaris Prime to the Wookiees of Kashyyyk for colonization.
  (conjecture based on Galactic Battlegrounds)
• During this era, the current Supreme Chancellor of the Republic is Vaila Percivas.
  (conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)
• Around this time, the plasma reservoir on Naboo is ready for exploitation and export. The Trade Federation, per an agreement with King Bon Tapalo, officially comes to Naboo.
  (conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)

62 BBY
• The modified SoroSuub Seraph-class urban landspeeder, also known as the Flash speeder, is introduced into the Naboo Royal Security Force to be a smaller compliment to the larger, less maneuverable Gian speeder.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Vehicles and Vessels)
• Ten years before his death, Jaster Mereel tells off the regent of Mek a Uil.
  (conjecture based on Order 66)

61 BBY
• Parc Winger is born to Davodan and Radelia Winger.
  (conjecture based on Charlene Newcomb’s website)
• The last election for governor of Gadrin on Cularin is held. No one really minds this, since all major decisions are ratified by the populace anyway. The governor left in charge is Barnab Chistor.
  (conjecture based on v)
• Verga Mer Mining Company (established by Verga Nus and Mer Stodiz) establishes a settlement on Tilnes, a moon of Cularin, for mining.
  (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)
• The Senate operative (no-name) known as Tarrence Chenati dies. Twenty years from now, an operative for Offworld Mining will reinstate this identity by stealing it and using it for an operative on Centax 2.
  (conjecture based on Deceptions)
• Mace Windu begins having specific dreams of the lightsaber he will eventually build.*
  (conjecture based on Shatterpoint)*

*NOTE: I say “specific dreams” here because the story where he gets the gem for his saber takes place when he is fourteen, and he has these dreams for three years . . . but a later notation in the same book says that he had his first vision of the saber when he was nine, which is two years before this.

• This year, Palpatine of Naboo officially enters politics. Within seven years, he will be an ambassador for Naboo, under the guidance of Senator Vidar Kim.
  (conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)

60 BBY
• Prince Beju Tallah is born on Gala.
  (conjecture based on The Mark of the Crown)
• Leed is born to King Frane and his wife on Rutan.
  (conjecture based on The Shattered Peace)
• Tannon Praji is born.
  (conjecture based on Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Praji: A Cartel of Genes)
• Around this time, Kalback, future New Republic Admiral, is born, presumably on Mon Calamari.*
  (conjecture based on Luke Skywalker and the Shadows of Mindor)*

*NOTE: Kalback is “at least sixty-something” in LSATSO M.

• Leading into the month that the future Millennium Falcon “breaks loose” at Orbital 7, production on YT-1300s doubles due to increased demand.
  (conjecture based on Millennium Falcon)
• By this time, Naboo and the worlds of the Chommell Sector have entered an era of unprecedented prosperity, thanks to Naboo’s reservoir of plasma.
  (conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)
• Around this time, there is some strife in the galaxy, due to the Mandalorians (presumably the True Mandalorians, not the New Mandalorians).
  (conjecture based on Millennium Falcon)
• The night before the future Millennium Falcon (YT 492727ZED) “breaks loose” at Orbital 7, a shockball match between Kuat and Commenor ends in a tie.
  (conjecture based on Millennium Falcon)
• Around this time (or a bit before), the mining cooperative in the Chiloon Rift stops trying to extend the RiftMesh communications network into the Bubble of the Lost.*
  (conjecture based on Crucible)*

*NOTE: This happens “over 100 years” prior to Crucible, which I have approximated to 105 years.

• The Cobral crime family comes to power on Frego. Their reign provides citizens with services lacking under the previous despotic rulers, but the basis for their power is their criminal activities, simply trading one shady government for another.
  (conjecture based on The Only Witness)
• Less than a year after the YT-1300 freighter line is launched by Corellian Engineering Corporation, a YT-1300 (YT 492727ZED) goes wild after being over-fueled at CEC’s Orbital Assembly Facility 7 (Orbital 7). Soly Kantt and others watch as the CEC team wrestles the wild starship back under control. Little do they know that the ship will eventually become known across Known Space (and in some cases beyond) as the Millennium Falcon. The ship enters Corell Industries’ (CI Limited’s) fleet of freighters, and during its time with the fleet, it will be known by many names, including (but not limited to) Corell’s Price, Fickle Flyer, and Meetyl’s Misery. (To be continued below . . . )
  (Millennium Falcon)
• Nejaa Halcyon becomes a full Jedi Knight.
  (conjecture based on I, Jedi and The Krytos Trap)
• On Tatooine, Tosche Station is constructed.
Verga Mer Mining Company, after a year of success on Cularin’s moon of Tilnes, is granted a charter.
(conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)

Maur “Hyperspace” Howins set a smashball record by scoring 50 goals in 50 games.
(conjecture based on HoloNet News, Volume 531, Number 52)

Around this time, Jaster Mereel’s True Mandalorians have a falling out with those loyal to Tor Vizsla, who forms the first incarnation of Death Watch (because they are willing to die for their beliefs). Just as the True Mandalorians called their own leader the “True Mandalore” and the New Mandalorian leader the “Anti-Mandalore,” the Death Watch begins calling its leaders the “Secret Mandalores.” Leadership among the Death Watch will be up for challenge at any time through trial by combat, and the Secret Mandalore is to carry a symbol of their authority, the Darksaber, an ancient Jedi weapon stolen from the Jedi Temple long ago. The Death Watch symbol (based on a shriek-hawk in threat display) will be the symbol previously used as the clan symbol of Clan Vizsla.
(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas and The Bounty Hunter Code)

Members of the H’kig Religion flee to Rishi to avoid persecution.*
(conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)*

*NOTE: The Essential Guide to Alien Species originally put this in 70 BBY, but The Essential Atlas places it here in 60 BBY. It could very easily have been a movement that spanned a decade.

Around this time, a disease that has been killing many across the galaxy is finally cured with a vaccine, then announced extinct a short time later. (This same disease will later be unleashed on the Galactic Alliance by the Corellian Confederation during the time of Darth Caedus.)
(conjecture based on Fury)

Ma’kis’shaalas becomes a Morgukai warrior.*
(conjecture based on Geonosis and the Outer Rim Worlds)*

*NOTE: I am assuming that Ma’kis’shaalas leaves the Morgukai approximately five years before Tsyr and Ma’kis’shaalas meet again, which I have assumed is approximately five years before we meet Tsyr in Rite of Passage. Therefore, him serving for twenty years would begin that service here.

One of the hybrid Shard and droid beings from Orax, ironically named Ilum, is discovered to be Force-sensitive. Ilum, currently the only Force-sensitive Shard, begins to procreate, creating a new generation of Force-using Shards in droid bodies. Several take on droid bodies and are trained in the Force (in secret) by Jedi Master Aqinos. These new “Jedi droids” will not emerge on the galactic scene for ten more years, when they will earn the nickname "Iron Knights."
(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids and Droids and the Force)

Millennium Falcon (novel: James Luceno)

Millennium Falcon (novel: James Luceno)

Chapter 1

59 BBY

- Quinlan Vos is born on Kiffex.*
  (conjecture based on information found at starwars.com)*

  *NOTE: This assumes that Quinlan is 27 in TPM, which would make him just a couple of years older than Obi-Wan, but not quite 30.

- Roan Shryne is born to Jen and Jula Shryne.*
  (conjecture based on Dark Lord: The Rise of Darth Vader)*

  *NOTE: Roan is described as a couple of years older than Obi-Wan Kenobi.

- Tor Skirata is born to Kal Skirata and his wife, Ilippi.*
  (conjecture based on Order 66)*

  *NOTE: Tor is 39 as of approximately 19.5 BBY.

- Taroon is born to King Frane and his wife on Rutan.
  (conjecture based on The Shattered Peace)

- K’Yark (later known as A’Yark) is born amid the Tusken Raiders on Tatooine as the youngest of the six biological children of Yark.
  (conjecture based on Kenobi)
• Kal Skirata receives an ankle injury that leaves him limping for nearly forty years.
  (conjecture based on Order 66)
• Qymaen jai Sheelal (the future General Grievous) is born on the planet Kalee, which is in the midst of the generations-long Huk War with the Yam’rii species from the planet Huk. Sheelal is raised to hate the Yam’rii invaders and learns rifle skills and other warrior methods at a very early age.*
  (conjecture based on Unknown Soldier: The Story of General Grievous)*
*NOTE: At this point, we have no idea how old General Grievous was in ROTS. To create this entry (and thus use other age-based information we have about Grievous), I have assumed that he was 30 years old at the time when he became a cyborg.
• Nejaa Halcyon marries Scerra, secretly breaking Jedi restrictions on marriage.
  (conjecture based on I, Jedi, The Krytos Trap, and Jedi Trial)
• Erel Kersos of Corellia marries his off-world love, Feleema. It is because of their love that Kersos is clan-shunned.*
  (conjecture based on Jedi Healer)*
*NOTE: The dates for Kersos’ relationship with Feleema are a little bit odd. We are told that he was clan-shunned for sixty years, but also that he and Feleema were only married for six years before she died, which was a little over thirty years before Jedi Healer. That would mean that he was shunned for about twenty years before they were married. I’m going to assume that he was perhaps in love with her, but not married to her, for that time, but it’s far more likely that when the book refers to “sixty years” of being clan-shunned, the authors meant “forty years.” That would mean that his actual clan-shunning took place around this time, not in the previous entry back at 80 BBY, so take that previous entry with a grain of salt. Here, of course, I’m finding nearly forty years before Jedi Healer to 39 years.
• A massive earthquake renders the world that the pirates who stole the old Gandle Ott space station call home a dead world. The station is left abandoned in orbit.*
  (conjecture based on The DarkStryder Campaign: The Kathol Outback—“Wildfire”)*
*NOTE: This assumes “over 100 years ago” can be rounded to 101 years before TDC:TKO, which I’ve then taken 34 away from this event.

58 – 53 BBY
• Jorus C’Baoth attends Mirnic University. (Exact date according to Old Senate Library entry: 6/4/95 to 4/32/90 P.E.)*
  (conjecture based on Dark Force Rising)*
*NOTE: Please bear in mind that the Exact Date quoted here (6/4/95 – 4/32/90 P.E.) is Zahn’s erroneous dating based on when he believed the Clone Wars took place, and has thus been translated into a corrected date. It is included here for the sake of cross-referencing for those curious. See the “On P.E. Dating” notation above (which has been updated since the publication of The New Essential Chronology).

58 BBY
• Darsha Assant is born. She is either abandoned or orphaned very soon.*
  (conjecture based on Shadow Hunter)*
*NOTE: This assumes that Darsha is 25 when she is ready to move from Padawan to Jedi Knight, the same age Obi-Wan Kenobi was.
• Jad Winger is born to Davodan and Radelia Winger.
  (conjecture based on Charlene Newcomb’s website)
• Wembly is born.*
  (conjecture based on Death Troopers)*
*NOTE: He is in his “late fifties” during Death Troopers, so I have assumed 57 years, approximately, and dated backward from that novel (1 BBY).
• Ijaat Skirata is born to Kal Skirata and his wife, Ilippi.*
  (conjecture based on Order 66)*
*NOTE: Tor is 39 as of approximately 19.5 BBY, so his birth year is approximately 59 BBY, making him nearly 8 as of the end of 52 BBY. At that time, Ijaat was six.
• Retter Lewis is born.
  (conjecture based on Cracken’s Rebel Operatives)
• Cristoph Jam is born, presumably on Alderaan.*
  (conjecture based on Coruscant and the Core Worlds)*
*NOTE: Cristoph is in his “late fifties” when Alderaan is destroyed.
• The Yinchorri join the Republic Senate and begin dabbling outside their own system, using interstellar technology, probably stolen.
(conjecture based on Jedi Council: Acts of War)

- It is rumored that Ki-Adi-Mundi discovers Quinlan Vos and takes him to Coruscant for Jedi training during this time.*
(conjecture based on information found at starwars.com)*

*NOTE: This background was completely rewritten by flashbacks in Darkness, Part II.

- On Tatooine, a Hutt has taken control of the B’omarr temple. This Hutt discovers the monks living within and hopes that their “enlightenment” techniques can be the downfall of the Desilijic Hutt. He purposely loses the palace to Zorba the Hutt, but Zorba only stays long enough to loot the place. He then turns the palace over to his son, Jabba the Hutt, who comes to Tatooine to reside (rather than just have business interests there), but only stays in there long enough to issue some orders before making Mos Espa his home of choice.
(conjecture based on Secrets of Tatooine)

- Mace Windu, now fourteen, is at the top of his class, but he has yet to build his own lightsaber. He is awaiting a true challenge to gather crystals that will make his lightsaber unique. His Master sends him to Hurikane, where he has his first solo mission. In racing away from natives and leaping across a large chasm, he inadvertently causes a native to fall into the chasm. Using Jedi skills (and his own guilt) to help save the native, he receives the gratitude of the natives, and a gift—crystals to make a unique electrum lightsaber. (To be continued below . . . )

(Stones)

- On Concord Dawn, Journeyman Protector Jaster Mereel has been banished from his post and replaced by a man named Fett, who lives there with his daughter, wife, and son (Jango Fett). Jaster has reformed and joined a warrior Mandalorian mercenary group (the True Mandalorians, who live by a code Mereel has created, the Codex), but that group has now fractured into a group led by Jaster and a chaotic splinter group called the Death Watch, led by Tor Vizsla, resulting in the so-called Mandalorian Civil War. The Death Watch scatters Jaster’s Mandalorians on Concord Dawn, hunting them down. In the Fetts’ fields, Jango’s father goes to feed a “beggar,” while Jango fixes their harvester. He is cornered by Vizsla and his goons, who realize that the “beggar” is possibly Jaster or one of his group. They corner Jango’s father at their home. In escaping, Jango runs into Jaster’s band. Jango leads them to safety through an irrigation tube, and his resourcefulness impresses Jaster. He is allowed to go with the band into town. In the town, the Mandalorians under Jaster’s command ambush Vizsla’s forces, while Jango blows up their transport. Jango himself is forced to shoot Vizsla in self-defense. He is now a True Mandalorian, taken under Jaster’s wing . . . (To be continued below . . . )

(Jango Fett: Open Seasons)

- As the war between the True Mandalorians and the Death Watch comes to Concord Dawn, young Arla Fett, sister to Jango Fett, survives, but no one realizes it. The girl, now fourteen, becomes a spoil of war for the Death Watch, leading to extensive trauma.
(conjecture based on 501st)

- While not training directly with Darth Plagueis, Darth Sidious (Palpatine) spends the next five years “adventuring” in the Expansion Region and the Colonies, developing a taste for the “high life” that will come into play once he becomes Naboo’s Senator on Coruscant.
(conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)

Emissaries and Assassins Omnibus (comic: Timothy Truman & Ryder Windham & Mark Shultz & Henry Gilroy & Haden Blackman)

Jango Fett: Open Seasons (comic series: Haden Blackman)
Open Seasons, Part I [flashback] (comic: Haden Blackman)

Stones (SWT13 short story: Haden Blackman)
Stones [flashback] (SWT13 short story: Haden Blackman)

57 BBY

- Obi-Wan Kenobi is born on the planet Stewjon and lives with his parents and brother Owen until he begins showing signs of Force sensitivity and is taken to Coruscant to become a Jedi.*

(Obi-Wan Kenobi: Jedi Knight)*

*NOTE: This is actually shown (rather than referenced) in this children's book. The book itself is an overview of his life, so most of the other parts are all just adaptations of scenes from the films and such. This information was provided by Luke Van Horn. (Oh, and note that this is the brother Owen that he recalls in the Jedi Apprentice books, not Owen Lar, as was assumed before the prequels were produced.)

- O-Nena is born on Kegan.
  (conjecture based on The Fight for Truth)
- Cerasi is born on Melida/Daan to the Melida, Wehutti, and his wife.
  (conjecture based on The Defenders of the Dead)
- Nield is born on Melida/Daan to the Daan, Micae, and his wife.
  (conjecture based on The Defenders of the Dead)
- Daine Winger is born to Davodan and Radelia Winger.
  (conjecture based on Charlene Newcomb’s website)
- Bruck Chun is born.
  (conjecture based on The Rising Force)
- Reeft is born.*
  (conjecture based on The Captive Temple)*

*NOTE: This assumes that Reeft was 13, like Obi-Wan was, when he was chosen as a Padawan.

- Alani and Eritha are born to Ewane and his wife on Apsolon. Their mother dies shortly after their births.
  (conjecture based on The Ties That Bind)
- Vana Sage is born on Alderaan.*
  (conjecture based on Starfighter Aces article found in Star Wars Gamer #2)*

*NOTE: This assumes Vana is 25 in Starfighter.

- The Andoan Wars between Ando and the Andoan Free Colonies erupt after decades of tension. During these wars, one of the emerging heroes will be Admiral Trench.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)
- The Old Republic base on Dweem is abandoned. It’s security is left in the care of Jedi Master Aqinos’ “Jedi droids” (later known as Iron Knights), which he is still secretly training in the ways of the Force.
  (conjecture based on The Monsters of Dweem and The New Essential Guide to Droids)
- Mace Windu returns to Haruu Kal for the only time between being chosen for training and his mission there to retrieve Depa Billaba during the Clone Wars. While there, he learns how to speak Korun, his native language.
  (conjecture based on Shatterpoint)
- Ranulph Tarkin, now the most powerful man in Seswenna Sector, turns over Quintad Orbital Manufacturing to a cousin and convinces the sector’s Senator Ulm Brashere to ask the Supreme Chancellor to have him appointed Governor-General of the Seswenna Sector, making him responsible for the Seswenna Defense Forces, in which he once served. He is given his wish and begins strengthening the SDF’s military might by making lend-lease deals with the companies leasing QOM facilities, striking mutual defense treaties with neighbors, and arranging free passage agreements with other regions. The various Planetary Security Forces in the area he has influenced, including his own Seswenna Defense Force, become a new regional military power known as the Outland Regions Security Force. He often refers to it as the “Republic Navy,” as he sees it as the model that the Republic should follow.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)

Obi-Wan Kenobi: Jedi Knight (children’s book: Catherine Saunders)
Obi-Wan Kenobi: Jedi Knight (children’s book: Catherine Saunders)

56 BBY

- Feeana Tala is born on Mawan.
  (conjecture based on The Shadow Trap)
- Annileen Thaney is born to Caelum and Nella Thaney on Tatooine.
- Obi-Wan Kenobi begins training under Master Yoda.
  (conjecture based on The Rising Force)
- Nerra Ziveri accepts the last student he will ever accept to the Almas Jedi Academy, a Wookiee named Kirlocca.
  (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)
- The royal hunting lodge on Rutan is last inhabited (until the arrival of Drenna fifteen years later).
  (conjecture based on The Shattered Peace)
- Jen Shryne, upon discovering that his three-year-old son, Roan Shryne, is Force-sensitive, turns him over to the Jedi Order for training. His wife, Jula Shryne, disagrees with the decision. Memories of this disagreement will stay with Roan subconsciously, leading him to later refuse a position with the Jedi Order’s Acquisition Division, which goes out to hunt for Force-sensitive recruits.
  (conjecture based on Dark Lord: The Rise of Darth Vader)
- Around this time, the Corellian module that will become the command center of Melifar station’s smuggling ring a century from now is constructed.
  (conjecture based on Conviction)
- The Jedi watchman of the Kiffu/Kiffex system, Master Tholme, discovers that the son of Quian and Pethros Vos, Quinlan Vos, has Jedi potential. He tells Kurlin Vos, the Sheyf, but Tinte says he should remain on Kiffu as a Guardian. Kurlin somewhat agrees and allows Tholme to begin Quinlan’s training on Kiffu, even though he is a bit older than most beginning students.*
  (conjecture based on Darkness)*
*NOTE: This background from Darkness, Part II totally contradicts the original origin story given on starwars.com. It is presumed this is the correct one. For this entry, I have assumed that Quinlan is 27 in TPM, and that the events in this entry took place when he was about 3 years old, old enough to be “a little old” for Jedi training to begin.
- Darsha Assant is discovered to be Force sensitive. She is brought to the Jedi Temple on Coruscant.*
  (conjecture based on Shadow Hunter)*
*NOTE: This assumes that Darsha is 25 when she is ready to move from Padawan to Jedi Knight, the same age Obi-Wan Kenobi was.
- S-4QD is sent to Tilnes, a moon of Cularin, as a representative of the droids on Uffel.*
  (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)*
*NOTE: This rounds over two decades on Tilnes to 25 years.

55 BBY
- Bant Eiren is born on Calamari.
  (conjecture based on The Captive Temple)
- Siri Tachi is born.
  (conjecture based on The Captive Temple)
- Bissley Kloth is born.*
  (conjecture based on Lockdown)*
*NOTE: He is 22 in Lockdown.
- Braithe Winger is born to Davodan and Radelia Winger.
  (conjecture based on Charlene Newcomb’s website)
- Larisselle Chatrunis is born.
  (conjecture based on HoloNet News, Volume 531, Number 52)
- Ran Padell is born.*
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 1: A New Hope)*
*NOTE: Information provided by Luke Van Horn. He is 55 in The Battle of Wayfar, an RPG scenario in the guide.
- Graf Lind is born.*
  (conjecture based on Mask of the Pirate Queen)*
*NOTE: He is “in his fifties” in Mask of the Pirate Queen, which is likely set shortly after ANH. I have rounded to him being 55 years old.
- Mar Balayan is born.
Yeorg Captison is born on Bakura.

Ruusaan "Ruu" Skirata is born to Kal Skirata and his wife, Ilippi.*

Yeorg Captison is born on Bakura. (conjecture based on Truce at Bakura)

Ruusaan "Ruu" Skirata is born to Kal Skirata and his wife, Ilippi.* (conjecture based on Order 66 and 501st)*

*NOTE: Tor is 39 as of approximately 19.5 BBY (according to Order 66), so his birth year is approximately 59 BBY, making him nearly 8 as of the end of 52 BBY. At that time, Ruusaan was five, also according to Order 66. However, 501st specifically says that she is 36 “or thereabouts.” I’m going with the latter to be safe here.

Darth Vader is rumored to have been born.*

*NOTE: This is, of course, only a rumor. We learn in The Phantom Menace that Anakin Skywalker was born 41 BBY. I include this as a rumor because until TPM, most sources gave this date for Anakin/Vader’s birth, based on the Guide to the Star Wars Universe. I tend to think of this as what the galaxy at large thought of Vader’s origins, since his identity as Anakin Skywalker was a secret, hence the "Darth Vader is rumored to have been born" instead of “Anakin Skywalker is rumored to have been born.”

According to later claims, Chewbacca visits Kashyyyk for the last time before meeting Han Solo.*

*NOTE: Obviously, this is untrue, but one wonders if he was perhaps trying to hide his involvement with the Clone Wars for some reason.

Polis Massans discover that there is an ancient city, Wiyentaah, underneath one of their major research bases. The dig site becomes known as Local Dig, and the entire site (both the dig and the city) are renamed, collectively, to Wiyentaah.*

*NOTE: This is “over 50 years ago,” as of Strongholds of Resistance, which is presumably dating back from around the era of ANH, as most of Age of Rebellion goes. I have rounded this to 55 BBY.

Phloremirlla Tenk joins Republic Intelligence.

*NOTE: The Attichitcuk story had to have taken place in the post-Mallatobuck tribute period, but since it seemed like it was far closer to Chewie’s wedding than the earlier story, I placed it during this last trip home. The Ssoh story is added here on the assumption that the family seeking vengeance was Tojjevvuk.

Chewbacca [continued] (comic series: Darko Macan)*

Chewbacca, Part II [flashback] (comic: Darko Macan)*

Chapter 2: Attichitcuk [flashback]*

Chapter 3: Ssoh—"A Slaver’s Lot" [flashback]*

*NOTE: See note with summary above.

54 BBY

Maul is born to Mother Talzin on Dathomir. (Another account, possibly a cover story, would claim that Maul was born on Iridonia, not Dathomir, to a woman named Kycina, who was a...
Nightsister of Dathomir seeking to hide Maul from her clan leader, Talzin.) (conjecture based on Son of Dathomir, Star Wars: Journal—Episode I: Darth Maul, Darth Plagueis, and The Wrath of Darth Maul)

*NOTE: This uses the revised birth date of 54 BBY for Maul, given by Leland Chee on the starwars.com forums and in Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force. The material outside of parenthesis is from Son of Dathomir, which sources like Darth Plagueis provided the alternative information in parenthesis.

- Tork Winger is born to Davodan and Radelia Winger.
  (conjecture based on Charlene Newcomb’s website)
- Ellor Orgraal is born.*
  (conjecture based on Onslaught at Arda I)
*NOTE: He is in his “mid-fifties” in the adventure.
- Rhys Dallows is born on Naboo.
  (conjecture based on The Starfighter Trap)
- Opit-Wenbruh is born.
  (conjecture based on Cracken’s Rebel Operatives supplement in The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #11)
- Naem Yrros is born.
  (conjecture based on The Occupation of Rhamalai)
- Yaana is born on Senali to Meenon and his mate.
  (conjecture based on The Shattered Peace)
- Beru Whitesun is born.
  (conjecture based Shelagh Fraiser’s age via TimeTales, paraphrased)
- The Republic experiences an outbreak of Toli-X. Shortly thereafter, a vaccine is created, all but eliminating the disease from the galactic proper.
  (conjecture based on The Fight for Truth)
- Darsha Assant, after two years living at the Jedi Temple, officially begins Jedi training at the age of four.*
  (conjecture based on Shadow Hunter)
*NOTE: This assumes that Darsha is 25 when she is ready to move from Padawan to Jedi Knight.

- With some fearing that Ranulph Tarkin’s creation of the Outland Regions Security Force is the first step toward creating a new empire of his own, Tarkin is outraged by such accusations. He takes on the role of the Seswenna Sector’s Senator, leaving his cousin Garvedon as Governor-General in his place. He will push for military build-up by the Republic, recognizing that it is not prepared for any major confrontations that might arise. He and his fellow advocates of a new centralized (and ORSF-mocking) Republic military are dubbed “Militarists” by Senator Finis Valorum in an act of derision, but Ranulph Tarkin embraces the term, giving his faction its name from then on. (This is as opposed to the Reformists, who hope to limit the power of megacorporations but find the Militarists too tied to the military industrial complex’s own megacorporations. All Tarkin needs is a major conflict to prove that he is right. One will come ten years later with the Stark Hyperspace War, which will prove Ranulph Tarkin right, but also take his life.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Warfare)
- Darth Plagueis and Darth Sidious engage in training exercises for Sidious on Buoyant, Hypori, and the Sith world of Kursid, as the Grand Plan continues with the goal of no longer needing a Sith line to follow but to have Plagueis and Sidious rule the galaxy together for all time as immortals. Palpatine (Sidious) is now 28 and the political protégé of Naboo’s Senator Vidar Kim and has aides in his endeavors like Kinman Doriana and Sate Pestage. He is with Vidar on Malastare, discussing the need (which Palpatine only goes along with for the benefit to the Sith in the Grand Plan) for Naboo to help decrease the power of the Trade Federation and the Muuns (including Hego Damask AKA Darth Plagueis) in the Senate. While there, Vidar receives terrible news: his family has been killed in a starship crash. At the funeral on Naboo, Vidar expresses a desire to have his son, Ronhar Kim, take up the family legacy so that it will continue into the next generation, but Ronhar is a Jedi Knight and will not be easily persuaded to do so. Politics plays into the funeral as well, as Ars Veruna (Governor of Theed) expresses King Bon Tapalo’s disappointment in Vidar (who is only an ambassador to appease those still backing the royalists against Tapalo on Naboo) planning to vote against Damask on the Trade Federation issue, since Tapalo and Veruna owe their careers, in a sense, to Damask. Both Palpatine and Veruna know, though, that Damask himself can award the throne to Veruna in the future, and Palpatine will be the next Senator for Naboo. They need merely bide their time. (To be continued below . . . )

*NOTE: This portion of the novel is listed as beginning in 54 BBY (and continuing into 52 BBY). It starts 11 years after Palpatine joins Plagueis at age 17. He does not yet receive Maul from Kycina (in that now-contradicted segment) as of this segment, but since Maul is less than a year old, we can assume he was born in this year, then acquired the next year. Otherwise, the dates for the comic Bloodlines that tie into Darth Plagueis no longer work correctly.

Darth Plagueis [continued] (novel: James Luceno)

53 – 51 BBY

- Jorus C'Baoth studies at the Jedi Academy on Kamparas. (Exact date according to Old Senate Library entry: 215190 to 833188 P.E.)*
  (conjecture based on Dark Force Rising)*

*NOTE: Please bear in mind that the Exact Date quoted here (215190 – 833188 P.E.) is Zahn’s erroneous dating based on when he believed the Clone Wars took place, and has thus been translated into a corrected date. It is included here for the sake of cross-referencing for those curious. See the “On P.E. Dating” notation above (which has been updated since the publication of The New Essential Chronicle).

53 BBY

- Tarn Innis is born.
  (conjecture based on Cracken’s Rebel Operatives)
- V-Davi is born on Kegan.
  (conjecture based on The Fight for Truth)
- Bossk is born on Trandoshan.*
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Characters)*

*NOTE: This seems to contradict Jango Fett vs. the Razor Eaters, which has him being born 52 BBY, but we can assume, as we have in other cases, that it is a matter of relative time between birthdate within the year and when the story making an age reference takes place. The New Essential Guide to Characters specifically pins down this year as that of his birth.

- A young boy is born on Ord Sigatt. He will be the young boy that Obi-Wan Kenobi saves from Denon-Ardru Mutual security guards nine years later.
  (conjecture based on The Life and Legend of Obi-Wan Kenobi)
- During this era, the current Supreme Chancellor of the Republic is Thoris Darus.
  (conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)
- While on Novar 3, Kassar Kosciusko receives a slash across his face that leaves a rather noticeable scar.
  (conjecture based on Cracken’s Rebel Operatives)
- Essara Till begins to tire of the Naboo educational system’s focus on the arts and philosophy.
  (conjecture based on The Starfighter Trap)
- Q2-2D buys Riboga the Hutt’s interest in the mines of Uffel.
  (conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)
- Artagan Truax will claim to have saved the life of Iram Radique on Lakteen Depot during this year, though it was actually four years later.*
  (conjecture based on Lockdown)*

*NOTE: I am not sure whether this is an error in the book or purposeful misdirection. When referring to this event loosely, Artagan says it was “twenty years ago,” but then when he gives the details to Eogan, he says it was “sixteen years ago.” Granted, he was in great pain and speaking quickly at the time.

- Lorian Nod and the leadership of Delaluna begin to conspire to make Junction 5 believe that the Delalunan government has a powerful weapon called the “Annihilator.”
  (conjecture based on Legacy of the Jedi)
- The Bith Opera that will perform The Brief Reign of Future Wraiths on Coruscant twenty years from now begins touring.
(conjecture based on Cloak of Deception)

- On Cularin, Riboga the Hutt loses his operation to his assistant, Nirama, in a sabacc game. Riboga is happy to lose and returns to Nal Hutta. Nirama makes several moves to change the organization, including putting a stop to slaving operations, a move from which Hlisk Squin barely escapes. His envoy to the smuggler groups is Len Markus, while his envoy to other planets in the system is Nadin Paal, who had hoped to go straight with Riboga’s departure, to no avail. In Riboga’s absence, the Central Council on Genarius actually begins working more efficiently.
(conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)

- Leed, eldest son of the Rutanian ruler King Frane, is sent to Senali to live with the family of Senalis ruler Meenon in accordance with the tradition which has ensured peace between Rutan and Senai for generations.
(conjecture based on The Shattered Peace)

- Shortly after Riboga the Hutt leaves the Cularin System, Aola Ben and Mala, rules of the Thaere Privo trading houses, are killed. Bal Ferensil weasels his way into taking their place, thanks to his political ties.
(conjecture based on wizards.com via TimeTales, paraphrased)

- Erel Kersos’ wife, Feleema, dies with several hundred others in a mag-lev accident on Coruscant. This leaves Kersos with no wife and no family to return to, since his love for her left him clan-shunned. He instead turns his energies to his military career.*
(conjecture based on Jedi Healer)*

*NOTE: Erel and Feleema were married for six years, which I’ve dated back from a marriage date of 39, based on comments that her death was over thirty years before Jedi Healer, and they’d been married a little less than forty years ago at that time.

- On Muunilinst at Aborah, Darth Plagueis succeeds in pacifying his aggressive Yinchorri test subject, finally being able to manipulate midichlorians and the Force enough to overcome a natural “immunity” to Force suggestion, which he thinks might allow him to cause peaceful species to be aggressive, or even create life in the absence of fertilization . . . Meanwhile, Palpatine pays a visit to the planet Dathomir, which is known to be strong in the Force. According to what might be a cover story, while in Blue Desert City, he is met by a Nightsister named Kycina, who is carrying her newborn son (a Dathomiri Zabrak “Nightbrother” with the traditional red and black tattoos already on his body, who is less than a year old) with her. In order to save them from the fate of servitude to the Nightsisters like his brother(s), she begs Palpatine to take him, even knowing that he would become a servant of Palpatine (Sidious). The child’s name, she tells him, is Maul. In truth, Sidious has (either now or in the past) met with Mother Talzin to share Dark Side secrets. She has been made to think that Sidious will take her as his partner as a Sith, but he instead takes the Force-sensitive Maul, who is in fact Talzin’s own son . . . At the next Gathering on Sojourn, Plagueis explains to Palpatine that they should let the Trade Federation continue seeking to gain more power, so that when the Senate eventually ignores the needs of the Trade Federation’s client worlds under its grip, it will spread disenfranchisement and rebellious sentiment. They should also encourage Veruna in his desire to create a Space Corps to defend Naboo against the Trade Federation, so that they can lead Naboo into a confrontation with the Trade Federation once Veruna is king one day. All of these destabilizing acts serve the Grand Plan in its goal of control of the galaxy. Palpatine also suggests that, in trying to eventually bring down the Jedi, it is not enough to try to kill them, which would be difficult, but to make them into enemies of the Republic, thereby making any who do survive into outlaws, not martyrs. They also continue to work to eventually put Palpatine into the Supreme Chancellor position, where they have agreed that Palpatine will be so lauded at the time that he can use his newfound powers to create a co-chancellorship with Damask (Plagueis) at his side, sharing power (for all time if they can figure out the secret to immortality). To Palpatine’s shock (but not resistance), Plagueis declares that the time has come for the assassination of Vidar Kim that will allow Palpatine to become Naboo’s senator. Disturbed by Darth Plagueis’ decision that Darth Sidious must have his mentor, Vidar Kim, killed, Palpatine nevertheless arranges for such an assassination, even as Vidar himself is suspecting that Ars Veruna and King Bon Tapalo of Naboo may have arranged the deaths of his family. He has already met with his son, Jedi Knight, Ronhar Kim, who refuses to take up the family legacy, but Vidar has gotten Ronhar to agree to one more meeting, this time on Coruscant. Even as Palpatine makes arrangements for the assassination, Darth Plagueis, in the guise of Hego Damask (his "profane" self), visits the planet Kamino to speak with Ko Sai and other cloners about the possibility of having an army made up of Yinchorri produced, but they expect that there might be difficulties in making a compliant army out of the naturally aggressive Yinchorri. (To be continued below . . . )*

(Darth Plagueis)*

*NOTE: The age of Darth Maul and later references to these events being 20 years prior to 33 BBY require that the death of Vidar Kim in Bloodlines, which is an event included in Darth Plagueis, be in 53 BBY, not 52 BBY as the comic suggests. See the note with the next segment of Bloodlines immediately below. The idea that Kykina giving Maul to Sidious being just a cover story is my own attempt to make sense of two contradictory stories about Maul’s background, so that it can coincide with the later origin we received through Son of Dathomir. The information about how “in truth” he was Talzin’s son and such is all from that T-Canon comic series.

- On Coruscant, Jedi Knight Ronhar Kim visits his father, Senator Vidar Kim of Naboo. Ronhar doesn’t feel any family ties to Vidar, since the Jedi Order is his family, but Vidar wants him to rejoin the family in the wake of the deaths of Ronhar’s brothers and mother in a crash. As they are in an airspeeder, they are attacked by a mysterious assassin, who manages to kill Vidar. Ronhar corners the assassin, but he takes his own life with a strange device for fast suicide. Shortly thereafter, Vidar is laid to rest on Naboo. Ronhar is attending to his father’s memory when he is approached by the new Senator for Naboo that has taken his father’s place, Palpatine. They begin a friendship that they hope can help give the Jedi a voice in the Republic . . . Little does Ronhar know that this was all Palpatine’s machinations to get himself into the Senate. (To be continued below . . . )*

(Bloodlines)*

*NOTE: The death of Vidar Kim, seen in Bloodlines, was originally set in 52 BBY, based on a comment from Ronhar that he his father’s death had been “twenty years ago,” dating back from a time just after Palpatine became Supreme Chancellor in 32 BBY. However, these events and those surrounding them are retold in Darth Plagueis, and that novel puts it in a section that is labeled “54 – 52” BBY. Very little time, though, seems to pass between the start of that section and this event, and later references around the time of the Yinchorri crisis in the third part of Darth Plagueis constantly dates this back to 20 years before that time (33 BBY). Thus, I can only take “twenty years ago” in Bloodlines as an estimate on Ronhar’s part in his retelling of events and put these events here, instead of a year later as originally described.

- On Coruscant, Palpatine attends the funeral of Vidar Kim, forming a friendship with Ronhar Kim, Vidar’s Jedi son. Palpatine is now to be Naboo’s new Senator, as was the plan of Darth Plagueis all along. Shortly thereafter, Plagueis (as Hego Damask of Damask Holdings) joins his aid (and future leader of the InterGalactic Banking Clan) Larsh Hill on a business trip to Serenno, specifically so that he can meet again with an unusually-frustrated Jedi Master: Dooku of Serenno. Dooku is there along with his friend and fellow Jedi Master Sifo-Dyas and Dooku’s former Padawan, Jedi Knight Qui-Gon Jinn. Plagueis knows that Dooku is somehow tied into the Grand Plan, but he does not yet know how. During the conversation between Damask and the Jedi, Plagueis begins to consider that a way to bring down the self-righteous Jedi would not be to create an army to fight against them but to fight alongside them, which would also put assassin’s right near individual Jedi. He then has a private conversation with Sifo-Dyas, in whom he plants the idea of having an army for the Republic, in case of crisis, actually created by cloners, though the Dark Side holds him back from actually naming Kamino as a possible source of such clones. They meet again on Coruscant, when Palpatine is greeting the Jedi in the lead-up to a vote that would put several client worlds of the Trade Federation, including Felucia, into the Republic. Rather than supporting the Trade Federation or going against them, thereby straddling the different political schemes the Sith have in place, Palpatine uses Vidar Kim’s unsolved murder as a reason to protest by having Naboo abstain from voting either way. The Trade Federation side wins, and the planets enter the Republic, and both sides see Palpatine as having been, in some form, “with” them. Weeks later, Palpatine goes for a secret meeting that an unknown party has requested in a seedier part of Coruscant. Once there, he is “captured” (i.e. he goes along with a kidnapping plot to see who is behind it) and taken to an abandoned factory, where he learns that those angry over the death of Kerrad Santhe years ago (blamed on Hego Damask, who is a known friend of Palpatine) and Gran who feel betrayed by Palpatine’s vote are planning to kill him as a message to Damask. Before he can reveal his true power, he is “saved” by Echani Sun Guards, Damask’s loyal security force. Plagueis had already known about the kidnapping in its planning stages and allowed it to happen as a test for Sidious. After telling Palpatine that his part in the night’s activities is over, Plagueis (as Damask) is to bring Larsh Hill into the exclusive Canted Circle order at their lodge. As the ceremony begins, another group of assassins from the Grand Protectorate attack in the guise of Canted Circle members that they have already killed. Plagueis is gravely wounded, but not killed. Palpatine is warned of the attack by Sate Pestage, who has learned that the assassins are Maladians, claiming to have been humiliated by how the Vidar Kim assassination was nearly botched. They took the contract on Damask to sate their honor. Sidious and Pestage race to the lodge, where Sidious saves Plagueis and kills the assassins, revealing their abilities to Pestage, who is more than willing to serve the Sith. They then have the Malastare embassy destroyed in a “gas explosion.” A month later, Plagueis (now recovering) invites Sidious to finally join him at his lab on Muunilinst on the Aborah land mass. There, Sidious learns more about Plagueis’ experiments. Plagueis has been able to cause multiple pregnancies in test subjects using the Force to manipulate the midichlorians, but he believes that the Force struck back at how he tried to manipulate it, which he thinks accounts for the attempt on his life. He intends to go to Sojourn to focus on his experimentation and tutor San Hill for eventually becoming the InterGalactic Banking Clan chairman. Meanwhile, Sidious (as Palpatine) will continue to manipulate events on Coruscant and elsewhere. Sidious suggests that they train the a warrior to be a skilled warrior, yet not a true Sith Lord, who can be disposed up when necessary. He reveals having received the child Maul from Dathomir less than a full year ago and suggests that Maul be that warrior. They agree to have the child placed on Mustafar in the care of droids, then taken eventually to the planet Orsis to train under the Falleen combat specialist Trezza. The Grand Plan continues forward . . . (To be continued below . . . )

(Darth Plagueis)*

NOTE: To make the date for Vidar Kim’s death in Bloodlines still work, I have split the Darth Plagueis summary to have Plagueis’ order to have Vidar Kim killed come near the end of 53 BBY, thereby allowing the death itself to be here in 52 BBY, based on the Bloodlines date. That summary has then been split, as you see in the preceding entries, to allow Bloodlines to fit in between parts of Darth Plagueis, since that novel only discusses, rather than shows, the events.

- On Coruscant, Qui-Gon Jinn trains with his second Padawan, Xanatos, and his first Padawan (now a Jedi Knight), Feemor. Feemor is eager to be assigned to a Jedi Master as Padawan Learner, while Xanatos is betraying his sense of pride by referring to his noble-born heritage from Telos. Seeing a need to test Xanatos, Yoda and the Jedi Council request Qui-Gon and Xanatos for a mission to Telos IV, Xanatos’ homeworld. The high priestess Liora has been killed, possibly a political assassination, and they are sending Qui-Gon, Xanatos, Tahl (close friend and potentially more for Qui-Gon), and the young Twi’lek Orykan (former Padawan to the deceased Casieck Akinslesh, who might soon become Tahl’s new Padawan) to investigate. Tahl reveals en route that she requested to join them on the mission so that she can seek out some Jedi Civil War era holocrons from the old Jedi Academy on Telos. They arrive and are immediately shot down. They survive the crash and battle a group of anti-Republic attackers before being joined by King Crion (Xanatos’ father) and his guard. Xanatos is not pleased to see his father, though Crion is at least somewhat glad that his son has arrived. The Jedi are shown around by Crion’s advisor, Hukowl An Devi. As they settle in, Xanatos’ sister, Nason, meets with Dairoki. They have plans for young Xanatos . . . When alone, Crion tries to convince Xanatos to help him prove that Toprawa was behind the assassination of Liora, but he refuses to betray Qui-Gon by aligning himself with Crion instead of the independent Jedi. The Jedi (minus Tahl) visit the scene of Liora’s death. Qui-Gon senses traces in the Force from the event, but Xanatos cannot (due to a Force distortion over the event that seems to indicate that a Jedi was involved) and Orykan is overwhelmed by what she senses, probably due to the recent loss of her own Jedi Master. Meanwhile, Tahl visits their archives, only to spy an Antarian Ranger (part of a group who trains with the Jedi and works with them) with two conspirators discussing the attack on the Jedi ship. She takes out two of them, but the Ranger escapes. She and Qui-Gon compare notes on New Citadel Station at an event held by Crion, where Xanatos also encounters his sister and is increasingly jealous of Orykan, thinking she really will replace him with Qui-Gon. Soon, Dairoki meets with the supposed Ranger, giving him a lightsaber to use in an upcoming plot.
Xanatos and Nason, meanwhile, slowly get to know one another as siblings. Qui-Gon goes undercover to contact Welleques, an arms dealer, to find more information. Just as Qui-Gon returns, Crion and his entourage are attacked, forcing Qui-Gon, Xanatos, and Tahl to attack the attackers, who seem to be acting without Dairoki’s consent. Dairoki steps in to save Qui-Gon briefly, but then he witnesses Nason being killed by one of the attackers and flees. Tahl recognizes the scarred man (Dairoki) and is sent by the Jedi Council to Telos IV to investigate this lead further, wondering if this test might be for Qui-Gon, rather than Xanatos. Before Tahl can leave, however, the Jedi Council sends her instead to the Landor system to seek the pirates who killed Stieg Wa. Orykan is to stay with Qui-Gon and an increasingly jealous Xanatos. Before she leaves, they compare notes. Dairoki is likely the individual that Qui-Gon sensed (a Jedi but not a Jedi) at the scene of Liora’s death, since he trained on Coruscant as a Jedi student at one time but departed before completing his training. Hukowl, Crion’s minister, reveals that one of the insurgents (the supposed Antarian Ranger, but not dressed as such when he attacked the family) had a lightsaber on him (the one given to him by Dairoki). While Tahl leaves, and Qui-Gon investigates with Orykan, Xanatos breaks with Qui-Gon to protect Crion himself. Qui-Gon goes undercover to meet with Welleques. He takes out most of the men assembled and questions another, but he is unable to learn much about the involvement of Dairoki and the Ranger in the insurgency before the man is killed by a sniper. That same night, Dairoki meets with Crion, revealing that they have been working together to manipulate the insurgents to implicate the Antarian Rangers and Toprawa in the insurgency. Crion sends Dairoki away, now that he has revealed himself to the Jedi and Nason has died. Telos breaks off diplomatic relations with Toprawa entirely, citing an Antarian and Toprawan conspiracy. Xanatos’ insistence on supporting his father’s moves continues driving a wedge between Master and Padawan. With Xanatos at his side, Crion announces that the military will act to destroy the insurgency. Crion finally reveals to Xanatos what Dairoki also reveals to Minister Hukowl, thinking he is in on it: that Crion actually allowed a homegrown insurgency to grow (and accidentally kill Nason) as a means of gathering support to strike at an innocent Toprawa. Hukowl takes this information to Qui-Gon, then to the people of Telos IV via his own broadcast to the masses. Meanwhile, Qui-Gon tries to get to Xanatos to apologize and convince him to leave to return to the Jedi Temple, but Crion and his guards attack Qui-Gon, causing Orykan (who followed him against orders) to jump into the fray. When Crion is about to kill Orykan, Qui-Gon attacks to shatter his blade, only to send Crion falling to his death amidst hot coals. Xanatos strikes his Jedi Master, falling toward the Dark Side, even going so far as to brand his own face with Crion’s ring that has been made scorching hot by the coals. In the chaos that ensues as the insurgents enter, Xanatos vanishes. Qui-Gon sends Orykan back to the Temple, where the Jedi Council assures him that a new Kaiburr crystal is ready so he can build a replacement lightsaber for the one lost in the battle, but Qui-Gon chooses not to return home yet. He needs time to heal himself . . . *

(The Dark Side)*

*NOTE: I had previously set the fall of Xanatos in 49 BBY due to a taunt in which Xanatos refers to how Qui-Gon would have reacted “five years ago” in The Captive Temple. However, Jedi: The Dark Side now covers these events and places them four years earlier, here in 53 BBY. I can only assume that the “five years ago” reference for Xanatos is now considered incorrect or an estimation (though it would have made more sense for him to estimate ten years, instead of five, wouldn’t you agree?).

• Qui-Gon Jinn and Tahl go to Ragoon-6 for exercise and to get Qui-Gon’s mind off of Xanatos. (To be continued below . . . )*

(The Death of Hope)*

*NOTE: I originally had this event in 49 BBY, based on the previous placement of Xanatos’ fall, but now that Jedi: The Dark Side has moved his fall to 53 BBY, this event must be moved as well.

• Nerra Ziveri, the Jedi Master in charge of the Academy on Almas, finally penetrates the aura of the Dark Side on Almas. He sends a message to Lanius Qel-Bertuk, telling him to take charge of the academy. Then Ziveri vanishes from known space and the senses of all Jedi. His fate remains a mystery.*

(conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)*

*NOTE: I had originally placed this in 56 BBY, but JvS:TEGIF places it in 53 BBY.

• After Nerra Ziveri is already gone, Klis Joo comes to Almas on Ziveri’s invitation. Instead of teaching at the Jedi Academy, though, she finds that her place is in the town of Forard, where she will soon become governor.*

(conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)*

*NOTE: I had originally placed this in 56 BBY, but JVSTEGItF places it in 53 BBY, given the timing of Ziveri’s disappearance.

- Two weeks after Nerra Ziveri’s disappearance, Jedi Master Lanius Qel-Bertuk sends a message to his colleagues at the Jedi Academy on Almas with regard to the former headmaster (Nerra Ziveri), who has disappeared while studying the Sith temple on the far side of Almas. In his message, Lanius discusses the Dark Jedi Conflict. Lanius is now to be the new headmaster and will remain so until the era of the Clone Wars. (To be continued below . . . )

(Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)

- On Sorrus, government agents approach Goq Cranna’s tribe. They propose the building of a dam, saying both the government and the tribe will benefit. Ona Nobis, a member of the tribe, is a strong voice in favor of the dam. Finally, the tribe votes to allow the dam. It is built, stripping the tribe of water and leaving them with very little hope for survival from the land, but unable to leave to more fertile areas where stronger tribes rule. The tribe soon discovers that Ona Nobis is in collusion with the government. She leaves them, effectively banished. Ona Nobis continues on away from Sorrus as a bounty hunter, while, within the tribe, her name becomes one seldom spoken.

(conjecture based on The Evil Experiment)

Darth Plagueis [continued] (novel: James Luceno)

Darth Plagueis [continued] (novel: James Luceno)
Apprenticed to Power [continued]
  Quantum Being
  Bold as Love

Republic [continued] (comic series: Peet Janes & Jan Strnad & Tim Truman & John Ostrander & Pat Mills & Doug Petrie & Haden Blackman & Randy Stradley & Welles Hartley)
Bloodlines (comic: John Ostrander)
  Bloodlines (comic: John Ostrander)
  “Death of Vidar Kim Flashback”

Darth Plagueis [continued] (novel: James Luceno)

Darth Plagueis [continued] (novel: James Luceno)
Apprenticed to Power [continued]
  Bold as Love [continued]
  Days of Wine and Impropriety
  Artful Dodging
  The Trials
  The Canted Circle
  Investiture

Jedi (comic series: Scott Allie)

The Dark Side (comic series: Scott Allie)
  The Dark Side, Part I (comic: Scott Allie)
  The Dark Side, Part II (comic: Scott Allie)
  The Dark Side, Part III (comic: Scott Allie)
  The Dark Side, Part IV (comic: Scott Allie)
  The Dark Side, Part V (comic: Scott Allie)

Jedi Apprentice [continued] (youth novel series: Dave Wolverton & Jude Watson)

The Death of Hope [flashback] [continued] (youth novel: Jude Watson)
  Chapter 10 [flashback]

  The Dark Side [continued]
    Dark Jedi [continued]
The Star Wars Timeline Gold: Legends Timeline, Vol. 1

The Dark Jedi Conflict [continued]

52 BBY

- Jar Jar Binks is born on Naboo.
  (conjecture based on Episode I: Insider's Guide)
- Aurra Sing is born to Aunuanna (a spice-addict) on Nar Shaddaa.*
  (conjecture based on The Clone Wars Magazine #1)*
  *NOTE: This assumes that The Clone Wars Magazine (U.S. version) is correct in saying that Aurra Sing is "around 30" as of the Clone Wars.
- Tenn Graneet is born.*
  (conjecture based on Death Star)*
  *NOTE: Tenn is "past fifty" as of Death Star.
- Garm Bel Iblis is born on Corellia.
  (conjecture based on Dark Force Rising Sourcebook)
- Bolabo Hujaan is born.
  (conjecture based on Cracken's Rebel Operatives)
- Rith Tar'ak is born.
  (conjecture based on Cracken's Rebel Operatives supplement in The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #11)
- Byrch Dyshkava, the Padawan, escapes from the Menahuan.
  (conjecture based on Planet of Twilight)
- According to the Besadii Hutt clan 30 years from now, this is when the Desilijic clan purchases the Moulee-rah Patogga from them. The Desilijics will later deny that this took place.
  (conjecture based on HoloNet News, Volume 531, Number 56)
- Around this time, a thirty-year series of events begins to wipe out Ghosh Windu on Haruun Kal.
  (conjecture based on Planet of Twilight)
- After a year of rumors that Hego Damask was killed in the attack at the Order of the Canted Circle's lodge, Hego Damask is mostly confirmed by the media to just be living in seclusion on Sojourn.
  (conjecture based on Planet of Twilight)
- TCW DATE: Around this time, firebeetles are eradicated in the populated areas of Tanaab.
  (conjecture based on Wild Space)
- TCW DATE: Followers of the pacifistic code of Te Padka on Mygeeto begin being anxious about the disorder spreading throughout the galaxy.*
  (conjecture based on The Clone Wars: The Official Episode Guide: Season 1)*
  *NOTE: Information provided by Luke Van Horn. This is "decades" before the Battle of Geonosis, which I have rounded to 30 years.
- Lorian Nod, out of prison, comes to power on Junction 5 as leader of the Guardians, who take power to protect the populace from the supposed threat of the Delalunan "Annihilator" weapon.
  (conjecture based on Legacy of the Jedi)
- By this time, the Nebula Front has emerged, vowing to thwart the Trade Federation by any means necessary.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
- Patch Bruit begins working for Lommite Limited.*
  (conjecture based on Saboteur)*
  *NOTE: This rounds almost 20 years to 19 years.
- Two Duiongwuin star dragons arrive on Shatuu and go into seclusion to reproduce and raise their offspring.
  (conjecture based on The DarkStryder Campaign: The Kathol Outback)
- On Melida/Daan, Micae's widow (Nields' mother) leaves Nields with a young cousin and goes into battle against the Melida. She dies. Shortly thereafter, the Melida invade the cousin's village, but Nields and his cousin escape.
  (conjecture based on The Defenders of the Dead)
• On Melida/Daan, Micae and his three eldest sons (i.e. all but Nields) go into battle with the Melida. All four die.
  (conjecture based on The Defenders of the Dead)
• Around this time, the InterGalactic Banking Clan’s Vlem Hill quietly purchases the rights to the uninhabited planet known as P1S16IS0070. There, he sets up Vlemoth Port, caps undersea volcanos with mine-spires, and otherwise sets up industrial operations, including Sanshor Flats.*
  (conjecture based on Friends Like These)
*NOTE: This is “decades” before the Clone Wars, which I have rounded to 30 years.
• Kuat Systems Engineering releases the Delta-6 Sprite-class starfighter, which receives excellent reviews. The Jedi Order begins using the Delta-6 as their primary starfighter.
  (conjecture based on Force and Destiny Core Rulebook)
*NOTE: They are in use “in the decades leading up to the Clone Wars,” which I have approximated as 30 years.
• The Freedom’s Messenger is built at the Corellian Engineering Corporation’s shipyards and commissioned by the Chandrilan government as a diplomatic vessel.
  (conjecture based on The DarkStryder Campaign)
• Quian and Pethros Vos are killed by a group of Anzati. Their downed ship is found on Kiffex. To determine the nature of their killers (and presumably to break young Quinlan Vos’ mind to make him useless to the Jedi), Tinte has him use his psychometric powers to read and relive his parents’ deaths through his mother’s Guardian emblem. For three days, Quinlan screams. Kurlin is appalled and allows Master Tholme to take Quinlan to Coruscant for full Jedi training to cleanse and heal his mind. Once he is on Coruscant, Tholme goes back to being Jedi watchman of the Kiffex/Kiffu area.*
  (conjecture based on Darkness)
*NOTE: This background from Darkness, Part II totally contradicts the original origin story given on starwars.com. It is presumed this is the correct one. For this entry, I have assumed that Quinlan is 27 in TPM, and that the events in this entry took place when he was about 7 years old, “several years” after he first begins training, which was presumed to be when he was 3 years old.
• Shortly after bring brought to the Jedi Temple, Quinlan Vos learns how to “see” using the wind and rain from Yoda. (To be continued below . . . )*
  (Hidden Enemy*)
*NOTE: This is “not long after I’d come to the Temple,” according to Quin, so I have placed it here, assuming the date for the event preceding it, Quin coming to Coruscant from Kiffex, is correct.
• After several years with the True Mandalorians, being raised nearly as Jaster Mereel’s son, Jango Fett is finally given his own squad. His friend Silas will be part of it. The three lead Mandalorians brief the others on their mission. They have been hired by the Korda Defense Force to save a rookie security squad pinned down by a few hostile locals on Korda 6. Jaster will lead the actual recovery, while Jango’s team provides cover and Montross’ team hits the attackers from above. Montross, though, isn’t exactly a team player, and he views Jango as an impediment to Montross leading the Mandalorians whenever Jaster chooses his successor. The mission commences, and the Mandalorians find themselves in an intense battle with far more enemies than were reported. Jaster orders them all to regroup with Jango so they can abort the mission, but Montross ignores the abort order and continues his attack, nearly getting himself killed before Jaster can save him. Jango, meanwhile, uses Montross’ “idiotic attack” to go after the target. As Jango’s group reaches the target, though, they are ambushed. The entire thing was a setup orchestrated by Tor Vizsla (who is very much alive after being left to die on Concord Dawn) and his Death Watch. As Jango and his team get away from the Death Watch, Vizsla corners Jaster and Montross in a huge tank. Before going after Vizsla, Jaster tells Montross that if they survive, Montross is essentially banished from Jaster’s crew. Montross jets to safety as Jaster is pinned down, refusing to help. Montross will simply leave Jaster to be killed, so he can take over the Mandalorians. As Montross leaves, Jango arrives and nearly rushes into a hail of blaster fire (which has cut Jaster down) to save his surrogate father, but Silas stops him before he throws his life away. As Vizsla leaves, his vendetta to kill Jaster complete, Jango walks to Jaster’s body. Back at the Mandalorian ships, Montross assumes command, telling the others that Jaster is dead, and Jango also died trying to save Jaster. Jango and Silas arrive then, with Jaster’s body in Jango’s arms. Jango tells them that they are going to get Jaster away from the planet, then go back after Vizsla. Montross argues that he should take command, but Jango and the others believe he is unfit. Montross leaves them, as Jango takes command of the Mandalorians . . . (To be continued below . . . )

(Jango Fett: Open Seasons)

• In the wake of the apparent end of the Mandalorian Civil War, Kuat Drive Yars AIAT/I starships replace Mandalorian Meteor-class Q-carriers.
(conjecture based on The History of the Mandalorians)

• Jango Fett, now the True Mandalore, takes Jaster Mereel's symbol from his time as a Journeyman Protector on Concord Dawn as his own symbol to remind him that betrayal is always a possibility.
(conjecture based on The Bounty Hunter Code)

• Late this year, as Tor Skirata nears his eighth birthday, his father, Kal Skirata, intends to take him to train and fight alongside him for five years, as is ancient and True Mandalorian tradition. His wife, Ilippi, refuses to allow this. The next time he returns from combat, the two will be divorced. Their sons, Tor and Ijaat, will later divorce Kal as well, once their mother is both remarried and dying, but daughter Ruusaan will not.*
(conjecture based on Order 66)*

*NOTE: Tor is 39 as of approximately 19.5 BBY, so his birth year is approximately 59 BBY, making him nearly 8 here.

Republic [continued] (comic series: Peet Janes & Jan Strnad & Tim Truman & John Ostrander & Pat Mills & Doug Petrie & Haden Blackman & Randy Stradley & Welles Hartley & Welles Hartley)
Hidden Enemy [flashback] (comic: John Ostrander)
Hidden Enemy, Part III [flashback] (comic: John Ostrander)

Emissaries and Assassins Omnibus [continued] (comic: Timothy Truman & Ryder Windham & Mark Shultz & Henry Gilroy & Haden Blackman)
Jango Fett: Open Seasons [continued] (comic series: Haden Blackman)
Open Seasons, Part II [flashback] (comic: Haden Blackman)

51 BBY

• Gilad Pellaeon is born on Coruscant.
(conjecture based Revelation and Allies)*

*NOTE: Pellaeon was 92 at the time of his death. This replaces his birthdate as speculated by Leland Chee on the StarWars.com, which itself had previously replaced the 66 BBY birth date speculated from the Dark Force Rising Sourcebook.

• Brace Tarkosa is born.*
(conjecture based on Outbound Flight)*

*NOTE: Survivor’s Quest pins Chas Uliar’s age at 22 at the time of Outbound Flight. The novel Outbound Flight then notes that Brace Tarkosa is two years older than Uliar, hence this entry. See the note at 29 BBY about Chas
Uliar joining Outbound Flight for further details, if desired.

• Essara Till, feeling her piloting skills are being wasted on Naboo, leaves Naboo for adventures in the galaxy at large. She soon discovers that the galaxy that she had thought was so peaceful has a much darker underbelly than she had ever expected. Her first adventures are in the swoop racing circuit. She then becomes a pilot. At one early point, she is piloting for Agamar.
(conjecture based on The Starfighter Trap)

• Billey becomes a smuggler.
(conjecture based on The Smugglers Alliance)

• Jafer Torles becomes the Jedi Guardian for Cartao.
(conjecture based on Hero of Cartao: Hero’s Call)

• Thak Val Zsing takes charge of the Desert Wind resistance group on Ord Cestus.
(conjecture based on The Cestus Deception)

• An outbreak of Toli-X, which is curable in the Republic, occurs on the isolationist Kegan. The population is decimated. Among the dead are the parents of V-Davi. After their deaths, V-Davi is sent to the Learning Circle, two years ahead of when he would normally have been admitted.
(conjecture based on The Fight for Truth)
• Ahrisa begins to become a popular food item.
  (conjecture based on The Dangerous Rescue via TimeTales, paraphrased)
• Only a few decades before Ord Cestus' manipulation by both the Separatists and Republic in the Clone Wars, the eons-old tunnels beneath the surface of the planet are finally mapped.
  (conjecture based on The Cestus Deception)
• TCW DATE: Obi-Wan Kenobi, barely six at the time, first uses the Force to hold back a waterfall flowing over his head in a common Jedi training exercise. He will eventually work his way up to doing so in the rain, which is a bit more complex.
  (conjecture based on Wild Space)
• Around this time, the Summertime War begins on Haruun Kal, when the native Korunnai finally clash with the Balawai (immigrant) militia.*
  (conjecture based on Shatterpoint)
  *NOTE: This interprets “almost thirty years” as 29 years.
• Jorus C'Baoth begins studying under an unknown Jedi Master. (Exact date according to Old Senate Library entry: 9\,88 P.E.)*
  (conjecture based on Dark Force Rising)
  *NOTE: Please bear in mind that the exact date quoted here (9\,88 P.E.) is Zahn's erroneous dating based on when he believed the Clone Wars took place, and has thus been translated into a corrected date. It is included here for the sake of cross-referencing for those curious. See the “On P.E. Dating” notation above (which has been updated since the publication of The New Essential Chronology).
• By the age of eight, Qymaen jai Sheelal (the future General Grievous) is an expert sniper, having now killed more than 40 Yam'rii in the Huk War.*
  (conjecture based on Unknown Soldier: The Story of General Grievous)
  *NOTE: This entry uses the conjectural Grievous birthdate of 59 BBY. See the note with the birth entry.
• Maul (barely age 3) is living in a training facility on Mustafar, where he has his own quarters with a single window that looks out at the fiery landscape. He is once again visited by the individual he only knows as “the Man,” who finally introduces himself as “Master Sidious.” Sidious tells him that he is special, comparing himself and Maul to two fish that are in a small aquarium, which Sidious manipulates to kill every fish except those two. Maul will not begin formal training in a training room that is well-fit. He has, as of yet, no knowledge that his unique gifts are tied into the Force. (To be continued below . . . )
  (The Wrath of Darth Maul)

Lives & Adventures
(youth novel series: Ryder Windham)
The Wrath of Darth Maul (youth novel: Ryder Windham)
Chapter 1

50 BBY
• Granta Omega is born, possibly on Coruscant, to Xanatos and Tura Omega.
  (conjecture based on The Master of Disguise and The Shadow Trap)
  *NOTE: Given that the dates of Xanatos’ life have been switch around a bit due to The Dark Side, Granta Omega’s birth, which I had originally put in 55 BBY, had to be shifted, since Xanatos would have been 14 and still with Qui-Gon at that point. That earlier date was based on the idea that he graduated from the Academy after four years, and those four years began at age 18. I can only perhaps assume here that he graduated at 18 instead of 22 (dropping those four years), which would at least put his birth here in 50 BBY, three years after he left Qui-Gon, which also makes him 19 at this point.
• Airen Cracken is born on Contruum.
  (conjecture based on Cracken’s Rebel Field Guide)
• Valin Halcyon (later Hal Horn) is born to Scerra and Nejaa Halcyon.
  (conjecture based on I, Jedi)
• Jorj Car’das is born.
  (conjecture based on Outbound Flight)
• Tobb Jadak is born on Balmorra.
  (conjecture based on Millennium Falcon)
  *NOTE: Jadak was 31 as of 19 BBY’s accident.
• Ohran Keldor is born.
  (conjecture based on Children of the Jedi)
• Del Hunter is born.
- Par Lankin is born on Desstious. (conjecture based on Passages)
- Sayer Mon Neela is born. (conjecture based on The Capture of Imperial Hazard)
- In the decades leading up to the Clone Wars, the TC and 3PX variants on Cybot Galactica’s 3PO protocol droid line are introduced.* (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)
*NOTE: Since we’re told that C-3PX was created 50 BBY and was “one of a kind,” it seems that this entry has to be placed in 50 BBY as well.
- C-3PX is created. The droid will eventually come into the possession of Darth Maul, Admiral Terrinald Screed, and Olag Greck. (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)

*NOTE: Information provided by Luke Van Horn.
- Aljah Orr becomes a customs officer. He will never take a bribe in the next 50 years of service. (conjecture based on the Lumrunners)
- Fabritech becomes a leading starship sensor developer. (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Vehicle and Vessels)
- A more violent nationalist movement begins in Anomid society. (conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 12: Aliens--“Enemies and Allies”)
- According to one popular hypothesis, two X-19 barges holding senoti seeds crash land on the Forest Moon of Endor. Several of the seeds manage to take root, bringing the senoti tree to Endor for the first time. (conjecture based on Endor and the Moddell Sector)
- On Kegan, O-Yani’s grandson, V-Onin, is sent to the Re-Learning Circle, never to be seen or heard from again. (conjecture based on The Fight for Truth)
- Around this time (or even earlier), JR-12’s master is lost. The droid sticks around Worlport on Ord Mantell, offering services as an independent security droid at the spaceport.* (conjecture based on Mask of the Pirate Queen)*
*NOTE: This is “at least fifty years ago” as of Mask of the Pirate Queen.
- The Hutt known as Gormo Vosadii Grasso is dishonored in his clan because of a botched spice-smuggling enterprise. He begins seeking a new scheme to restore his reputation.* (conjecture based on Sons of Fortune)*
*NOTE: This rounds “decades ago” to 50 years.
- Sometime during the decades leading to the Battle of Naboo, Darth Sidious consolidates the Thysrian Sun Guard, a Sith cult, many of whom will act as guardians and assassins for him before the Clone Wars. (conjecture based on Evil Never Dies: The Sith Dynasties)
- A mining accident causes the Republic to discover the Elomin’s slave Elom race on the planet Elom, where they had previously believed only the Elomin race existed. The Elom are discovered to be sentient and are given territorial rights.* (conjecture based on Alien Anthology)*
*NOTE: This entry is tricky. It is said to be after several centuries of Old Republic contact with Elom, but then we are told the Old Republic first contacts Elom 100 years before Palpatine comes to power. Both of these can’t be correct. Since we are given an exact date for the supposed first contact, I have assumed that by “several centuries,” the book actually meant “several decades.”
- Nejaa Halcyon and Rostek Horn become partners. (conjecture based on I, Jedi)
- Scouts discover the Bosph species.* (conjecture based on Alien Encounters supplement in The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #13)*
*NOTE: This rounds several decades to 50 years.

- Kinnin Vo-Shay, noted gambler, escapes his fame by heading into the Tyus Cluster. His ship, the Ashanda Ray, ends up caught between the area’s black holes, in a place where time does not flow as it does normally. He will eventually meet a trapped Jedi Master named Aryzah who will help him escape within the next 50 years (well, 50 years outside the area). (conjecture based on The Last Hand)

- Prospectors on Cona discover that the Arcona natives are easily addicted to salt. The prospectors begin to trade salt for land, earning profits and addicting the species. (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Alien Species)

- Galladinium of Duro founds Galladinium’s Galactic Imports on Lenthalis. (conjecture based on Galladinium’s Fantastic Technology via TimeTales, paraphrased)

- On Nar Shaddaa, Aurra Sing is found by the Dark Woman and taken to Coruscant for Jedi training.* (conjecture based on The Dark Side Sourcebook, information found at starwars.com, and The Clone Wars Magazine #1)*

- Several months after being introduced to the training room on Mustafar and learning that “the Man” is named Sidious, Maul is training with his instructor droid when he gets angry at what he feels are unfair conditions to their current “game.” He uses the Force instinctively to summon a staff to him, which finally shows Sidious that the time has come to explain to him about the Force. Sidious takes Maul to Tosste, where he taunts the boy and uses the Force to hurl small rocks at him, until Maul, drawing on anger, uses the Dark Side to send rocks back. Sidious begins instructing Maul about the Force, including discussions about the Jedi and the Sith, but Sidious is careful not to yet mention that he is a Sith Lord, only confirming that he is not a Jedi. (To be continued below . . . )* (The Wrath of Darth Maul)*

*NOTE: Since Darth Plagueis would seem to suggest that Maul was born late in his birthyear, him being “barely” three in Chapter 1 of The Wrath of Darth Maul would seem to put that chapter late in 51 BBY. Thus, for this section to be “several months” later, it likely moves into the first part of this year.

- The Arkanians have transformed (or are still transforming) the primitive Yaka into greatly intelligent beings via cybernetic technology. Many Arkanians protest this move, but the Arkanian Dominion approved the project. Those opposing the project, the Arkanian Renegades, create a mercenary army (part droid and part organic, known as Assimilators) to stage a coup. To combat the Assimilators, the Arkanian Dominion genetically engineers a cross of Yaka, Rakghoul, dianoga, and more to create Zeta Magnus, a genius warrior (who, thankfully, cannot procreate by natural means). Magnus becomes the prime clone for a line of Accelerated Transgenic Heuristic Abhorers, or ATHAs, making him “Atha Prime.” The coup (the Arkanian Revolution) fails, and the Renegades escape to set up shop as bounty hunters. The Arkanian Dominion then try to eliminate a potential problem by wiping out their own ATHAs, but Magnus not only escapes but also eats his creators. He will spend nearly thirty years before eventually setting down to create his own kingdom on the planet Marat V, also known as Skye, through a clone of himself. (conjecture based on Dark Empire Sourcebook, The Essential Guide to Alien Species, and SkyeWalkers)

- The “Jedi droids” (Force-sensitive Shard crystal beings inside droid bodies and trained by Jedi Master Qqinos) are given the derogatory nickname “Iron Knights” during their participation in the Arkanian Revolution. For their actions in the conflict, the Iron Knights are given the rank of High Marshall, but Aqinos is exiled from the Jedi Order for his heresy in training non-organic beings (which cannot have midichlorians) in the Force. In the wake of the Arkanian Revolution, Aqinos and his Iron Knights return to Dweem to live in exile for decades. (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids)

- Jedi Knights who survive injuries during the Arkanian Revolution are now considered to have passed the Trial of the Flesh. (conjecture based on The Jedi Path)

- Marblewood, the former sector governor’s mansion on Wukkar, is receives its first major renovation since being sold to private interests twenty years ago. It receives new skylights over the entry atria and the wings.
(conjecture based on Scoundrels)
- The Iron Knights of Dweem remain undisturbed from this point until Luke Skywalker makes contact with them, nearly six decades later.
(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids and The Monsters of Dweem)
- As the Republic incorporates the Inner Zuma sectors, the Moddell Sector is incorporated, which makes Annaj the sector’s capital by default.
(conjecture based on Endor and the Moddell Sector)
- Feeling she has something to prove to the Besadii Clan (perhaps from not being able to affect Jabba the Hutt’s own interests on the world as much as she had hoped in the past), Gardulla the Hutt comes to Tatooine, setting up operations in Mos Taike. Her ventures are a success, but instead of being allowed to go home now that she has proven herself, she is forced to remain on Tatooine to keep the Desilijic Clan, led locally by Jabba the Hutt, from taking over Besadii turf. She is advised to allow Jabba to court her, but as time passes, she grows tired of his attention and her de facto exile to Tatooine and begins go get into gambling and slave-trading.
(conjecture based on Secrets of Tatooine)
- The Republic ends the governorship of the man responsible for the Korteen Asteroid Belt, where pirates had been using sonic jamming devices to lure ships in and wreck them for salvage. The governor had shared profits, and the operation had soon attracted unwanted attention, bringing the Jedi down on them. The governor and his son escape with many of their followers to the Drexel system, where they end up crashing on the local water planet. They begin creating a new community, where metal is a rare item. They salvage metal from their ship to build their home (and a sonic-jammer to bring down further ships to salvage), but are plagued by sea-dragons that, unbeknownst to them, are being harmed by the sonic-jammer. Soon, the ship’s technicians revolt on the basis of the sea-dragons being harmed. They are presumed dead, but soon appear using sonic staffs to control their befriended sea-dragons. The warfare between the Dragon Lords and the wreckers has begun. The conflict will continue until long into the reign of Governor Quarg, the original leader’s son.
(conjecture based on Day of the Dragon Lords)
- On Tolea Biqua on Genarius in the Cularin system, a Bimm information broker named Ginder has come across the head of a protocol droid, L8O-RC. The droid used to be an inventory-taker for Riboga the Hutt and contains information about safehouses and storehouses that Riboga left behind when he left the system, effectively becoming a treasure map for Riboga’s supplies. When Ginder begins to be shadowed by several groups wanting to acquire the head, he calls upon some friends for help. He wants them to take the head away from Genarius, so the he can be safe. As they discuss the matter in the Falling Rodian, a local cantina, they are approached by a group of military goons (Teck Randon, Kirla Shorg, and Joq Landhauler) under orders from Colonel Jir Tramsig. After some arguing over the ownership of the head, another group arrives, Trandoshans sent by Nirama. The argument over the head turns into a bar brawl. When only one group, our heroes, remains standing, they try to escape with the head, but find themselves confronting droids from Uffel, who want the head as well. When the droids cause the head to begin a countdown to self-destruct, only quick thinking saves both the head and the lives of the heroes, who escape with their prize.
(Head Trip)
Lives & Adventures [continued] (youth novel series: Ryder Windham)
The Wrath of Darth Maul [continued] (youth novel: Ryder Windham)
- Chapters 2 – 3
Head Trip (RPG: Jeff Grubb)*
Head Trip (RPG: Jeff Grubb)*
  Ginder’s Story
  The Military Guys
  Things Get Interesting
  Out On the Street
49 BBY

- Chas Uliar is born.*
  (conjecture based on Survivor's Quest)*
*NOTE: Uliar is said to be 22 when the Outbound Flight Project launches, according to Survivor's Quest.
- Lorana Jinzler is born. She is soon taken to be tested at the Jedi Temple and taken in for Jedi training.
  (conjecture based on Outbound Flight and Survivor's Quest)
- Sylvn is born to Ki-Adi-Mundi and Mawin on Cerea.*
  (conjecture based on Prelude to Rebellion)*
*NOTE: Due to a low birthrate among Cereans, Ki-Adi-Mundi was allowed an exemption from the general Jedi practice that discourages romantic attachment.
- Pter Thanas is born.
  (conjecture based on Truce at Bakura Sourcebook)
- "Honest" Grek is born.*
  (conjecture based on The Jewel of Yavin)*
*NOTE: This assumes that The Jewel of Yavin is about a year or so after ANH. He is “about fifty” in that story.
- Rorworr is born.
  (conjecture based on Invasion of Theed)
- Deel Surool is born.
  (conjecture based on Invasion of Theed)
- Ebenn Q3 Baobab is born.
  (conjecture based on Galaxy Phrase Book and Travel Guide)
- Talesan “Taly” Fry is born to Nalia and Grove Fry on Cirrus.
  (conjecture based on Secrets of the Jedi)
- The child that Dreed Pommel will try to use as a human shield when Jedi Master Plo Koon comes for him on Metellos is born.
  (conjecture based on Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)
- Eogan Truax is born to Artagan Truax and his wife.
  (conjecture based on Lockdown)
- Artagan Truax and his wife, members of the Bando Gora, recognize that they have chosen the wrong path. When Artagan’s wife dies, leaving him to raise newborn Eogan, he feels as though there is no way out. He finds a way out, however, when he hears Bando Goro members plotting to ambush arms dealer Iram Radique to kill him and hijack a weapon shipment. He saves Radique’s life, getting him away on a ship that he had ready. They part ways with Radique presumably as a future benefactor like Artagan had hoped, but instead, they do not hear from Radique for years. Instead, they rely on Artagan’s pit fighting skills to get by. He begins saving money won during pit fighting so that he can retire someday.*
  (conjecture based on Lockdown)
*NOTE: When referring to this event loosely, Artagan says it was “twenty years ago,” but then when he gives the details to Eogan, he says it was “sixteen years ago.” The latter is consistent with details about Eogan being a baby at the time.
- On Melida/Daan, Nields’ caregiver/cousin is called to fight for the Daan. She dies in the battle, leaving Nields alone in the world, except for the Young, whom he meets after a short while.
  (conjecture based on The Defenders of the Dead)
- Sometime mid-year this year, Darth Sidious begins taking Maul back to Tosste frequently for training exercises.*
  (conjecture based on The Wrath of Darth Maul)*
*NOTE: This has been happening for a year, as of Chapter 4, but it cannot be referring back to the events in Chapter 2 of The Wrath of Darth Maul, since Maul is about 5.5 years old in Chapter 4, and he Chapter 2 is only "several months" after Chapter 1, wherein Maul was “barely” 3 years old. He must visit Tosste for the first time in Chapter 2, then just not return “regularly” until this point in his life (a year before beginning his lightsaber training in Chapter 4).
- Nejaa Halcyon begins training his son, Valin Halcyon in Jedi arts.
  (conjecture based on I, Jedi)
• Jaller Obrim joins the Republic Senate Guard.
  (conjecture based on True Colors)
• While traveling through the Republic under the protection of Qui-Gon Jinn, the Baron of the Vena System dies of heart failure. Quite illogically, the grieving Baroness Omnino blames Qui-Gon and begins to hate the Jedi.
  (conjecture based on Qui-Gon and Obi-Wan: Last Stand on Ord Mantell)
• The Varristad mining dome collapses. 250,000 people die, and Jemba the Hutt makes a fortune taking over mining rights to the area.
  (conjecture based on The Rising Force)
• The Marzoon Confederacy joins the Republic, having signed a treaty aboard the Freedom’s Messenger.
  (conjecture based on The DarkStryder Campaign: Endgame via TimeTales, paraphrased)
• The Melida and Daan on Melida/Daan begin trying to work together to form a government. They build the Unified Congress Building as the house of government.
  (conjecture based on The Uncertain Path)
• Jorus C’Baoth finishes his Jedi training late in the year and becomes a full Jedi. (Exact date according to Old Senate Library entry: 3/6/86 P.E.)*
  (conjecture based on Dark Force Rising)*
  *NOTE: Please bear in mind that the exact date quoted here (3/6/86 P.E.) is Zahn’s erroneous dating based on when he believed the Clone Wars took place, and has thus been translated into a corrected date. It is included here for the sake of cross-referencing for those curious. See the “On P.E. Dating” notation above (which has been updated since the publication of The New Essential Chronology).

48 BBY
• Mon Mothma is born on Chandrila.
  (conjecture based on the Star Wars Encyclopedia)
• Toba is born to Neesada Bari and Bullba.
  (conjecture based on Invasion of Theed)
• Arani Korden is born.
  (conjecture based on Invasion of Theed)
• Gornt Seron is born on Korbin.
  (conjecture based on Wanted by Cracken)
• Gaen Drommel is born on Oplovis.
  (conjecture based on Wanted by Cracken)
• Arndall Lott is born on Kwenn.
  (conjecture based on Wanted by Cracken)
• Leger Demain is born.
  (conjecture based on Cracken’s Rebel Operatives)
• Rej Taunt is born. As the eldest son of a family of tomuon cloth traders, he will travel to Nar Shaddaa as a child and still be there by a year after the end of the Clone Wars.
  (conjecture based on Millennium Falcon)
• Grumby becomes a career naval officer.
  (conjecture based on Han Solo and the Corporate Sector Sourcebook)
• Mammon Hoole pays a visit to his friend Karke, a Phindian on Phindar.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Guide to Alien Species)
• Four years after solidifying the belief that Hego Damask is in seclusion on Sojourn, rather than dead, the Gatherings on Sojourn resume.
  (conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)
• Five months before he leaves for the Orsis Academy and one year after he began being taken regularly to Tosste, Maul is training with Darth Sidious on Tosste when he is finally presented with a lightsaber to begin his saber combat training. He is also exposed to a dinko, which he kills, but he flinches before doing so. As a result, many nights later, Sidious fills his quarters with dinkos, all of which Maul kills, as a lesson not to flinch in the face of danger. (To be continued below . . .)
Corell Industries (CI Limited) falls on hard times, thanks in part to the monopolizing tactics of the Trade Federation. With the Senate unable to solve the problem, the company is forced to sell many of its assets, including many of its ships. Among them is the YT-1300 freighter YT 492727ZED, later known as the Millennium Falcon. The ship is purchased by brother and sister traders Kal and Dova Brigger, who quickly begin illegal operations with the vessel, which they have renamed the Hardwired. They are approached by the Smuggler’s Confederacy of the Cularin system and paid a hefty sum to modify the ship, as long as they do not trade with slavers.

Mace Windu follows the urgings of hundreds of spirits, victims of the killer Uda-Khalid, to Khalid’s fortress. After working his way inside, Mace duels the killer, ending the confrontation by stabbing Khalid through the heart—a part of the man that his victims doubted he ever truly had.

Survivors
Survivors (SWT13 short story: Jim Krueger)

Lives & Adventures [continued] (youth novel series: Ryder Windham)
The Wrath of Darth Maul [continued] (youth novel: Ryder Windham)
Chapter 4

47 BBY

Carlist Rieekan is born on Alderaan.

Asajj Ventress is born on Dathomir.*

NOTE: Oddly, this source is a LEGO item, but this particular book tends to use in-continuity birthdates in its character profiles, so I have no reason to distrust this birthdate.

Dean Jinzler is born on Coruscant.*

NOTE: Jinzler is said to be two years younger than his sister, Lorana Jinzler, who is 22 during Outbound Flight.

Lohn Genden is born on Alderaan.

TCW DATE: Devi is born on Lanteeb.*

NOTE: Devi is a year or two older than Padmé. I chose one year for this date.

Sena Leikvold Midanyl is born on Corellia.

Sia-Lan Wezz is born.

Galak is born.

Halagad Ventor is born on Alderaan to Ean Ventor and Zollet Ventor.*

NOTE: Halagad is five years older than Anakin Skywalker.

Rann I-Kanu is born.

Denlace Sachoore is born.

O-Lana is born to V-Nen and O-Melie on Kegan.

Kar Vastor is born. He will soon be the last of Ghosh Windu on Haruun Kal. The only other remaining member is Mace Windu.

Aayla Secura (Aaylas‘ecura) is born.*
*NOTE: This assumes that (a) she is 13 when taken as a Padawan, (b) Quinlan Vos became a Knight and took her as a Padawan at age 25, and (c) Quinlan is 27 in TPM.

- Jedi Knight Sharad Hett returns to his homeworld to find that it has been decimated by offworld enemies. Grief-stricken, he leaves Coruscant and heads for the Outer Rim, where he crash-lands on Tatooine. The Jedi Council presumes him dead. Shortly after his arrival, he is taken in by the Tusken Raiders, mates with K'Sheek (a human slave woman who was abducted into Tusken society by Yark to repopulate his clan after several of his children died of a plague and thus the "sister" of K'Yark), and becomes the father of A'Sharad Hett, whom he will soon begin training as his Padawan.
  (conjecture based on Outlander)

- Leed wins the All-World Games on Senali.
  (conjecture based on The Shattered Peace)

- Tura Omega and her son, Granta Omega (age 3), move to Nierport Seven. Granta’s father, Xanatos, knows that there are dangers coming, so he has sent them into hiding.*
  (conjecture based on The Master of Disguise and The Shadow Trap)*

*NOTE: This assumes that Grand Omega is born in 50 BBY. See the birth entry in that year for reasoning.

- Yaana, daughter of the Senalis king, Meenon, is sent to Rutan in accordance with the exchange of firstborn children that has kept Rutan and Senali at peace for generations.
  (conjecture based on The Shattered Peace)

- Maul (age 7) has been training in lightsaber combat on Mustafar for five months, mostly with the droid TD-D9 (Deenine). When the droid accidentally breaks Maul’s ribs during a training exercise, he is mended, but Darth Sidious thinks it is Maul’s failing to have been harmed so easily. The droid claims to have done it on purpose as an exercise, then knocks Maul out during similar training that Sidious immediately orders. The droid claims to have done this so as not to prolong Maul’s pain. Maul goes to sleep that night after drawing what looks like a window in his current quarters, reminiscent to his earlier quarters. When he awakens, he is taken to Sidious, who claims that since he misses the sight of Mustafar so much, he will get to see more. He is drugged, then awakens on the surface and is determined to survive and return to prove himself to his master. He does so and returns 17 days later, damaging TD-D9 on the way into their facility. Citing many responsibilities elsewhere, Sidious informs Maul that he is being taken to the Orsis Academy that is run by Trezza, a Falleen instructor. He is told that he cannot reveal his Force abilities to anyone. Before they leave, Sidious destroys TD-D9, since the droid is no longer of any use training Maul. They head for Orsis, where Sidious pretends to be a wealthy individual in future need of a bodyguard. He claims that he intends for Maul to grow up into the role. Trezza can sense Maul’s Force abilities with his sense of smell (extremely acute for a Falleen). Maul is not to be allowed to use his powers, also by Trezza’s order. Unfortunately, one of their instructors, the Death Watch Mandalorian Melch Krakko, has left to participate in the Mandalorian civil war, but Sidious makes note of the name for future references. Maul then faces off with older children to prove himself, earning himself some early fear at the Academy. (To be continued below . . .)
  (The Wrath of Darth Maul)

- On Engebo V, Gall loses an eye in a mining accident, but wins a large payment from Outer Rim Oreworks.*
  (conjecture based on Death, Dirt, and the Nerf Rancher’s Daughter)*

*NOTE: This assumes that DDATNRD takes place 27 BBY.

- Qui-Gon Jinn and Tahl are sent to Apsolon, where the ruling minority, the Civilized, have just been effectively defeated in a somewhat bloodless revolution by the working majority, the Workers. The Jedi are here to keep an eye on the first free elections to be held. During the elections, Tahl forms a bond with Alani and Eritha, the daughters of Ewane, a Worker leader. Ewane is elected Supreme Governor, and despite Tahl’s reluctance to leave the girls without being certain that the Civilized enforcers, the Absolutes, are gone for good, she and Qui-Gon leave the planet, which is renamed New Apsolon.
  (conjecture based on The Ties That Bind)

- Within a year of modifying the YT 492727ZED (the future Millennium Falcon), which they call the Hardwired, Kal and Dova Brigger break their agreement with the Smugglers’ Confederacy and trade with slavers. As a result, a bounty is put on their heads. Dova is captured, brought before Nirama, who executes her. Kal renames the Hardwired as the Wayward Son and goes to work for Iaco Stark’s Commercial Combine on Thyferra.

(conjecture based on Millennium Falcon)

- Ozz, future King of the Ugnauts of Cloud City, is freed from bondage after being a slave for the first 100 years of his life.

(conjecture based on Galaxy Guide 3: The Empire Strikes Back via TimeTales, verbatim)

- A small amount of mekebve spores, a pollen that most mammals are highly allergic to, made during this year eventually will fall into the hands of Bossk.

(conjecture based on The Prize Pelt: The Tale of Bossk)

Lives & Adventures [continued] (youth novel series: Ryder Windham)

The Wrath of Darth Maul [continued] (youth novel: Ryder Windham)

Chapters 5 – 7

46 BBY

- Very early this year, Padmé Naberrie Amidala is born on Naboo to Jobal and Ruwee.*

(conjecture based on various Episode I and II materials)*

NOTE: Based on dates from AOTC materials, we were able to lock TPM at around 3:4:16. Since the NEGtC states that Amidala was queen for five months before TPM, and we know that she was elected just after turning 14, then she was elected around 2:9:15 (on a 10-month calendar), which puts her actual birth around -12:9:15, or about 3.5 months before this year begins around -11:3:1. However, frequent in-universe references and guidebook material seems to have retconned this to lock her birthdate in this year, even though it should not be, logically. If she was queen for more than a month prior to TPM, it should be in 47 BBY. (The sound you hear is me sighing in resignation.)

- TCW DATE: Rush Clovis is born on Scipio to parents who are servants of a wealthy and powerful Muun household. Early in his life, the head of that household will take a special interest in Clovis’ education and future prospects.

(conjecture based on The Rise of Clovis)*

*NOTE: This assumes that Clovis and Padmé are the same age.

- Blaine Harris is born.

(conjecture based on Truce at Bakura Sourcebook)

- Dane is born on Thraciar.

(conjecture based on Invasion of Theed)

- Nason Laric is born.

(conjecture based on Jedi’s Legacy)

- Honi is born. She soon goes to the Jedi Temple to begin training.

(conjecture based on The Captive Temple)

- Around this time, Rica is born on Corellia.*

(conjecture based on Debts to Pay)*

*NOTE: This assumes that Debts to Pay is about a year or so after ANH. She is in her forties in the story, which I have rounded to 45 years old.

- The Smoking Blaster enters service.

(conjecture based on Gamemaster Handbook)

- Ivppikis joins the Ssi-ruuvi military.

(conjecture based on Truce at Bakura Sourcebook)

- Dannik Jerrik begins working, off and on, for Jabba the Hutt.

(conjecture based on The Anzati)

- The Katana Fleet vanishes into hyperspace.

(conjecture based on Dark Force Rising)

- The Candorian plague is seemingly eradicated, though samples of it remain in existence in laboratories.

(conjecture based on Galaxywide News Nets supplement in The Official Star Wars Adventure Journal #5 and The Clone Wars: The Official Episode Guide: Season 1)

- Gilloma begins teaching at the University of Alderaan.

(conjecture based on Living Force Campaign Guide)

- Ars Veruna is elected King of Naboo.

(conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Characters)

- The rebellion against the despotic ruler(s) of Solay begins. The rebellion is led by a man named Raggold.
  (conjecture based on I’ll See You in the Throne Room)
• Wilhuff Tarkin enters the Imperial Academy.*
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Characters and Peter Cushing’s age during A New Hope)*
*NOTE: Yes, the book still calls it the “Imperial” Academy.
• On New Apsolon, Absolutes raid a Workers meeting place. Two workers are killed, and Lenz is captured, but, since he is an informer (or since he breaks under torture and becomes an informer), he is released.
  (conjecture based on The Call to Vengeance)
• Leed wins the All-World Games on Senali a second time.
  (conjecture based on The Shattered Peace)
• The Melida girl Deila is last seen by her mother, having joined the Young on Melida/Daan.
  (conjecture based on The Defenders of the Dead)
• Now that Quinlan Vos is ready to become a Padawan, Master Tholme ends his duties as Kiffex/Kiffu watchman and takes him as his Padawan.*
  (conjecture based on Darkness)*
  *NOTE: This background from Darkness, Part II totally contradicts the original origin story given on starwars.com. It is presumed this is the correct one. For this entry, I have assumed that Quinlan is 27 in TPM, and that he becomes a Padawan at 13.
• Anoon Bondara takes Darsha Assant as his Padawan learner.*
  (conjecture based on Shadow Hunter)*
  *NOTE: This assumes that Darsha was the same ages as Obi-Wan Kenobi (12 and 25) when she was taken as a Padawan and when she was ready to move from Padawan to Knight.
• Jorus C’Baoth begins serving as advisor to Senator Palpatine of Naboo. (Exact date according to Old Senate Library entry: 679 P.E.)*
  (conjecture based on Dark Force Rising)*
  *NOTE: Please bear in mind that the exact date quoted here (679 P.E.) is Zahn’s erroneous dating based on when he believed the Clone Wars took place, and has thus been translated into a corrected date. It is included here for the sake of cross-referencing for those curious. See the “On P.E. Dating” notation above (which has been updated since the publication of The New Essential Chronology).

45 BBY
• Brandei is born on Mantooine.
  (conjecture based on Thrawn Trilogy Sourcebook)
• Berren Sid Te is born.
  (conjecture based on Cracken’s Rebel Operatives)
• Deke Holman is born.
  (conjecture based on Uhl Eharl Khoehng)
• Egome Fass is born.
  (conjecture based on HoloNet News, Volume 531, Number 49)
• Ferus Olin is born.*
  (conjecture based on The Way of the Apprentice)*
  *NOTE: This assumes that “a few years older” than Anakin can be taken as 3 years.
• Dane is born.*
  (conjecture based on The Trail of the Jedi)*
  *NOTE: This assumes that “a few years older” than Floria can be taken as 3 years.
• Cryle Cavv is born.*
  (conjecture based on Small Favors)*
  *NOTE: The backstories for both Cryle Cavv and his nephew Sienn Sconn are somewhat convoluted. At the time of Small Favors which must, by default, take place between the Executor’s creation and ESB, Cavv’s bio says he is 47, which puts his birthdate, since the story is at 2 ABY, here at 45 BBY. However, in his bio for Two for One, which apparently takes place around the events of The New Rebellion at 17 ABY, it says that at that point he’s over 65. I’m assuming that the information in Two for One’s bio is incorrect, since if it were, then that story would have to take place after the peace with the Imperial Remnant, which wouldn’t make a whole lot of sense, given the events of Two for One.
• Stockwell is born.*
  (conjecture based on Death of a Hero)*
  *NOTE: This assumes the article is set in the months right after ANH.
• Senator Palpatine funds long-range Deep Core exploration, greatly increasing the number of safe hyperspace routes through the region.
  (conjecture based on Dark Empire Sourcebook)
• Kerii Haslip takes over her father’s family business.
  (conjecture based on Turning Point)
• Obi-Wan Kenobi begins being called “Oafy-Wan” by fellow Jedi student Bruck Chun.
  (conjecture based on The Rising Force)
• Nejaa Halcyon earns the title of Jedi Master.
  (conjecture based on I, Jedi)
• War breaks out again between the Melida and Daan on Melida/Daan.
  (conjecture based on The Uncertain Path)
• Leed and Drenna tie for first place in the All-World Games on Senali.
  (conjecture based on The Shattered Peace)
• Around this time, Corellian Engineering Corporation releases the Gozanti-class armed transport.*
  (conjecture based on Fly Casual)*
*NOTE: This is “nearly half a century ago” as of Fly Casual, which is presumably soon after ANH.
• Noira is born.*
  (conjecture based on Mask of the Pirate Queen)*
*NOTE: She is “in her mid-forties” in Mask of the Pirate Queen, which is likely set shortly after ANH. I have rounded to her being 45 years old.
• While on a visit to his homeworld of Rutan, Prince Leed is imprisoned for refusing to join King Frane’s hunting excursions on the basis of his Senalis-born love for all lifeforms. While he is in the prison, a small animal manages to disrupt sensors in the security grid, prompting a shutdown, which Leed will later remember when trying to free Yaana from that very same prison a year later.
  (conjecture based on The Shattered Peace)
• A large deposit of carvanium (used in durasteel) is found on Ord Sigatt. The little-traveled world quickly becomes a mining community under the monopolizing control of Denon-Ardru Mutual.
  (conjecture based on The Shattered Peace)
• Corellian Engineering Corporation releases the YG-4400 Light Freighter.*
  (conjecture based on Suns of Fortune)*
*NOTE: They are “almost 50 years old” as of Sons of Fortune.
• By this time, Raith Sienar has amassed his own fortune, outside of his family’s longstanding wealth. Based on this success, his father, Narro Sienar, grooms him to become the next CEO of Sienar Technologies. To ready himself, Raith assumes a false identity and goes undercover at several major competitors, including Corellian Engineering Corporation, Baktoid Armor Workshop, and Incom. During this time undercover, he will spend time among the Xi Char of Charros IV, but when discovered as a spy, he’ll lead Xi Char bounty hunters into a black hole he’d found years earlier. He will then return to Sienar Technologies, being given his own internal workshop, Sienar Design Systems.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Characters)
• King Cana of Gala dies, but not before revealing to Queen Veda that he has an illegitimate daughter named Elan.
  (conjecture based on The Mark of the Crown)
• Two comets strike the planet Toong’l, poisoning the planet. Refugee Toong escape to settle on nearby Tund, though they are unwelcome and persecuted by the Sorcerers of Tund, the Darksider society that was founded by Sith heretics nearly 28,000 years earlier.
  (conjecture based on The Essential Atlas)
• Around this time, Darth Plagueis writes journals that will later be merged into the Book of Sith by Palpatine.
  (conjecture based on Book of Sith)

44 – 40 BBY
Obi-Wan Kenobi: Jedi Knight [continued] (children’s book: Catherine Saunders)
Obi-Wan Kenobi: Jedi Knight [continued] (children’s book: Catherine Saunders)

Padawan Training*

*NOTE: This section (and, yes, I’ve capitalized “Training,” when the book itself did not because it drives me nuts) is basically a very generalized overview of the events of the Jedi Apprentice book series. (This information was, again, provided by Luke Van Horn.)

44 BBY

- Irenez is born on Corellia.
  (conjecture based on Thrawn Trilogy Sourcebook)
- Gial Ackbar is born on Calamari.
  (conjecture based on Dark Force Rising Sourcebook)
- Mullen Gault is born to Orrin Gault and Liselle Gault on Tatooine.
  (conjecture based on Kenobi)
- Berri is born to Mazie and her mate on Ryloth. They then move to Tatooine to get away from the slave raids on Ryloth.
  (conjecture based on Path to Truth)
- Quintus Farel is born on Samaria.
  (conjecture based on A Tangled Web)
- Afyon is born on Alderaan.
  (conjecture based on Thrawn Trilogy Sourcebook)
- Tagge (future Imperial General) is born.
  (conjecture based on Don Henderson’s age via TimeTales, paraphrased)
- Ker-Zakk is born.
  (conjecture based on HoloNet News, Volume 531, Number 49)
- Mako Jax is born.
  (conjecture based on The Luminous Bantha)
  *NOTE: This assumes a date of 4 – 5 ABY for The Luminous Bantha. *
- Now back in the Jedi mainstream, Yaddle takes Empatajayos Brand as her Padawan Learner.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Characters)
- The SoroSuub transport that comes to be called the Sea Killer is constructed.
  (conjecture based on Star Wars: The Roleplaying Game profile for the Sea Killer, found on the Wizards of the Coast website)
- Rutin Cobral and his girlfriend, Lena, begin spending time in the park of Rian, the capital city of Frego.
  (conjecture based on The Only Witness)
- The seven planets of the factory system Kol Hurro, devoted to turning out defense systems and starships, manufacture universal combat droids for a petty and vicious tyrant, who is vanquished by the Republic.
  (conjecture based on Rogue Planet via TimeTales, verbatim)
- Around this time, Mace Windu, not yet 30 years old, joins the Jedi Council.
  (conjecture based on Shatterpoint and Star Wars Annual 2014)
  *NOTE: This was just an estimation until Star Wars Annual 2014 pinned him down to being 28 years old here, as I'd estimated.*
- A battle droid army under Kol Huro dictator Mustag Olus conquers planets in neighboring space. This event becomes known as the Kol Huro Unrest, and the region in question becomes very-gun shy about droids for a long time to come.
  (conjecture based on The New Essential Guide to Droids and The Essential Guide to Warfare)
- Very early this year, twelve-year-old (almost thirteen-year-old) Obi-Wan Kenobi is finishing up his last days as a Jedi pupil under Master Yoda at the Jedi Temple on Coruscant. He spends one night dueling fellow Jedi pupil Bruck Chun. The duel emphasizes, yet once again, that Obi-Wan holds an impatience and anger that could threaten his future. He has only weeks to be taken as a Padawan to a Jedi Knight, and with Qui-Gon Jinn's arrival the next day, Obi-Wan's last chance is fast approaching. After defeating Bruck, Bruck manages to make it appear that Obi-Wan ambushed him in a hallway. The Jedi Council takes Bruck's word, and Obi-Wan must let go of his wish to be a Jedi Knight and embrace his fate as a member of the Agri-Corps. Yoda helps him to duel before Qui-Gon, but the Master does not take Obi-Wan as his Padawan, as he is haunted by the memories of his past Padawan, Xanatos. Obi-Wan is to travel to Bandoomeer for his first assignment, just as Qui-Gon is being sent to the same planet (aboard the same ship) on orders from the Supreme Chancellor. Aboard the ship, Obi-Wan encounters GreIba the Hutt, a member of Offworld Mining and subordinate of Jemba the Hutt, who beats him up. He survives and is taken to the infirmary where he meets Clat'Ha, leader of the Arcona Harvest mining group on the ship, and is reunited with Qui-Gon. The ship seems to be divided in half, with Offworld on the one side, and Arcona Harvest on the other. When Arcona Harvest's supplies are sabotaged, Offworld is to blame, so Obi-Wan, defying Qui-Gon (because Qui-Gon isn't technically his Master) goes into Offworld territory to find the missing parts, only to create an increase in tensions with no positive result. Shortly thereafter, a group of Togorian pirates invades the ship. Qui-Gon, Clat’Ha, and Offworld forces repel the invaders while Qui-Gon pilots the damaged ship to an unknown planet. Once on the planet, Jemba steals the dactyl needed by the Arconans to survive and offers to give them dactyl in return for them becoming his slaves. Obi-Wan talks them (though his new friend Si Treemba) into not bowing to Jemba. When the rest of the Arconans follow suit, he tries to protect them from Jemba, while Qui-Gon heads for a cave where he believes the dactyl to be stored. He is nearly killed in the attempt by both draigons and GreIba. GreIba and his men are eaten by the dactyls, but Qui-Gon makes it back to shelter (in a cave where the passengers and crew have taken refuge from a rising tide), just in time to find Obi-Wan about to battle Jemba. Qui-Gon and Obi-Wan are pulled away, though, to defend the group from the draigons. With everyone, including the newly healed Arconans battling for their lives, the draigons are repelled. The ship is repaired, the Arconans and other Offworld slaves are freed, and the ship makes its way, finally, to Bandoomeer. Upon arrival, Qui-Gon receives a note, explaining why he was asked for personally. The note is from Xanatos.*

(The Rising Force)*

*NOTE: I had originally placed this story in late 45 BBY, due to Obi-Wan not yet being 13 years old when the story begins. Other official sources have placed it here in 44 BBY, so I am left to believe only that Obi-Wan must turn 25 within the month prior to TPM, which is the only logical way that this story can take place in 44 BBY and yet still have Obi-Wan as nearly 13, rather than actually 13.

- On Bandoomeer, Qui-Gon Jinn worries over his past mistakes with Xanatos, while Obi-Wan Kenobi prepares for his stint with the Agri-Corps and Bandoomeer’s “Enrichment Zones.” Qui-Gon meets with SonTag, governor of Bandoomeer, and VeerTa, leader of the Home Planet Mine. He learns that the government and other mining operations live in fear of Offworld Mining, but they did not send for him. It would appear that Xanatos faked the message that would bring him to Bandoomeer. They are to meet with Offworld’s representative the next day. That morning, Obi-Wan leaves for his Agri-Corps assignment, while SonTag, Qui-Gon, and VeerTa meet with Offworld’s representative, Xanatos, at an alternate site. Xanatos tries to appear benign, but Qui-Gon is wary. Xanatos seems to be wanting peaceful relations. Suddenly, the Home Planet Mine experiences a massive explosion. (It was the original meeting place.) They rush to help, and shortly thereafter, Xanatos offers Offworld resources to help rebuild the mine. In the Enrichment Zone of his assignment, Obi-Wan is reunited with Si Treemba (sent by Clat’Ha to check on Agri-Corps dactyl operation) and is led around on a spore tour by RonTha. They, escaping RonTha, find a hidden storage area with Offworld munitions and one other box, marked with the same broken circle that adorned Xanatos’ note and Xanatos’ cheek. When he contacts Qui-Gon about it, though, Qui-Gon cannot do anything about such circumstantial evidence. Qui-Gon then learns that the explosion opened an ionite vein, which could make them all rich, assuming they can keep Offworld from moving in on their business. Qui-Gon cannot join their venture, but he will protect them, as always. Making their way back to the storage room, Obi-Wan and Si Treemba intend to investigate the strange box. While Si Treemba is asleep, Obi-Wan sneaks into the room and is attacked by Xanatos’ men and taunted by Xanatos himself. They capture Obi-Wan, knocking him out. Qui-Gon, not knowing of these events, makes his way to Offworld’s headquarters and into Xanatos’ office. Unable to decode Xanatos’ computer files, he confronts Xanatos outside the office. They duel, but when Xanatos pulls out Obi-Wan’s lightsaber, Qui-Gon uses the Force to reclaim it and leaves the battle to find Obi-Wan. After speaking with Si Treemba, Qui-Gon... makes his way to a mining platform in the ocean, where Obi-Wan has been taken. Obi-Wan has managed to befriend a fellow slave named Guerra, but has gotten into trouble. He is just being tossed overboard when Qui-Gon arrives and rescues him. They make it through part of the platform and are going to rescue Si Treemba, but they are attacked first. Qui-Gon manages to use the Force to deactivate a collar Obi-Wan is wearing that was set to explode upon escape. All prisoners wear these, and if they cannot free Guerra now, they will deactivate the collars from shore. They escape and fulfill that promise, then head for Bandor. They believe that Xanatos has fled into the mine, still in repair, and proceed after him, even though they still cannot remove the collar from Obi-Wan's neck. They find and duel Xanatos, but just as Xanatos is cornered, he escapes up a hidden lift tube, after setting a bomb to explode in the mine to wipe out much of Home Planet's operation. The Jedi are then sealed into a section of tunnel. Obi-Wan decides to use the Force to cause his collar to explode (with him still wearing it) to blow open the door and let Qui-Gon deactivate the bomb. Qui-Gon and Obi-Wan engage in a battle of wills, with Obi-Wan wanting to rearm the collar and Qui-Gon trying to stop him, until Qui-Gon uses the Force to close the broken circle logo on the door and it slides open easily. During the exchange, though, Qui-Gon called Obi-Wan "Padawan" . . . They find the bomb with less time left than Qui-Gon will need to disarm it, but Obi-Wan thinks quickly and uses ionite to stop the timer, due to its electronic interference. They make it out safely, the bomb disarmed, and meet with VeerTa and SonTag. Qui-Gon knows that the planting of the bomb had to have been an "inside job," and he reveals that it was VeerTa who was in league with Xanatos. With the crisis on Bandomeer resolved (but Xanatos still at large), Qui-Gon Jinn takes Obi-Wan Kenobi as his Padawan learner, and the two prepare to depart from Bandomeer.

(The Dark Rival)

- At this time, the copy of the Jedi textbook known as The Jedi Path that was once owned by Yoda, Thame Cerulian, Dooku, and Qui-Gon Jinn is passed to Qui-Gon Jinn’s Padawan, Obi-Wan Kenobi.

  (conjecture based on The Jedi Path and comments by Dan Wallace on his blog)

- As leader of the True Mandalorians, Jango Fett leads his band in an assault against insurrectionists on Galidraan. They have been promised Tor Vizsla (who is being harbored on Galidraan) in return for this help, but the governor is planning a double-cross. When Jango goes to see the governor, Vizsla is waiting for him, blasting him out of the sky when he jets away. Jango crashes to the ground just as a Jedi strike force led by Jedi Master Dooku arrives to stop the Mandalorians from “slaughtering political activists.” Jango orders a retreat, but they are forced to engage the Jedi in battle. As the battle rages, the Mandalorians take a few Jedi out, but are wiped out, leaving only Jango to defeat several Jedi single-handedly. More than half of the Jedi on the team are dead, while all the other Mandalorians are, leaving Jango in Dooku’s rather ashamed hands. Jango is turned over to the governor of Galidraan as a slave, who will soon sell him to slavers and begin restoring Jango’s armor as a trophy. (To be continued below . . . )

(Jango Fett: Open Seasons)*

*NOTE: The Battle of Galidraan has been moved around over and over again. Open Seasons had it at 34 BBY, then it was bumped to 40 BBY (where it was on the SWT-G for quite a while) by the New Essential Chronology. Later, the Ultimate Visual Guide and Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force both used this new date of 44 BBY. Thus, this segment of Open Seasons flashbacks appears here, and another has had to be moved to 42 BBY, as you will see below.

- In the wake of the Battle of Galidraan, Jedi Master Dooku asserts that his Padawan, Komari Vosa, while able to kill twenty Mandalorians on Galidraan on her own, still does not have the necessary fighting skills to guarantee that she would be promoted to Jedi Knight if facing the Jedi Trials. He denies her that opportunity, allowing her to be released from the Jedi Order, though she will remain actively working with the Jedi until a rescue mission to Baltizaar five years from now.

  (conjecture based on Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)

- Even as the Battle of Galidraan wipes out most of the True Mandalorians (at Death Watch manipulation), the planet Mandalore erupts in the Great Clan Wars. Death Watch emerges from the shadows in an attempt to overthrow the New Mandalorians, but their clashes with the True Mandalorians have left them disorganized. When Satine Kryze’s father, a great warlord and kinsman of Tor Vizsla (and thus, presumably, a member of Death Watch), dies during the fighting, his daughter, Satine, returns to Mandalore after many years away from the planet (sent by her father for an education and the like), filled with pacifist ideals from her time interacting with Jedi. She becomes the new leader of Mandalore, but she does so as leader of the New Mandalorians (as the new “Anti-Mandalore” in the eyes of Death Watch). (Death Watch will claim this was only accomplished with the aid of “Jedi tricks.”) Most Mandalorians flock to her leadership, allowing the New Mandalorians to defeat Death Watch, exiling many of their number to Mandalore’s moon, Concordia, where they will set up their own government. As for Tor Vizsla, he slips back into hiding with other Death Watch survivors, returning to the ba’slan shev’la, though he secretly controls the society on Concordia as the Secret Mandalore. On Concordia, the Death Watch will secretly create production lines to make new armor, all of a uniform color and style (based on Mandalore the Uniter’s armor) as a means of creating a unified visage for Death Watch as a movement. That armor will be mostly made from duraplast and other materials, not the hard-to-find beskar. The armor will tend to include a jetpack, as a visual connection back to the days of the Mandalorian Crusaders and Mandalorian Shocktroopers. The focus on unity will also lead Death Watch to recruit almost exclusively from actual Mandalorians, not from other cultures as in the past. Frustrated Mandalorians within MandalMotors and MandalTech, sympathetic to the Death Watch, will make sure that new designs for New Mandalorian vehicles, ships, and other technology will be readily adaptable to combat uses so that any acquired by Death Watch can be turned to that use easily. The Death Watch will keep spotters in those companies to recruit new members, and they will try to do the same with the Mandalorian Guard, though that is a harder task. Speaking of the Guard, they are reorganized by Satine to come from more clans, so that they are seen as protectors of Mandalore in general, not of any particular clan(s). During this era, Tor Vizsla plots against Satine and writes the Death Watch manifesto known as the Ba’jurne Kyr’tsad Mando’ad. A copy of the manifesto will eventually come into Jango Fett’s hands, who will pass it down to his son, Boba Fett.* (conjecture based on The Bounty Hunter Code)

*NOTE: There was some question as to whether this was really written by Tor Vizsla or instead by Pre Vizsla, which was partly sparked by Jango Fett’s own comments in the book on p. 134. However, I checked on this with co-author Jason Fry, who said that, yes, it was Tor Vizsla that wrote this section.

• Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi prepare to leave Bandomeer on Obi-Wan’s thirteenth birthday. Qui-Gon gives Obi-Wan a rock from the River of Light on his home planet as a gift. The two are to head for Gala and make sure that the planet’s first elections since the reign of the Beju-Tallah dynasty began go smoothly. Some think that Prince Beju, heir to the throne if elections hadn’t been called for, may disrupt the proceedings in his favor. They board a ship piloted by a Phindian who does not introduce himself. Once on their way to Gala from Bandomeer, the voyage is interrupted by a fuel leak and enemy spacecraft, forcing them down on Phindar, the pilot’s home planet. As the pilot conveniently vanishes, the Jedi are attacked by assassin droids, but manage to escape. In the marketplace of the Phindian capital, Laressa, they notice that most shops are closed due to shortages. A short way into their observations, they are met again by the pilot, who takes him to meet his brother, who turns out to be Guerra Derida, the Phindian Obi Wan met on Bandomeer. The pilot is his brother Paxxi. They tell the Jedi of how the planet is under subjugation by the Syndicat, led by Baftu and Terra. The Syndicat controls the shortages and as a result controls the populace. Those who do not follow them are “renewed,” similar to a memory-wipe for a droid. The Deridas want the Jedi to help them break into a Syndicat storehouse to reveal the Syndicat’s supplies of items to the Phindian populace and start a revolt. Before the Jedi can agree, assassin droids close on their position, and they must escape. They escape the droids but are “caught” by the Deridas’ friend (and fellow rebel Phindian) Kaadi. She tells them all that Prince Beju of Gala is coming to Phindar to meet with Baftu and Terra to procure a supply of bacta to bring back to Gala, where there is a manufactured shortage. He wishes to appear to be a hero to win the election. In return, he will offer support to the Syndicat. With the Gala connection, the Jedi feel they have little choice but to agree to the Deridas’ plan. They make it into the Syndicat headquarters with little trouble (owing to some help from a Phindian named Duenna), but must face off with several floater-riding guards inside. They defeat the guards and find a secret entrance nearby that leads to the stored supplies kept from the Phindians and a locked door to the Syndicat treasury. The Deridas’ could break through the treasury lock easily . . . if they had their anti-register that Paxxi invented, which imitates fingerprint identification. The Syndicat took it from them a while back, so they must reclaim it before taking back the treasury full of Phindian loot. They are on their way out when they hear Terra ordering Duenna to attend to her, and learn that Duenna serves Terra personally. The Derida brothers tell the Jedi that Duenna is their mother and Terra is their sister, who was renewed. The next day, the Jedi and Phindians make their way to the storehouse holding the anti-register. They split into two pairs—Qui-Gon and Paxxi, and Obi-Wan and Guerra. Guerra and Obi-Wan find the device, but are about to be captured (for Guerra’s stolen uniform being in the wrong place at the wrong time), so Obi-Wan switches uniforms with Guerra and sends Guerra to find Qui-Gon and Paxxi and escape. Obi-Wan is captured and brought to Weutta, head of security. Weutta takes him before Baftu, who barely acknowledges his presence, since he’s arguing with Terra about Prince Beju and the forthcoming alliance. Terra is left to deal with Obi-Wan and orders his renewal. Qui-Gon and the Deridas’ could break through the treasury lock easily . . . Terra is left to deal with Obi-Wan and orders his renewal. Qui-Gon and the Deridas, having had to leave without Obi-Wan, wait the next day for Duenna, who is to bring news of Obi-Wan’s whereabouts. She informs them that Obi-Wan has been renewed and Qui-Gon’s heart sinks. Aboard a Syndicat transport, though, Obi-Wan is alive and his memory intact. He had found that the stone Qui-Gon gave him appeared to be Force-sensitive and by concentrating on that and his memories, he defeated the renewal process. The ship dumps him on Gala, where he is supposedly doomed to wander the rest of his few days. He manages to make it to the shuttle Prince Beju is about to leave for Phindar on and hijacks Beju, taking the ship to Phindar. He locks Beju in a cargo hold and takes Beju’s clothes. He arrives on Phindar and pretends to be Beju, meeting with Baftu in plain view of a sea of onlookers, including Qui-Gon, Paxxi, Kaadi, Guerra, and plenty of rebel Phindians. Qui-Gon and Obi-Wan sense each other and are reassured. Obi-Wan demands to have the bacta loaded before dinner, buying time for the others to break into the treasury and warehouses. The Jedi and Phindians liberate the treasury and warehouses, supplying the revolutionaries, while Baftu takes “Prince” Obi-Wan to the headquarters. There, they meet Terra, who tries to reveal Obi-Wan’s identity, but when they find the treasury empty, Baftu decides that Terra is a traitor and executes her on the spot. After Baftu and Obi-Wan leave, Qui-Gon and Guerra emerge from the shadows and go to her. She dies in Guerra’s arms, but not before remembering that he is her brother. All the players converge outside the headquarters, where Qui-Gon and Obi-Wan help lead an open revolt among the newly-armed and supplied Phindians. Kaadi is shot once, but a killing blast is stopped when Paxxi uses the anti-register to block it, destroying the device. In the chaos, Baftu tries to escape, but when Obi-Wan calls his guards’ attention to the fact that he is abandoning them, they will not help him. Baftu is defeated, but just as he must surrender, the ship lifts off, piloted by Prince Beju, who has escaped from the cargo hold. The Jedi know they can do nothing with Beju at the moment, so they stay focused on Phindian affairs. A week later, a provisional government is in power on Phindar, awaiting a free election shortly thereafter, in which both Derida brothers proclaim they will run. They say their goodbyes, and the Jedi prepare to leave Phindar for Gala. As they leave the Deridas, Obi-Wan thanks Qui-Gon for the Force-sensitive stone and tells him of how it helped him. “Force-sensitive?” Qui-Gon asks. “What do you know? I thought it was just a pretty rock.” Obi-Wan has a long way to go before he fully understands his Master.
The Star Wars Timeline Gold: Legends Timeline, Vol. 1

(The Hidden Past)

- Obi-Wan Kenobi and Qui-Gon Jinn arrive on Gala to oversee the election of a new planetary governor after centuries of rule by the Tallah dynasty. The leading candidates are Prince Beju Tallah (son of Cana and the current queen, Queen Veda Tallah), Deca Brun, and Willa Perammi. They meet with Veda and learn that she will not betray her son, though she does not believe he is the best candidate. She also informs them of a “wild card” in the election, the hill people who are led by Elan, who, unbeknownst to her, is the daughter of King Cana and rightful heir to the throne of Gala, not Beju. The true heir (Elan) should bear the Mark of the Crown, but Beju has not been tested because the Council of Ministers wants him to be the next ruler anyway. Veda tells them this because she is now dying, it seems. She wishes the Jedi could speak with Elan and convince her to come with her people to vote, but the Jedi are not allowed out of Galu, the capital city. Beju bursts in with Lonnag Giba, Head of the Council of Ministers. They challenge the Jedi’s presence based on lies about what happened on Phindar. Veda declares that they will stay, but they cannot leave the palace without an escort, a boy named Jono Dunn. All of Veda’s talk of her legacy on Gala causes Obi-Wan and Qui-Gon to both ponder their own legacies and choices, though they do not tell each other of their thoughts. That night, Qui-Gon sneaks out of the palace to go to the hill country and find Elan. Obi-Wan is left to deal with the elections and pretend Qui-Gon is simply unavailable. A few days later, Jono confronts Obi-Wan with his fear that Obi-Wan believes him to be a spy, and the boys become friends. Later, Jono tells him of Deca Brun and his hopes for Gala. That night, Obi-Wan chances upon Queen Veda while walking alone and realizes by her description of her illness that she may be being poisoned by someone in the palace. He keeps Veda from eating that night and the next day Sneaks some of the food to a substance analyzer. In the hill country, Qui-Gon is set upon and injured by raiders, but saved by Elan and her people. He is taken back to their camp to heal and escape a coming storm. As Elan works to heal him, he reveals her true heritage, but she rejects it. He calls Obi-Wan to let him know his status, and Obi-Wan relates his theories on Veda being poisoned. Qui-Gon suggests that Jono might be in league with Giba or Beju (who would have motive), but Obi-Wan cannot believe it. That night, Obi-Wan tries to stop Veda from being poisoned, but is stopped by Giba and Beju, who accuse him of covering up Qui-Gon’s mysterious absence. Veda tells them that she sent Qui-Gon to get Elan and that Elan is Beju’s half-sister, but Beju refuses to believe it, and when Veda turns to Giba for corroboration, Giba lies and says that it is not true. Obi-Wan must flee for his life. Jono takes Obi-Wan to Deca Brun’s headquarters, but when the workers all leave for a rally, Obi-Wan discovers (in a holofile) that much of Deca Brun’s funding is coming through Galacian Mining Corporation, a front for Offworld Mining Corporation, the company run by Qui-Gon’s former apprentice Xanatos. A worker discovers his snooping and tosses him in a freezer. In the hills, Qui-Gon is about ready to leave, but before doing so, he helps Elan defend her people from forces under orders from Giba. They defeat the army forces at Moonstruck Pass, and the hill people help rescue and treat the wounded servicemen, who reveal Giba’s involvement in the strike. Elan agrees to go with Qui-Gon and her people to Galu. In Galu, Jono rescues Obi-Wan, and they head for the substance analyzer, from whom they learn that the queen is being poisoned by a natural substance from the Galacian sea region, where, coincidentally, Jono happens to be from (and would still be if not for the Dunn family’s tradition of serving the Tallah dynasty). Obi-Wan realizes that Jono is the poisoner and confronts him. Jono is afraid of losing his place in the palace and is poisoning the queen in revenge and under the direction of someone else. Obi-Wan escapes him and ends up running into Beju, whom he duels with real swords (since Obi-Wan’s lightsaber had been confiscated). The duel is interrupted by Council Member Viso, who takes them to a special room where Beju is shown that he does not bear the Mark of the Crown. Beju orders the arrest of Giba, who has been acting against the queen and Jedi on his behalf, while manipulating Beju himself. The hill people, Elan, and Qui-Gon arrive in Galu. Elan goes to see Wila Perammi, while Qui-Gon meets with Obi-Wan. Giba then appears and states that the warrant for his arrest is invalid because it is signed by Beju, not Veda. Giba brandishes Obi-Wan’s lightsaber but is disarmed by Qui-Gon. It is then revealed that Giba was promised a place of power in Deca Brun’s administration if he would help Brun find funding—which is where Offworld came into play. Veda intercedes and orders his arrest herself. The election is held and Wila Perammi, with the support of the hill people, wins by a landslide. Afterwards, Viso takes Elan and Beju aside and shows Elan that she bears the Mark of the Crown. The two begin the slow process of getting to know each other, like siblings separated at birth. Qui-Gon and Obi-Wan, with their own internal issues about their legacies resolved through introspection about the Galacian conflict, prepare to leave Gala.

(The Mark of the Crown)
- Jedi Master Tahl is sent to Melida/Daan to sue for peace. (conjecture based on The Defenders of the Dead)
- Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi arrive on Melida/Daan in search of the Jedi Knight Tahl, who had been sent to sue for peace but was captured. The planet (alternately called “Melida” by the Melida, “Daan” by the Daan, and “Melida/Daan” by the politically-correct Republic) is embroiled in constant warfare. Though no one remembers the original cause of the fighting, the Melida and the Daan continue to wage war on each other, as they have for centuries. They avenge battles that avenge battles that avenge battles and so on. The Jedi have not been invited, but are there simply to find Tahl and get her out safely. They are to meet with Wehutti, Yoda’s Melida contact. Once they clash their Galacian starfighter away, they make their way toward Zehava, the only remaining major city. The city itself is composed of an inner area (the Melida zone) and an outer ring (the Daan area), and then all is surrounded by a security grid (deflection towers). They find a way inside the security field, only to be set upon by snipers. Upon defeating the snipers in battle, they learn that the leader is Wehutti, who had thought they were Daan forces. He leads them through Daan territory and finally to the Melida base, where he turns on them and tries to take them hostage instead of trying to help them negotiate for Tahl’s release. Obi-Wan and Qui-Gon escape with the help of a coalition of Daan and Melida children known as the Young, who live in tunnels below the city. The Jedi had noticed that there were no middle-age people in the city. This is because that entire generation has died in the constant warfare. The Young wish to create peace by forcing the Daan and Melida to concede to negotiations and peace, or face the Young. They meet the leaders of the Young, a boy named Nield and a girl named Cerasi, both Obi-Wan’s age. They agree to help the Jedi reclaim Tahl in return for the Jedi not contacting either elder side, which will allow them to stage diversionary attacks with augmented toy weapons. In this way, they hope to convince both sides that the other is attacking and raid the weapons storehouses in the confusion, so that they can force a peace if necessary. Obi-Wan gets caught up in the passion of the moment and the cause. He goes with some of the Young when the diversions take place, making him an active participant in the conflict, which Qui-Gon does not believe is appropriate. Shortly thereafter, while the Melida battle phantom Daan and vice versa, Obi-Wan, Qui-Gon, and Cerasi break into the Melida prison and save Tahl, though she has been blinded and otherwise injured in her time in custody. In the coming days, as the Melida and Daan consider the peace demands of the Young (who are now armed with the local weaponry), Qui-Gon and Obi-Wan tend to Tahl, waiting until she is well enough for them to head back to Coruscant. Obi-Wan is caught up in the cause, though, and does not desire to leave. Qui-Gon tells him that they must leave, but he calls Yoda to ask permission to return after they take Tahl to medical facilities. Yoda denies Qui-Gon’s request. When Tahl is well enough to travel, Qui-Gon tells Obi-Wan that they will leave the next day. The Young know that their network of runaways and orphans outside the city security field will be thousands strong and could help them force a peace if only the security towers could be shut down. Knowing that the starfighter they arrived in may be their only hope of getting Tahl off of Melida/Daan, Obi-Wan warily agrees to take Nield and Cerasi with him to the starfighter and destroy the towers. While they are doing this the next morning, Qui-Gon calls together Wehutti (who, by the way, is Cerasi’s father) and Gueni, the leaders of the Melida and Daan, respectively, and their cohorts, in the hopes of convincing them that they should join together to sue for peace with the Young. They reluctantly agree, all the while knowing that they have reinforcement supplies coming in from outside the city which will let them attack their own children. The reports of the towers’ destruction and the approaching legions of Young finally reach the meeting place and they agree to meet with the Young leaders to attempt to make peace for the first time in generations. Shortly thereafter, Obi-Wan and Qui-Gon argue over the merits of staying and a Jedi’s mission while the Young and elders meet. The meeting turns out to be an attack, and many Young are wounded. The Young decide to strike back. In the confusion, Qui-Gon loses sight of Obi-Wan, but proceeds to take Tahl to the starfighter. The Young learn that the elders now have three reinforcement starfighters on their side and need Obi-Wan to use the Jedi’s starfighter to shoot them down. Obi-Wan agrees, caught up in the moment, and heads for the starfighter. At the starfighter, Obi-Wan and Qui-Gon square off with words and then draw their lightsabers. Neither can take the step necessary to force a duel, so they both lower their weapons. Qui-Gon will not let Obi-Wan use the starfighter, but Obi-Wan will not abandon the Young. Obi-Wan gives Qui-Gon his lightsaber, accepts that staying on Melida/Daan means he will no longer be a Jedi, and tells Qui-Gon that he will be staying with his new friends in his new home. Qui-Gon cannot force him to leave, so Qui-Gon takes Tahl in the starfighter and they leave Melida/Daan as Obi-Wan rushes back to join the fight for the planet . . .
The Star Wars Timeline Gold: Legends Timeline, Vol. 1




(The Defenders of the Dead)
Reeft is chosen to be the Padawan as Binn Ibes.
(conjecture based on The Captive Temple)
On Melida/Daan, Obi-Wan Kenobi, Nield, Cerasi, Mawat, and Roenni prepare to destroy the entire Elder starfighter squadron (which wasn’t much to begin with). They prepare with their traditional exchange:
Cerasi: All we need is timing and luck.
Obi-Wan: Who, us? We don’t need luck.
Nield: Everybody needs luck.
Obi-Wan: Not us.
The attack is successful, officially winning the Young/Elder war. On Coruscant, Qui-Gon Jinn participates in a training duel with the young Jedi student Bruck. He speaks to Yoda, who suggests that he was too hard on Obi-Wan and that while he made the decision to save Tahl, he may not have made the right choice for Obi-Wan’s sake. On Melida/Daan, in the Unified Congress Building, the Young set up their governing body—a 10-member advisory council led by Cerasi and including Obi-Wan, along with a governor, Nield. With the support of the Middle Generation, they begin to address the problems of rebuilding, destroying old hatreds, and clothing and feeding the populace. Various squads have been set up to facilitate change, with Obi-Wan in charge of confiscating weapons from the populace. Nield’s major goal is to eliminate the Halls of Evidence in order to remove their legacy of hatred. The first to be destroyed is the Hall holding the tombstones of Nield’s parents. Back on Coruscant, thefts are discovered at the Jedi Temple. Yoda and Mace Windu ask Qui-Gon Jinn and Tahl to look into the matter. Tahl, now blind, has been using the Force to stretch her other senses past normal levels and has also been saddled with a rather annoying guide droid, 2JTJ (Toojay). Soon, the trainee lightsabers are stolen, including Obi-Wan’s, which Qui-Gon stored with the others for safe-keeping. Back on Melida/Daan, the struggle for peace is a rough one. After disarming more Elders, Cerasi and Obi-Wan are called to the Hall on Glory Street, where Nield’s team is ready to demolish another Hall of Evidence, but a group of Elders, led by Wehutti, Cerasi’s father, refuses to allow them to do so. Back on Coruscant, the healing crystals of fire, great Jedi treasures, are stolen. On Melida/Daan, Obi-Wan and Cerasi convince Nield to hold off on the demolition of the Hall, hoping to have a stop action ordered by the Council to save their heritage and move funds and effort to building new housing, not destroying old Halls. Back at the Jedi Temple, Qui-Gon and Tahl interview Bant Eiren and realize that when Tahl smelled the intruder earlier when he had apparently broken into Qui-Gon’s room, she had actually smelled the Temple’s lake water. They ask Bant to search the lake (since she’s a Mon Calamari) for anything suspicious, and she finds a watertight container with the lightsabers (but not the crystals) inside. On Melida/Daan, the Council is deadlocked on the stop action, and Obi-Wan is the deciding vote. He votes for the action, which causes Nield to disavow him as an outsider. The Young begin to shatter into factions. At the Jedi Temple, Qui-Gon and Tahl stake out the lake and soon see Bruck going to and from the bottom of the lake. Qui-Gon tracks him to where he believes Bruck will meet an accomplice, but Toojay accidentally gives his presence away, and Bruck goes into hiding.
Once back with Tahl, Qui-Gon learns that another individual was tailing him, while he was tailing Bruck. This someone must be familiar with the Jedi Temple to have been able to roam inside without being noticed. (Could it be a failed Jedi student like Xanatos, or perhaps Xanatos himself?) On Melida/Daan, a group of armed Elders and Nield’s group of Young, also armed (most likely from the storage space where the confiscated weapons were taken), face off in front of the Hall of Evidence on Glory Street. As Obi-Wan charges in to stop the coming violence, Cerasi leaps out of hiding and moves between the two forces. Before ObiWan can get to her, she is shot (by Nield or by Wehutti?) and killed. Both Nield and Wehutti are shocked, and both sides now have a reason to wage war on each other. Obi-Wan later finds Nield in seclusion and tries to talk to him, but Nield blames Obi-Wan for Cerasi’s death, since he didn’t get to her in time to save her. Nield has no idea if he is the one who pulled the trigger or not. He sends a message to Coruscant. At the Jedi Temple, Qui-Gon is called before Yoda. When Yoda turns on a holomessage from Obi-Wan, Qui-Gon turns to leave in disgust until he hears Obi-Wan’s first words: “Cerasi is dead.” Qui-Gon turns back to listen to his former Padawan. Obi-Wan pleads for his help. Qui-Gon cannot help but realize that Obi-Wan was simply a boy who had made a bad decision. He tells Yoda to call Obi-Wan; he is on his way. When Qui-Gon arrives and meets Obi-Wan, they do not talk of their parting, but only of the current crisis. They go to where Wehutti is hiding and learn that he doesn’t believe he shot her either, though he is unsure. Qui-Gon asks Obi-Wan to use the Force to remember the events of Cerasi’s death, and they realize that there was a sniper who fired the fatal shot. It wasn’t Nield. It wasn’t Wehutti. They go to the weapons storehouse and find it empty, save for two Young, Deila and Joli. The two tell Qui-Gon and Obi-Wan that Mawat desires Nield’s power, so he armed the Elders and Nield’s Young so that any confrontation would be blamed on Nield and he could seize power. Just to make sure conflict started, he put a sniper on the roof to start a confrontation the day Cerasi was shot. It was this sniper that killed Cerasi. Obi-Wan and Qui-Gon split up to find Nield and tell him of Mawat’s actions.

482


Qui-Gon doesn’t find him, but finds a holomessage from Cerasi in her bed. Obi-Wan finds Nield, and must subdue Nield in order to get the governor to listen to the truth of Mawat’s actions. Nield returns to being Obi-Wan’s friend, though he recognizes that his actions have been manipulated and his judgment poor. The two turn and see Mawat’s forces approaching.
Obi-Wan ignites his lightsaber (brought to him by Qui-Gon in a show of semi-forgiveness), and Nield grabs his vibroblade. The two charge into the oncoming force together, as Deila, Joli, and Roenni arrive with other Young to help Nield and Obi-Wan. Qui-Gon arrives and sees the battle as a no-win situation. He stops the battle dead when he uses an amplifier to play Cerasi’s last message, from the day she suspected she would die stopping the coming conflict on Glory Street. She wanted no monuments built or destroyed in her name. She wishes only that the dream of peace be worth working for. With that, the last battle of Zehava is over. With Qui-Gon’s help negotiating, a new multi-generational government is set up on Melida/Daan. As peace is restored, Mawat and his followers go into exile. Qui-Gon prepares to leave, and this time, Obi-Wan will go with him. Qui-Gon tells Obi-Wan that he will once again be a Jedi, but whether or not he will become Qui-Gon’s Padawan again is still in doubt.
As Obi-Wan ponders this painful issue, Qui-Gon’s comlink signals him. “What is it?” Obi-Wan
The Temple is under siege. An attempt has been made to kill Yoda!”

(The Uncertain Path)

- A bomb at the Jedi Temple nearly killed Master Yoda in the Room of a Thousand Fountains.
These facts and those surrounding recent thefts in the Jedi Temple are relayed to Obi-Wan Kenobi, as he and Qui-Gon Jinn stand before the Jedi Council. Obi-Wan wishes to rejoin the Jedi order and be Qui-Gon’s Padawan again, but the Council will not allow him back into the told as of yet, and wish him to stay out of the investigation. Qui-Gon is also wary of Obi-Wan, knowing that when the bond of trust was broken with his first Padawan, Xanatos, disaster resulted. Obi-Wan goes to talk to Bant Eiren about his situation, and as she consoles him and tells him what his friends are up to these days, they see that a turbolift car above is danger of dropping, and it could be filled with children! As Bant races to a communication panel (which doesn’t work, forcing her to run to the Council chamber), Obi-Wan disregards that he told Bant he would wait below and rushes up to the shaft. He makes his way, carefully, to the ready-to-fall lift car, where he and the caretaker inside, Ali-Alann, begin taking the children out. Qui-Gon and other Jedi arrive. Qui-Gon and several Jedi work as a relay to get the children and Ali-Alann to safety before the lift can fall, while the majority of Jedi Council members use the force to keep it from falling. They successfully save all of the children, and no one is harmed, but while the Council praises Bant for going for help, they scold Obi-Wan for interfering in Jedi matters and for being impetuous enough to put lives in danger by going up to the shaft. Qui-Gon knows they are being too rough on Obi-Wan, but says nothing. Qui-Gon speaks with Miro Daroon, the Temple’s resident engineer, so to speak, and they discuss how the thefts earlier seem to have had a purpose. They also notice that whoever it is has been messing with the Temple’s systems in a distracting fashion. Yoda tells Qui-Gon that this could not have come at a worse time. Two warring worlds are vying for peace, with a shipment of the valuable mineral vertex in the equation. To safeguard the vertex, the Jedi agreed to let it be stored at the Temple. As Qui-Gon prepares to work with Tahl and Miro on figuring out how Bruck Chun and his mysterious accomplice have been navigating through the temple, he notes how Bruck and the intruder have been using a formula that an Outer Rim tyrant once used: Disruption + Demoralization + Distraction = Devastation. (This is the formula that Xanatos’ father had used, though Qui-Gon doesn’t put the two together.) Obi-Wan decides to get a new comlink (since his other was damaged on Melida/Daan). On his way to see Miro about one, he runs into Siri Tachi, a student he had thought was Bruck’s friend, but was really just Buck’s competitor. He asks her to tell Qui-Gon if she remembers anything suspicious, but she raves at him about how he has made all Padawans and Padawan-candidates look bad. He continues on to Miro’s to find Qui-Gon and Miro talking about the systems failures. It seems that two wings have already had to be shut down, and the only thing to fix it if it continues is to reboot the entire system and check it. The technical mastery required to do this finally puts the last piece of the puzzle in Qui-Gon’s mind. He knows who Bruck’s controlling partner is: Xanatos. He turns to Obi-Wan and disregards the Council’s orders. He wants Obi-Wan with him on the investigation. They go talk to Tahl, who isn’t as convinced, until Siri Tachi enters, having remembered Bruck bragging about his family. It turns out that he was bragging about what he thought was his family (since records are sealed even from students). The family was actually Xanatos’ family. This convinces Tahl, and while she looks into Xanatos’ Offworld Corporation, Obi-Wan and Qui-Gon prepare to search for Xanatos. Bant bursts in and tells them that she knows how Xanatos and Bruck are moving around—the water tubes! She, Obi-Wan, and Qui-Gon head through the tubes and eventually come to the room housing the water purification tank. And there, rising out of the tank via the Force, is Xanatos. As the unarmed Bant escapes, Qui-Gon and Obi-Wan duel with Xanatos, who keeps them on their toes. Finally, the water begins to be flushed through the system, and the Jedi must leap out of the way, as Xanatos leaps into the water flow and escapes. The Jedi realize that Xanatos may have been trying to lead them away from something, and, sure enough, they find his escape vessel right outside the purification room, against the outside wall of the Temple. They also recall Xanatos having a satchel on his back, as if he was cleaning up evidence. Someone had tipped him off that the Jedi would be going through the water system . . . They return to Tahl, who tells them that Offworld is quickly losing money, which leads Qui-Gon to realize Xanatos’ double-motive: revenge and the theft of the vertex. Tahl’s annoying servant droid, TooJay enters, and Qui-Gon makes a realization. He sends TooJay to find Bant before telling Tahl and Obi-Wan that TooJay must be the spy. He was the only other “person” present each time they discussed plans. Qui-Gon has Obi-Wan go get a student his size, Garen Muln. On his way, he runs into Bant and accuses her of trying to take his place as Qui-Gon’s Padawan. She runs away, hurt. When Garen and Obi-Wan return, they find Qui-Gon and Ali-Alann waiting. They intend to feed TooJay false information through a conversation Obi-Wan and Qui-Gon will record, and Ali-Alann and Garen, dressed as the former, will play. Just then, Tahl enters and tells them Bant is missing. Xanatos breaks in on the comlink and tells them he will trade Bant’s life for his transport. The plan begins, and Qui-Gon and Obi-Wan head for the storage area containing the vertex. Xanatos and Bruck enter, as predicted, and former Padawan and former Master attack. As Xanatos takes on both Jedi, Bruck races off to kill Bant. Obi-Wan breaks away and follows. In the storage room, Qui-Gon and Xanatos duel until Xanatos takes the battle up a floor to the Council chamber . . . and then leaps out of a window, dozens of stories up. In the Room of a Thousand Fountains, Obi-Wan and Bruck duel. Bruck reveals that he was not chosen as a Padawan, which is what started him down the dark path. Obi-Wan realizes that Bant is being held underwater and will soon drown if she doesn’t get out (even her species needs air, even if they can breathe underwater for long periods). Obi-Wan and Bruck duel up a high embankment in the room. As the systems that Miro had shut down several minutes ago (seemingly routinely to find the problem) reactivate, Obi-Wan realizes the water system will be next. He forces Bruck back near a waterfall, and when the water reactivates, it shorts out Bruck’s lightsaber. The water knocks him off-balance, and he falls to his death. Obi-Wan races back to save Bant, who will be fine. He races off to find Qui-Gon. Elsewhere, Qui-Gon, knowing Xanatos had leaped out onto a ledge that goes around the temple, goes out the window and follows...
Xanatos, who is making his way to his transport. The two duel fiercely on the ledge until Xanatos tells Qui-Gon that he has set the temple to explode. "What you revere can destroy you," he taunts. Qui-Gon must let him escape (as Xanatos leaps to a passing transport) and race inside to stop the destruction of the Temple, which, due to the wings being closed, will kill all inside. Obi-Wan caches up, and they race through service tunnels to the room where Miro is about to bring the fusion furnace fully online. They stop him before he can do it, just in time. Qui-Gon then goes to the furnace and extracts the stolen Healing Crystals of Fire, which would've given the furnace enough energy to blow the Temple apart. Later, Obi-Wan patches things up with Bant, and Tahc convinces Qui-Gon that perhaps Obi-Wan should again be trusted, to form a bond greater than before. Before the matter can go any further, Qui-Gon requests that the Council allow him to pursue Xanatos. The Council refuses. Qui-Gon refuses to follow their directive and tells Obi-Wan he flatly disagrees and will pursue Xanatos himself. Knowing that his choice here may determine if he ever becomes a Jedi again, Obi-Wan makes his decision: "Then I am coming with you."

(The Captive Temple)

- Obi-Wan Kenobi and Qui-Gon Jinn arrive on Telos, home planet of Xanatos, against the Jedi Council’s instructions. They have learned about the planet’s recent history and intend to investigate the company UniFy, which is suspected of being a front for Offworld, Xanatos’ mining company. They learn in the capital city, Thani, about something called Katharsis, which they soon learn is a major gambling/sporting event on Telos. People come from around the world to bet in Katharsis games, with only three select lottery winners being able to compete in the final high-stakes gambling event at the end. The Jedi, pursued by security forces on trumped up charges of being galactic criminals, are forced to take to safety with a thief named Denterus (Den). From Den’s box, they view the Katharsis games starting, beginning with a speech from Vox Chun, the world’s treasurer and the father of Bruck Chun, the Jedi student who had been seduced by Xanatos to the Dark Side and ended up falling from a ledge to his death in a battle with Obi-Wan. In the speech, which comments on how the Katharsis games’ profits are to be used to preserve Telos’ beautiful natural areas, the Jedi’s worst fears are confirmed when Xanatos is introduced as the greatest benefactor of Katharsis. He isn’t in hiding—he’s in plain sight. The Jedi leave the games with Den, who shows them to UniFy’s headquarters, but they wait until later to enter the premises. Instead, they go to a hotel/safehouse where Den is staying, only to be attacked by security forces, who were after Den, not the Jedi. They all escape and find another safe place to hide, this time with the leader of the POWER (Preserve Our Wild Endangered Resources) Party, Andra. They talk about the situation with the world’s natural resources and the possibility that UniFy is mishandling or preparing to exploit them. The Jedi and Den will break into the UniFy building and search their computer files for information tying them to resource mishandling or Offworld, which would presume that Xanatos is going to mine Telos using Offworld. They do so, but Qui-Gon notices Den looking up information on Katharsis, not UniFy or Offworld. Den slips away just as the Jedi are captured. They are tried in absentia and sentenced to death.

While imprisoned, Qui-Gon finally talks to Obi-Wan some about being so rough on him after the Melida/Daan incident, but they are interrupted when Xanatos comes to gloat. They are taken in a cage to where they will be beheaded, but they are saved by Den and Andra, who arrive on swoops. Xanatos is not amused. Qui-Gon confronts Den about looking up Katharsis instead of Offworld only to discover that Den found out that Katharsis is being controlled by UniFy, since UniFy pretty much controls the government. This means that UniFy effectively controls all public lands. He has also discovered that Katharsis’ lottery is rigged, as is who will win the final games. The winner is then informed that he must give half of the winnings back to the Katharsis/UniFy/Government alliance. They devise a plan to expose Xanatos for what he really is. Den prepares to rig the lottery to put him in the final game, while Obi-Wan and Andra (who is actually the only POWER Party member) go gather evidence of UniFy’s presumed connection to Offworld. Obi-Wan and Andra make their way to the Park of the Sacred Pools and discover the beginnings of a full-scale Offworld mining operation, complete with a box of thermal detonators with the Offworld seal (which they make a video record of) and an Offworld supply ship, which is stationed in a Tech Dome. Knowing that Offworld is destroying their world (the waters in the Sacred Pools area is so polluted that it destroys organic material in seconds), they steal the transport and escape. They rendezvous at the Katharsis games, where Den makes his way, as rigged, into the final round and wins. As Xanatos comes out to speak of his own glory (basically), Qui-Gon has the technicians in the arena play the video Obi-Wan and Andra made at the mining site, and Den reveals that the games are rigged. The crowd turns on Xanatos, and he escapes on a swoop, with Obi-Wan and Qui-Gon, also on swoops, in hot pursuit. The Jedi chase Xanatos back to the mining site, where they expect him to take a shuttle away from Telos. They head him off and a duel ensues. As they battle, Xanatos attempts to break Obi-Wan down by talking about how it must’ve felt to have caused Bruck’s death, but Obi-Wan sees through this and presses the advantage. Finally, the Jedi have Xanatos cornered, but he still will not allow Qui-Gon the satisfaction of capturing or killing him. Xanatos leaps into the corrosive waters to his death in a final act of defiance. Things begin to calm after Xanatos’es death. Vox Chun is placed in jail, investigations are called on government heads, the corrupt governor resigns, and special elections are held, in which it seems Andra and her POWER Party (which now has flocks of new members) will come into power (with Den at Andra’s side). The Katharsis games are also over. As they prepare to return to Coruscant, Qui-Gon and Obi-
Wan talk about their bond and rebuilding it.

Qui-Gon: I know you are on probation and can’t be my official apprentice. But you are my Padawan, Obi-Wan. I do not need the Council to tell me so.
Obi-Wan: Then you’ll take me back?
Qui-Gon: We will take each other back. I fought our bond from the first. But you knew something I didn’t. You knew that some things are meant to be. Now I know it, too. You will make a fine Jedi Knight. I would be proud to continue the journey we started together. I am not saying the way will be easy. We have different temperaments. No doubt we will clash. You will come to challenge me again.

Obi-Wan: I will try not to.
Qui-Gon: You don’t understand, Padawan. I look forward to it.

(The Day of Reckoning)

- Siri Tachi is taken as Adi Gallia’s Padawan. At about the same time, Obi-Wan Kenobi is officially reinstated as a Jedi Padawan under Qui-Gon Jinn. The two undertake a few exploratory missions to resolidify their bond.
(conjecture based on The Fight for Truth)

- On Ilum, Qui-Gon Jinn directs Obi-Wan Kenobi in creating his own lightsaber from scratch.
After Obi-Wan successfully does so, they are contacted about a new mission. A Republic refinery ship and its crew have gone missing on Ord Sigatt. The two head for Ord Sigatt, where they investigate undercover, noticing the strange lack of blasters among the populace.
While Qui-Gon enters a bar to get information, Obi-Wan is caught watching a Besalisk loading bottles and trays. When the Besalisk spots Obi-Wan, he immediately surrenders, babbling and revealing that he had been running illegal blasters to help protect the population from the oppressive tactics of the Denon-Ardru Mutual forces that were bringing settlers to the planet and pushing out the locals. The Besalisk, who introduces himself as Dexter “Dex” Jettster, reveals that he and his allies captured the missing ship, the Hardy Harrow, and have hidden it nearby, just to prove the point that the locals won’t relocate without a fight. The ship, however, was a drone. The Denon senator, who has a financial stake in Denon-Ardru Mutual, had tricked the Jedi into sending Obi-Wan and Qui-Gon to reclaim a drone barge, not save lives, just to protect the company’s monopoly over the carvanium resources of Ord Sigatt.
When Dex realizes that Obi-Wan didn’t know any of this, and he has just spilled his guts based on fear of the reputation of the Jedi Knights, he stays to be taken into custody, remaining somewhat honorable. When Obi-Wan is briefly called away to help a two children being accosted by security personnel, his lightsaber gives the people hope to fight the company. When Obi-Wan returns, Dex is still waiting to be taken into custody. Instead of doing so, he passes the information he gained from Dex to Qui-Gon, and the ship is recovered. Dex and Obi-Wan become good friends in the years to come. (To be continued below . . . )

(The Life and Legend of Obi-Wan Kenobi)

- TCW DATE: While on a field trip to Tanaab, Obi-Wan Kenobi (nearly fourteen years old) is undergoing a blindfolded Force-seeking exercise when his overconfidence leads him to fall into a bit of firebeetles. This terrifies Obi-Wan, and it will serve as the basis of nightmares later, but it serves as a lesson in overconfidence.

(conjecture based on Wild Space)

- During his early training, Obi-Wan Kenobi tells Qui-Gon Jinn that he fears disappointing Qui-Gon. Qui-Gon repeats to him the Jedi code that a Jedi does not know anger, fear, hatred, or love. To illustrate the reason for this Code, he tells Obi-Wan the story of Jedi Master Shang-Troy Thanabo’s two Padawans.

(Mythology)

- With relations in the Outer Rim strained, resources shipped from the Rim to the Core are moving at highly inflated prices. This is alleviated, to an extent, by the pirate and smuggler Iaco Stark, whose fleet of ships is striking at profitable cargo vessels, then selling the items in the core for less than the Outer Rim merchants have been (at the Trade Federation’s demands). Gathering other willing parties to his side, Stark creates the Stark Commercial Combine, a large enough force to challenge the Trade Federation. Soon, a processing plant for Alzahi, a key ingredient in bacta, explodes on Thyferra, driving the prices for bacta to new heights. The Outer Rim is nearly cut off from bacta completely, prompting Stark to raid bacta vessels to sell the substance in the Rim. This begins to push the Core-led Republic to war. In the Senate, Nute Gunray argues the Trade Federation’s case—that they should be allowed to build larger droid armies for protection. Senator Finis Valorum argues the case for diplomacy. Senator Ranulph Tarkin of Eriadu argues for the creation of a true, unified Republic Army and Navy to strike back. The Jedi are called to investigate the crisis. Valorum explains the situation, and the decision is made to send Master Tholme and his Padawan, Quinlan Vos, to Thyferra to investigate the possibility that the Trade Federation or Thyferrans are forcing a bacta shortage to increase profits. Meanwhile, Valorum will go with Adi Gallia, Tyvokka, Plo Koon (Tyvokka’s former student, whom he wishes would join the Jedi Council), Qui-Gon Jinn, and Qui-Gon’s new Padawan, Obi-Wan Kenobi, to the planet Troiken to join with Nute Gunray for a face-to-face negotiation with Iaco Stark. As the Jedi head for their missions, Tarkin and Gunray engage in more scheming. Tarkin blackmails the location of the meeting out of Gunray and prepares for an assault with a makeshift Republic Navy (a bit of propaganda on his part, not an official navy for the Republic), created from members worlds who support his ideas. On Thyferra, Tholme and Quinlan discover that not all is as it seems at the site of the explosion, but they are set upon by a battle droid, which forces them to leave, now that they are discovered. On Troika, the meeting commences, but Gunray has been blackmailed into sending a signal to Tarkin, letting him know everyone is present. Tarkin’s force leaps to hyperspace. At the same time, Stark’s forces pull weapons and take the Republic team hostage, even as a navicomputer virus that they piggybacked on Gunray’s signal (even though they don’t know where the signal came from) enters Tarkin’s force’s ships, sending many to their doom or far-flung destinations, and leaving only a small bit of the force to emerge over Troiken ... into the waiting blasts of Stark’s fleet. The Republic must concede to all of Stark’s demands, or the hostages will die. Knowing this situation, the bacta shortage, and all of Stark’s actions are one large power play, Tyvokka flips over the table, and the Jedi leap into action. Stark escapes in the chaos, and when Gunray is told to have his droids join the fray, he says “kill them all,” which prompts the droids to fire upon everyone, including the Jedi. Qui-Gon takes the droids out, but Tyvokka is gravely injured. The Jedi escape to their ship with Valorum and Gunray, where they call up to Tarkin and have him drop his troops to a series of caves to await backup. Tarkin does so, grudgingly, and then escapes as his ship, the Invincible, is destroyed. Aboard the Jedi vessel, Tyvokka places Adi in charge of Valorum, Qui-Gon in charge of discovering a way to counteract the navicomputer virus, and asks Plo Koon to rally the troops to keep them from surrendering and to take his place on the Jedi Council. Tyvokka then dies. Gunray’s vessel has been destroyed, and the fighter that blasted it is now chasing the Jedi vessel, which is damaged. With their combined powers, Plo, Adi, and Qui-Gon use a mind trick to evade their pursuer. Meanwhile, on Thyferra, Tholme listens in on a secret meeting between the Trade Federation’s Hask and the Xucphra’s Adol Bel. This confirms that the shortage was manufactured, and the Xucphra is blaming the Neimoidians, not Stark, for their inability to
The Stark Hyperspace War

NOTE: How this ties into the Jedi Apprentice books is not yet apparent. Obi-Wan is Qui-Gon’s Padawan, but nothing is ever mentioned about them participating in the Stark Hyperspace War in subsequent Jedi Apprentice books. Further, it was originally suggested that the war events took place 43 BBY, yet the comic itself is set at 30 BBY with a flashback to these events, 14 years earlier. This will hopefully be ironed out further in the future.

- During the Stark Hyperspace War, Armand Isard’s brother is killed when his ship emerges from hyperspace in the center of a star.
The Star Wars Timeline Gold: Legends Timeline, Vol. 1

489

• Kal Brigger, flying the YT 492727ZED (the future Millennium Falcon) under the name Wayward Son flies for Iaco Stark’s forces in the Stark Hyperspace War. Kal is killed by carnivorous insects in an abandoned spice mine on Troiken. It is unknown what becomes of the ship over the next fifteen years, but there are rumors that it is flown by Plo Koon for a while, as there is a picture of Plo and Qui-Gon and Adi Gallia standing in front of a very similar looking ship from that time period. By the time fifteen years have passed, the ship will be in the hands of the Republic Group.

(conjecture based on Iron Eclipse)

• Jedi Master Plo Koon, on a mission to find Dreed Pommel, finally tracks him down to the planet Metellos. When finally cornered in Ektra, Pommel tries to use a child as a protective shield to escape. On instinct, Plo uses Force lightning to strike Pommel and make him release the girl, then does so again to render him unconscious. He returns to the Jedi Temple, where the Jedi Council expects him to soon join its ranks after the death of Plo’s former master, Tyvokka. When his report includes mention of the Force lightning, he is asked to contemplate his use of that generally-accepted Dark Side ability. He records a response to the Jedi Council that explains why he believed it necessary and why he does not believe he should necessarily stop studying its use out of fear or willful ignorance. (To be continued below . . .)

(Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)

• After reporting on his mission to apprehend Dreed Pommel, Jedi Master Plo Koon finally joins the Jedi Council, per Jedi Master Tyvokka’s last wishes.

(conjecture based on The Stark Hyperspace War and Jedi vs. Sith: The Essential Guide to the Force)

• Shortly after the Stark Hyperspace War, Master Tholme leaves his Padawan, Quinlan Vos, with Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi on Ragoon VI for some training exercises. When Quin falls into water and hits his head, knocking him unconscious, Obi-Wan leaps in and saves him from drowning. (To be continued below . . .)

(The Dreadnaughts of Rendili)

• In the wake of the Stark Hyperspace War, Iaco Stark will join the Commerce Guild and remain with them through the end of the Clone Wars. While with the Commerce Guild, he will marry Arris Rossum and have two children, Iaculyn and Elli.

(conjecture based on Iron Eclipse)

• Three years into his training on Orsis, Maul swims with fellow student Kilindi Matako, who informs him about a trap that Trezza always uses when taking students out on a hunt for kaabores. He will lead Maul (and other students during their same tests) into a group of chargrecks to see how they react and how prepared they are for any eventuality. When Maul undergoes this test four days later, he kills the chargrecks since he knew what was coming. Despite his surprise, Trezza is able to test Maul’s scent to determine that he did not, in fact, use the Force, which would have violated his orders from both Darth Sidious and Trezza. (To be continued below . . .)

(The Wrath of Darth Maul)

• Jedi Master Tholme and his Padawan, Quinlan Vos, arrive on Ryloth to hunt a felon. It is believed that the Secura clan is involved in bringing interdicted beasts like wampas to Ryloth. While Tholme discusses this with Lon and Pol Secura, Quinlan senses danger to the young Aayla Secura, who is currently a slave to a Hutt. Quinlan races to where the Hutt’s illegal wampa guardian is killing one of his guards, and when he gets there, he manages to get Aayla to safety and kills the wampa (with a little help through the Force from Aayla). This not only proves that there is definitely illegal beast-running on Ryloth, but also suggests that Aayla is force-sensitive. They decide to test her and take her back for training if appropriate. (To be continued below . . .)

(Rite of Passage)

• Thirty-two years after Dooku and Qui-Gon Jinn stopped Lorian Nod’s raider activities, Qui-Gon and Obi-Wan Kenobi are on Junction 5, a world living under the rumored threat that the planet’s moon (with which the planet is feuding), Delaluna, has a weapon of mass destruction called the “Annihilator.” While trying not to actively get involved in the situation, the Jedi still do when they discover that the head of the Guardians, a group of enforcers cracking down on the entire society to keep order in the face of the Delalunan threat, is none other than Lorian Nod, free from prison. Seeking to undermine whatever scheme Lorian may have going, they make contact with a woman wanted by the Guardians, Celia Dil. They agree to join a group from Junction 5 that will go to Delaluna to break into their Ministry of Defense and Offense. The hope is that if they can get plans for the Annihilator, they can help Junction 5 discover a way to defend itself (and prove the weapon’s existence), so that the society can take back control of itself from the Guardians. Upon breaking into the Ministry, though, they discover that the “Annihilator” is nothing more than a sham, crafted by Lorian and the Delalunan government to keep the Guardians in power on Junction 5. With this info in-hand, they return to Junction 5 and allow themselves to be captured. As Lorian delivers a message about their capture and the threat of Delaluna to the populace, the captives break free and play the information from the Ministry for all to see. Lorian is, again, taken into custody, and Celia is now a heroine. (To be continued below . . .)

(Legacy of the Jedi)

- Having received a transmission from O-Melie and V-Nen on Kegan, asking the Jedi to see if their child, O-Lara, is Force-sensitive, Yoda sends four Jedi to Kegan. The team consists of Qui-Gon Jinn, Obi-Wan Kenobi, Adi Gallia, and Adi’s Padawan, Siri Tachi. They arrive and meet two supposed Hospitality Guides, O-Rina and V-Haad, who work for the isolationist, almost communist, government, headed by O-Vieve and V-Tan. They all go meet with O-Melie and V-Nen, and the Jedi observe O-Lara. The child is indeed Force-sensitive, but it is obvious that the government does not wish O-Lara to leave Kegan. Suspicious and wanting to learn more about Kegan (as per Yoda’s instructions), Qui-Gon suggests they walk to their quarters, accompanied by the Guides and parents. On the way, Siri and Obi-Wan slip away to observe more, but are caught by truant officers who believe they are Kegan children, absent from required schooling (i.e. brainwashing) in the Learning Circle. As the Guides hunt for the Padawans, the parents and Jedi Knights head back to the family’s home, where they find O-Rina has been taken by “medical technicians,” spirited away into the night. As Obi-Wan and Siri are sent into “school” by the officer V-Tarz and placed into the care of the “educator,” O-Bin, Qui-Gon and Adi begin a search for O-Lara by asking to meet with the Benevolent Guides, O-Vieve and V-Tan. They are snubbed and return to V-Nen and O-Melie, who suggest (as if being watched) to meet them in Communications Circle. Washing dishes for speaking out against O-Bin’s deceitful teachings in the Learning Circle, Obi-Wan and Siri meet another student, V-Davi, who collects little pets, which is not allowed in the school. They become friends and determine that they must escape soon. V-Davi mentions that his parents died seven years ago in a Toli-X outbreak, which the Padawans know could’ve been avoided if Kegan had traded with the galaxy at large, which had all but eradicated Toli-X. They keep this information to themselves. Meanwhile, Adi and Qui-Gon meet with the parents again in a non-bugged room. They reveal that the world is under constant surveillance by what amounts to “thought police.” O-Vieve and V-Tan have created this kind of “General Good” and false democracy to protect the populace, supposedly. It seems the two Benevolent Guides have had visions of a future in which the Jedi are consumed by a darkness from within, which then sweeps across the galaxy and comes down upon Kegan in a wave of masked soldiers after but one individual leaves Kegan. (Sounds an awful lot like the rise of Palpatine, the Jedi Purge, and stormtroopers, doesn’t it?) They also suggest that the Padawans could’ve been taken to the Learning Circle. Before leaving, the parents, who had contacted the Jedi without the Benevolent Guides’ knowledge, plead again for the safe return of their daughter. In order to help those prepared to rise against V-Tan and O-Vieve to make their voices heard, Qui-Gon and a reluctant Adi decide to disable the Central Instruction Processors in the Comm Circle to stop the eavesdropping. Preparing to escape from the Learning Circle, V-Davi, Obi-Wan, and Siri are unable to carry out their plan when there are two guards on duty instead of one. While making their way back to safety, they discover files talking about a Re-Learning Circle, from which no one returns. The next night, they try again. They make sure they are sent on kitchen duty and then prepare to use the stoves to cause a false infrared reading. They are about to escape when they are discovered by O-Bin and the guards. Only V-Davi's appearance with one of his pets ends up saving the Padawans . . . but V-Davi is sent to the Re-Learning Circle for his disobedience. At the Comm Circle, Qui-Gon and Adi disable the CIP. They also discover more records about the Re-Learning Circle and believe O-Lara has been taken there. They discuss this with O-Melia, V-Nen, and O-Lara's caregiver, O-Yani, but are soon arrested for using the Force to cloud the mind of the building's guard. Back at the Learning Circle, the Padawans prepare to find a way to save V-Davi. They complete a track and field course with their Jedi reflexes and then go to class. In class, when they are accused of lying about their times, the other students speak up on their behalf, starting a series of questions against the very nature of the General Good. For their disruption, the Padawans are sent to the Re-Learning Circle. Qui-Gon and Adi meet with O-Vieve and V-Tan, who tell of their visions and then declare that the Jedi must leave Kegan immediately. The Padawans, if found, will be sent later. Needless to say, the two Jedi Knights don't go for this. As the Re-Learning Circle attempts to brainwash the Padawans, the Jedi Knights make their way to their ship. The Padawans break out of their rooms and find V-Davi, telling him the truth of the Toli-X outbreak to break him out of his brainwashed state. As they make their escape, Qui-Gon and Adi out-race Keganite starfighters and race for the Re-Learning Circle. In the Circle, the children find O-Lara, imprisoned, and take her with them. The Knights break in as the Padawans are breaking out, reuniting the four Jedi, with V-Davi and O-Lara at their side. A short time later, the resistance groups on Kegan speak out about the events in the Re-Learning Circle. O-Vieve and V-Tan are voted out as Benevolent Guides, and a new council convenes, voting to send an envoy to the Galactic Senate, specifically to bring medical and technological advancements to Kegan, but also to begin interstellar relations. The citizens begin to experience their first taste of a true democracy, and O-Melia and V-Nen decide to send O-Lara to Coruscant for Jedi training, while they take in the orphaned V-Davi. Finally, the Jedi's work is done. As they leave the world, Qui-Gon looks at Obi-Wan and experiences a vision of Obi-Wan as an elder man, alone, living on a desolate planet, with his dark memories as his only companions. (Qui-Gon is seeing Obi-Wan as he will be in the years before the Battle of Yavin.) Qui-Gon shakes off the vision and assures Obi-Wan that if darkness truly lies ahead of them, they will face it together.*

(The Fight for Truth)*

*NOTE: The Essential Reader's Companion firmly places this story as still in 44 BBY, but it notes that months go by after the events of the previous Jedi Apprentice book. This book and the next (The Shattered Peace) will appear together in the latter part of this year, before another months-long gap separates them from The Deadly Hunter.

- Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi are sent to Rutan and Senali. Senali was once a Rutanian colony until breaking free of Rutanian rule and declaring itself a separate world. In the time since, Rutan has become typical in galactic culture, while Senali has grown into a more primitive, tribal society. A great war had taken place between the societies until peace was reached with an accord including the trading of firstborn royal children at the age of seven, with the return home at sixteen years old. This process was meant as a way to maintain peace, as the child, upon gaining the throne, would never betray his homeworld or attack the world upon which he was raised. This process has hit a snag, however, because the heir to the Rutanian throne, Leed, has chosen not to return home to Rutan, but instead to remain living with the extended family of Meenon, the Senalis ruler, much to the anger of his father, King Frane. This state of affairs has led Frane to call the Jedi for arbitration. Upon arriving on Rutan, Qui-Gon and Obi-Wan are caught in the middle of a wild game hunt being carried out by Frane using his nek battle dogs and illegal seeker droids. After destroying the seekers and meeting Frane, the Jedi are taken to Frane's palace, where Frane declares that Leed must be being held against his will or must have been brainwashed to want to stay on Senali. He gives the Jedi three days to bring Leed back, and in the meantime, he will imprison Yaana, Meenon's daughter on Rutan. Qui-Gon negotiates with Farne to keep Yaana out of jail. He will take Taroon, Farne's other son, with them to Senali, so that he can take Leed's place when Leed comes home. Hoping to speak to Leed and avoid another war, the Jedi and Taroon head for Senali, where they meet with Meenon and soon with Leed's "family." It seems that Leed has disappeared, not wanting to go back to Rutan. The Jedi believe his foster sister, Drenna, knows where he is, so they follow her and are nearly drowned in a high tide before Leed saves them. Leed expresses his deep love for Senali and his foster family and his desire to remain on Senali. Tempers flare, but they decide to wait the night before discussing it further. The next day, they participate in typical Senalis life, and Tarooon gains an affection for Drenna and Senali, though he tries to hide it. He tells Leed that he will respect his wish to stay, but that night, Leed is kidnapped, changing things considerably. Tarooon and Drenna blame each other. Upon contacting both governments, Frane is furious and has arrested Yaana, while Meenon believes that the Ghost Ones (a new, clanless group of apparent Senalis with facepaint) who have taken Leed must be under Rutanian command, prompting him to consider a preemptive strike on Rutan. Knowing that Drenna, who had taught Tarooon how to swim earlier, is both a good swimmer and a great tracker, the Jedi take off and join up with Drenna in tracking the Ghost Ones. They discover the Ghost Ones on an island, where they sneak up and free Leed, fighting off the Ghost Ones before finally trapping them under an upturned boat and escaping. Given the current situation and his need to confront his father, Leed agrees to return to Rutan to visit, not to stay. Upon arrival, they head to meet Frane, while Tarooon is recalled to school. Leed refuses to remain on Rutan, but his father refuses to take that as an answer, saying that until Leed reclaims his rightful Rutanian status, Yaana will remain in prison. The blackmail works. . . until Drenna, Obi-Wan, and Qui-Gon arrange to be arrested and taken to the prison. They use Leed’s knowledge from his previous time there (when his father had him imprisoned during a visit for not joining a hunt due to moral reservations) to be in the right place at the right time when Leed, under the guise of an inspection tour, orders the security system deactivated (citing “malfunctions” actually caused by Drenna and some darts). The Jedi and Drenna rescue Yaana and escape, thus disposing of Frane’s blackmailing abilities. Unfortunately, on their way out, Frane catches them. Leed finally relents and says that if Frane will send Yaana back to Senali, he will remain. Tarooon will go to Senali in Leed’s place, and Drenna will be allowed to remain on Rutan with Leed, as she will become a caretaker of Frane’s neks in the royal hunting lodge. The situation seemingly resolved, only one loose thread remains: the Ghost Ones. Qui-Gon has thought back to their encounter and, by reason of their skin tone, realize that they were Rutanian. He and Obi-Wan rush to Tarooon’s school, where they confront him. It is revealed that when Leed decided to stay, Tarooon had decided to kidnap him (using friends who traveled to Senali with several seeker droids at about the same time as the Jedi mission) and use him as an excuse to provoke the first attack of a war that would not be allowed to take place, causing just enough tension to have Leed discredited in both cultures, allowing Tarooon to assume the throne instead of Leed. With Leed’s return, the new plan to provoke the tension is for the seeker droids, now being returned to Rutan, to attack the hunting lodge and Frane’s neks, seemingly under Senalis command, to raise tensions between the worlds. Unfortunately, Tarooon didn’t know that his new friend, Drenna, would be staying at the lodge. The Jedi and Tarooon race to the lodge to save her and the lodge from the forthcoming attack. They barely make it in time, destroying the droids, but upon seeing and hearing of the plot, Frane is impressed. All is forgiven, it seems. Tarooon and Drenna will remain on Rutan, with Tarooon as next in line for the throne, most likely with Drenna as his queen to foster positive relations between Rutan and Senali, while Leed will return to Senali as he desires. The Jedi drop Leed off on Senali and then prepare to return to the Jedi Temple and the adventures ahead.*

(The Shattered Peace)*

*NOTE: See note above with The Fight for Truth.
Jedi Apprentice [continued] (youth novel series: Dave Wolverton & Jude Watson)
The Rising Force (youth novel: Dave Wolverton)
Chapters 1 – 24
Afterword
The Dark Rival (youth novel: Jude Watson)
Chapters 1 – 19

Emissaries and Assassins Omnibus [continued] (comic: Timothy Truman & Ryder Windham & Mark Shultz & Henry Gilroy & Haden Blackman)
Jango Fett: Open Seasons [continued] (comic series: Haden Blackman)
Open Seasons, Part III [flashback] (comic: Haden Blackman)
Jedi Apprentice [continued] (youth novel series: Dave Wolverton & Jude Watson)
The Hidden Past (youth novel: Jude Watson)
Chapters 1 – 20
The Mark of the Crown (youth novel: Jude Watson)
Chapters 1 – 18
The Defenders of the Dead (youth novel: Jude Watson)
Chapters 1 – 19
The Uncertain Path (youth novel: Jude Watson)
Chapters 1 – 22
The Captive Temple (youth novel: Jude Watson)
Chapters 1 – 21
The Day of Reckoning (youth novel: Jude Watson)
Chapters 1 – 18
Lives & Adventures [continued] (youth novel series: Ryder Windham)
The Life and Legend of Obi-Wan Kenobi (youth novel: Ryder Windham)
Chapter 1
Mythology [continued] (SWT14 short story: Chris Eliopolous)
Mythology [continued] (SWT14 short story: Chris Eliopolous)
Republic [continued] (comic series: Peet Janes & Jan Strnad & Tim Truman & John Ostrander & Pat Mills & Doug Petrie & Haden Blackman & Randy Stradley & Welles Hartley)
The Stark Hyperspace War [flashback] (comic series: John Ostrander)
The Stark Hyperspace War, Part I [flashback] (comic: John Ostrander)
The Stark Hyperspace War, Part II [flashback] (comic: John Ostrander)
The Stark Hyperspace War, Part III [flashback] (comic: John Ostrander)
The Stark Hyperspace War, Part IV [flashback] (comic: John Ostrander)
The Jedi [continued]
Force-Sensitive Abilities
Force Lightning
On the Fields of Battle (comic series: John Ostrander & Randy Stradley)
Republic [continued] (comic series: Peet Janes & Jan Strnad & Tim Truman & John Ostrander & Pat Mills & Doug Petrie & Haden Blackman & Randy Stradley & Welles Hartley)
Dreadnaughts of Rendili [flashback] (comic series: John Ostrander)
Dreadnaughts of Rendili, Part I [flashback] (comic: John Ostrander)
Lives & Adventures [continued] (youth novel series: Ryder Windham)
The Wrath of Darth Maul [continued] (youth novel: Ryder Windham)
Chapter 8
Republic [continued] (comic series: Peet Janes & Jan Strnad & Tim Truman & John Ostrander & Pat Mills & Doug Petrie & Haden Blackman & Randy Stradley & Welles Hartley)
Rite of Passage [flashback] (comic series: John Ostrander)
Rite of Passage, Part I [flashback] (comic: John Ostrander)
Legacy of the Jedi [continued] (youth novel: Jude Watson)
Legacy of the Jedi [continued] (youth novel: Jude Watson)
Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi
Chapters 14 – 19
Jedi Apprentice [continued] (youth novel series: Dave Wolverton & Jude Watson)
The Fight for Truth (youth novel: Jude Watson)
Chapters 1 – 21
The Shattered Peace (youth novel: Jude Watson)
Chapters 1 – 16

43 BBY
Lon Donell is born on Prefsbelt.
(conjecture based on Wanted by Cracken)

Leddar, daughter of the prospector Samuel, is born.
(conjecture based on Nomad)

Rethorn is born on Ithor.
(conjecture based on Wanted by Cracken)

Bardan Jusik is born.
(conjecture based on Triple Zero)

Mahwi Lihn kills a corrupt government official on her homeworld and is forced to leave the planet. She becomes a bounty hunter.
(conjecture based on Shadow Hunter)

At the age of four, Dean Jinzler (and his family) catches sight of Lorana Jinzler, who is now in Jedi training.
(conjecture based on Survivor’s Quest)

Five years after they resumed, Darth Plagueis’ Gatherings on Sojourn end again.
(conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)

Hego Damask (Darth Plagueis) stops funding Gardulla the Hutt’s ventures on Tatooine, though many of his allies in the InterGalactic Banking Clan and Trade Federation continue to do so.
(conjecture based on Darth Plagueis)

Dakarai Blirr tells his sister, Warden Sadiki Blirr of Cog Hive Seven, where both of them live, that he finds the silence of the algorithmic certainty to be the closest thing to pure joy that he has ever heard. Then, Dakarai, who is a “connoisseur of soundlessness,” does not speak aloud, even to Sadiki, for the next decade, at least not as “Dakarai Blirr.”
(conjecture based on Lockdown)

On a trip to Ord Namurt, Aurra Sing, age 9, is captured by pirates, who fill her with lies about the Jedi. The lies combine with her own natural fears and cause her to leave the Jedi Order. She will come to live on the fringe, learning martial arts and hunting skills, soon becoming a pirate herself.∗
(conjecture based on information found at starwars.com and The Clone Wars Magazine #1)∗

∗NOTE: This assumes that Aurra Sing is “around 30” during the Clone Wars, making her birthdate around 52 BBY.

Lena marries Rutin Cobral, entering the family.
(conjecture based on The Only Witness)

Mawin begins to suspect that Sylvn holds much anger within her. (To be continued below . . . )

(Prelude to Rebellion)

Having just completed a Jedi Extraction (taking a child from its family as an infant for Jedi training), Mace Windu and Depa Billaba discuss the merits of such actions. Shortly thereafter, Mace is leaving his quarters, while reading a message, when he is accosted by Vianna, a Zeltron bounty hunter sent by the child’s parents to bring him back home. Mace bests Vianna, but in the verbal duel that follows, Vianna makes the point that Mace may not be able to understand the truth of love between parent and child . . . but then perhaps he does, she realizes, as she picks up the message pad. A short time later, the child is returned to his parents, while Mace re-reads the message on the pad—a plea from his own parents for some form of contact with him. Mace deletes the message and returns to Coruscant.

(Children of the Force)

King Ars Veruna of Naboo decides to replace the aging yacht of the previous four monarchs. He orders the Theed Palace Space Vessel Engineering Corps to design a new yacht using components from the Nubia system.∗
(conjecture based on The Naboo Royal Starship of Queen Amidala)∗

∗NOTE: Information from this Secrets of Naboo “web enhancement” was submitted by Luke Van Horn.

Jenna Zan Arbor is told in confidence by Senator Uta S’orn that her son, Ren S’orn, is Force-sensitive. Arbor, seeking to study the Force and harness its power, approaches Ren. He volunteers for an experiment for her, which he’d be paid for. He is taken to her lab on Simpla-12, where he is tested, and his blood is drained for testing. When he finally leaves for a break, he tells his friends of the antitoxins housed in the lab and that they could steal them and give them to the Jedi to get to needy individuals. He is, however, scared to death of Arbor. He returns to Arbor, and during his captivity, Arbor blackmails Uta into doctoring Senate records to allow Arbor to release a plague as a test in the Mindemir water supply after bribing Mindemir officials. A short time later, it would seem Ren tries to escape from Arbor, and is killed by bounty hunter Ona Nobis. Ren’s body is found drained of blood. News of his death reaches his mother. Uta blames herself for Ren’s death, since it was her decision not to let him go to the Jedi Temple for training, which may have given him the necessary Jedi skills to avoid his fate. Arbor’s hand in his fate will remain, for the moment, unknown to Uta.

(conjecture based on The Deadly Hunter, The Evil Experiment, and The Dangerous Rescue)

- Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi arrive back on Coruscant after several months of new missions in the galaxy abroad and make a quick detour from their landing area to visit Qui-Gon’s friends Didi Oddo and his daughter Astri at Didi’s Café. Didi asks for their help. It seems that a bounty hunter is after him, possibly due to some information he has been given (none of which seems at all important to him). He asks the Jedi to talk to the hunter on his behalf. Qui-Gon and Obi-Wan head for the Soft Landings Inn and talk to the hunter, who does not speak. The hunter then shape-shifts and vanishes. Qui-Gon realizes that she must be from Sorrus. Sorrusians have a skeletal system that can compress, allowing them through tight places. She also seems quite versed in the use of her whip, which can change to a laser mode. Back at Didi’s, Qui-Gon asks Tahl to help look for information that might be relevant. He then asks Didi about the information he purchased. He had purchased two pieces of information from his longtime source, Fligh. Fligh had told him that Senator Uta S’orn of Belasco is going to resign soon and that the Tech Raiders are moving their headquarters to Vandor-3. Before they leave to pay Fligh a visit, Astri enters and mentions that she will be hosting a special dinner at the café for noted transgenic scientist Jenna Zan Arbor. The Jedi go meet with Fligh, who says that the Tech Raider information came from their man on Coruscant, Helb, while the information about S’orn came from a datapad that came into his possession, which included her resignation speech, set to be given in a few days. They pay a visit to Senator S’orn, informing her that the information about her resignation is now out in the open. She decides to resign early, which means that her last bit of legislation will not go through as she’d hoped. She also mentions that the datapad had been stolen. They then head for the Splendor Tavern and meet with Helb. Helb has no reason to want Didi or Fligh dead, it seems, because he gave Didi the information about the new base specifically because he knew Didi and Fligh aren’t brave or stupid enough to go to the authorities, meaning that only people who would use their services would learn of the new location. As they prepare to leave, they see the bounty hunter (shifting back to her regular form from that of an old man) slip out, chase her, but end up losing her again. They return to the café, where Astri is now hosing the newly arrived party including Jenna Zan Arbor. The Jedi go meet with Fligh, who says that the Tech Raider information came from their man on Coruscant, Helb, while the information about S’orn came from a datapad that came into his possession, which included her resignation speech, set to be given in a few days. They pay a visit to Senator S’orn, informing her that the information about her resignation is now out in the open. She decides to resign early, which means that her last bit of legislation will not go through as she’d hoped. She also mentions that the datapad had been stolen. They then head for the Splendor Tavern and meet with Helb. Helb has no reason to want Didi or Fligh dead, it seems, because he gave Didi the information about the new base specifically because he knew Didi and Fligh aren’t brave or stupid enough to go to the authorities, meaning that only people who would use their services would learn of the new location. As they prepare to leave, they see the bounty hunter (shifting back to her regular form from that of an old man) slip out, chase her, but end up losing her again. They return to the café, where Astri is now hosing the newly arrived party including Jenna Zan Arbor. In the back, they speak with Didi, who tells them that Fligh has been murdered. They visit the crime scene and discover that his body totally drained of blood. They return to the Soft Landings, only to find that the hunter has checked out. They then race to Didi’s and discover the lights out. The Arbor party is gone, and upstairs they find the hunter in the process of capturing Didi and Astri. They battle the hunter, who escapes, leaving her two captives behind. Didi finally tells Astri what is going on, but assures the Jedi that he has no knowledge of any stolen datapad, which the Jedi suspect must be what the hunter searched the café for. They decide that it would be best for Didi and Astri to head for Didi’s house in the Cascardi Mountains on Duneeden, which he won in a card game. Once the Oddos are safely away, Obi-Wan and Qui-Gon return to the Jedi Temple, where they are reminded that Senator Uta S’orn had a child, Ren S’orn, who was Force-sensitive. She had refused to turn him over to the Temple for training, and eventually Ren’s non-Jedi path led him to be murdered, his body drained of blood, just six months earlier. They visit S’orn again and learn that she is a friend of Jenna Zan Arbor and had been the one to point her to Didi’s to eat. Not only that, but the datapad that was stolen from S’orn was among two stolen—the other being Jenna Zan Arbor’s—while the two were dining. They pay Zan Arbor a visit and are unsettled by her demeanor. They learn that the piece of legislation that S’orn would’ve had the support to pass, which was curtailed by her resignation announcement, was to be a new law to further battle the Tech Raiders. They head for Vandor-3, where they speak with Helb again. They accuse him of having Fligh steal the two datapads and for putting death marks on Fligh and Didi. Helb denies the death marks, but admits that they had hired Fligh to steal S’orn’s datapad, but he had stolen the wrong one. They wanted her business one, but got the personal one, which turned out to work just as well, as they had no idea that she was about to resign over the stress from losing her son, so her resignation solved their legislative problem. He had no idea that Fligh had stolen another datapad, but figured that he probably had given it to someone else to whom he owed money. When the Jedi both realize that Didi fits that description, Helb mentions that both he and Fligh had lost big in some card games with Didi. Fligh hadn’t yet paid Didi back, but Helb had . . . with a house in the Cascardi Mountains. He further comments that he had won the house from an old man in tattered clothes—the exact same “man” they had seen become the bounty hunter. The hunter had managed to maneuver Didi and Astri right into her trap at the house. The Jedi race to Duneeden and the house. Once there, they tell what they have learned, and Astri admits that she had been having Fligh help bring them business, and he had come to her asking to hide a datapad (Jenna Zan Arbor’s). She had stuck it in a stove, where the hunter hadn’t found it, and then brought it along with her to the house, since her own datapad wasn’t available. They look at the pad and find all the contents encrypted. They forward the data to Tahl on Coruscant for decryption. Didi and Astri mention that the caretaker has been very kind. Realizing that the caretaker must be the hunter, they prepare to escape, but find themselves sealed in with strong metal plates. The lights go out, and the Jedi must protect the Oddos against the hunter on her own turf. In the dark, the hunter hits Astri and realizes that she is hiding the datapad under her shirt. At about the same time, the Jedi cut through to the outside, and the chase is on. The hunter chases after the four, who have to split up. The Jedi send the Oddos to the hunter’s transport (knowing that their own transport has been sabotaged) and turn to face the hunter. The hunter turns a part of her outfit into a sled and zips past the Jedi, who cannot reach her before she catches up to the Oddos. As the Jedi catch up, Didi is shot, but not killed, by the hunter, and Astri won’t let go of the datapad. Obi-Wan saves Astri from the hunter, who then uses a homing grapple to be yanked back to her ship. She enters, as Qui-Gon leaps onto the boarding ramp. Qui-Gon receives a blaster wound before tumbling into the transport, which then zips off into space. Obi-Wan can only take care of Didi and Astri, wondering if Qui-Gon has captured the hunter, or vice versa. He promises to find Qui-Gon, while bigger mysteries remain—what was on the datapad, and who wants it?*

(The Deadly Hunter)*

*NOTE: See note with The Dangerous Rescue below.

- Micah Giiett returns to Coruscant after a mission. During his absence, Ki-Adi-Mundi had stood in for him on the Jedi Council. Now, Ki will return to Cerea. (conjecture based on The Evil Experiment)
- Qui-Gon Jinn finds himself imprisoned. He is chained in the dark with mist all around him. His blood is being drawn, and he is being experimented on. His captor, he discovers, is Jenna Zan Arbor, who seeks to discover the nature and biological basis for the Force in order to become famous, rich, and otherwise a great historical figure. Back on Coruscant, Obi-Wan Kenobi and Astri Oddo have been picked up and returned to the Jedi Temple, along with Didi Oddo, who is suffering from being shot by the bounty hunter on Duneeden. Obi-Wan and Astri discuss wanting to somehow find Qui-Gon and attempt to figure out who must’ve hired the bounty hunter, but can only narrow it down to possibly Jenna Zan Arbor or Uta S’orn, since both had their datapads stolen by the murdered Fligh. They soon receive further bad news. Didi’s wound has an infection, apparently given to him by the bounty hunter, which is quite rare. As Tahl continues to try to crack the code on Arbor’s datapad, they learn that the only laboratory where a cure to Didi’s disease could be found was a lab on Ventrux, which has recently shut down. It belonged to Arbor Industries. Now knowing Arbor must be involved, they need to plan their next move. Obi-Wan discovers that he still has a sheet that Qui-Gon had insisted the guests at Didi’s Café the night of the bounty hunter’s attack (the night of the Arbor party) be written. The list must hold the name, or at least an alias, of the bounty hunter herself, as no one had entered the building after the party had left. A talk with two guests, Yamele Polidor and Von Taub, tells Obi-Wan which name must’ve been the hunter: Reesa On. When Obi-Wan goes to Reesa On’s hotel room, he is nearly shot . . . by Astri, who had also discovered the hunter’s name through her own channels and is just plain horrible with a blaster. Returning to the Temple, Obi-Wan and Astri, now partners on the mission, are told that “Reesa On” is Sorrusian for “catch me,” both a taunt and a childhood game. Based on the dialect, they know which tribe on Sorrus Reesa On must belong to. Obi-Wan and Astri head to Sorrus to investigate. In Arbor’s lab, Qui-Gon is released for an hour away from his restraints, as part of an agreement with Arbor that he would show her Force use if he were given some time to move about. Arbor’s assistant/guard, Nil, appears jealous of attention paid to Qui-Gon. Unfortunately, when Qui-Gon is less than interested in showing Arbor high-level Jedi abilities, he is sent back to his restraints. On Sorrus, Obi-Wan and Astri find Reesa On’s tribe and are attacked. They make peace and Astri bargains with them after a while. She’ll show them how to feed themselves well based on the natural elements around them (which she learned how to do from cuisine from an area of Sorrus that has never had abundant water as this area had until recently) in exchange for information. They learn that ten years earlier, the main government on the planet had tricked the tribe into supporting the building of a dam, which turns out to have left their lands barren while benefiting the government. A major voice in that decision had been “Reesa On,” whose real name is revealed to be Ona Nobis. The leader of the tribe shows them Ona Nobis’ hiding place, where they find that she is supposedly on Cinnatar, ready to assassinate the governor. Before they leave, Tahl contacts them to inform them that they have broken Arbor’s code. They now know she has been performing experiments on Force-users. The first subject was Ren S’orn, and now Qui-Gon is in her clutches. They realize that Nobis has probably laid out misinformation for them, given that it wouldn’t have been smart for her to have used a name that could lead them here. They decide to head for Simpla-12, where Ren S’orn was found when he died. At Arbor’s lab, Qui-Gon has sensed the presence of another Force-user. He tries to escape during his next time out with Nil, hoping to free himself and the other prisoner, but is drugged and restrained yet again. On Simpla-12, Obi-Wan and Astri meet Cholly, Weez, and Tup, three of Ren’s old friends. They are told that Ren had thought he’d found a way to get them a lot of money, but had returned incredibly scared before his death. They point the investigators to Tino, Ren’s old roommate. They find Tino and end up saving him from Ona Nobis, capturing Nobis’ whip in the process. Tino tells them basically the same information and that Ren had volunteered for an experiment, but was afraid of the woman running it. He also tells them that the murder was investigated only minimally by Captain Yur T’aug, the Bothan that Obi-Wan had talked with on Coruscant about Ren S’orn’s death earlier. It would seem that the investigation was cut off prematurely, possibly by someone’s outside interference. As Qui-Gon’s blood is being drained slowly in the lab, Obi-Wan and Astri return to Coruscant. Obi-Wan confronts T’aug, who tells them that Uta S’orn had ordered the investigation ended on her son’s death. They talk to S’orn and reveal Arbor’s secret machinations. S’orn is heartbroken at her friend’s betrayal and gives them a box of Ren’s belongings to search for a message he said he’d leave if he were in trouble. A short time later, the “three stooges,” Ren’s friends from Simpla-12, make their appearance. They tell Obi-Wan and Astri that Ren had been part of an experiment in a complex with tons of antitoxins and such, and they’d been hoping to steal some and sell it. Ren, though, hadn’t wanted to sell them, but give them to the Jedi so they could be administered to those in need. They search the container of Ren’s belongings and discover a hidden code within the playing cards that Ren and his friends had always marked. The code is the exact address for Jenna Zan Arbor’s hidden laboratory on Simpla-12. They arrive and leave the trio outside to keep watch. Obi-Wan, as a Jedi prisoner, is escorted in by Astri, posing as Ona Nobis. Nil lets the doors open, and they make their way in, finding Qui-Gon. Obi-Wan frees him, but things become complicated when the real Ona Nobis arrives. They’ve had time to steal the necessary antitoxin to save Didi, but whether or not they can escape with the other Force-using prisoner is in doubt. Luckily, Nobis has fulfilled her contract with Arbor, so she refuses to help Arbor clean up her own security problems. Arbor has a backup plan, though. She
